BOYS AT NEW LONDON ROUNDED UP FOR THEFTS FROM FREIGHT CARS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 22. — Five boys, none of them over 12, were arrested this evening by Lieut. David Marks, special agent in the employ of the New Haven railroad, charged with stealing from a freight car. The youths are guilty of having pilfered much from freight cars which they found open. The boys were given into the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield and will be presented in the juvenile court within a few days. The railroad officials have been discovering numerous thefts from cars, of late, especially such cars as contained miscellaneous shipments. Cigarettes were the principal articles stolen and these were taken in cartons. The juvenile crooks, whenever a car door was discovered open in the Fort Neck yard, would enter these cars and removing such of their contents as could be accomplished speedily would sell the loot to their elders. This evening a watch was maintained, the quintette was detected in their act and arrested.

The Yankee Clipper, the New Haven railroad's fastest and most palatial train, was behind schedule last evening for the first time since the train was inaugurated. The eastbound train, scheduled to pass through New London at 6:01 o'clock, was delayed by a mishap to a freight train between Saybrook and this city and when it reached here it was seven minutes late. However, on the 64-mile run to Providence the lost time was made up.

Watch For Stolen Sedan

The police of Rye, N. Y., this evening requested the New London police to keep a lookout for a Viking sedan, painted black, with green trimmings that was stolen in the former city by two youths this afternoon. The auto carries New York markers 9-v-3077.

Yeoman Lost Pocketbook

C. R. Davis, yeoman first class, and a member of the crew of the U. S. S. Cassin, stationed in Boston, reported to the ew NLondon police this afternoon that while in this city Saturday he lost a pocketbook which contained tickets and papers of value only to the owner.

MRS. ANDERSON'S PETITION HAD TOTAL OF 48 SIGNATURES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 22.—The petition nominating Mrs. Rosemary D. Anderson for the office of member of the board of school visitors was filed for record at the office of the city clerk today. The petition, which was circulated by Miss Edna L. Tyler, contained 48 signatures, one more than is necessary to validate the document. The petition of E. Nibbs, Ocean avenue resident, for membership on the board, which was circulated by William Apiey, was also filed. Mrs. Anderson is seeking reelection and Mr. Nibbs is making his initial start as a political office-seeker. The petition of William L. White for re-election as selectman, has been filed also. Mr. White has served in office many years. A petition is also being circulated for Mrs. Nellie Kelley for member of the board of school visitors. Mrs. Kelley is already a member of the board. Assistant City Clerk Elizabeth T. Roath today notified Mrs. Emily C. Speirs that the latter had been nominated for office and the candidate has 14 days in which to file her acceptance of declination in writing. Councilors Robert C. Chappell, William C. Fox and James H. Murray are the members of the council, whose terms of office will expire Oct. 1. Whether they will again seek election is not known and so far as could be determined petitions for their nomination are not in circulation, but another month remains to do so. It is believed that all three will again seek a seat in the council.

Not a single prisoner occupied a cell at police headquarters tonight for the police did not make an arrest, not even an automobile parker, during the past 24 hours.

Slept On Strand

Another large crowd of diversion seekers went to Ocean Beach today, but the crowd was not as great as it was for the past week. Last night thousands of men and women went to the shore to be refreshed by the cooling ocean breeze. Many slept on the sand during the entire night.

Gilbert, of Springfield, Mass., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gilbert, Bridgeport, and Miss Alice Piascik, daughter of Mrs. Anna Piascik, 260 Main street, were married last Saturday at Grace chapel, Springfield by Rev. F. Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert will make their home in Springfield and in which city Mr. Gilbert is employed as draftsman by the Westinghouse Electric company.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Daniels of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Wilhelmina R. Daniels, to Clarence A. Everts, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Everts, of 172 Howard street.

Unloading Lumber Freighter

The freighter Sea Thrush arrived in port early today, laden with 500,000 feet of western lumber. The freighter proceeded to the state pier where the task of transferring the cargo to freight cars was started. It is anticipated that the lumber will have been unloaded by late Wednesday afternoon when the steamer will proceed to Boston.

NICK LONG, OF NEW YORK, ACCUSED OF INDECENCY

Nick Long, 34, of New York, who has been temporarily stopping at Groton Long Point, where he has a cottage for the season, is likely to change his address from the shore of Fishers Island sound, to the New London county jail. He was arrested late yesterday charged with indecent exposure and lascivious carriage. Long is at liberty on bail of $1000 and will be given a hearing in the Groton town court Monday next.

For several days the state police have been receiving complaints because of a young man exposing himself to youthful boys and girls in the vicinity of Groton Long Point. When complaint was received yesterday several officers were available and all were dispatched to the point, where Long was found and taken into custody, for there was no doubt as to his guilt because of the statements of the children. It has been the practice of Long to drive along the highways and wherever children were assembled, the New Yorker apparently found delight in performing his acts of degeneracy.

One building at 119 Bentley avenue, was sold for $5500, another at 121 Bentley avenue went for $5650 and the third at 23 Bentley avenue, was sold for $6050. The properties were formerly owned by the Commodore Realty company of which Joseph Sigal was president. DIED WHILE DRESSING— BOY HAD A WEAK HEART

John Lukasky, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lukasky, died suddenly today at the residence of his parents, Chesterfield road, Flanders. Medical Examiner Dart, who was notified pronounced death as caused by a weakened condition of the heart.

ROMANO AT HOSPITAL AFTER COLLAPSE IN COURT

James Romano, public service cab operator, is a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital for observation. He collapsed in Waterford town court yesterday while awaiting trial on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. It will not be definitely determined what the nature of Romano's trouble is for a day or two, but it is possible that he is injured internally. Romano was driving his automobile in Waterford early Monday morning and it crashed with a machine occupied by sailors. Both cars were damaged and John Weimer, residing at the Hotel Winthrop, sustained a fractured arm and lacerations. Weimer, who is a baker, is also a patient at the hospital. Romano, who was arrested by state police, was taken to court about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and an hour later collapsed. When his condition was observed to be serious, Romano was taken to the hospital and his case in court was postponed indefinitely, pending the outcome of his injury.

CRIMP IN WILLIAMS' CAREER— BOOZE, WOMAN, AND NOW FINE

NEW LONDON, July 22.—William Williams, a chief petty officer, was in the police court this morning, charged with violation of the liquor law and was fined $400 and costs. He gave notice of an appeal. Williams was arrested last night when Lottie Eddins, alias Williams, his common law wife, attempted suicide by swallowing a quantity of lysol. When the police had had the woman taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital an inspection of the premises was made and as a result 72 bottles of beer, each bottle of a quart capacity, and two quarts of home-made gin were found. When Williams was informed that the woman had made an attempt upon her life and that the police were seeking him, he went to police headquarters and was placed under arrest. In court today Williams admitted ownership of the beer, saying that it was for his personal consumption but would not admit ownership of the "gin" and he also disclaimed all knowledge of how it got into his home at 167 North Bank street. The court discredited Williams' story and imposed the customary speakeasy penalty.

At the hospital today it was stated that the Eddins woman's condition was much improved and that she would undoubtedly recover. No cause for attempt upon her life has been advanced.

PUNCH-BOARD FINE TAKES $25 OF TELAGE'S PROFIT

Kalle Telage, proprietor of a restaurant, 167 North Bank street, was charged with violation of the gaming law and was fined $25 and costs. Telage was arrested last night when a punch-board was found conspicuously displayed on a counter. Patrolman Dennis Murphy was passing the restaurant and when he observed the punch-board he entered took possession of the gaming device and arrested the proprietor.

Joseph V. Petrelli, of New Jersey, was charged with blocking traffic. He failed to appear in court and his bond of $2 was forfeited.

The only other case tried was one for intoxication. The man, who was arrested on State street last night was given suspension of judgment for he is not a frequent offender against the law.

Palace Theatre

"Not Damaged," a musical romance starring beautiful Lois Moran and Walter Byron shares the program at the Palace theatre this time with that wild western comedy, "Pardon My Gun." At theatres in other cities each of these pictures is playing separately, but at the Palace you get them both on the same bill—the highest possible entertainment value at popular prices.

Those of us who have often wondered what goes on behind the scenes in a great department store will have our questions answered for us by "Not Damaged," for here is a startling epic of the life in such a store.

It is a fascinating movie, made even more thrilling by its plot. No one will want to miss Lois Moran, who as a pretty, unsophisticated salesgirl tries to kep herself "Not Damaged," but almost makes a horrible mistake. The story is an unusual one inasmuch as it ends in a manner that completely upsets the general theory that the poor boy is always superior in virtue to the rich boy.

In "Pardon My Gun" we find everything that goes to make up a roaring comedy. Sally Starr, who plays the leading female role in this romantic farce, is a singer and dancer from the Far West, and as melodious as she is lovely to look at. She is a graduate of George White's "Scandals." Her part in the picture is that of a ranch-owner's daughter who arrives at Lone Pine Ranch after a visit to the east and starts a riot. Rustlers, rodeo horses and bandits jostle one another to get near them, and before the dust has cleared away, there's been more excitement than a full book could describe.

Broadway Theatre

"Cheer Up and Smile," the Fox Movietone talking and singing romance of campus and night club life directed by Sidney Lanfield, isn't a musical comedy but a graphic picture of adventuring, happy-go-lucky youth—and as such it was inevitable that there be music in it!

There is music aplenty and songs sung by such people as the famous "Whispering" Jack Smith, the inimitable Dixie Lee of "Varsity Drag" fame and Arthur Lake, youthful leading man who discloses a voice which should greatly increase his flapper following.

Songs and lyrics in the picture were written by Raymond Klages and Jesse Greer, one of the country's best known song writing teams and bubble over with melody and appeal.

The story deals with a college boy who quarrels with his best girl and is suspended from college for an initiation prank. He goes to New York and gets a job as drummer in a night club orchestra through his friend, "Whispering" Jack Smith. From then on one laughable complication after another occurs. "Cheer Up and Smile" opens a three day engagement at Warner's Broadway today.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Trading on the local farmers market in line with the other markets of the state was generally dull. Offerings were liberal, light demand and rock bottom prices.

Beets, cabbage and squash are still in a weak position while a slightly better feeling prevailed in carrots and beans showing quality. Sweet corn is now found in adequate supply in both the white and yellow and prices lower. Native cucumbers are increasing but native tomatoes are still scarce. Lettuce offerings are mostly the shipped in products and selling at low prices for the first offerings. Light offerings of red raspberries, blue and huckleberries continue.

The market for Connecticut eggs is firm. Decreasing supplies have kept the market clear of surplus and present offerings are moving at better prices.

NORWICH TOWN

MRS. WILLIAM R. LATHROP DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Following an illness of nearly three years, Emma Catherine Woodward, wife of Deacon William Randall Lathrop, died Monday morning at her home on Scotland road, where for about fifty-three years she had been a resident. During her trying illness Mrs. Lathrop was faithfully cared for by Mrs. Susan Lillibridge. Mrs. Lathrop, the last surviving one of seven sisters, was born in Mansfield, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Woodard (Semit Dunham). When nine years of age, she came to the home of her uncle, Dr. Ashabal Woodard, in Franklin, where she made her home for some time. After receiving a public school education, she attended Mount Holyoke college, from which she was graduated. After teaching for a time at a select school in Goshen, she later was a teacher in the public schools of New Haven for a number of years.

At the home of her sister, Mrs. Lucian Loomis, of Windsor, 57 years ago next month, (Aug. 5th, 1873), she was united in marriage with William Randall Lathrop. Nearly all of their married life has been spent on Scotland road. Several years ago their home was burned to the ground with nearly all its contents. Soon after, a new home was built and Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop continued their residence on Scotland road.

Since coming to Norwich Town her life was centered in the interest of the First Congregational church where she was a constant attendant at Sunday morning worship, until her health gave out. A member of the Bible class in the Sunday school, she was deeply interested also in the missionary societies connected with the church in the earlier days, these societies now merged in the League of Service and its branches. Co-operating with her husband, the ministerial boards of the Congregational denomination, received quite recently a generous gift from Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop, as has been their custom in the past in the interests of the church of which both were members. Mrs. Lathrop will be missed by many of the older residents in the community where she had lived more than half a century.

The summer coating of tarvia, later sanded, was spread on Town street and through West Town street, for a long stretch Tuesday afternoon, by men in the employ of the state highway department. After the roadbed has been scraped and made level, it will be in excellent condition.

During the intense heat, thermometers on Town street registered as high as 94 degrees in the day time Saturday and Monday, while at midnight, both dates, the registration was 85.

Mrs. Frank D. Coles of 169 Harland road was a motor guest Monday on a trip to Boston, of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Higgins and daughters, Frances and Elsie Higgins of Hedge avenue, Norwich. While en route, the party paid a visit to Henry Ford's museum of antiques at South Sudbury, Mass. They returned home by way of Providence and Westerly.

Officers Of Garden Club

There was a 4-H club meeting Friday, July 18, of the Wauwecus Hill Garden club. The following officers were elected: Florence Dubicki, president; Richard Kenneth, vice president; Frances Kapuscik, secretary. The members played games under the direction of R. H. Whaples, county club leader. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Frances and Josephine Kapuscik.

The Norwich playgrounds activity, along with the Industrial Baseball league, both of which are under the control of the city's recreation commission, are now fairly underway for the season, with a staff of 22 members, many of them veterans in the playgrounds work, whose qualifications and experience promise that the marked success of other years will be duplicated in the present season.

The recreation commission itself is at present composed of William J. Fitzgerald, chairman, James V. Pedace, secretary, Mrs. Betty Pasnik, treasurer, and Mrs. Elizabeth Drew, Mrs. D. Louisa Atterbury, Robert J. Swanton, and Ebenezer Learned, Jr. During both the summer and winter months this body holds meetings regularly to take action upon matters that require instant attention and to plan for future playground seasons. The difficulty of the task confronting the commissioners is evident from the fact that in 1929 there were actually registered upon the ten play centers 1,284 individual children and that a careful estimate made last year showed that nearly 200,000 children and adults were furnished recreation either on the playgrounds or at the Industrial league ball games held nightly upon the Academy campus.

Though the control of the grounds and of the Industrial league, the purchase of equipment, and the general planning of play activities are all vested in Mr. Fitzgerald and his associate commissioners, perhaps the most important act of this group is its annual selection of young men and women from a large field of applicants to comprise the playground staff itself, which is in direct contact with the children and upon which the safety, happiness and development of the children largely depend during the summer months.

This year the commission again retained Earle E. Brigham as superintendent, basing its choice upon the caliber of the work performed and upon the marked progress of the playground movement since he took office six years ago. Mr. Brigham is a native of Worcester, Mass., a graduate of North High school of that city, and an alumnus of Connecticut Agricultural college. While in high school and college he played both baseball and football, and upon his departure from Storrs he accepted a position as teacher-coach at Plainfield, Conn., where he remained two years. Since 1923 he has been employed at the Norwich Free Academy in the same capacity, and has established an enviable reputation through the continued successes of his baseball team.

With Mr. Brigham in 123 came Matthew J. Sheridan as an instructor, and who is now secretary to the superintendent. The secretary is a native of Norwich, a graduate of the Academy, and a graduate of Holy Cross college, Worcester, Mass., in the class of 1926. In college he was prominent in scholastic and literary circles and was a member of the track squad. With the exception of one semester spent at the Yale School of Law, he has been, since graduation, teaching at the Academy and has produced an excellent track team annually.

Next in order of service comes Seraphino Tombari who is a popular instructor upon the Jail Hill playground. "Pheno" is a graduate of the Academy and of Connecticut Agricultural college, 1930. In both the Academy and at Storrs he played baseball and football and attracted much attention from sports writers by his sterling end play on the Storrs football team. Coach Sumner A. Dole of the Aggies has pronounced "Pheno" as one of the best football men he has ever coached. This opnion was strengthened after the game with Boston college last year when he repeatedly held the hard running Boston team, which had a perfect season's record, to no gain. He is beginning his third season as instructor and from past performances will prove a strong asset to the playground system. The assistant upon the Jail Hill center is Ruth Furlong, who is one of the new instructors. She is a graduate of the Academy and of the Willimantic Normal school, and has been substituting in the public school system of the city.

Upon the Lake street center are located three veterans of the staff, John Marks, Catherine Madden and Ida Grablefsky. "Jack" is now a student at William and Mary college, Williamsburg, Va., where he has already starred in football and baseball on the freshman teams of that college. His athletic prowess is no greater than his personality, which is attested to by his election to the senior class presidency while in the Academy, and to the vice-presidency of his class at college. This combination should continue to assure his success in meeting juvenile problems that confront a play leader daily. His assistants, the Misses Madden and Grablefsky, possess manners pleasing to children and have already displayed ability in child guidance. Miss Madden is a student at Connecticut Agricultural college and Miss Grablefsky a graduate of Willimantic Normal school and a teacher in the local public school system.

The Greeneville trio of instructors include one veteran, Anna Carroll, Albin Keeley and Anna Connelly. Miss Carroll is a graduate of a school specializing in kindergarten work, and is now teaching in St. Mary's school of this city. Her amiable disposition and basic knowledge of the needs of the younger children have made her a strong favorite and a successful leader of her charges. Albin Keeley is a student at St. John's Prep, Danvers, Mass., and has participated in intramural athletics. He is considered a likely prospect for the varsity teams for which that school is famous. Miss Connelly is a graduate of this year's class at the Academy, and is one of the few girls to win the coveted "N" for participation in girls' athletics.

Another veteran is stationed upon the Falls play center in the person of Eileen Kennedy, who is beginning her third year of service. Miss Kennedy studied at Willimantic Normal and has developed a championship ball team as well as a general renewed interest in playground work in the locality of the Falls.

The Elizabeth street center has stationed there Frederick Murphy, Grace La Rochelle, and Rose Pasnik. "Fred" is a junior at Holy Cross college and possesses a keen knowledge of disciplinary methods which have resulted in his being a successful and popular play leader. Miss La Rochelle was an earnest student at the Academy and contemplates matriculation at Willimantic Normal. Her remarkable athletic ability resulted in her winning an "N" in high school, which has been awarded to but few in the history of the school. Miss Pasnik is a recent addition but her keen intellect and attention to duty will doubly assure crowned the efforts of her co-worker, Miss La Rochelle.

The results which Anna Coleman has attained in two previous years made her a natural selection for the post at Hobart avenue. Miss Coleman's natural temperament and disposition fit her admirably for a position as a teacher or child leader, and have made her a popular student at Connecticut college, where she has been especially prominent in scholastic circles to the extent of winning several scholarships.

Teresa Fitzgerald is the lone instructor at Laurel Hill, and since her graduation from New Rochelle college has made children a special study. Her achievements in the past should warrant her future success and popularity with those entrusted to her care.

John Delaney, of Holy Cross, and Mary Boardman, of Connecticut college are both veterans and have done much to elevate the standards of child development at the Thamesville playground, which is doubtless due in large measure to their personal popularity with children. Mr. Delaney is prominent as a sports writer at college, and Miss Boardman's brilliance has made her the recipient of numerous scholarships at the school of her choice.

A very important link in the local system is Miss Katharine Farrell, who is a specialist in industrial work. Her task is to interest all of the play centers in activities other than athletic, such as sewing, cooking, story telling, and the production of plays. Her keen knowledge of these arts and her pleasant personality have constituted a great value to the regular attendants at the playgrounds, where she is as much a favorite as she is in South Windham where she is employed as a public school teacher.

The East Side playground children have been assigned Bruno Pedace and Lillian Cramer to look out for their interests. Mr. Pedace is a student at New York university and possesses a general knowledge of all games and contests adaptable to children. He has shown talent in devising methods to increase the attendance that daily throngs the Duwell field and should continue the splendid results he attained last year. His assistant, Miss Cramer, is a student at Normal school and is taking elective courses in child psychology to properly fit her for her chosen profession of teaching.

The umpire and referee of all inter-playground contests is John Greene. 679 DEATH TOLL OF THREE TERRIFIC QUAKES IN ITALY

Thousands of Persons Were Injured and Tens of Thousands Were Made Homeless—Damage Will Amount to Millions of Dollars—Fully a Thousand Buildings Were Destroyed In Melfi and Rio-Nero—Naples Experienced Several Hours of Panic—Many Houses Were Demolished and There Were Scores of Casualties.

NAPLES, July 23—(AP)—Amid the vineclad hills of the Apennines the simple peasant folk of Southeastern Italy tonight had counted their dead to the number of 679 in half a score of towns tumbled to ruins by a series of terrific earthquakes which began an hour after midnight and had not ceased to vibrate this evening.

Government estimates placed the injured at more than a thousand and the homeless at ten times that figure. Melfi, picturesque mountain city, perched perilously upon the crater of the extinct Monte Vulture, was an area of ghastly debris. Even the ancient cathedral whose history in its several phases goes back to the ninth century, was wrecked.

The almost inaccessible nature of some of the areas devastated made difficult the work of succor and the enumeration of casualties. Most of the towns hit the hardest are off the beaten paths of tourists with poor transportation and almost inaccessible altitude.

Several supply trains have been sent to points on the railroads in the interior from Naples and hundreds of relief workers tonight were penetrating the recesses of the agricultural area offering relief to the still terror stricken victims.

The quake stunned all Italy. It was the worst earthshock since Messina was all but obliterated in 1908. The first shock came an hour after midnight. Its own awful nature was supplemented by a tremendous electrical storm over virtually the whole affected area.

The intense area extended from the Tyrrhean Sea to the Adriatic but the coast settlements suffered less in proportion than the mountain populations. Naples experienced several hours of panic with many houses demolished and scores of casualties. Among this city's victims was the Countess De Rossi Vargas. Never in all neapolitan history had this classic city experienced such stark mad fright. A frenzied populace raced through the streets apparently heading nowhere.

Tonight the work of rescue proceeded as rapidly as the means available would permit. Wrecked bridges, snapped communication wires and many other obstacles had been tossed in the path of the relief workers by the upheaval of nature. Motorcars made little progress over unaccustomed routes. The highways of the area are notoriously undeveloped and rail lines passed through many gorges into which the quake had tumbled avalanches.

Several tunnels upon the road to Melfi, where 180 persons perished, according to official figures, fell in and blocked service beyond restoration for many days.

The quake tonight visited its first after effect on this city when the authorities closed scores of manufacturing plants whose walls were cracked and in perilous condition. Thousands of workers thus were thrown out of employment.

Four provinces of the sunny, smiling peninsular were converted into "no man's land." In the several larger towns and the few cities at the center of the quake district dawn brought scenes whose horror beggared description. Villanova, according to government agents who had managed to bring out a death list of 350, was by far the heaviest sufferer. The town was practically wiped out. Among the victims were the mayor and his entire family.

Rio-Nero, often visited by quakes in other years, suffered at least 20 deaths, San Sossio Baronia reported 14 dead and 100 injured, Rapollo a score dead and 30 hurt, and Varile 11 known dead, with 40 injured. Rio-Nero is known as the "home of the flowers," and a celebrated city among tourists of the more ardent group who penetrate far into the hills.

Fully one thousand buildings were destroyed in Melfi and Rio-Nero.

Because almost all of the communities which were hardest hit are distant from the principal centers and communication lines the authorities tonight viewed the possibility that the death list thus far supplied would be materially increased. With torchlights and every other available illumination the ruins of scores of towns were being searched and emergency hospitals were filling up with victims.

WOMEN'S SKIRTS TO BE LONGER THIS WINTER

PARIS, July 23.—(AP) —When winter comes to Fifth avenue milady is going to wear her skirts down to the line where shoe tops used to be, the first little fashion shows of 1930-31 indicated here today.

Buyers from the United States, attending in usual numbers despite rumors of slack trade, found reasons for worry in the hemline that kept milady herself awake so many nights last season.

"Bad for business," more than one was heard to mutter, as model after model fluttered past displaying a scant eight inches of silk stocking above her slippers.

Buyers declared the styles of the coming season will "hang a last year's tag" on styles with which stores and women's wardrobes are stocked at present.

None of the larger stylemakers had disclosed any secrets today, the more important openings being scheduled next week.

BANK MESSENGER HELD FOR EMBEZZLING $800

NEW HAVEN, July 23—(AP)—Accused of embezzling approximately $800, Herbert F. Clark, 20 year old bank messenger, today was under arrest and free on bail of $2,000.

Clark, whose arrest was ordered by government officials in Washington after an investigation, is alleged to have admitted the series of thefts. He had made restitution of $150.

Officials of the Second National Bank of New Haven were puzzled last spring by a weekly shortage of $25 to $50. Suspicion pointed to the youth, and he was discharged June 7. A report was then filed in Washington.

Where he spent the money, Clark was unable to explain. He had only a few new clothes to show for it.

Tonight he was 25 minutes in the lead for the race, which began at Detroit Monday. Gehlbach led on the Detroit-to-Buffalo and Buffalo-to-New York legs but lost on the New York-to-Cincinnati lap yesterday to Herman Hamer, of La Salle, Ill.

Hamer came in fifth today, after landing in a field, 50 miles from here, because of motor trouble, which cost him ten minutes time.

Gehlbach's time from Cincinnati to Little Rock was three hours, 54 minutes and 53 seconds. He stopped at Evansville, Ind., eleven minutes to refuel.

The fliers will take off for Houston, the next derby stop, at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

After Houston, stops will be made at San Angelo, Douglas, Los Angeles, Ogden, Lincoln, Chicago and Detroit.

Detectives who made the arrest said the prisoner charged that the doctor promised to marry her after obtaining a divorce and failed to keep his pledge. The police said she went to his country home, asked to see his wife, drew a revolver from her handbag and, without saying a word, fired four shots all of which hit Mme. Gastaud. The victim's condition was said to be serious but not necessarily fatal. The prisoner was listed by the police as the daughter of a French naval officer.

Taking Steps To Oust Chairman Huston

WASHINGTON, July 23—(AP)—Confidently expecting the early retirement of Claudius Huston as chairman of the republican national committee, President Hoover and party leaders today went ahead with arranging campaign plans in the absence of Huston.

The republican campaign discussions both at the White house and at the capitol were based upon the assumption that Huston is getting out. However, his continued absence from the city was beginning to receive notice.

The chairman, who has been under fire of a powerful group in the party, promised early in the month to make an announcement of his intentions as chairman as soon as the senate adjourned.

When the senate adjourned Monday, the party leaders sat back to hear his statement. None was forthcoming, inquiries were launched but Huston was not to be found. His office yesterday said he was in New York but today there was no intimation of where Huston could be located.

It was said there he would be here tomorrow "if he can arrange some things." What was to be arranged was not disclosed.

Out of the round of conferences today it developed that if Mr. Huston does not announce his intention of resigning shortly, steps will be taken to seek his ouster.

Meanwhile, harmony was the byword as republican leaders bent their efforts to rearranging the national organization from the worst split it has suffered in many years.

TO MINIMIZE USE OF FORCE BY PROHIBITION OFFICERS

WASHINGTON, July 23—(AP)—Actions to minimize the use of force and secure the co-operation of business in enforcing the national prohibition law were taken today by the department of justice and the treasury.

Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of prohibition, announced he had suspended two prohibition agents for three days without pay because they searched the automobile of a private citizen without probable cause and Commissioner Doran of the bureau of industrial alcohol announced the appointment of a committee of scientists, professional and business men to advise his bureau on the problems arising out of the production and use of industrial alcohol.

Woodcock suspended Charles R. McCartney and John T. Weigel who at midnight on the night of July 16 stopped and searched the automobile of E. G. Duncan, an engineer of the Maryland road's commission. Duncan charged the agents had fired upon his car but the director said that they denied having done so and expressed the opinion that Duncan might have mistaken other noises for shots.

Doran named fifteen prominent men to advise how best to secure co-operation of the interests using and manufacturing industrial alcohol in enforcing the permissive sections of the prohibition law. The advisory committee also will aid the bureau in handling the medicinal liquor questions.

BALTIMORE GARMENT WORKERS ON STRIKE

BALTIMORE, July 23.— (AP)— Demanding union recognition, a 40-hour, five-day week and creation of a minimum wage scale, workers in the women's garment industry of Baltimore struck today. Union officials said 2,000 of 3,000 persons employed in the industry left their work, paralyzing 19 of the 24 shops in the city.

Operators, however, said the number was exaggerated in that there were not more than a thousand women's garment workers in Baltimore. The union leaders were accused of attempting to drive the industry out of the city.

Five strikers, who were arrested early in the day on the complaint of one operator, were given a hearing during the afternoon and dismissed. They were accused of creating a disturbance.

Tonight Jacob Halpern, vice president of the International Ladies Garment Workers union, said "the employers will have to take the first step toward settlement of the strike."

Pioneer Aviator, Glenn H. Curtiss, Dead At 52

BU[illegible] N. Y., July 23.—(AP) — Gle[illegible]mond Curtiss, pioneer a[illegible] guiding genius of the ae[illegible] world, is dead.

[illegible]er, who risked death again [illegible]ain in the days when flying [illegible]considered foolhardiness, died [illegible]enly today in the General hospital here. He had been operated on for appendicitis July 11, and had been reported out of danger and well on the way to complete recovery.

Mrs. Curtiss, who had kept an almost constant watch beside her husband's bedside during the early days of his illness, was summoned from her hotel but could not reach the hospital in time to be with him at the end.

Pulmonary embolus— a blood clot on one of the main arteries, close to the heart—was given as the cause of death by hospital authorities.

News of the death of the man to whom aviation owed much of its achievement in the past quarter century came with a shocking suddenness, but brought tributes from fliers and aeronautical leaders in all parts of the country.

Mr. Curtiss was said to have been suffering from appendicitis, with recurring acute attacks for some time. He was involved in a suit brought against him by the Herring-Curtiss company in a Rochester court to recover nearly a million dollars. The complaint charged violation of patent rights and misappropriation of funds. Curtiss failed to appear in court. Attorneys for the company charged that he was feigning illness to avoid appearing and the court ordered three physicians to conduct an examination to determine his fitness to testify.

He is survived by his widow; a son, Glenn, of Hammondsport and Miami, Fla.; a sister, Mrs. Ruth Hesley, of Miami; his mother, Mrs. Lulu Curtiss of Hammondsport, and a half-brother, Carl G. Adams of Miami.

It was perhaps fitting that the life of Mr. Curtiss should have ended here in Buffalo, for it was here that many of his earlier activities were carried on. In a suburb, Kenmore, is located the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company, one of the principal units of that organization which links the names of aviation's leading pioneers—Curtiss-Wright.

In 1916 Mr. Curtiss organized the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company here and it was here that many of the large war orders were filled for the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed this afternoon.

Through the microphone he had denounced lawlessness, racketeers and gangsters. Today Commissioner Wilcox gave out an affidavit from an unnamed man who said he had been induced by Buckley to start bootlegging. After he became aligned with a prosperous liquor selling organization, he swore, Buckley demanded and received amounts totaling $4,000.

MONTEREY, Mexico, July 23.— (AP)—Jose Gonzales Cantu, nine years a prisoner on Mexico's "Devils Island," today was captured with two others hiding in a cave near here and brought to the penitentiary charged with banditry.

Cantu, who was released at the end of a sentence for taking part in a fatal holdup of the Mexico City Laredo passenger express in 1921, tonight said he wanted to go back to the penal colony where he "would be safe." He said he had tried in vain to live a useful honest life but, the police said, he declared he was wanted no where and finally forced back into illicit practices to gain a livelihood.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Rebecca Wendel Swope.

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—Mrs. Rebecca Wendel Swope, last but one of a line noted for its vast fortune in real estate, died Sunday at the age of 87 on her estate at Quogue, L. I.

In accordance with the customs of the family, who have long closed their shutters against the modern world, no announcement was made of her death and she was buried quietly yesterday in Trinity cemetery.

Her passing leaves only one member of the family—Miss Ella, who is 80—in the four story brick mansion which stands in the midst of business buildings at Fifth avenue and 39th street, where thousands of department store shoppers mill daily.

The house, which is a New York landmark, is part of the vast real estate holdings amassed by John G. Wendel, a fur trader in the days of John Jacob Astor. The fortune is now estimated at more than $100,000,000. Adhering to their grandfather's principle of never selling property once acquired, the sisters refused to part with the old mansion despite many high offers and continued to live behind drawn curtains in the midst of Fifth avenue's traffic roar. After dark, Miss Ella would venture forth to give her poodle, Tobey, an airing in a high walled back yard worth untold thousands of dollars and used only for that purpose.

TWO MEN WOUNDED BY SHOTS FROM A COAST GUARD BOAT

Patrol Boat 2387 Fired Upon the Yacht Marge Off Bourne, Mass.—Two Men Were Wounded In the Legs By Machine Gun Bullets—Coast Guard Commander Declared the Marge Was Well Known As a Rum Runner—No Liquor Was Found On the Yacht.

WOODSHOLE, Mass., July 23—(AP)—Coast guard patrol boat 2387, fired upon the yacht Marge, off Bourne early today, wounding two of the six men aboard her. Frederick Stone and Daniel Conway, both of New Bedford, received machine gun bullet wounds in the legs. The Marge, owned by Howard Jackman, of Salem, was held here pending orders from Boston on a charge of rum running and the men released.

Widely different versions were given of the affair. Stone, one of the wounded men, declared the patrol boat had flashed its searchlight upon the yacht and opened fire with the machine gun without further warning. He said he was a passenger on the Marge, which had just passed through Cape Cod canal bound from Gloucester to New Bedford for repairs.

"It might well have been another 'Black Duck' case," Stone declared. "There was no warning, except to flash the light before firing. We had no rum aboard nor had we had any."

Commander F. A. Nichols of base 18 here, expressed regret that the two men were wounded, but declared the Marge was well known as a rum runner to the coast guard and that every effort had been made to halt the craft before firing upon her. "I have forwarded charges of failure to stop on signal and resisting boarding officers to Boston," Commander Nichols said, "and although no liquor was found on the Marge there was evidence there had been in the form of a strong odor, bags, straw and such articles. The men received only slight wounds and were attended by our own doctors."

Commander Nichols asserted "the Marge was really a motorboat used for rum running although she had yacht's papers. She was well known to the coast guard as a rum boat."

COLCHESTER

CHIEF RECOMMENDS ADDITIONAL CISTERNS

At a recent meeting of the legal voters of Colchester borough, it was voted to appropriate eight hundred dollars for the purchase of additional hose and other needed equipment for the use of the fire company. Fire Chief Brown was empowered to make the purchase. Tuesday, the shipment consisting of 250 feet of 2 1-2 inch hose, 500 feet of 1 1-2 inch hose, a number of new raincoats, smoke masks and rubber boots arrived at the railroad station and was transferred to the fire house. The fire company was already equipped with 1200 feet of 2 1-2 inch hose which together with the hose just purchased makes nearly 2,000 feet on hand for attachment to the borough's powerful pumper, which will throw 300 gallons a minute. Chief Brown states that with this additional hose, the large cisterns on the center park can be utilized to protect residences a greater distance from the center than formerly. However, even with the additional hose, the residences on upper North Main street will still not be adequately protected as there are no large borough cisterns in that section. Fire company officials suggest the construction of a borough cistern on the east side of the highway opposite the Bock residence in order to give property owners in that vicinity the full measure of fire protection to which they are entitled as borough taxpayers.

W. Herbert Adams has been busy the past few days cleaning and repairing the large 40-gallon and the two five-gallon chemical tanks on the fire engine. Last summer he overhauled the gasoline-powered fire engine, purchased a number of years ago under the administration of Warden Leffingwell. He reports it as now in good mechanical order. It has been suggested that the machine could be hoisted onto an old Ford car and could be used in conjunction with the new borough pumper in case of a serious fire. The expense for a few minor repairs and the purchase of the old Ford chassis it is thought would not exceed fifty dollars. Many of the borough residents have expressed their appreciation of the interest shown by Mr. Adams, a student at Carnegie Institute of Technology, who has devoted much of his spare vacation time the past few summers to repairing and checking up on the mechanical performance of the borough's two fire engines.

Mrs. Minks' Fire Loss $1,500

A one-story frame house on Windham avenue, not far from the Julius Sultan summer boarding house, was burned to the ground about 9 o'clock Tuesday evening. The flames had gained considerably headway when discovered and there was delay in putting in a call for the local fire department. As the house was outside the borough limits and also in view of the small supply of water, in that vicinity, the engine was not taken to the fire. However, the firemen and a large band of volunteers were hard at work to check the spread of the flames with buckets and brooms. The house, formerly known as the Brady property, was owned by Mrs. Sadie Minks of New York city and was used by her as a summer residence. For several months it had been unoccupied. It is understood that the loss which was estimated at $1500 is partially covered by insurance.

Coroner Exonerates Lombardi

Coroner Arthur G. Bill today made public his finding in the death of Donata Lombardi of Naugatuck at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam Monday afternoon, and in its states that he finds that her death was not caused by the criminal act or negligence of any person or persons.

The finding includes the information that Coroner Bill viewed the body of the deceased on Tuesday, and also held an inquest at the hospital as to the cause and manner of death. He states that death was due to a fracture of the skull caused by the automobile in which she was riding, and being driven by her husband, Elmiro Lombardi, of Naugatuck, skidding and striking a tree and turning over on its side on the highway leading from Pomfret to Putnam.

Observes 95th Birthday

Samuel Berriman, resident at Dayville Four Corners, where he has lived for many years, deserves high place among what has been termed "spry old people of New England." Last Sunday Mr. Berriman observed his 95th birthday. Despite his advanced age he actually is spry. He gets about readily, he reads without glasses, he eats anything he likes, being subject to no diet restrictions, and it is just difficult to believe that he has reached such an advanced age retaining all of his faculties in such marked degree. He was remembered on Sunday with gifts, and there were other things to make his birthday a happy one. It appears a likely prospect that Mr. Berriman will eventually enter that select and limited group known as centenarians, and that most certainly is the wish of his relatives and all of those who have the privilege of his friendship or acquaintance.

They will go first to Putnam and thence to Providence, where they will visit historic spots, and then to Bristol, R. I., to visit the Soldiers' home and to camp for the first night. Friday morning they will proceed on foot to Newport, and then to a camping place at the beach. They will rest there for a time before going over the Ten-Mile drive in a fleet of automobiles that will provide for them.

Other places to be visited in Newport are the Naval Training station and Fort Adams. The group will leave Newport Saturday noon and travel by way of Providence and Putnam, and the plans are for them to reach Camp Woodstock by 9.30 p. m.

NOW FOR THE OTHERS

Now that the senate has ratified the London treaty and the president has affixed his signature and made a statement to the effect that it will secure the full defense of the United States and lay the foundation upon which further constructive reduction in world arms may be accomplished in the future interest centers on the action that will be taken by Great Britain and Japan.

In saying that the treaty helps to lift the burden of militarism from the backs of mankind and proves that this is not an imperialistic nation the president places before the other countries the necessity of doing the same thing. The need for such action is evident and the opportunity is before the other governments. Not only will ratification by all three signers be a response to world sentiment but it will inspire other countries to think more seriously of similar action.

The treaty doesn't become effective until the three nations have ratified in the meantime and until it is known what all are going to do it is to be expected that there will be action by the respective nations in keeping with the treaty's terms.

Opposition to the ratification of the treaty has been displayed in Great Britain and also in Japan. It is in keeping with that which was shown in the United States senate the fear being that the pact gives advantages to other nations and that the restrictions imposed will handicap the proper national defense. If it doesn't amount to any more than the opposition shown here there should not be much time required in securing ratification and the opinion prevails that ratification is ultimately assured by both the British and Japanese. When each of the countries feels that the others are securing an advantage it is evident that the agreement has been reached through compromises. None of them has probably secured all that was expected. It would be an unusual situation if all had obtained all their demands. The fact that an understanding has been reached concerning naval construction is important because it means that the building in certain lines or the halting of construction in order to eliminate competition should arouse neither suspicion nor envy. Best of it it will eliminate an endless and expensive race.

MAKING POSTAL ENDS MEET

The effort to make ends meet in the postoffice department was begun before President Hoover asked the various departments to pare down their expenditures as much as possible. It has been made a study with the idea of overcoming the yearly deficit. The department is burdened with a lot of expense for which it is not responsible but it is quite evident that there is an unwillingness to see it steadily mounting without doing something to restrain it.

Digging back into ancient history, the Kansas City Star commends to the postmaster general the record of Postmaster General Thomas L. James, who made such a fine record in various public offices that President Garfield made him postmaster general. Concerning his work in that office the Star points out that when he took the department over "it was running an annual deficit of about $2,000,000 and had been for years. The postmaster general set out to keep it within its appropriation. To all comers—most of whom were members of congress, sponsors for postal employes—he gave only one answer, that he must and would keep the cost within the allowance. This he did by cutting down the operating expenses and getting rid of needless employes. In mail contracts alone, he saved nearly $2,000,000 and in so doing started the investigations that exposed the star route postal scandals. Near the end of his incumbency he announced that he had reduced the expenses of the department to a point where the first class rate could be and in his opinion should be reduced from three cents to two cents, and shortly after his retirement this reduction was made."

There is a suggestion in the above which is worthy of consideration. Government departments are frequently found sponsoring large expenses which can be materially cut without loss of efficiency. From time to time they have been cut when conditions required it. It is not to be expected that the department can eliminate the deficit of $85,000,000 in such a way but it might make substantial headway in that direction against such a part of the deficit as the department is responsible for, such a part of the deficit as comes from maintaining services which do not pay their expense of operation. The idea ought not to be overlooked in the endeavor to make ends meet.

NEW YORK'S ADMINISTRATION

Back before election days there were charges made about the conditions which prevailed in New York city. They didn't influence the election. Mayor Walker was returned to office by a big majority. It was claimed that his opposition was weak, that those who wanted to vote against him couldn't reconcile themselves to supporting any of the other candidates with the result that many didn't vote and many votes were lost.

The election hadn't been over long before there was a furore over the boosting of salaries, including that of the mayor. This has been followed by revelations of various kinds which cannot be said to reflect favorably upon the Walker administration. It has gotten to the point where it is necessary for the mayor to come to the defense of his administration and endeavor to show that all is right and everybody happy. He has given an explanation of somethings, maintained that he was not responsible for others and places great importance on the fact that he has ordered an investigation to get at the facts.

That of course may create the impression he desires but it is perfectly evident that he is responsible for the investigators who are going to direct the probe and it doesn't appear that he has told them to hew to the line let the chips fall where they may.

At the same time the conditions in New York have created a demand for a special session of the state legislature that it might authorize an investigation of New York city conditions. The governor has turned down the appeal which leaves him in the position of being charged with such friendship for Tammany that he would not do anything that would displease it in advance of the coming election. This means that the only inquiry concerning New York conditions is to be that instigated and directed by the mayor. This will not be by an impartial board but by an official who is part of the Walker regime. It is not to be expected under such circumstances that anything very serious is going to be found the matter with the manner in which the city of New York is being administered. The voters are however being given an opportunity to realize that they are getting what they ordered even though the results are not what they expected.

THE RECALL IN DETROIT

For the past several weeks various charges have been made against Mayor Bowles of Detroit, who was elected to office on a reform ticket. These charges followed the discharge of his police commissioner after he had made a successful raid upon race hand book agencies. It was maintained that he was favorable to lawlessness with the result that there arose a demand for his recall, something new in the political experience of that city.

Even though it was bitterly fought the recall petition was allowed and Detroit was presented plenty of charges against the mayor and he likewise set fourth a defense of his administration. The case was put before the citizens in such a manner that they could not fail to have an opinion. It was a case for them to stand by the mayor or to vote for his removal. That he suffered from much of the opposition that he expected on election day, having been elected by a plurality of but 8500, was evidenced by the vote but there was no questioning the decision of the recall election. He was beaten by over 30,000. He had failed to present his case to the people in a manner to get their support. The verdict on its face is that he is guilty as charged, that he ought not to be kept in office and that Detroit has failed to get from his administration what was expected when he was elected.

How much this is due to a sincere desire to clean up Detroit remains to be seen. Mayor Bowles was in a position to draw the fire of those who objected to his action in firing his police commissioner and also those who objected to his administration in its entirety. Evidently those who stood by him in his fight were in a decided minority but the situation in Detroit hasn't been helped by that coldblooded murder of Radio Announcer Buckley which came right on the heels of the recall election.

EGYPT'S TROUBLE

Factional troubles in Egypt are giving plenty of concern to the British. The purpose is to keep hands off as between the opposing factions but when it comes to providing protection for the lives of foreigners the British decided that two warships might be needed. At least the sending of them was both a protective and a preventive measure. hair presence will serve to direct attention to the determination to take all necessary steps for their safety and that in itself cannot fail to be interpreted by the trouble makers as sufficient warning to govern themselves accordingly.

This trouble comes at a time when the British are experiencing plenty to cause worry in India and while there are rumblings of discontent being heard from South Africa. It has been able to fix the date when it will be relieved of some of its responsibilities in Iraq but it is in a position where if it isn't experiencing trouble in one direction it is in another and the situation is unusual when it can be said that it is without worry anywhere.

Egypt has long presented a problem. If it isn't a contest among the factions in that country it is the demand for recognition by the nationalists. It is a country where revolt has followed revolt and where repeated concessions have had to be made without yielding to all the demands. The present situation isn't of that character but, a case of letting them adjust their factional differences amongst themselves provided they do it in a way that concerns only themselves. The importance of giving protection to the foreign residents cannot be and isn't apparently being overlooked. Keeping possessions in various parts of the world peaceful and satisfied is not one of the easiest tasks of a nation as the British in particular have reason to know.

HOLLYHOCK SHOP

Horace fingered the little white elephant and wondered if Aunt Alicia would scoff. It would be his third gift to her this week. She hadn't actually questioned him, but there had been a quizzical smile in her eyes. Well, let her wonder. She liked little knickknacks and he certainly had been purchasing them.

"Horace Saunders, if you bring over another gift from the Hollyhock shop this week, I shall have to have your head examined. I loved the toy spinning wheel, and the cat and the mice. The miniature Lindy was cunning for the mantel and the small Beethoven for the piano, but, my dear, I already have sixteen elephants—all sizes—trailing along on my bookcases in the library. And you gave me every one!" his aunt reminded him that evening.

Horace sank into a chintz chair and groaned. Every one? He'd given her every one. Yes, and bought out the Hollyhock shop of its stock in elephants. Even she—"Mrs. Hollyhock"—had laughed. Glorious laugh!

"Dear Aunt Alicia, don't be so hard on me. I couldn't think of leaving that elephant in the shop when all its brothers and sisters were up here enjoying your hospitality," Horace grinned. Aunt Alicia sighed. Horace had all the traits of her dear sister's good nature. But he'd never been known to spend his money so foolishly in all his 29 years.

"Now, Horace, I love all the little foolish things, but no more for a while. Wait until I see something I really want." That was a command, though given with good faith.

Well, thought Horace, that's over. No more Hollyhock for Aunt Alicia. And he couldn't very well purchase pirates, masks and little glass ladies for Uncle Fenton. No, there must be some other way.

So Horace started purchasing novelties for himself. On Tuesday he bought a doll with green hair and a pale frock. On Wednesday he sought out a lamp with clowns on it. Thursday "Mrs. Hollyhock" was out, so he only purchased postage stamps. Then Friday she had smiled at him so sweetly that he wrote out three checks—for a bowl, a toy barque and a windmill.

But Horace was uneasy. Something had to be done. His room was becoming so littered with freak novelties that he'd soon have to announce an auction. And Aunt Alicia was finding him silent company at bridge these evenings. She wondered what could be the matter.

Then one day "Mrs. Hollyhock" didn't come over as usual to aid him in his purchases. Instead she remained at her square red desk in the rear of the shop and counted figures, while one of her assistants waited upon him. He was puzzled and hurt. His plan would surely go awry now and—really, his friends were beginning to suspect what treasure lay in Hollyhock shop.

"The figurine is $30, sir, said the girl as he lifted the plaster lady from her pedestal. Horace glanced up in time to see anxious eyes questioning his from the red desk.

"Oh, Stella, child—not that. You've forgotten!" she warned the clerk in a tremulous voice and came quickly upon the couple. "Not that, sir," she said again. Horace looked down upon her small black head and saw a mist in her eyes.

"But I think it is lovely, madam, and I wish to buy it," he announced, looking straightly erect and very tall beside little "Mrs. Hollyhock."

"That will be all, Stella," she smiled and then turned briskly to Horace. "I am sorry, sir, but the figurine is not for sale." Horace was helpless to understand—and yet he hoped she would tell him more.

"I think I understand," he lied, cheerfully. And then she looked up again.

"No, sir, I don't think you do. But you have been so kind these days. And, you see, this little figurine was my first novelty when I opened two years ago—and—I'm attached to it." She hesitated and looked away. "Hollyhock shop isn't going to be anymore—after tomorrow," she announced simply. "—I have to sell it."

A few moments later he was still holding the figurine, when she came to his side again. In her hand was a small slip of paper and as she handed it to him, she said, "You may have the figurine, Mr. Saunders. I can think of no one I should rather have keep it." Horace was dumfounded.

"Er—Mrs. Hollyhock—" he muttered.

"Miss Helen Thorpe is the name," she interrupted a little happier than she was a moment before.

"Miss Thorpe, may I have it for keeps?" he asked, boyishly aware of his increasing pleasure. She nodded.

"On the condition," he continued, "that you come along?" Helen Thorpe smiled.

"For tea, sir? I'd love it," and before he knew it she was off for hat and gloves. Horace beamed. Of course he hadn't mean tea at all—he had meant for keeps. And when the two hurried through the swing door, a moment later, Horace knew that Hollyhook shop would not be sold the day after tomorrow.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 23—A belated but very human story of the late George Brennan, former democratic leader in Illinois, has just reached the Bystander. It comes from Dick Oulahan, dean of all Washington's host of active political writers.

Oulahan saw Brennan in Chicago not long before his death in 1928, and conversation naturally turned upon gang warfare conditions in that city. But the thing that most interested Oulahan was a story of his own experience with gangsters Brennan told him.

Helped Youngsters

The democratic chieftain explained that he had been a poor boy and spent a great deal of his time looking longingly into shop windows at articles for which he yearned. Often it was ordinary necessities, Brennan said. Even after fortune began smiling on him, he continued to be a great window shopper.

And that led to another development. He began noticing youngsters with their noses glued to toyshop window shopper.

Every now and then, something about such a youngster would attract his special attention and he would take the kid into the shop, buy him the toy he had coveted and charge the glow of pleasure he got out of the act up to the old moneyless days when he had longed unavailingly.

Sometimes it was not toys, and the folks he aided were not kids. On one such occasion he saw a young chap with shabby coat gazing yearningly at a smart blue suit displayed in a clothier's window.

Brennan talked with the gazer a little, then led him into the shop and made him a present of the suit and other odds and ends to go with it. Of course the young fellow learned who Brennan was.

Gratitude

A good many years passed. Brennan heard nothing of the young man, almost forgot him. Then one day a rather hard faced man entered his office and recalled himself as the chap who had been helped to the blue suit due to Brennan's generosity.

"Mr. Brennan," he said bluntly, "last night I was offered $1,500 to 'bump you off.' I told the man who made that offer that if anything like that happened to you, I would get him and get him right. I just wanted you to know about it. Good-bye."

And he was gone.

"Did Brennan accept it at face value?" the Bystander asked Oulahan.

"He certainly did. He knew his Chicago and also he knew a gangster when he saw one. He had no doubts. And he never tried to find out more about it."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Blacky's Venturesome Son

The ones who have the greatest need
For good advice are last to heed.
—Blacky the Crow.

There is a great difference in children. Yes, sir, there is a very great difference in children. Some are naturally timid; some are naturally bold; some are naturally obedient; some are naturally disobedient; some think they know all there is to know. Seldom will you find two children alike in any family. Perhaps this is just as well.

Blacky the Crow and Mrs. Blacky this year had a little larger family than usual. Usually they had four children, but this year they had five; and, as Blacky said, the fifth one made more trouble than the other four put together. From the time he was big enough to get into trouble it seemed as if he were in trouble most of the time. You see, he was a venturesome youngster. He wasn't content just to eat and sleep. It seems as if he just had to be squirming about, even when he was a very little fellow. Being what he was, he always got his full share of food, and sometimes a little more. The result was that he grew a little faster than his brothers and sisters.

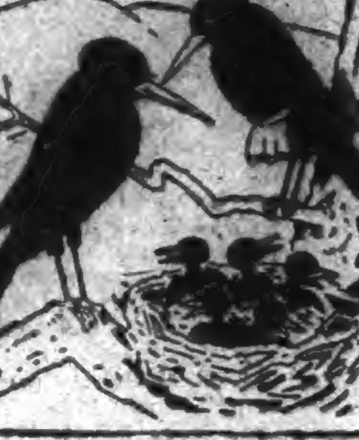
There came a time when the five young Crows somewhat crowded the nest that was built for four. They filled it to a point where it looked as if they might fall out. Mother Crow warned them that they must keep quiet or one of them would fall.

"If one of you should fall out," said she, "you not only would have a bad fall, but somebody might catch you and eat you, for on the ground you would be helpless."

When Mother Crow had gone to look for more food the venturesome young Crow poked his head over the side and watched her until she was out of sight. Then he got up on the edge of the nest.

"Look out, or you'll fall!" said one of his brothers. "You heard what Mother said."

"Yes," said the venturesome young Crow. "I heard. She was just trying to scare us. I'm not afraid. I believe I could fly if I really tried. It looks very interesting down below. I would rather like to go down there and see what is to be seen."



Blacky the Crow and Mrs. Blacky this year had a little larger family than usual.

"You'd better not do it until Mother says you can," spoke up his timid sister.

The venturesome young Crow didn't reply. He had suddenly discovered something of great interest, and he was stretching over the edge of the nest as far as he could, in order that he might see better. That something was Farmer Brown's Boy. That Crow was so young that he had never even heard of these two-legged creatures of whom his father and mother were always so suspicious.

Farmer Brown's Boy was looking up at the nest. He saw the venturesome young Crow. He also saw how full the nest was. "Blacky must have some family this year," said Farmer Brown's Boy to himself. "Those young Crows must be almost ready to fly. I have a notion to take one of them for a pet. A young Crow is a lot of fun. I believe I'll climb up there."

But Farmer Brown's Boy didn't have to climb up there. The venturesome young Crow was leaning so far over the edge of the nest to watch Farmer Brown's Boy that when one of his brothers accidentally pushed him a little he lost his balance, and the next moment down he went, vainly flapping his wings, and landed almost at the feet of Farmer Brown's Boy.

ACNE

By Isaac R. Pels, M. D., Baltimore
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Acne is a condition seen very frequently in young individuals beginning with the onset of puberty or adolescence. It is commonly and appropriately termed "blackheads and pimples," and occurs equally frequently in both sexes. It develops gradually, coincidently with physiologic changes, and one of its manifestations is an over abundance of oiliness and greasiness of the skin of the face, chest and back.

It is a curiously established fact in the writer's experience that there are frequently strong hereditary characteristics such as physical resemblance to either parent; and this fact is all the more effective inasmuch as the boy or girl having acne, very frequently resembles the parent of the opposite sex. It does not necessarily follow, however, that such resemblance predisposes to acne.

Indeed it may be stated at once that the exact cause of acne is quite unknown, although this sex resemblance and the hereditary factors are strongly suggestive of a probable cause. Most authorities and observers however are inclined to believe that the nature of acne is a purely physiologic, an aggravated physiologic process, since the endocrine (glands of internal secretion), appear from what has been stated, to be in a stage of over activity of adjustment.

With these facts in mind one can appreciate the situation by realizing (from records) that acne is essentially a disease of puberty, beginning as early as the age of 8 or 9 years (even rarely earlier) and lasting to the age of nearly 30.

The essential characters of the disease are in the order of their appearance—oiliness of the skin (sebirrgiea), comedone (blackhead) formation; pimples (papules), pustules and abscesses (infected papules) and pitted scars, which occur in the above-mentioned regions and may even appear (rarely) upon the ears, the neck and upon the upper arms. Severe cases exhibit the disease as far down as the waist line, and even in the hairy portion of the scalp near the edge of the skin.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Overproduction

Mr. Editor: Our Gov. Trumbull remedy for the present state of business depression, in most respects is an excellent one. But with one exception he fails to give the underlying principles or cause for such a state of affairs. Overproduction, he says—overproduction of what? The answer, pure and simple, is, of shams, imitations. Rayon for instance, looks like silk, feels like silk but is not silk. Comparable to bootleg whiskey, looks like it, tastes like it, but is not it. Our manufacturers and producers have submitted to the dictates of self-constituted leaders of fashion, and thrust upon the markets a mass of imitations which neither our people nor those of foreign countries have any desire for. They may do for the idle rich, the indiscreet, the flappers, et al., but not for the working class, the producers of wealth and ultimate consumers; they insist on durability, wear. The shelves of our merchants are filled to repletion. These are now offered at ludicrously low prices, but fail to attract. They, the dealers, will now have to stand the brunt and share in the losses these measures have brought about. The present state of affairs should prove an object lesson to all concerned and let them see to it that the like never occurs again.

Stories That Recall Others

To The Rescue

Junior, just out of the bathtub, was waiting for his mother to dress him. Suddenly he rushed outdoors and returned with his cat.

"Why did you run out doors without your clothes on?" asked his mother.

"Oh, I saw Mrs. X slapping her broom against her porch and didn't have time for clothes," replied the defender.

Candy for "Poppy."

A fellow noted for his practical jokes, but, like all "kidders" not taking kindly to jokes with himself as the victim, found "days" too confusing and made a most embarrassing mistake. First there was Mother's day and then his thoughts turned to Father's day. One day he picked up the paper and there was announcement of Poppy day.

And this fellow, it is told, went out and bought a box of candy and mailed it to his father.

In 1854 there was established on the Naugatuck river, in West Torrington, a factory for the manufacture of ice skates. This factory was shortly moved to the present site in Torrington, where the manufacture of ice skates has continued to this day.

Roller skates were first manufactured about 1876 and since that time various other lines have been added, until at the present time, the list includes ice skates, roller skates, steel fish rods, split bamboo fish rods, fish reels, steel golf shafts, gun implements, police goods, mite boxes, nail pullers, hack saw frames, screw drivers, chisels, tool handles and other wood goods.

The Tower & Lyon company of New York city was taken over in 1911, The T. H. Wood Co., Inc., of South Coventry, was acquired in 1922, and the Chapin-Stephens company, of Pine Meadow, in 1926.

The demand for ice skating outfits has led the company to enter into an advantageous arrangement with a prominent manufacturer of athletic shoes. The latest development has been the steel golf shaft business, which has grown to amazing proportions.

At present in Torrington more than 350,000 square feet of floor space is in use, with about 900 employes in the factory alone.

Old Sore Tortured For 30 Years

She Is Happy Now

For 30 long, pain-tortured years, Mrs. J. C. Henderson of North Carolina, had an ulcer on her ankle—no matter what treatment she tried or amount of money she spent—nothing helped her distressing condition.

Someone suggested Peterson's Ointment to her—she admits she was doubtful but she was so discouraged with this never-ceasing agony she was willing to try anything.

Before Mrs. Hederson had finished her second box of Peterson's, the ulcer had completely disappeared—she was overjoyed to think that at last she could enjoy living.

Peterson's ointment accomplishes these near miracles because it's so powerfully healing. Even one application instantly relieves the pain and soreness of bruises, piles, boils—a few days treatment entirely banishes pimples, blackheads—even the long standing cases. A 35c box proves it—all drugstores.

WOONSOCKET HAD FIRST TROLLEY; NOW ALL GONE

By a strange twist of fate Woonsocket, which 42 years ago saw introduction of the first crude electric car in the world, is one of the first cities in the country to see the last "trolley" removed. Service on the Providence-Woonsocket line, lone survivor of the many lines which were gradually eliminated in the city, ended officially at 11:10 p. m. Wednesday.

Francis S. Thayer, now of North Smithfield, who was superintendent of the Norwich municipal light plant from May, 1904, to July, 1906, did the assembling and wiring on that first trolley car, and built the hangers for the trolley wires.

The car used was a horse car, on which work was carried on during the summer months of 1888 and by September it was ready for its trial trip, upon which Mr. Thayer was one of those to ride.

At first it was planned to conduct the test in the afternoon but later, to eliminate the crowd, it was decided to conduct an early morning trip. On Sunday, Sept. 25, 1888, the first trip was made, safely and surely but not without its humorous incidents says a Providence paper.

The car, which had been equipped at the Social barn, was first "towed" to market square by horses, the start of the newly installed line.

The moment of suspense as the signal to go was sounded was followed by cheers as the car slowly moved under its own power, gained momentum around "Dead Man's Curve," where the Falls mills is now, and headed for Globe hill, which, as Mr. Thayer recalls, "was some steep grade as compared with now."

Mr. Thayer smiles as he remembers the sudden "bang" at the foot of Globe hill when the car stopped as a fuse blew.

"I had made the fuse box and knew immediately what had happened," Mr. Thayer said, "but some of the riders thought it was 'all off' and started to laugh."

The laughs again changed to cheers as Mr. Thayer put in a bigger fuse and the car was again started.

By this time more persons had arrived at the scene and some had climbed aboard, but the car "made the grade" successfully. It was then turned around and negotiated its way back to the starting place.

The trip had marked the opening of a new era and intensive work was immediately started by the General Electric company in developing the electric car. The first trolley operated in Woonsocket for several months then was temporarily abandoned for the winter.

Within several years the trolley car had been perfected, manufacturing was started on a large scale and soon was a nationwide proposition, eliminating the horse-drawn cars as automobiles have now crowded the trolleys from the highways.

Mr. Thayer, who is a native of the vicinity where he now lives, left Woonsocket a few months after the successful run to take a position with the Narragansett Electric Light company as suburban superintendent of the Warren Barrington and Bristol division. He installed the first high tension wires in Rhode Island and was also the first installer of a commercial electric meter, at the Olneyville car barn. After leaving Providence he became manager of the Westerly Gas and Electric company later going to Norwich, Conn., where he rebuilt the municipal plant in that city. He purchased his farm in North Smithfield about 20 years ago since which time he has occupied a number of town posts and has also served on state commissions. He is a widely known land appraiser.

SHERIFF SELLS TRUCK FROM LIQUOR CASE

Sale of a practically new Reo truck, which was seized in connection with a raid on a large distillery in Waterford, was effected Tuesday by Deputy Sheriff Oscar H Main at the Jones garage in Groton for $1,600, the sale being carried out by order of the court and was one of the first instances in this county of such a sale of a motor vehicle to have been used in liquor law violations. It was alleged that Felix Niedzwecki of 30 Bayonet street, New London, had used the truck in connection with the distillery.

Sale of the distillery property by Deputy Sheriff Main brought in about $1,100, which is to be added to the $1,600 realized from the sale of the truck. Practically all of this goes to the state of Connecticut after expenses are deducted.

The deputy sheriff made his return of the sale on Wednesday to J. Frank Corey, clerk of the common pleas court

The man who painted the flag staff on the Norwich court house Wednesday morning was bigger to the watching crowd of boys than any monarch could be, although in reality he looked very small at that height.

Only two items in the wholesale grocery trade, codfish and peas, showed increases last month. Those with lower average prices were lima beans, flour, oats, prunes, sugar, coffee, pink salmon, tomatoes, corn, cottonseed oil, milk and lard.

The County Farm and Home Bureau news states that during a single month twenty-six chairs were reseated at meetings held in Poquonoc Bridge, Waterford, Old Mystic, Salem, Mystic and Bozrah, mostly in cane but some were seated with grass, splint and cane webbing.

DEEP RIVER RESERVOIR PIPE LINE HAS BREAK

A bad break in a 30-inch water main at Fitchville from the Deep River reservoir at Colchester, which was discovered Wednesday morning, is being repaired by a force of men from the Norwich city water works. The work is expected to be completed this (Thursday) morning, so that the water can be turned on again in the afternoon. The break, located at the joint of two pipes, was caused when the cement composition gave out.

Until the break is repaired the water supply from Fitchville south to Harland's corner will be turned off, but above Fitchville the farmers will not be affected. The work is being done under the direction of Supervisor George M. Charbonneau.

Ann street, so-called, which is between the property of Frank B. Disco at 25 Boswell avenue and that of Mrs. Rosa Zimmerman at 17 Boswell avenue, is found to be a "dedicated" public way by Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court in a decision he handed down Wednesday in favor of Disco in the injunction and trespass suit brought by Mrs. Zimmerman against Disco.

Mrs. Zimmerman sued for damages because of some excavating that Disco had done in what he claimed was a right of way and if she had succeeded in her petition for an injunction she would have prevented him from access to two of five garages which he had built on his property.

In his memorandum of decision, Judge Brown says: The plaintiff has failed to make out a cause of action either entitling her to an injunction or to damages. Judgment may be entered for the defendant to recover his costs.

The case was tried out at length before Judge Brown some time ago with Mayor Lee Roy Robbins and C. Hadlai Hull as counsel for Disco and C. V. James of Brown and James for Mrs. Zimmerman.

In his memorandum of decision, which was filed Wednesday with Court Clerk John H. Walker, Judge Brown says:

This is an action for an injunction and for damages for trespass upon the plaintiff's land by the defendant, upon an area some 15 by 20 feet in extent just south of the plaintiff's claimed north boundary line, at a point from 135 to 140 feet east from Boswell avenue in the city of Norwich. The space in question is opposite the two stalls nearest the south end of a five car garage erected by the defendant on his land, fronting toward that of the plaintiff, and the undisputed evidence is that to facilitate access thereto the defendant had some 12 cubic yards of soil excavated from the natural upward slope toward the east, at this point, leaving the space approximately even with the surface of a worked roadway to the west leading to Boswell avenue. It seems unfortunate that these neighbors are unable amicably to adjust their differences, particularly since the actual value of the land in dispute as disclosed by the court's view of the premises at the present of the parties, would appear to be less than the cost of the certified copies of deeds alone which have been laid in evidence in this trial to litigate the dispute between them.

These deeds disclose a somewhat unusual situation with regard to the title of the land in question, the history of which it is not necessary to narrate in detail in this memorandum. It will suffice to state that Harriet Niles, a common predecessor in title of the parties, on May 17, 1853, deeded to Myers and Bailey, (Exhibit 1), other land to the south, together with a right of way in common with the grantor, her heirs and assigns, 12 feet wide "to Ann street, so-called" as shown on a plan attached to and recorded with this deed. Ann street as so shown was 42 feet in width and extended from Boswell avenue to what is now Division street, its north side abutting what the deeds in the defendant's chain of title in effect describe as the south line of his property. Subsequently on the same date she deeded to one Peet, (Exhibit G), the land now owned by the plaintiff south of Ann street, the tract at the rear or east of the defendant's whereon the garage is located, and the fee of Ann street as shown on the plan above mentioned specifically referred to, reserving to her, her heirs, and assigns, the right in common with this grantee to use and improve the same as a common highway." The title and rights so conveyed ultimately passed to Avery Smith and Horace Walker as owners in common, the former having also previously acquired title to the houselot now owned by the defendant, bounded southerly on Ann street 105 feet, westerly by Boswell avenue, and easterly by that part of the land described in the deed to Peet situated north of Ann street. March 15, 1853, Walker quit-claimed to Smith, (Exhibit M), that part of the land owned by them in common situated north of Ann street, describing it in part as bounded "southerly by Ann street, so-called." On the same day Smith quitclaimed to Walker, (Exhibit L), that part of the land owned by them in common situated south of Ann street, describing it in part as bounded "northerly by Ann street, so-called."

January 13, 1859, Smith and others who had apparently acquired some at least of the land and rights earlier conveyed to Myers and Bailey as above set forth, conveyed their "rights of way" in Ann street and said lane 12 feet wide to Walker, (Exhibit V), and Walker in return conveyed to them, (Exhibit F), "certain rights of ways over and upon lands known as Ann street and a twelve feet wide lane" leading southerly therefrom, explicitly defining Ann street as being in effect 32 feet in width next south of the south line of Smith's house-lot and 135 feet in length to the center line of said lane 12 feet in width and extending southerly therefrom. On the same date, Myers and Bailey quit-claimed their "rights of way" in Ann street and the Lane to Walker. The next deed in the plaintiff's chain of title in 1892, (Exhibit Q), bounds her land by that now of the defendant on the north "subject to a right of way 32 feet wide" extending back "141 feet" from Boswell avenue and also to a right of way "12 feet wide, etc.", and the final one in 1920, (Exhibit U), bounds it similarly and reads "subject to whatever rights of way now exist." The deeds in the defendant's chain of title subsequent to 1853 either bound his property by Ann street on the south or expressly convey the rights of way thereover.

Upon the record title so disclosed the plaintiff claims that whatever rights the defendant's predecessors in title may have had to the land here in dispute as a part of Ann street prior thereto to 1859, the deeds then given above referred to, extinguished all rights of way in Ann street as shown on the plan attached to Exhibit 1, and substituted therefore a new right of way over a tract but 32 feet in width and extending back from Boswell avenue but 135 feet, or at the most 141 feet, thus not including any part of the area in question. This contention the defendant emphatically disputes and denies.

The first point which suggests itself in considering this issue, is the fact that in 1858 the title to Ann street as shown by the plan attached to Exhibit 1, was owned in common by Smith and Walker, the predecessors in title of both of the parties hereto. While their mutual deeds, Exhibits M and L, had the effect of creating an easement over Ann street so described for each tract thus conveyed, the fee of the tract embraced in Ann street remained in them as owners in common, assuming Ann street was a private right of way as distinguished from a public highway. Billings vs McKenzie, 87 Conn. 617, 621. Nor did their participation in the subsequent exchange of the deeds Exhibits V and F change this situation. Each of these not only by its description confines the grant to "rights of way," but each discloses that rights of way that day received of the grantees is the consideration therefor, and the former further expressly recites that this is the extent of the grant intended. Therefore, assuming all Walker's rights in Ann street have passed to the plaintiff, there is at least an outstanding undivided one-half interest which she does not own.

It may further be remarked in so far as the claimed extinguishment of the original easement in Ann street is concerned, that the evidence discloses that other grantees of Myers and Bailey had acquired rights therein prior to the exchange of deeds referred to. These were not parties thereto and the rights therefore could not be effectively extinguished thereby.

But the defendant also contends that the evidence discloses that an offer of dedication of Ann street for a public street was made by the grantors in 1853 by the deeds Exhibit 1 and Exhibit G taken together, which offer was accepted by the public and that thereby Ann street as so laid out became a public street. The principle relied upon is a familiar one and has often been applied: Riley vs. Hammel, 38 Conn. 574, 576, and cases there cited. Some of the evidential facts which may bear upon the determination of the questions involved are suggested in Guthrie vs. Town of New Haven, 31 Conn. 308, 321. Some of these facts and some others appear here. I will not attempt to review or enumerate them except to remark that the obvious great public convenience of the way in question and the repeated references thereto in the land records, both apparent from the evidence as of even this early time 75 or 80 years ago, and the confirmatory evidence of the subsequent years as to the extensive public use thereof and of the maintenance and improvement of the portion thereof, nearer to Boswell avenue, are among others significant. And it is to be had in mind that acceptance of a part of a street which has been opened may constitute a constructive acceptance of the entire street. Town of Derby vs. Alling, 40 Conn. 410, 435. And further that the public's attitude of acceptance may be shown by foot travel when that is the kind which would be chiefly accommodated. Phillips vs. Stanford, 81 Conn. 408, 413. It is my conclusion that there was an effective dedication of Ann street and that the same became and is a public way.

This being the situation in 1858 when Smith and Walker exchanged deeds Exhibit L and Exhibit M, the words used, bounding "by Ann street," so referring to a public highway, the fee being in the parties in common subject to the public easement, principle and authority suggest that each grantee thereby acquired title to the center line of Ann street. Seery vs. Waterbury, 82 Conn. 567, 570. I so hold.

Two other conclusions naturally follow then from the determination that there was an effective dedication of Ann street: First, that the deeds exchanged in 1859, Exhibits F and V, could in no event modify the extent of the easement created in Ann street, the public's rights having thus become irrevocably fixed; and second, that no part of the fee of the northerly half of Ann street, a strip of land 21 feet wide adjoining what has been inaccurately referred to as the defendant's south line, belongs to the plaintiff.

Since this includes all of the area where the excavation complained of was done, and the evidence does not indicate that anything done by the defendant so seriously interfered with the public's use of the way as to give the plaintiff at least a right of action therefor, but only that what was done did render the same more readily available for vehicular traffic to a point further east than before, the plaintiff can have no relief because of this excavation. The testimony of claimed damage to the plaintiff's property by material thrown onto it by the defendant is not convincing. The plaintiff has failed to make out a cause of action either entitling him to an injunction or to damages.

What might be of greater importance if the evidence did not disclose a case of dedication should perhaps be mentioned. That is, that the deeds in the defendant's chain of title from the time of title in Smith and Walker as the common predecessor of both parties, either expressly grant rights of access to the defendant's land over the area in question or impliedly do so by bounding the land on a street, way, or lane along its entire south side. The last such deed is that from Kronig to the defendant given in 1912 (Exhibit 17). The evidence shows that occupying thereunder the defendant has occasionally used the way so granted to its full depth for teaming in manure, turning his automobile, etc.

Judgment may be entered for the defendant to recover his costs.

BODY OF YOUTH WAS FOUND IN FRANKLIN POND

Leonard Bernier, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Onezime Bernier of Pautipaug Hill, Franklin, was drowned late Wednesday afternoon in the Rockwell Mills sawmill pond in the town of Franklin, which is located about two miles from the Norwich-Willimantic highway. The body, fully clothed, was found in the pond about 11 o'clock in the evening by a searching party, who had been scouring the section for two hours when it became known that the young man was missing. Details of the drowning are lacking.

GOVERNOR'S FOOT GUARDS TO CAMP AT NIANTIC

The Second company, Governor's Foot Guards, stationed at New Haven, will encamp at Camp Trumbull, Niantic, from today (Thursday) until Sunday morning.

The program includes military maneuvers and athletic events. More than 100 members of the company have stated they will go to the camp.

Thursday morning the members of the company will assemble at the Goffe street armory, New Haven, where they will be given their equipment for the encampment. The start for camp will be made as soon as the men have received their full quota of equipment, and the company will arrive at Camp Trumbull about 1 o'clock.

Athletic events will occupy Thursday afternoon, sponsored by Capt. Samuel E. Hoyt. A golf tournament will be held on the links of the Old Lyme Country club. Baseball, quoits and bathing will complete the athletic program for the day. Pistol practice will be held under the direction of Capt M. Leon Smith. The day will be known as Foot Guard day.

Friday, to be known as Governor's day, will start with a manual drill and guard mount in the morning, followed by instruction in the operation of the automatic pistol. Athletic events will occupy the afternoon from 1:30 to 4 o'clock. A formal guard mount in honor of Governor Trumbull will be held from 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock.

A dinner for Governor Trumbull will start at 5:45 o'clock Saturday. Veterans' day will be held. Morning drill will consist of extended orders and rifle practice. In the afternoon the members will engage in intercompany athletic competition. This program includes baseball, a tug of war, races and swimming events.

In the evening a dinner will be held, with the vets and other visitors as guests of the company. Prizes for the athletic competition will be awarded following the dinner, after which a dance will be held in the community hall.

Camp will be broken immediately after morning mess Sunday. The members of the company will leave Niantic as soon after breakfast as camp can be broken, and the men will arrive in New Haven about noon.

MORE COUNTRY BOYS AT DEVENS THIS YEAR

More country boys are attending the Citizens' military training camp at Devens, Mass., this summer than ever before, according to the records of the camp paymaster, Captain J. J. Honan, finance department, who has the task of computing the mileage due to each student. Although Captain Honan's mileage list contained approximately 1,028 names of cities, towns and villages from which students hailed in previous years, this summer he was forced to obtain the official mileage figures for 16 places not heretofore listed.

For instance a boy reported from Oxford, Maine; another from Monponsett, Mass.; and a couple from Talcottville, Conn. Then others came to camp from such places as Beacon Falls, Conn.; Oakdale, Conn.; Northbridge, Rayham, East Pembroke, Heath, Wilkinsville and West Concord, Mass., and from Centerbrook, Conn. Captain Honan figures the amount of money due each student for railroad fare, each being allowed five cents a mile to and from camp. The mileage, however, is officially computed by the war department and it makes no difference if a student lives out in the outskirts of a town and it costs him additional carfare from the railroad station, he gets paid to the nearest rail point.

Many of the students arrived in automobiles this year and accordingly drew the entire amount due them for fares. However, some requested transportation vouchers and on their arrival at camp drew one cent a mile. The day before they leave all will again line up and receive their travel allowance to their homes.

It is a curious fact that there are no students from Ayer, the town adjoining the camp. The nearest town represented is West Action, 13 miles away, David E. Young, the student reporting from there receiving 65 cents. However, five Maine boys traveled the longest distance to camp, two, Charles F. Phillips and James H. Mundy coming from South Brewer, Me., 263 miles. Robert H. Payden and Harold E. Kempton came from Farmington, Me. 204 miles and Walden A. Chesley came from Portland, 121 miles. The Maine youths were slated to go to Fort McKinley at Portland but elected to come to Devens. They received carfare to Portland and paid their own way the balance of the way to this camp.

Other youths who received substantial sums for fares were those hailing from North Adams and points along the Massachusetts-New York state lines, the distance averaging about 160 miles, the same as to Stamford and Greenwich, Conn. The majority of the 873 youths, however, hail from a distance of 100 miles or less.

More youths are at civilian military training camps this year than ever before, the total accepted for the First Corps area being 3,686 as against 3,594 in 1929. The quota set was 3,300 and the number of applications received was 5,140, indicating that the campaign to procure candidates went over in virtually all sections of the corps area with a bang.

CORN BORER QUARANTINE NOW IN FULL FORCE

Quarantine in Connecticut on account of the European corn borer went into full force Wednesday. Motorists traveling the main roads out of eastern and southeastern Connecticut toward the rest of the state are confronted by patrolmen at 24 stations on the look-out for quarantined articles.

Every car is stopped and searched first for corn, which is the most dangerous contraband goods because the borer infests it most heavily, and also for certain other vegetables and flowers. When any such material is found it is confiscated.

Patrol stations are maintained 24 hours of the day by the authorities co-operating, the United States Department of Agriculture and the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station. Flares are burned at night to warn those on the road.

Operation of the quarantine requires 146 patrolmen, who constitute the largest staff of its kind in the history of the state. Each wears a badge of the experiment station. A chief inspector is in charge of each station and the number under him varies according to need. It is intended to keep all traffic moving. Ten men are on duty on the Post Road between Branford and East Haven.

The corn borer spread extensively last summer and 38 new towns added to the restricted area in this summer's quarantine. The regulated territory is that east of a line drawn from Branford on Long Island Sound to Woodstock on the Massachusetts border, including Meriden and Berlin.

Outside that region into the "clean" territory of Connecticut, embargo is placed on corn. None is permitted to pass under any condition. Subject to regulation, the other articles named in the quarantine may be moved. Growers who wish to ship celery, green beans in the pod, beets with tops, and rhubarb across the line may have their fields inspected regularly for the borer.

If the pest is not found certificates that allow for passage are issued. Those who wish to transport the flowers under ban may go through the same formality. Any cut flowers must be inspected and likewise whole plants of chrysanthemum, aster, cosmos, zinnia, hollyhock, gladiolus and dahlia. Inspection is valid from 15 to 30 days.

Two inspectors are stationed in Hartford to serve Manchester and Glastonbury, one in New Britain, one in New Haven to serve Branford, and one in New London.

After August 1, ten crews of two men each will scout the state looking for the corn borer. They will visit every town not previously found infested, and as soon as a borer is found in one town, they will move on to the next.

Confiscated material is cut into small particles and buried to destroy any corn borers that might be in it. Flowers were once given to hospitals, but authorities found this practice spread the pest.

At this time of year the corn borer appears as a dirty-white worm. It tunnels into cornstalks and cobs and the stems of other plants

CONNECTICUT SENATORS FOR AND AGAINST TREATY

The two Connecticut senators, Hiram Bingham, who has a summer home in Salem, and Frederick C. Walcott, whose home is in Norfolk, were found on opposite sides when the final vote on the naval limitations treaty was accepted by the senate at Washington.

Senator Bingham voted against the treaty and Senator Walcott for it. Both have given public explanation of their reasons for their votes.

Why Bingham Opposes

Senator Bingham summarized his vote against the London naval treaty by saying that he did not feel he could vote for the pact "under its present form and under the present circumstances."

The senator outlined three reasons for his opposition to the pact. He said that, first, it puts the United States to a great disadvantage; second, that it does not represent economy, and third, that he could not agree with the action of the president in refusing to give to the senate the secret papers.

The senator's chief objection to the pact is the escalator clause, which provides that in the event any one of its signers decides to increase its tonnage in a certain category — on six-inch guns, for instance — the United States can increase its tonnage only in that same category. He proposed a reservation to the pact, which would have permitted this country to increase its tonnage in any category in the event one of the signers took steps to increase tonnage in a certain category, but his reservation was defeated by a 10 to 55 vote.

Mr. Bingham feels that his reservation was rejected without consideration and without any real reasons and was plainly irritated by its treatment.

"The escalator clause paves the way for an infinite amount of trouble in the future," said Senator Bingham. "For years Great Britain has been struggling to increase her tonnage in six-inch guns. Under the treaty she can now build more six-inch gun cruisers and we can do nothing but follow suit, even though we do not want six-inch guns and do not need them. The treaty will upset the balance of power and will, I think, be a great disadvantage to the United States.

"Of course I fear no immediate trouble. But the treaty is intended to govern the future and not the immediate present. I am sorry to see steps taken which establish a dangerous precedent for future action."

The senator said that in the event we draw up other treaties in the future, other countries will want the same provisions as carried in the so-called escalator clause, because such provisions protect them while putting the United States at a disadvantage.

"We are not an aggressive country and no other country need have any fear of what little building we might do," the senator argued, in contending that there could have been no genuine opposition to the adoption of his reservation. "Some contend that the escalator clause will be economical because it will prevent the expenditure of a great amount of money but I cannot recognize the value of that argument because it is difficult to procure money now for naval construction and we have not been expending any unusual sums."

The senator challenged the constitutional right of President Hoover to withhold the secret papers from the senate, and wanted to know how the senate as an advisory body could advise when it did not have a complete knowledge of the pact.

"The fact that the president permitted certain senators to see the papers under their pledge of secrecy meant nothing," continued the senator. "After they had read the documents the senators could not use the information contained therein as arguments for or against the pact, because they were pledged not to divulge the contents."

Senator Bingham expressed regret over the fact that the publicity given the treaty had been the type to convince the public that the senate should ratify the pact without giving it consideration. He said he felt the pressure from the public urging the ratification of the treaty was brought by those who had not even read it.

"I felt that we could have done more justice to the country by postponing consideration of the treaty until next fall, and did not feel I could vote for the treaty in its present form under the present circumstances," Senator Bingham said.

Walcott's Reasons

Approval of the naval treaty by the senate will enable the United States to build a much larger navy than we would have if no pact had been considered, according to Senator Walcott and will prevent Great Britain and Japan from continuing their naval construction to a point which would have left the United States conspicuously inferior in naval strength.

"This treaty," the senator declared in a statement issued as he left Washington for his home at Norfolk, "seems to me the most important step for the advancement of the best interests of civilization for which we have had an opportunity to vote for many years, a substantial contribution to the good will of the world.

"The so-called London naval treaty between the United States, Great Britain and Japan declares for England and Japan, a holiday in their naval building programs until 1936, and allows the United States to build up to match the naval strength of Great Britain," he stated.

"Japan's strength at the end of this period is expected to be six-tenths the strength of the United States. This means for the United States that we have the option, for five years of building up our navy until we equal in tonnage the fighting strength of Great Britain's navy, which is, today, the largest navy in the world. This would mean parity with Great Britain. Japan, would maintain her navy approximately as it is until 1936, when, by the terms of the treaty, the relative strength of the United States navy, compared with Japan, will be 10 to 6. There will be another conference in 1936 when the question of naval strength between these three countries will be again reviewed. Whether or not we have a navy equal to Great Britain's is going to depend entirely upon whether congress will be willing to appropriate the necessary money for the new construction, which amounts, in round figures, to slightly over one billion dollars or a little more than two hundred million dollars a year.

"The major terms of the treaty are quite simple and most of them easily understood. There is a so-called escape or escalator clause, Article 21, which prescribes that if, during the term of the present treaty, the requirements of the national security of any high contracting party in respect to vessels of war limited by this treaty are in the opinion of that party materially affected by new construction of any power other than those who have joined this treaty, that high contracting party will notify the other parties as to the increase required to be made in its own tonnages within one or more of the categories of such vessels of war, specifying particularly the proposed increases and the reasons therefor, and shall be entitled to make such increase. Thereupon the other parties to this treaty shall be entitled to make a proportionate increase in the category or categories specified; and the said other parties shall promptly advise with each other through diplomatic channels as to the situation thus presented.

"The opponents of the treaty have tried to make Article 21 seem like a menace, but inasmuch as there is no other navy in the world, with the exception of the United States and Japanese navies, that is comparable, today, with Great Britain's navy, there is scarcely a possibility that Great Britain will be even tempted to take advantage of this section during the short term of five years, but even if England does feel compelled to take advantage of it, the United States and Japan can do likewise by the terms of the treaty."

HOME RUN BY MURPHY IN EXTRA INNING WINS GAME FOR THE IDEALS

A long home run from the bat of Jimmy Murphy gave the Ideals an eight inning victory over the Citizens at the campus last night and caused a slight shakeup in the City league standing. As a result of the victory, won by a 4 to 3 score, the Cits were pulled into a deadlock with the Royals for second place and the Ideals moved out of the league cellar.

Murphy's drive, a long swipe over the center field fence, came after the regulation seven innings had finished in a three all tie. There was one away at the time and no one on base.

The game was well played from start to finish, both sides contributing their share of sparkling plays. Bob Shaw was on the hill for the winners with Pete Finn working the opposing mound. Finn allowed four hits, three less than Shaw, but was unsteady, walking seven during the contest. Shaw whiffed four and Finn three.

Two walks and a single gave the Ideals a two run start in the opening frame and in the early third a third counter resulted from another walk, a fielder's choice and a hit. As previously mentioned the fourth and deciding run came from the stick of Jim Murphy.

The Cits counted their runs in the second, third and sixth innings, an error figuring in the scoring of each tally.

The hitting honors were divided between Murphy, F. Smith and Leo Jarvis, the latter a member of the Cit outfit. Each hit two singles, Murphy's being the longest of the evening. Afield, R. Smith, Ideal centerfielder, worked nicely, pulling down six long hoists. Labenski, Cimmy and F. Smith also showed nicely on the defense. The score:

Tonight's Game

The Royals, who last night moved back into a tie with the Citizens for second place in the City league chase through the latter's unexpected defeat at the hands of the Ideals, meet the Italians at the campus this evening. The latter club, at the present, trails the two runners up with three wins and as many defeats. Should they succeed in upsetting the Royals this evening there will be a general shakeup around second place. The Citizens will again take undisputed possession of the berth, the Italians will go into third place and the Royals will drop to fourth place.

Lefty Lucier, who on Tuesday won an abbreviated contest from the Smoke Shop, will work for the Italian club and Eddie Nevons will pitch for the Royals. Pete Tombari does the Italian backstopping and Jab Burns works behind the bat for the Royals.

ITALIANS WIN FIRST GAME IN JUNIOR LOOP

The Italian Young Men's club won their first game in the Junior league Wednesday evening, when they defeated the Y. M. C. A. in a close and interesting contest 4 to 1. The Italian club, strengthened by Wilk, a new pitcher in the league, played fine ball. The "Y" had moments when they were erratic and it was these errors at critical times that cost them the game. Wilk, a first baseman by trade, held the "Y" to two scattered hits, a double by Lyons in the first and a single by Coles in the sixth. The Italian's pitcher fanned eleven men and walked but two. Russillo started for the "Y" and pitched the first four innings. He allowed but three hits while Senetski who finished the game allowed one.

The "Y" was the first to score, counting their only run in the first when Butkiewicz walked, stole second and came home on a double by Lyons, who was caught at third trying to stretch the hit.

The Italian club waited until the third frame before they tied things up, a walk to Peltier and a single by Connell aided by an error by Stephano accounting for the score. In the following frame, the Italians added three more which proved a sufficient margin for Wilk to work on. Singles by Angelone and Burelle and a flock of errors by the "Y" did the damage in this frame.

Elks Vs. Duwells Tonight

Another game is slated for the Junior league tonight when the Elks meet the Duwells. Although the Duwells lost to the Rotary last week, Manager Riley claims it was an off night for his team and that his charges will prove it tonight when they stack up against the strong Elks nine.

The Elks on the other hand are still tied for first place with the Rotary club with three wins and are out to win undisputed possession of the league top by a victory tonight. It is expected that Fuller, the Elks star twirler will be on the mound for this important occasion with LaVarge held in reserve. The Duwells will probably rely on Pizzo or Stephanik and Koa to stop the Elks. The game is scheduled to start at 6:30.

CARNERA ASKS FOR AN EXTENSION OF TIME

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight, who with his manager, Leon See, was reported held by custom authorities in Buffalo today, was in New York tonight seeking an interview with immigration officials on a recently issued deportation order.

Carnera, through his manager, denied he was refused permission to enter Canada, where he was to have appeared in an exhibition at Montreal tonight. The ambling Alp claimed he and See were enroute to New York from Cleveland yesterday and stopped over in Buffalo for a sight seeing trip to Niagara Falls. The exhibition, See said, has been postponed one week.

"We started to the Falls," See said, "but turned back when Canadian officials refused us entrance because of lack of passports. Returning we were stopped by United States authorities who believed us attempting to illegally enter the United States.

ENOS ECCLESTON BREAKS LEG IN BALL GAME

Enos Eccleston, catcher for the J. B. Martin team, broke his left leg yesterday afternoon while playing with the Riverview club of the Norwich State hospital against the Sub Base club. The accident happened when Dittmer in attempting to score on an infield out slid into Eccleston hitting him under the left knee breaking the bones a few inches below the knee. Eccleston hung onto the ball and crawled after Dittmer touching him out before the Sub Base player could touch home plate. When Eccleston tried to stand his leg crumpled under him, one of the bones protruding through the skin.

The leg was set by Dr. James J. Donohue who had to cut away some of the flesh to get the bone in place. Eccleston is in a private room at the hospital and will remain there until it is possible to take him to his home.

The injury to his leg will keep him out of the game for the remainder of the season as it will be at least two months before he is able to be out.

TOLLEY AND EVANS PUT OUT BY UNKNOWNS

CHICAGO, July 23—(AP)—Two hustling sharpshooters with no regard for golfing reputations daubed the western amateur golf championship with an upset tinge today by spilling two of the highest ranking favorites in the field, Cyril Tolley of England and Charles "Chick" Evans, Jr., of Chicago out of the championship picture.

The "Giant Killers" were Bob McCrary, from Des Moines, Iowa, who dropped Tolley one up after a thrilling, up-hill fight, and Charlie Fish of Rockford, Ills., who sank a 35-foot putt on the nineteenth green for a sparkling birdie three and a big victory over Evans.

Their victories, posted among the last two results, were the only disturbing gestures of an otherwise true-to-form day. Don Moe of Portland, Oregon, the defending champion, and T. Phillip Perkins, England's second and last hope in the championship fight, romped through with ease in their first pair of 18 hole round battles. Of the two, Perkins was the most impressive. He shot almost perfect golf, trouncing Freddy Lyons of Chicago, western junior champion, 6 and 5, and staggering Earle Berryhill of Colorado Springs, Colo., by the decisive margin of 8 and 7. Moe wasn't extended although his margins were close. He eliminated Vincent Huntington of Chicago, 4 and 2, in the first round and Johnny Howard, Kalamazoo, Michigan, youth, 2 and 1 in the afternoon.

CLEVELAND, July 23—(AP)—The Indians evened an old score with the New York Yankees today when they trounced their rivals, 10 to 6, to make it four out of five for the series. Cleveland was the victim of a similar beating the last time the team visited New York.

Wesley Ferrell took a severe battering at times, giving 12 hits, but the Indians pounded Herb Pennock, Ownie Carroll and Ken Holloway for 16 blows. One of them was Eddie Morgan's 19th home run of the year, which set a new Cleveland record, beating the mark Earl Averill set last year in an entire season's clouting. It was Ferrell's fifteenth victory of the season.

The game was a nip and tuck affair up to the eighth inning when the Indians drove Pennock from the mound and continued against his successors, combining six hits with Yankee errors for five runs. The score:

RANEY BLANKS Q. C. TEAM WITH FOUR HITS

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 23—Lee Raney, pitching for the Kaceys, allowed only four hits and had no trouble in blanking the Q. C.'s this evening in the Jewett City Twilight league by a score of 3 to 0. In the third and sixth frames, when things looked threatening, Raney proved himself a master of the situation. IMMIGRATION OFFICIALS NOT SEEKING CANERA

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 23—(AP)—Primo Carnera giant Italian fighter whom the government is anxious to deport, is not being sought by immigration officials along the Niagara frontier. It was stated at the immigration department headquarters here tonight that Carnera made no effort to cross the border into Canada during his visit to Buffalo and Niagara Falls Tuesday and that the department here had received no orders bearing on Carnera's case.

Carnera went to the falls, viewed the whirlpool and other points of interest, and returned to Buffalo.

See, speaking for the fighter, said he was not alarmed as a result of the recent order that Carnera leave this country at once.

"We have reached the end of our six month permit to remain here," he said, "and the request of the government is a natural thing, a check up and a warning, however, we have applied for an extension and as it is the usual thing to grant at least one extension, I am sure we will be permitted to stay. The matter now is up with the Washington authorities."

See denied that there was a request from the Italian government that Carnera be returned for military service in that country and that the United States immigration department was acting on that request.

WANTED TO SAVE THE WHEEL

Once upon a time, years and years ago, there arrived in Norwich a son of old Erin, direct from the mother sod. As was the wont of those just arriving he applied to a local contractor for work. He was a husky boy and looked as though he could give a good day's work, so the contractor hired him.

"What can you do, my boy?" asked the contractor.

"Hivens, I can do anything," answered the lad.

"Well, then get to work and we'll see how good you are," said the contractor.

"Hivens, where shall I begin?"

"Oh, go over there and fill that wheel-barrow with stones and bring it over here and dump it," directed the contractor.

So away went the brawny lad to do the bidding of his boss. He piled the barrow with stones until it was full to the brim. Then he stooped until he got the handles of the barrow over his shoulders and with a mighty heave hoisted barrow and stones to his back and staggered over and dumped them in the designated place. He then picked up the wheelbarrow and started back for more stone.

"Hey," shouts the contractor, who had been watching the performance, "Are you Irish or Scotch?"

"Hivens," replied the lad, "I'm Irish, whativer made you think I was Scotch?"

"Why, the way you was trying to save the wheel on the barrow," answered the contractor, who showed him how a wheel-barrow should be used.

ANCASTER, Ont., July 23. — (AP)— The heavy artillery of practically all of the great golfers of the North American continent will resound over the beautiful rolling Ancaster links tomorrow as the first round of the Canadian open golf championship gets underway. Only the absence of Bobby Jones prevents the tournament from being one of the greatest array of golfers of the year.

Mac Smith, runner up to Jones in the British and United States open, turned in the best practice round today, stroking his way over the 18 holes in 66, including an unlucky five on the 17th hole. Johnny Farrell shot a 67, while Tommy Armour did the same. Leo Diegel, the defending champion, and Long Jim Barnes needed 69 strokes in their final warm-up round.

Walter Hagan gave warning that he would be a factor in the present tournament, when he shot a 67 today. Horton Smith, who turned in a sensational 33 for the first nine earlier in the week, put in a good practice round today but kept no score.

Play starts tomorrow at 8:30 with Tom Kerrigan, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., runner-up in 1922 and 1923, starting off in company with Lex Robson of Toronto. Eighteen holes will be played on Thursday and Friday. Those within 20 strokes of the leader go into Saturday's 36-hole final round.

RED SOX UNABLE TO HIT AND WHITE SOX WIN GAME

CHICAGO, July 23—(AP)—Red Faber and Hal McKain held Boston to four hits today, while the White Sox pounded Danny MacFayden for enough hits to score a 5 to 3 victory.

Faber gave four hits in six innings and retired for a pinch batsman in the Sox half of the sixth. McKain held the Red Sox hitless the rest of the way. Boston bunched two of its hits with a walk and a sacrifice for three runs in the sixth to go into the lead but the White Sox rallied in the last of the inning to tie it up and scored two more in the eighth. The victory gave the White Sox three out of five in the series. The score:

QUINN PITCHES WELL TO BEAT THE TIGERS

DETROIT, July 23—(AP)—The ancient Jack Quinn pitched pre-war baseball today to score his ninth victory of the season at the expense of the Tigers, 4 to 1, and even up the four game series.

George Uhle was the victim. While the Tiger ace was yielding 9 hits, Quinn was holding the Bengals to five safe blows. After two Tigers had walked in the ninth, Earnshaw relieved Quinn. He allowed one hit but the next three men went down, the last two on a snappy double play.

In addition to the five hits Quinn allowed, only three balls were poled into the outfield by Tiger batters. The score:

INTEREST IN DAVIS CUP SINGLES MATCHES IS AT FEVER PITCH

PARIS, July 23—(AP)—The debate over the chances of the United States to lift the Davis cup from the dominion of the French waged loud and long today as the tennis natives waited formal announcement of the lineup for the opening singles battles of the challenge round on Friday.

While no one doubts that Big Bill Tilden, ace of the invaders, and the youthful George Lott will carry the singles burden for the United States while Henry Cochet and Jean Borotra do the same for France, just who will play whom is the moot question, and to French tennis minds the answer to this question will have great bearing on the ultimate home of the classic trophy for the coming year.

French fans are praying that Borotra, the bounding basque, will be drawn against Lott for the opening singles match of the first day when opponents are drawn from the hat at noon on Thursday. They feel that with France one up at the start Cochet will be spurred on by his team mate's victory and will go out to whip Tilden, give the tricolor an overwhelming advantage, and just about wipe out the [illegible] chance now conceded the United States.

Two thousand spectators gathered in the Roland Garros stadium today to watch an extremely keen practice session. Borotra's showing was magnificent. He appeared to be playing the best tennis of his long and brilliant career and his scoring of a point for France by beating Lott is regarded as an absolute certainty. His chances of victory are held much higher than Cochet's against Tilden despite the conquests of the former Lyons ball boy during the past three years.

Tilden again was the American star in the workouts while Cochet displayed a good deal of the form that has made him the world's ranking player. Cochet's final set against the French professional, Martin Plaa, was a work of art. His play was a decided improvement over his showing in the Wimbledon tournament while Tilden played up to the form that won him the singles crown in the English classic.

When chided by Pierre Gillou, captain of the French Davis cup squad, for a lamentable showing in the first practice set, which the professional won 6-0, Cochet remarked to his superior:

"The Davis cup matches don't start until Friday. Reproaches likewise, if any."

The ticket gate at the stadium were besieged all afternoon by prospective customers desirous of reserving seats for the matches. They were informed that seats must be purchased for all three playing days, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, something after the custom of the sale for world series baseball tickets in the United States.

The advance sale already has reached close to a million francs—$40,000—with only standing room left. Should the weather be merciful and relent with sunshine after two weeks or rain, it seems certain that all records for tennis receipts in France will be broken.

GIANTS BENEFIT BY WILDNESS OF CUB HURLERS

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—The Giants took advantage of the wildness of Chicago's pitchers today to win the series final from the Cubs, 8 to 6, and send the Chicagoans a game deeper into second place. New York took the series, 3 to 2.

The Cubs took an early lead but Sheriff Blake weakened in the fifth and his successors had trouble finding the plate. The Giants scored four runs in the fifth on only two hits, two of the tallies being walked across the plate. The New York pitchers had plenty of early trouble until Fred Fitzsimmons came on the scene and shut out the Cubs from the sixth to the ninth.

The Chicago pitchers issued nine bases on balls and hit two batsmen to provide the cause of their own downfall. The winners were outhit, 12-8, a home run by Hughey Crits being the only long distance blow. The score:

LUQUE PITCHES DODGERS TO WIN OVER CARDINALS

BROOKLYN, July 23—(AP)—Adolfo Luque's superb pitching added a full game to Brooklyn's hold on first place in the National league today as the Robins made it three out of five against the St. Louis Cardinals by winning the series final, 4 to 1. The rival Chicago Cubs lost to New York.

Sylvester Johnson gave the Cuban veteran a stiff duel until the seventh inning but weakened a bit at the finish. The Cards made only five hits off Luque while the Robins nicked Johnson for nine.

The hitting of Al Lopez was a large factor in the triumph of his battery mate. His double in the third inning enabled him to score the first Brooklyn run while a triple in the seventh drove in the run that gave the Robins the game after St. Louis had tied it at 1-1 in the first half of the inning on Bottomley's triple and Hafey's sacrifice. The Robins added two more runs in the eighth to clinch the victory. The score:

PIRATES WIN BOTH GAMES OF DOUBLE-HEADER

PHILADELPHIA, July 23—(AP)—Pittsburgh took both ends of a double-header frm the Phillies tday and gained an even split on local series. The Pirates took the first game, 2 to 1, and won the last, a long drawn battle that lasted 3 hours and 41 minutes by 16 to 15 in thirteen innings.

Home runs by Traynor decided both. He hit one off Roy Hansen that won a pitching duel for Meine in the ninth of the opener, the ball bounding into the bleachers. His homer in the final came with two on base. The Phils tied the Pirates in the second game in the eighth, ninth and twelfth inning but fell a run short in the thirteenth. The score:

SENATORS NOSE OUT BROWNS IN ELEVENTH

ST. LOUIS, July 23—(AP)—After losing three games in a row to the Browns, the Washington Senators defeated St. Louis here today in the series' final, 10 to 9 in 11 innings. A home run by Cronin, his second of the day, tied the count in the ninth and the Senators put over the winning run in the eleventh inning.

Each team used three pitchers, Hadley getting credit for the victory and Kimsey being charged with the defeat.

Alex Metzler, recently acquired by St. Louis from the Chicago White Sox, made his first appearance with the Browns and made two hits out of three times at bat. The score:

THIRD GAME OF TAFTVILLE SERIES ON SUNDAY

The third and deciding game of the series between the J. B. Martin and Army and Navy will be played next Sunday at Martin field.

The Velvetmen earned a verdict in the first game, downing their village rivals by the score of 5 to 3. Last Sunday the Army and Navy avenged that defeat, they scored three runs in the 5th inning to break a 1 to 1 tie, and emerged the victor by the score of 4 to 1.

In all probability the Service boys will rely upon Tommy Connors, Providence college star, to hold the Velvet makers in check. Walt Linder is slated to do the pitching for J. B. Martin.

Pride Impels the Finest Quality

IN 1646 the shoemakers of Boston, provoked by "much bad work produced by their craft," petitioned "Ye Governor of Ye Bay Colonie" that "all boots might be alike made well." So began America's pride in Craftsmanship.

Pride in the production of the finest Quality still lives. It is the spirit upon which in 1874 at Manchester, New Hampshire, Roger G. Sullivan founded 7-20-4—now the largest strictly hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos have been traditional with 7-20-4 since its beginning. It is the same spirit today, after fifty-six years of public confidence—which refuses to lower its standard of manufacture at the sacrifice of the finest Cigar Quality.

WESTERLY

EVERETT, MASS. SPEEDER IS FINED IN TOWN COURT

WESTERLY, July 23—In a special session of third district court on Wednesday afternoon Hyman L. Schloss of Everett, Mass., taken into custody by a trooper of the Rhode Island department of state police, was found guilty of the operation of an automobile at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper and fined $25 and costs. The acting judge was Clerk Herbert P. Clark.

The quartet of federal inspectors for the Japanese beetle, among whom is Percy Kingsley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett A. Kingsley of Westerly, left by federal department automobile on Wednesday to take up their search in the Norwich district. After a careful examination of the Westerly district for several weeks by these uniformed men no trace of the pest was reported as found.

A diagonal bubbling fountain was installed for employees in the Westerly post office on Wednesday, under direction of Postmaster Thomas Lenihan. There was but one local bidder for the contract of taking out an obsolete drinking fountain and installing the new one with all equipment on the first floor of the post office, the old one having occupied the basement and first floor with its cooling device.

July 19—Patrick J. Collins to Francis J. Collins a certain parcel or tract of land, Lot No. 29, on the west side of Clark avenue, Misquamicut, formerly Pleasant View, deeded the grantor by Samuel H. Davis on September 4, 1927.

July 21—Edward E. Bradley of Stonington to Claire B. Winship of Dover, Norfolk County, Mass., a certain tract or parcel of land, being Lot No. 24, plan of building sites, Westover Point, Weekapaug, deeded grantor by Ethel M. Ansell on August 28, 1928.

Mrs. Lewis Lafferts of New Rochelle, N. Y., was the hostess on Tuesday to a bridge and luncheon to a party of 12 guests at her summer home in Avondale, R. I.

Workmen in the employ of the South County Public Service company on Wednesday morning began the process of drawing-in the primary cable in the newly laid conduits under West Broad street in Pawcatuck. Three large and one smaller cable was pulled through beginning at the manhole at the junction of Coggswell and West Broad streets. The leaden-covered cable, made at Phillipsdale, R. I., was on a large wooden spool which when filled with the cable weighed some five tons. A hempean hawser with a large loop at the end was pulled through the underground conduit by means of power furnished by a windlass attached to the side of the large motor truck of the South County Public Service company. The secondary wires have already been laid leading from the main line and the new ornamental street lights have been in operation for about a week. The cable laid Wednesday was to supply light and power to stores and buildings.

Richard C. Everson, former manager of the Bliven opera house here, now a contractor and builder near White Horse beach, Cape Cod, Mass., wife and daughter, Evelyn, are motor guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Shea in Westerly. This winter Mr. Everson plans to visit California instead of Florida as has been his custom in past years.

Rev. Henry Charles Suter, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, on next Sunday will preach his last sermon at the Westerly church following which he will enjoy a month's vacation and then take up the pastorate of the South Jacksonville, Fla., church to which he has been assigned.

Representatives of the Rhode Island State board of public roads were present on Wednesday to hold session in the rooms of the third district court, where examinations were given to prospective motor vehicle operators and licenses issued in the registration or transfers on automobiles. The amount of business transacted was not as much as on some previous Wednesdays.

Judge Herbert W. Rathbun and John Pescatello were Westerly motor visitors on Wednesday afternoon to Tower Hill, South Kingston, R. I., where they attended an auction sale of 309 acres of land.

GOSHEN

July 19th and July 20th, Lenox Brothers from New Haven, with their new byplane, gave a flying demonstration at the 40-acre smooth open field on what was formerly the Browning farm. A large number availed themselves of the chance to learn how it seems to fly. It was interesting to those who worked in the hay fields also to hear and see the human flyers as the flights were mostly local. One local young man, who was in sore need of a new pair of shoes and had the $5, preferred to take two trips in the air rather than to have the new footwear.

The light showers Tuesday caught out quantities of hay, but the rain did an immense amount of good to vegetation, as there had been no precipitation for a whole week.

FAKE STEAM BOILER INSPECTOR GETS INTO JAY ST. HOUSE, NEW LONDON

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—The bulls stirred up considerable commotion on the stock market today, but ran into profit taking on an extreme rally of 2 to 8 points, leaving prominent shares, particularly industrials, only 1 to 5 net higher.

Trading remained in professional hands, but so far the public has made little response to suggestions from those brokerage circles which, viewing the business depression as close to the bottom, are recommending a constructive attitude toward the market. Many of the stocks that led the rally were under pool sponsorship and important buying orders from the outside were reported as scarce, although some commission houses did say that there had been a little improvement in demand from margin customers.

Sentiment in the market, however, was distinctly bullish. Basing their move on the normal extent of the recent reaction, operators for the advance selected the leading stocks as the draught horses of the rally and pulled many into new high ground for the upturn. Favorites included U. S. Steel, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, American Can, General Motors, Radio and American Telephone, and with these advancing the remainder of the list was not slow in following.

Flurries of profit taking passed rather quickly, and it was not until the late dealings that realizing cut very extensively into the progress. The selling of the last 20 minutes cancelled roughly a third of the extreme advance. American Can, for example, which had been lifted nearly five points in active trading, closed 3 1-8 higher. U. S. Steel, after touching 168 1-2, a new high for the recovery, eased back to 167 1-8, where it was up 2 3-8. American Telephone lost about three points of a maximum gain of 4 and two point advances in Radio and General Electric were halved. Westinghouse, up five at the top, closed 2 3-4 higher.

Earnings statements for the second quarter and the first half were again mixed, and contained a sprinkling of favorable returns. General Motors report, issued after the close, showed $1.17 a share for the quarter on its operating income, compared with 98 cents in the March period and $2.01 for the same quarter of 1929. Non-recurring income brought the earnings for the recent interval to $1.34, while the total for the half, from all sources, was equivalent to $2.32 on the common. The stock was strong and active all day, closing 1 3-4 higher, or fractionally under the top.

The outward movement of gold was resumed with the withdrawal of $16,000,000 for shipment. Of this total $14,000,000 is going to France and the rest to Canada. Little concern is felt over the loss of the metal at this time and it has had no effect on money rates here. Some of the New York banks believe that the present outgoing movement to Paris, because of the strength of the franc, may conceivably exceed $50,000,000.

Commodity prices were relatively steady. Wheat closed off 1-4 to 3-4 on beneficial rains in North Dakota and large receipts. Corn was 1-4 cent lower to 7-8 higher, reflecting chiefly the bullish government weather report. Cotton reacted after slight advances, closing $1.10 to $1.35 a bale lower.

Foreign exchanges were firm and fluctuations narrow.

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—Sale of a New York Stock exchange membership has been arranged at $400,000, a decrease of $68,000 from the last previous sale. The identity of the principals in the transaction was not disclosed.

The B. F. Goodrich company, is transferring all of its boot and shoe manufacturing facilities at its Akron, Ohio, plant to the Hood Rubber company plant, a wholly owned subsidiary, at Watertown, Mass. All of the mechanical goods operations now conducted at the Hood plant, will be transferred to Akron.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, July 23—(AP)—Treasury receipts for July 21 were $7,330,407.91; expenditures $13,269,032.43; balance $201,545,093.57.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—A broad but moderate advance developed on the curb market today. Practically all groups participated, although the oils were rather sluggish. Gains were curtailed somewhat by profit taking in the last hour, and were mostly limited to a point or so at the close. Trading showed light expansion, total sales aggregating 476,100 shares.

Some of the investment and holding company issues were heavily traded. United Founders, recently a weak feature, rallied 2 points, to 18 1-4, then reacted to close at 17. The advance probably reflected the fairly favorable earnings report of its subsidiary, American Founders, and an advance of about a point in U. S. Electric Power, in which it is heavily interested. American Founders first half net amounted to 60 cents a share.

Transamerica was also a firm spot, rising 2 1-2 points to 26 3-8, and closing at 25 7-8. This was the most substantial rally since this widely held issue sank to new low ground at 20 1-4 a few weeks ago, when the quarterly dividend was cut from 40 cents to 25 cents. Recent strength in the issue has been based upon expectations of a better market for the stock with the early listing on the stock exchange.

Among the industrials, wide gainers were Aluminum company, which jumped 18 points, then lost 4 1-2 of its gain, and A. O. Smith, which gained more than six on announcement of an order for 450 miles of pipe from Continental Construction company, recently organized by Cities Service. Stock of Cities Service was active, but improved only a fraction. Ford, Ltd., and Fox Theatres A, gained a point in moderately active trading. Deere lost a point.

Utilities for the most part moved rather narrowly. Electric Bond and Share was as usual a trading favorite, but gained only 1 1-2 points, then reacted 1. Some of the northern New York holding companies were firm. Eastern States B, gained more than 2, and St. Regis Paper, sold up more than 1. Niagara Hudson, however, failed to make headway, and Northern States A lost 1 1-2. Commonwealth Edison, a high priced issue, gained nearly 7 in a few sales. American Gas gained 2.

Oils failed to make notable response to the favorable petroleum statistics as issued for last week. Cosden and Gulf gained about a point, but changes elsewhere were narrow.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 23—(AP)—After an almost straightaway upturn of about 12c a bushel from recent low prices, the corn market today hesitated, and lost poise. Forecasts of showers indicating a halt in widespread crop damage from heat and drought had much to do with bringing about a selling movement that was also inspired by strenuous efforts which many traders made to grab profits while the grabbing was good. Tending to stiffen prices again, however, at the last was an official estimate that the corn crop of Iowa, the largest corn producing state of the Union, has been curtailed 45,000,000 bushels by drought and excessive heat of the last two weeks.

Closing quotations on corn were irregular, ranging from 5-8c setback to 5-8c gain compared with yesterday's finish, and about 1 1-2 under today's top figures. Wheat closed nervous, 1-4@3-4c net lower, with oats 3-8c off to 3-8c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2c.

Provisions were responsive to firmness of the hog market.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP)—Bonds displayed a firmer tone in trading on the New York Stock exchange in a typical mid-summer session today. Some response to the easing of time money rates this week was shown by the best grade issues and United States governments continued their upward climb at a moderate pace in broadened activity. Increased activity developed in stock privilege bonds which as a group finished the day at higher levels.

While the forward movement showed some improvement, the sales volume was unaffected continuing about on a par with previous dull days of the week.

Some dealers reduced the loaning rate on six months time loans to 3 per cent, a 1-4 of one per cent reduction, and followed previous cuts on short maturities. Call money was easy at 2 per cent on the stock exchange with some funds offered in the outside market at 1 1-4 per cent. The easier tone of time money which followed the action of the federal reserve bank in extending its 1 7-8 per cent bill buying rate to cover 75 day acceptances, has been construed as another experiment by the Central bank in an effort to aid business recovery.

As a result of the advance in the price of shares for which they are exchangeable, many stock privilege issues were accumulated extensively, with nearly all classes—railroad, utility and miscellaneous—marked upward. Atchison 4 1-2s, International Telephone 4 1-2s, Philadelphia, Reading Coal and Iron 6s, and American Telephone 4 1-2s led the advance with gains of about one point. Pathe 7s and Lautaro Nitrate 6s, warrant issues, reacted one point.

Greater interest was displayed in United States governments, particularly Liberty 3 1-2s, and long term Treasury issues, Liberty 3 1-2s, Treasury 4s, and Treasury 3 3-8s, gained about 1-5 of a point and Treasury 3 3-4s advanced 11-32nds.

Railroads suffered from inactivity but a firm trend was maintained. Canadian Pacific 4s and Rock Island general 4s, reached new highs for the year. Southern Pacific 4 1-2s (Oregon division), was unusually active and firm. New York-Boston and Westchester 4 1-2s, sagged more than a point.

Marked strength of New York and several other traction issues lent a better tone to utility issues. Brooklyn Manhattan Transit 6's gained 1-2 point, and Interboro Rapid Transit issues were strong. Institutional buying of American Telephone issues and several other standard bonds in the group developed. American Telephone 5's of 1946 equaled its 1930 high, and the Collateral 5's reached a new top on the movement.

Foreign governments and several municipal issues were moderately accumulated. French 7's established another new high with a 3-8 point gain. Southern American governments were dull and irregular. Rhine Ruhr 6's Milan City 6 1-2's Lyons City 6's and Buenos Aires 6's of 1960 were active and strong.

The tire pictured is the handsome new Goodyear Heavy Duty in the 4.50—21 size (formerly 30 x 4.50)

Think of it!

Now you can buy this stunning new Heavy Duty GOODYEAR for only $12.00

(4.50—21 size) (formerly 30 x 4.50)

The tire shown in this advertisement is right now one of the most attractive bargains ever offered a car-owner.

One reason is the outstanding good looks and extraordinary merit of the tire; another reason is the amazingly low price at which it can now be sold.

The tire itself, as the name Heavy Duty implies, is big, stout, massively proportioned, armored with an extra-thick and extra-safe All-Weather Tread—and around its sleek black sidewall runs a single identifying stripe of silver.

A striking feature is the way in which the outer rows of All-Weather blocks are prismed down into the sidewalls, as fresh and smart a touch as anything in modern design.

Goodyear builds this stunning new Heavy Duty for those who want to drive fast and far without worry, and who want extra immunity against punctures, blowouts, or tire troubles of any kind.

Because crude rubber is cheap this year, you can buy this special Goodyear in the size illustrated for only about a dollar more than you had to pay last year for an ordinary tire in the same size—and other sizes are priced in proportion.

This is a real opportunity to make your tire money stretch its farthest, and keen buyers everywhere are cashing it in by changing over to Goodyear Heavy Duty Balloons

Just look at the tire and you'll heed the suggestion: Now is the time to get yours!

Now* is the time to get YOURS

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Buick Auto

Buick's new line of eight cylinder motor cars to be introduced to the public next Saturday July 26th, will be presented in four series comprising four different wheelbase lengths, said Mr. E. T. Strong, president and general manager of the Buick Motor company, today in commenting further upon the announcement made by him last week.

Mr. Strong intimated that the 1931 Buick line will embody engineering advancements which will prove a surprise to the automobile world. It has been known that Buick has been a heavy purchaser in machine equipment within recent months, and this fact, coupled with the apparent reluctance of the company officials to discuss the forthcoming improvements, would seem to substantiate reports that Buick is building a distinctively new car in its field.

Shipments of the new cars to points on the Pacific coast and other points distant from the factory at Flint, Michigan, have been going on for the last two weeks, and Mr. Strong announced that the showing of the 1931 Buick Eight will be simultaneous in all cities throughout the country. See Adv.

Frigidaire

Hundreds of thousands of families that have been waiting for electric refrigerators to become cheaper will be interested in the announcement that Frigidaire corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors has entered the low price field with an all-porcelain finished model at a factory price of $157.50.

The new model is finished in gray porcelain, inside and out, and is built to standard specifications with many new features, according to a factory announcement. It has four and one-half square feet of shelf space; enough, it is said to hold the daily milk and meat requirements of a family of eight.

"Anticipated demand from a new class of purchasers, lower overhead, cheaper copper and other raw stocks and many production economies that have been instituted now make it possible to bring electric refrigeration within reach of hundreds of thousands to whom price has been a barrier in the past," said E. G. Biechler, president and general manager.

"While approximately only nine per cent of the existing domestic refrigeration market has been sold, millions of average income families are fully familiar with the advantages of mechanical refrigeration. Many, we believe, have been waiting for a responsible manufacturer to offer them a reputable product at a popular price."

The new model has an ice freezing capacity of two and one half pounds, an accessible cold control, tightly enclosed mechanism and satin finished nickel-plated hardware. A second model, one size larger, selling at ten dollars more was also announced. Both are in the hands of dealers, available for immediate delivery.

A flexible ice tray to expedite removal of ice cubes was also announced. It will be available for present Frigidaire users, the announcement said.

Firestone Tires

Akron, Ohio. July — There is nothing more romantic in this city of tire manufacturing than the smell of rubber and the sight of thousands of tires being loaded into freight cars and trucks to be sent to all parts of the world. In the short period of seven years, tires have changed the habits of a nation. The public was jouncing around on the old-fashioned high pressure tires in 1923 when the Firestone Tire and Rubber company offered the original balloon tire. Automobiles were summer luxuries and the mass of the people were pedestrians —not motorists. The balloon tire changed the picture. The automobile became an all-year around necessity. Farmers now were able to drive into the shopping centers and city dwellers were permitted to move into the suburbs and the country with a minimum of time spent in traveling.

In these seven years, Firestone development has gone to such an extent that tires now cost only 62 per cent as much as in 1923, they have 50 per cent more material in them and they give four times the mileage with one-tenth the trouble.

Now America has 26,000,000 motorists.

Economies in tire building and distribution are continuing to make prices lower without cutting quality according to Firestone officials.

Firestone has established offices in all the primary rubber markets of the world. Rubber comes straight from the grower to the Firestone factories. Work is progressing rapidly on Firestone's 1,000,000 acre plantation in Liberia. The fabric used in Firestone tires is manufactured in the company's own mills in New Bedford and Fall River, Mass.

The erection of factory branches and ware houses near Firestone dealers has saved millions of dollars that formerly were wasted in small shipments. See Adv.

Palace Theatre.

"Not Damaged," the story of a sweet and innocent salesgirl to keep her sweetness and innocence is one of the two big features on the program at the Palace theatre now. The other feature is a rip-roaring western comedy, such as will send the chilliest disposition into riotous laughter, a brand new howling romance from the open spaces, "Pardon My Gun."

Lois Moran is the heroine of "Not Damaged." A quiet little department store clerk, she finds herself faced with a difficult problem. Two men love her. That is, they both say they do. One is Charlie Jones a radio mechanic. The other is Kirk Randolph, a young man of wealth and social position. Charlie has already begun to furnish a little flat in the hope that the girl will marry him, but she yearns for a brighter future than that. She can hardly be blamed. Her life behind the counter, selling endless goods to tiresome, snappish customers is a drab affair at the best, and there is precious little romance in store for her, so when Kirk comes to the store and begins to take her out, she gradually lets Charlie sink into the background.

Sally Starr is the featured player of "Pardon My Gun," and what a pretty little rancher's daughter she is too. Certainly when she comes back from the swell east to her father's rough and ready Lone Pine Ranch, the boys in the west go crazy over her, and it's a question of how long the shooting can be delayed. When these western lads fall in love, they fall hard, and no mistake. Don't miss "Pardon My Gun." It's as full of tenderness and romance as it is of smart, side-splitting comedy.

Broadway Theatre

"Whispering" Jack Smith, who plays himself in the Fox Movietone talking and singing drama, "Cheer Up and Smile," now showing at Warner's Broadway theatre, finds ample opportunity for the use of his inimitable "whispering" in this offering.

Fans of radio, phonograph and the audible screen who have learned to recognize and love the voice of this fine entertainer will be delighted with the many songs he offers in this fast moving story of campus days and Broadway, especially his interpretation of the way television songs will be sung in the future.

"Cheer Up and Smile" tells the story of a young collegian who quarrels with his best girl and is suspended from college as the result of a hazing episode. He goes to New York where he gets a job as drummer in a night club orchestra with the aid of his friend, "Whispering" Jack Smith.

POETRY

THE LOST CHORD

Seated one day at the organ,
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the noisy keys.

I do not know what I was playing,
Or what I was dreaming then;
But I struck one chord of music,
Like the sound of a great Amen!

It flooded the crimson twilight
Like the close of an angel's psalm,
And it lay on my fevered spirit
With a touch of infinite calm.

It quieted pain and sorrow,
Like love overcoming strife;
It seemed the harmonious echo
From our discordant life.

It linked all perplexed meanings
Into one perfect peace,
And trembled away into silence,
As if it were loth to cease.

I have sought, but I seek it vainly,
That one lost chord divine,
That came from the soul of the organ,
And entered into mine.

It may be that Death's bright angel
Will speak in that chord again;
It may be that only in heaven
I shall hear that grand Amen.

—Adelaide Proctor (1825-1864)

SUMMER MARKET

Brocoli from Norfolk,
Cherries from the vales
Of far Sacramento
Where the bald eagle sails:
Lime beans from Georgia,
Peas from Alabam—
I know it is a market,
But I don't know where I am!

Florida—its melons;
The Gulf its funny fish,
Everything in market
Any heart could wish;
Everything but Maryland,
And when she comes along
Summer in the market
Is a very different song!

Sweet corn and celery,
Tomatoes ripe and red;
Honey balls from Tennessee,
Or apricots instead:
Peaches and the dark plums,
Cantaloupes—and so
I buy a little crabcake
For something that I know!

—Baltimore Sun.

"That's all very well," snarled the hero; "but what I want to know is—who pushed me in?"—Halifax Courier.

"My dear mother-in-law, I want to make a confession to you. I get into a rage terribly easy, often without cause."

"Don't worry, my dear son-in-law; as long as I'm in the house you will never fly into a rage without cause."—Lustige Blaetter.

Schmul—Which would you rather have, a million or twelve daughters?

Levy—Twelve daughters.

Schmul—Why?

BULL MARKET ENCOUNTERED PROFIT-TAKING IN CLOSING HOURS OF SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 23.—The police this afternoon sought a crook, who, it is believed, is of the sneak thief type, but who is employing familiar methods to carry out his plan of robbery. During the early afternoon a woman residing at 28 Jay street, but who did not reveal her identity, communicated with police headquarters by telephone, stating that a man had just left her home and that he represented himself as a steam boiler inspector employed by the city. As the city does not employ any such official, City Manager William A. Holt was questioned and said that the man was an impostor and authority had not been vested in any individual to perform this work. Occasionally and more especially during the summer, impostors go from house to house representing themselves as being inspectors of some form or other, adopting this method to obtain entrance and steal whatever of value they can find. A search for the fellow today was made, but he was not found. He is described as being 25 or 30, about five feet, five inches in height, of stocky build, smooth shaven and dark complexion and light hair. He wore a dark brown suit, but no hat and had white sneaks.

Committed To Norwich Hospital

RYE, SCOTCH, GIN, HOPS AND BEER AT SERVIDIO'S

NEW LONDON, July 23.—The police tonight raided the residence of Albert Servidio, 50 Goshen street, and arrested Servidio on two counts of violation upon providing a surety on his bond of $1,000 and will be in court tomorrow. He has been arrested several times for the same offence but his arrest tonight was the first time he has been in custody on a charge of violating the liquor law in nearly a year.

The police obtained evidence of Servidio continuing to dispense liquor at his home and Judge Daniel M. Cronin issued a warrant which called for search of the entire house, together with whatever outbuildings were on the premises. Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolmen Frank Linehan and Joseph Sullivan went to the house and their search revealed several quarts of rye and Scotch whiskey, three quarts of gin, seven cases of beer and a quantity of hops. All were seized as evidence against Servidio.

GIFT OF A TON OF FISH FOR FREE DISTRIBUTION

With the heads of many families unemployed, many households will be provided with a liberal supply of foodstuff tomorrow, appreciated by fish eaters on Friday, for the city will distribute 2,000 pounds of fish to those who apply for it. The distribution is made possible by the fish being presented to the city by the Atlantic Coast Fisheries, Groton. The fish is fresh caught and since its arrival at the Groton plant has been iced. Tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock to each and every applicant for the fish it will be distributed in the rear of the municipal building by Commissioner of Charities Henry L. Dorsey.

Driving Was Suspicious

The driver furnished a surety on his bond of $150. Cushman was driving on Main street and in a manner that attracted the attention of Officer Murphy. When the officer investigated he quickly discovered that Cushman was drunk and arrested him.

OLD LYME WOMAN DRIVER DISPUTES OFFICER'S WORD

The police this afternoon rounded up several more drivers of automobiles, probably more through ignorance of the law than an intention to be a violator, charged with violating the traffic laws, but in all but one instance the drivers were released with a warning to be more careful in the future, as they were non-residents. The driver to be compelled to post a bond was also a non-resident, but she insisted that the officer who arrested her had erred. Edith Milne, Old Lyme; Mary T. Ely, Show Hills, N. J.; Carl A. Johnson, 7 Rock View road, Quincy, Mass., and Neal Lafferty, Philadelphia, were the violators and all parked their cars overtime on State street. They were arrested by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan. Miss Milne was insistent that she had parked her car but 15 minutes and she posted a bond of $2. The others admitted that they had been careless in not noting the time their autos had been parked and they were the drivers who were cautioned as to future parking.

Michael Solecki, 357 Broad street, was ordered to present himself in the police court Monday next by Sergeant John Courtney today and defend a charge of evasion of responsibility. Solecki's court appearance will be the result of the automobile he was driving last evening at the corner of Huntington and Federal streets, hitting and damaging a bicycle owned by Clifford Gilliam, 12, of 37 Hill street. It is claimed that after the auto hit the cycle Solecki speeded away.

POCKET OF NORTHRUP CAR CONCEALED PINT OF WHISKEY

Jerry C. Northrup, of 34 Bolles avenue, was in court this morning charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and driving a car equipped with defective brakes. The case was continued until tomorrow at the request of counsel for the accused. Northrup provided a surety on his bond of $200.

Northrup was driving on Howard street at 2:30 o'clock this morning and the erratic course taken by the car attracted the attention of Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran and Louis Pine. The officers followed the car operated by Northrup to Pequot avenue and Howard street, where it barely escaped hitting a traffic beacon. Northrup's auto was overtaken on Pequot avenue, near Maple avenue and the driver was commanded to stop. This he did and when the officers interrogated Northrup it was evident that he was intoxicated. A search of the automobile revealed the existence of a pint of whiskey in one of the pockets.

Gandolfo Rosaro, charged with evasion of payment of railroad fare, was given suspension of judgment. Rosaro was arrested at the union station last night by Special Agent John Anderson, New Haven railroad, when the conductor of a train complained that Rosaro was a passenger and either would not or could not pay his fare.

Edward J. Walsh, 194 Shaw street, was arrested this afternoon at Ocean Beach by Patrolman William Graham charged with blocking traffic. He will be in court tomorrow.

Took Demented Man Home.

Richard J. Francis, 63 Albany street, Boston, was arrested early today for he is mentally unsound and was taken into custody for his own safety and because he had been missing from his home for several days. Francis was at the union station and his peculiar conduct attracted the attention of Lieut David Marks, New Haven railroad special agent. When the officer questioned Francis the mental condition of the latter was apparent and Francis was locked up. This afternoon an acquaintance of Francis came to New London and took charge of the unfortunate man, returning to Boston with him.

Romano Leaves Hospital.

James Romano, public service operator, was discharged at Lawrence Memorial hospital today where he had been a patient 48 hours following his collapse in a court room Monday. Romano was awaiting trial in the Waterford town court on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor when he suddenly swooned. His condition was believed to be serious and he was rushed to the hospital by a state police officer. After being under observation two days it was determined that the driver was not in need of medical attention and his dismissal today was the result. Romano was driving his car in Waterford early last Monday morning and it collided with a machine in which were sailors. Both automobiles were damaged. Several hours after the crash, Romano was arrested.

STRANGER TRIES OUT SEDAN, TRIAL IS STILL GOING ON

NEW LONDON, July 23—Philip Crossley, of the Crossley Chevrolet company, Groton, has requested the New London and state police to maintain a lookout for an automobile stolen by a stranger today and by means of a time-worn scheme. About 7 o'clock this morning the stranger entered the automobile sales room and requested permission to try out a Ford sedan. His request was granted and the man drove away and is probably still going for that was the last seen of the automobile and driver. When the car was not returned at 11 o'clock, Crossley notified the police. The automobile carries Connecticut registration SX-938.

A youth named Pikowitz reported to the police today that while he was in bathing yesterday afternoon at Green's Harbor beach a wrist watch was stolen from his clothing. The youth, who is 12, said that when he went into the water he left his clothing and watch in the hut house, which is in charge of a life guard and that when he attired himself to return home he discovered the theft. Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh made an investigation but could find no trace of the alleged thief, nor the watch, in fact the officer gives but little credence to the story as told by the boy. The life guard stated that he had been in the hut from the time that Pickowitz and the other youths entered the water and was positive that the watch had not been stolen.

Children Played With Matches.

Two fires, but neither of them serious gave the department work during the past 24 hours. Last night about 10 o'clock a still alarm was received at fire headquarters for a blaze in the residence at 69 Hempstead street, owned by Mrs. Singer and occupied by Mrs. Stevenson, colored, and her family. When Northwest Hose company and Allen Hook and Ladder company arrived at the house the fire, which was in a bed room, was burning briskly. The bed was aflame and the woodwork on two sides of the room had ignited. A quantity of chemicals was emptied upon the fire causing it to be subdued. The damage, it is estimated, will not exceed $100. The fire was caused by children playing with matches.

Blame Smoker For Fire.

The second fire occurred about 1:20 o'clock this afternoon. An awning attached to the building 745 Bank street, owned by William H. Bush and occupied on the ground floor by Angelo Lagrue as a barbershop, was discovered in flames. An alarm was sent in from Box 45, corner of Bank and Truman streets, which was responded to by Chief Thomas Shipman and four pieces of apparatus, but before the firemen arrived the fire had burned itself out for the awning had been destroyed. The building was not ignited. It is believed that the fire was caused by a careless smoker throwing a lighted cigar or cigarette from the living apartment above the barbershop and that it landed on the awning.

EASTFORD

It is reported that the old Jacob Child place, situated about two miles from Eastford, in the town of Woodstock, has been sold to W. D. Finch of Greenwich, Conn. This property, going to decay for some time, has been owned by George Bennett. On it is the building spot, with only a faint resemblance of a cellar-hole, a few lingering lilac bushes and two tall elms to indicate where, in all its glory and renown, stood Childs' tavern — where General George Washington tarried on his historic trip to Concord and Lexington. Mrs. Child was grandmother of Miss Alice L. Rindge of Eastford. What disposition Mr. Finch will make of the estate has not been decided.

it's the biggest bargain in oil, at 35 cents a quart

The next time you need oil go where you see the Penn-Drake trade-mark—the sign of the first oil well—and give your motor a filling of this double-mileage oil. Then measure for yourself the extra value that Pennsylvania Refining engineers have built into this oil by their exclusive fifteen-second, vacuum-distilling process.

Test your get-away when the light flashes green at a downtown corner. Tackle the hills that have bothered you before. Check your top speed on a clear country road. This oil won't cure imperfections in your motor, of course. But this oil is what you need if you want it to do its best.

Note the absence of smoke in the exhaust, blue smoke that is the telltale on excess oil consumption. See how much farther you can go before you need to add oil. See how much oilier Penn-Drake is when it's time to drain your crankcase—and you'll realize why we say it's the biggest bargain in oil at 35 cents a quart.

About 225 cases of beer and some "hard" liquor were seized by the raiding squad. Both places are alleged to be owned by John LeDoux.

CORONER RULES THAMES PILOT ACCIDENT VICTIM

According to a finding made by Coroner John J. Phelan of Bridgeport in regard to victims of the steamer Thames of the Thames River line, running between New York, Norwalk and Bridgeport, which was burned in the sound off Greenwich, April 24, the death of Pilot Lambert L. Hancourt, who was drowned, was not caused by negligence or any criminal act, but was by accident.

The coroner states that Pilot Hancourt endeavored to escape from the boat in a properly equipped lifeboat and was drowned by the upsetting of the boat.

Continuing, the coroner says:

"Certain criticism was heard in the testimony of an alleged negligence of Engineer Tibbets in his failure to remain at his post until he could hear and respond to Captain Sherman's stop signal. That such failure to stop the vessel's speed caused the lifeboats when launched to be pulled forward so rapidly by her momentum as to cause their upsetting, the same resulting in the drowning of the deceased and other members of the crew, and that such failure further prevented the steamer and others from operating the fire apparatus of the steamer to save her from destruction, and as a consequence made it necessary for the crew to take to the lifeboats in the hope of saving their lives.

"In view, however, of the weight of testimony, showing the suddenness with which the fire and suffocating smoke broke from unknown places and sources in the steamer and the short time elapsing from this discovery to the launching of the lifeboats (alleged to be five minutes), I am of the opinion that in all the circumstances Engineer Tibbetts was reasonably justified in leaving his post to verify the report of Oiler McNamara, and that in the presence of impending death from suffocation he was warranted in leaving the engine room when his response to the slow bell of Captain Sherman was completed and before the stop bell could be anticipated by him. I am further of the opinion that Tibbetts was justified in escaping from the engine room to the lifeboat under the then existing conditions rather than to sacrifice his life."

COLLECTS FROM MOTORIST FOR DAMAGING LOCOMOTIVE

For the third time in two months the Central Vermont railway has turned the tables on an alleged careless motorist and collected for damages to its equipment, charging negligence on the part of the autoist.

Attorney H. H. Powers has announced settlement out of court of a claim of $23.66 against Proctor Drugg of Proctorsville, whose automobile was left on a grade crossing at Roxbury after a tire had blown out and was hit by a capacity loaded freight train of 3,000 tons.

The force of the impact tore the steps from the cab of the locomotive, number 707 which weighs 632,500 pounds and is one of the ten largest freight locomotives in New England. The automobile was badly damaged.

No one was in the automobile at the time of the crash, the occupants having left the machine. The railway charged negligence on the part of the automolle owner for leaving the machine on the track and a release was signed when Mr. Drugg's insurance company paid for the repairs to the locomotive, $23.66.

ALL OFFERS OF ASSISTANCE DECLINED BY ITALIAN GOVT. 3,025 QUAKE BODIES FOUND

Statement Declining Aid Says Effective Measures of Relief For Victims of the Quake Are Being Carried Out By Premier Mussolini—Public Spirit Is High and the Population Is Cooperating With the Authorities With Perfect Discipline.

NEW YORK, July 24—(AP)—The Italian government through Emanual Grizzi, consul general in New York, today declined offers of assistance to victims of the earthquake in Southern Italy.

"A violent earthquake has stricken a zone of Italy, in the provinces of Benevento, Avellino, and Foggia, causing a considerable damage and a number of victims which is yet to be ascertained," said the statement.

"Effective measures of relief have been immediately taken by his excellency Premier Mussolini and are being carried out. Public spirit is high, and the population is co-operating with the authorities with perfect discipline.

"The royal government declines with extreme gratefulness all offers to send relief to the stricken population, the Fascist government having already taken all necessary measures to this effect."

ITALIAN GOVT. ENERGETIC IN QUAKE RELIEF WORK

ROME, July 24—(AP)—A relief army of soldiers, doctors, and special workers of all kinds, with scouting airplanes to guide them, tonight swarmed into the mountainous recesses of the neopolitan hinterland to count an ever increasing total of dead and care for thousands of injured and hundreds of thousands of homeless from Wednesday's calamitous earthquake.

From King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini down, Italy began mobilization on a wartime scale for the rescue work. Pope Pius XI, horrified by the extent of the catastrophe, prepared the forces of the church.

From the Bay of Naples and the Gulf of Salerno on the west almost to the Gulf Manfredonia on the Adriatic a zone of devastated and stricken towns, hamlets and houses stretched out of the injured approach with dizzying speed the 5,000 mark, forecasts of a death toll of at least 3,000 were confidently made in Rome tonight.

Unofficial reports before 7 p. m. gave 3,025 as the number of bodies already found. In remote communities and distant farms it was feared that hundreds more were buried under debris. Even the large rescue workers had not been able to explore all the ruined buildings.

Naples, metropolis of the area, lying under the glowing menace of Mount Vesuvius, was under war regime today. Soldiers were on guard, convoys of food and medical supplies rushed through the streets, buildings lay in ruins as though struck by shells, and flags everywhere flew at half mast.

From Naples almost as far as the Plain of Apulia, on the other side of the Appennines. At least 85 towns and villages lay desolate.

Health authorities, fearful of epidemics, mobilized an army of doctors and pharmacists. Medicines and serums were collected at strategic points, food supplies were massed in depots and distributed by the truck load. Water was rushed in tank trucks to communities whose drinking supplies had been cut off.

After great difficulty the Italian Army Signal corps re-established communication between the larger towns. Flying sanitary squads from Naples and elsewhere innoculated villagers and farmers with anti-tetanus serum.

The country doctor came once more into his own. At the Village of Villanova, which was completely razed, old Doctor Jorisso, only survivor of his whole family and himself dragged badly battered from the ruins of his home worked until he nearly dropped, giving free aid to his fellow townsmen. The situation there was acute, the death list mounted from 400 to 500.

Throughout four devastated provinces, Avellino, Potenza, Foggia and Benevento, the homeless bivoucked tonight in the fields.

The burial of the dead has constituted a stupendous problem for the relief workers. In some communities the cemeteries were filled before all the victims could be buried.

All through the afternoon funeral processions wended their way to shaken and often ruined churches. Even the wonted tolling of church bells was absent. The earthquake had so greatly weakened the towers that sextons were afraid to ring them.

Airplanes were the eyes of the relief workers. From three or four airfields they soared over the entire area reporting conditions so that aid could be efficiently organized and promptly dispatched.

20 DEATHS CAUSED BY HURRICANE IN ITALY

TREVISO, Italy, July 24—(AP)—A hurricane in this region today caused the deaths of 20 persons, injured many more and blew down hundreds of houses over a stretch of nearly twenty-five miles.

Serious damage was done at Barco Di Susegana, Nervesa Selva and Volpago, small communities not far from here, and it is feared that more bodies are buried in the ruins of fallen houses.

The hurricane blew along a course marked by the townships of Susegana, Piula, Volpago Del Montello and Montebelluna.

Troops were promptly dispatched to organize relief.

LIST OF DISASTERS BY 'QUAKES AND ERUPTION

WASHINGTON, July 24—(AP)—The earthquake in South Central Italy was the fourth time in recent years in which that nation has been the scene of disastrous 'quakes or volcanic eruptions.

HELD FOR HEARING ON CHARGES OF RUM RUNNING

NEW LONDON, July 24.—(AP)—Joseph A. Healy, master and his crew of four of the fishing boat, Blanche R., seized by the coast guard last night off Block Island, were held under bonds this afternoon for a hearing on charges of rum running. United States Commissioner Russell Corcoran held the master under $5,000 bonds and the others, who gave names of George Montigny, John R. MacDonald, Paul Tracy and Herbert Smith, under $1,000 each until next Monday at 2 p. m. None of the men gave a home address.

The Blanche R., sailing out of Dartmouth, Mass., was overhauled by the destroyer Downes, and seized when between 400 and 500 cases of liquor were seen in the hold.

The craft was turned over to the customs authorities here this afternoon. The vessel will be held here until after the hearing.

The Blanche R., is registered in the name of Milton P. Healy, of Chatham, Mass., and Walter R. Wood, of Westfield, Mass., and purported to be engaged in a fishing trade for the Dartmouth Fish company.

PROGRESS OF PLANES IN ALL-AMERICAN AIR DERBY

MUNICIPAL AIRPORT, Houston, Tex., July 24.—(AP)—Eleven of twelve planes in the All-American air derby sped away from Little Rock, Ark., this morning checked in here late today, paced by Lieut. Lee Gehlbeck, of Little Rock.

Lieut. Gehlbeck was far ahead of the field with elapsed time of 3:01:34 from Little Rock, and a total unofficial elapsed time of 15:12:32.

Gehlbeck won $500 of the $1,000 lap prize offered here. Stub Quinby of Moline, Ill., took second money of $300 and J. R. Wedell of New Orleans the $200 third award.

The craft which failed to arrive was that of Herman Hamer of Chicago, who was forced down the officials were advised, at Hankamer, Liberty county, Texas. It was believed lack of fuel brought him to earth.

The Waspish Little Rocket, piloted by Lieut. Gehlbeck, checked in at 12:05:34 p. m.

Quinby's little ship was next in, less than three minutes later.

Wedell arrived some five minutes behind Quinby.

The planes will resume the race beginning at 9 a. m. tomorrow. San Angelo, Texas, is the next control point.

CAPTURE OF SLAYER OF TWO OF HIS CHILDREN

BARNESBORO, Pa., July 24.—(AP)—Perry Langham, 54, accused by a coroner's jury of killing two of his children at Emeigh Run Tuesday night by dynamiting the home of his estranged wife, was captured late this afternoon in a barn near Hillsdale, Indiana county. He was taken to the Cambria county jail at Ebensburg.

Constable Dean Whited of Barnesboro, and state troopers who effected the capture, said they found Langham in hiding in the haymow of a barn near his parents' home.

County officers believe that either jealousy or ill health prompted Langham to set off the dynamite charge Tuesday night under the house at Emeigh Run which resulted in the killing of two of his four children, Arthur 14 months, and La Rue, 6 years.

Sheriff's posses and state troopers had scoured the mountains near Emeigh Run and the territory in the vicinity of Hillsdale, where Langham was employed. He had last been seen near Emeigh Run a few hours before the dynamiting occurred.

Lulinsky, 38, of New York, a naturalized American who is being held by the authorities in suspicion of communist propaganda activities. The case probably will be turned over to the attorney-general tomorrow.

The police said the documents indicated Lulinsky was a vice president of the third internationale in 1919. They also said he was representative of the Amtorg Trading corporation and that he had come to Mexico several weeks ago ostensibly to clean up the affairs of the soviet commercial attache's office, which closed after the Russian attache had been expelled from Mexico.

Lulinsky denied he was a communist.

Hartford Man Held For Slaying Of Wife

Nathan Diamond, a Taxicab Driver, In Custody—Wife Was Beaten to Death.

HARTFORD, July 24.—(AP)—Nathan Diamond, 28, a taxicab driver, tonight was held by police as the alleged slayer of his wife. Mrs. Ida Diamond, 27, who early today was found beaten to death in her home.

A blood-stained axe believed to have been used by the slayer was found behind a washing machine in a rear hallway leading to the Diamond apartment. Thomas F. Sullivan, fingerprint expert, began a minute examination of it.

Mrs. Diamond was hacked to death while her three children, whose ages range from two to five years, slept in adjoining rooms. The back of her head was crushed in, her skull penetrated in two places, and her jaw broken. The woman apparently had sought to protect herself with her hands, for the index finger of her left hand was nearly severed.

Diamond told police that he found his wife's body, clad in a night dress in the bathroom at 1:40 a. m., 25 minutes after he had discharged his last passenger from his taxicab. During several hours of questioning, he disclaimed any knowledge of the crime.

Frequent quarrels, police said, had marked the marital relations of the Diamonds since their wedding in 1924. Two years after their marriage, police charge, Diamond left his wife for about three weeks, while on one occasion the slain woman complained to the probation department that her husband had failed to support her for seven months and had been intimate with other women.

Police learned of the crime about a half hour after the time it is believed to have been committed. A patrolman entered the Diamond home when he heard the screams of the slain woman's relatives, who had been brought to the house by Diamond.

Voices were heard about 1:30 o'clock by Mrs. Anna Pinsky and her two children, who occupy an apartment over the Diamonds. The screams of a woman followed. They told police that at first they believed that persons were quarreling outside the building. Failing to see anyone outside the house from her front window, Mrs. Pinsky called to the Diamonds and asked them if there was any trouble. There was no reply.

Police questioned Diamond closely concerning his activities since last night when, he said, he saw his wife alive for the last time, and tonight were checking the details of a story he gave regarding his movements.

HEAVY RAIN FLOODED STREETS OF LOWER NEW YORK

NEW YORK, July 24.—(AP)—A skittish storm swept over parts of Greater New York today, flooding the streets with water and Wall street brokerage offices with telephone calls.

The water short circuited many wires in the financial district, throwing out of service some 500 stock tickers and 2700 telephone lines. Unable to get their market quotations by ordinary means, worried investors deluged brokerage offices with telephone calls, or when the telephones were out of order, trudged to their brokers afoot.

Several parts of the city were untouched by the deluge, but in others storm sewers were taxed to capacity. Water flooded the B. M. T. subway station at Franklin avenue, interrupting train schedules for almost an hour.

Another storm broke over the city just at rush hour time tonight, causing further delay in transportation. The New York, New Haven, and Hartford railroad reported that trains leaving Mount Vernon were delayed 25 minutes or more by a flooded track.

Forty persons who sought protection from the rain in a tunnel under the transverse road in Central park were driven to benches when water poured in from both ends, reaching a depth of 18 inches in the tube. Three policemen donned rubber boots and carried them out.

MISSIONARIES FLEEING FROM INTERIOR CHINA

SHANGHAI, July 24.—(AP) — Once again foreign missionaries are fleeing from interior China as a result of banditry and communist outlawry.

Accompanied by American and British consular officials, 44 missionaries long marrooned in the upper Min river valley near Shacwu and Yenping, Fukien province, were taken to safety last night at Foochow, capital and metropolis, near the coast.

Others were expected at Foochow soon and some, notably Edwin Kellogg of Portland, Oregon, had arrived at Shanghai. Whether four missionaries held at Pochow, Anhwei province, were released when nationalists recaptured that stronghold from northern rebels had not been determined.

Of the 44 taken to Foochow, 21 were Americans and the remainder British. The Americans were mostly Methodists and Congregationalists.

OMAHA, Neb., July 24—(AP)—Twenty-five persons were reported injured, several believed fatally, when a roller coaster train left the track at an amusement park here tonight and plunged 35 feet into a maze of ties and trestle work below.

Ben Meister, an eye witness, said he saw part of the track directly ahead of the coaster cars giving way. He said he saw the first car crash through and plunge to the ground.

Naval Pact Approved By British Commons

Passed Third Reading Yesterday—Now Goes to the House of Lords.

LONDON, July 24.—(AP)—The London naval treaty legislation tonight was approved by the house of commons, passing the committee stage and third reading. It will now go to the house of lords.

The treaty bill was passed unchallenged. Its passage yesterday through the second reading had made its acceptance tonight almost a formality. The proceedings were very brief.

Winston Churchill, former conservative chancellor of the exchequer, said that the fact of the bill's passage must not be taken as an indication that opinion in the house was undivided where the actual treaty was concerned.

INFANTS IN THE HANDS OF THE WRONG PARENTS

CHICAGO, July 24.—(AP) —Thirteen modern Solomons who set out to determine the parentage of two three weeks old babies, born the same day in the Englewood hospital, decreed today, with one dissenting vote that the infants had been switched and are in the hands of the wrong parents. Two of the thirteen did not vote.

The verdict brought joy to one father, William Watkins, who has felt certain he had the wrong heir, and defiance from the other, Charles Bamberger, who believed he had the right son all along.

"I won't give up the baby I have," Bamberger said, "I'll barricade my house and hire a lawyer to help me fight to keep my baby."

Both mothers were in a state of collapse. Mrs. Bamberger was too ill to attend the conference and she kept the infant she has been mothering as hers close by her side. Mrs. Watkins alternately walked the floor or sat huddled in a chair outside the health commissioner's office where the scientists, doctors and lawyers were debating whether the child in her arms was hers, when informed they had decided that it was not, she became semi-hysterical.

CONTEST FOR TREASURER OF AMERICAN LEGION

BRIDGEPORT, July 24.—(AP)—With normal lines broken down by the numerous candidacies that have been launched, the American Legion state convention was regarded by observers tonight as being in a state of turmoil with respect to its annual election that seemed to increase as time passed and to be greater than that apparent at any previous state gathering.

The endorsement of Rev. Daniel A. Strickland, of New Haven, former chaplain of the 102nd infantry, 26th division, for state treasurer, accomplished at the New Haven caucus this afternoon, was the only definite stand taken by any group in support of any candidate, but it was pointed out that the endorsement was effected in the absence of delegations from Waterbury and other towns in the district considered to be favorable to the candidacy of Captain E. P. Armstrong, of Waterbury, for that place. Two other caucuses, those of Fairfield and Hartford counties, were held, but the delegates failed to declare themselves as to the candidates for the two offices most in dispute, state commander and state treasurer.

NEWTOWN CELEBRATED ITS 225TH ANNIVERSARY

NEWTOWN, July 24.— (AP)— The 225th anniversary of the day when Newtown was purchased from the Pootatuck Indians "for and in consideration of various articles including four collars, ten shirts, and ten pairs of stockings," will occur tomorrow.

Beers, Rev. Otis W. Barker, Allison P. Smith who was editor of the "Newtown Bee," and Judge P. S. McCarthy, were in charge of the celebration. All but the last three named have since passed away.

GAME OF CARDS DECIDED RIGHT TO ENTER PRIMARY

HERKIMER, N. Y., July 24.—(AP)—Fortune lay in the cards tonight for Daniel F. Strobel and he won not only the right to enter the primaries as a candidate for the republican nomination for sheriff of Herkimer county, but the good will and support of the man he bested in a game of pitch, otherwise known as high-low-jack.

To a little tavern outside this village they went, Strobel, Fred Sauer, against whom he was to play pitch with the principal place on the republican county ticket at stake, and a retinue of followers of both. They have been friends for a quarter century, and neither would enter a political fight against the other, so they decided to leave it to the cards.

DECIDE NEW HAVEN GIRL COMMITTED SUICIDE

LAKE GEORGE, N. Y., June 24.—(AP)—A verdict of suicide was given tonight by Charles K. Burt, one of two Warren county coroners investigating the death near here of Miss Eleanor Goodspeed of New Haven, Conn., manager of a summer camp.

Miss Goodspeed's body, clad only in a bathrobe and pajamas, was found Tuesday hanging by a bathrobe cord from a tree.

After Coroner Burt's announcement, Leon Bearce and Raymond Green, believed to have been the last men to see Miss Goodspeed alive, were released from custody.

TESTIMONY BY EX-MEMBER OF SOVIET SECRET POLICE

Michael Handler Testified That He Had Been Smuggled Into the United States From Cuba—Had Attended a Secret Meeting In Moscow At Which It Was Decided to Send Four Representatives to the U. S.—Two Were to Be Connected With the Amtorg Corporation — Witness Was So Timid That Representative Fish Assured Him That "You Are Not In Russia Any Longer, You Needn't Worry."

NEW YORK, July 24.—(AP)—Michael Handler, a grey-haired, timid little man who said he formerly was a member of the soviet Ogpu or secret police, and had been smuggled into the United States from Cuba, today gave testimony tending to show that the Amtorg Trading corporation was connected with Ogpu.

Handler told the congressional committee investigating soviet activities in the United States that in 1925 he attended a secret meeting at Ogpu headquarters in Moscow at which it was decided to send four representatives to the United States, two to be connected with Amtorg, the soviet trading representatives, and two without apparent official affiliations. Whether the men were sent to the United States, he did not know.

Handler, who said he fled from Russia to Cuba when he decided to quit ogpu and was smuggled into the United States, was so evidently frightened that Chairman Fish, Jr., reassured him.

"You're in America now," Fish told him. "You're not in Russia any longer. You needn't worry."

The high emotional points of the day's session came with the testimony of a former Czarist officer and a former member of the soviet secret police.

The former officer was George Djamgaroff, who identified Feodor Ziavkin, Amtorg general manager, as the Ogpu, secret political police of red Russia. He said that in the last days of the revolution he, an officer in the white army on a special mission, was arrested by the red army and questioned by the head of the ogpu's flying squad, who slapped his face.

"It was the first time my face had been slapped," he said, "and so although I did not know that man's name I remembered him and I saw him on the stand today when he said his name was Ziavkin and that he had never belonged to the Ogpu."

NEWSPAPER MEN FIGURE IN CHICAGO CRIME INQUIRY

CHICAGO, July 24—(AP)—A grand jury manifestly determined to thresh the chaff of false gossip from the ample harvest of rumor gleaned from the underworld since Jake Lingle died went into action today.

Three newspapermen were taken before the jury to give their accounts of published charges and insinuations of racketeering among Chicago reporters. Ten other witnesses, two of them the former heads of the police department and another the mayor's chief advisor, were asked to testify tomorrow.

Harry Reutlinger, assistant city editor of the Chicago Evening American, was the first witness today, emerging after nearly an hour's hearing. He said he had told the grand jury all he knew and added that he believed Harry T. Brundidge, St. Louis Star reporter, was "the victim of a hoax. Everything I told Brundidge was a joke."

It was the publication of Brundidge's stories of alleged racketeering by Chicago reporters and his testimony before the jurors Tuesday. That started the parade of witness to the grand jury chamber. The jurors went over the head of the state's attorney to invite the St. Louis man's testimony and to summon the 13 Chicago witnesses. No formal subpoenaes have been issued. Each witness was called by telephone and asked to offer evidence today and tomorrow.

Reutlinger was followed on the stand by Robert M. Lee, city editor of the Tribune and for ten years "boss" of the slain Tribune reporter. Harry Read, city editor of the American, who has confirmed Brundidge's story that read was a visitor at Al Capone's Miami estate, was the third witness of the day.

NO INCRIMINATION OF SLAIN RADIO ANNOUNCER

DETROIT, July 24—(AP)—The Detroit News says that Police Commissioner Thomas C. Wilcox admitted today that his statement that he has an affidavit Jerry Buckley, slain radio announcer, of receiving $4,000 from a racketeer is false.

The commissioner was approached by a representative of the newspaper with a request to see the affidavit the News said and after a number of questions had been put to him admitted he had no such affidavit "as yet."

The News said the commissioner first claimed to have the signed affidavit in his possession, but when asked to show it to a judge of the circuit court so as to remove all doubts of its existence he said:

"Well, it isn't signed yet—not yet."

The commissioner was quoted as refusing to show the affidavit to a judge because it was "police business." The News says he agreed, however, to show the document to the prosecuting attorney. James E. Chenot, prosecuting attorney, said the commissioner had promised to show him the affidavit but had not done so.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH IN FIRE IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, July 24.—(AP)—A fire that swept two three-story frame houses here this afternoon claimed the life of one woman and trapped two others on an upper floor while firemen fought for an hour to bring the blaze under control. One fireman was overcome.

The dead woman was Mrs. Mary Morse, who lived in the four-family tenement house in which the fire started. She was overcome by smoke and burned to death in a narrow passage way after escape had been cut off by the flames.

One of the two women who narrowly escaped a similar fate was identified as a Mrs. Welsh, who lived in the same building with Mrs. Morse.

DISASTROUS FLOODS AT WHITBY, YORKSHIRE, ENG.

Today's downpour, a veritable cloudburst, furnished a climax of the storm and temporarily put an end to relief work. Whitby, a seaport and watering place, and the seat of important manufacturing of jet ornaments and fisheries products, today was paralyzed.

The Esk, at whose mouth Whitby is situated, flowed down in a raging torrent. Small dwellings, scores of skiffs and a vast amount of debris were piled high in the streets by the tide and great trees of the picturesque countryside lay uprooted in the fields.

The hamlet of Sleights, isolated when its bridges were washed out, had no relief because rescuers were unable to improvise a span across the river. Attempts were being made tonight to build a pontoon bridge.

Similar conditions prevailed in a lesser degree at Stokesley, where rain fell heavily producing conditions worse than in the last fifty years.

Villages and homesteads were cut off from communication, country roads being deep under water or blocked by landslides.

KARACHI, India, July 24—(AP)—Property losses estimated at more than $1,000,000 today were caused in this area by floods due to a rainfall of approximately six inches in the last 24 hours.

Huge stocks of grain, sugar and cotton have been wiped out by a tide that has swirled through the streets and cut off telegraphic communication with the rest of India.

A wide area in the upper sind, is under water. Incessant rains have swollen the Indus river and its tributary streams and canals.

Retaining embankments have given way at seral points. The towns of Larkhana, Shikapur and Khanpur were submerged tonight and refugees were pouring into Karachi.

One breach in the Indus dyke in the western Nara division of the Larkhana was 100 feet long and eight feet deep. It gave rise to great alarm.

The Larkhana-Jacobabad railway was washed out in two places. The Begari canal was reported to have burst its bonds.

LIGHTNING KILLED HORSE AND STUNNED 15 STABLE HANDS

STAMFORD, July 24.—(AP) —Lightning struck and killed one horse and stunned about 15 stable hands during a heavy thunderstorm which interrupted the Stamford horse show late today.

Two of the men, Clarence Laperle, of Boston, and Thomas Stamp, of Washington, Conn., were treated at a hospital here. A third, Michael Devany, of Portchester, N. Y., was attended at the field by a doctor.

The horse, High-Ho, was owned by Miss Doris Hofheimer, of Long Acre farm, Warrenville, N. J. Mud Tavern, another horse, owned by Miss Hofheimer, was stunned.

Some of the hands were in the stable and others were grouped under nearby trees when the bolt flashed out of the sky. It is believed that the horse had its head out of a window, as the stable itself was not touched.

The rain storm forced postponement of several events scheduled for the afternoon. These will be run off Saturday morning.

SEC'Y ADAMS RECOMMENDS DISMISSAL OF MIDSHIPMEN

WASHINGTON, July 24.—(AP)—Secretary Adams said today he had recommended to President Hoover the dismissal of two midshipmen who took two girls into the mess hall and dormitory at the Annapolis Naval academy.

The recommendation will be sent to President Hoover for approval, Secretary Adams said.

The midshipmen took the girls dressed in uniforms, into the dormitory and mess hall about two weeks ago. After the disclosure, students in the second classes, of which Myatt and Burgin were members, were restricted to quarters.

LEGION POST TO HAVE FIFE AND DRUM CORPS

WILLIMANTIC, July 24—Following the cycle of fashion, the trend toward fife, bugle and drum corps which has gripped this section of late, has been taken up locally by James J. Shea post No. 19, American legion. The legion has secured an enrollment of about 30, with several additional members in prospect, to take up this once popular form of music. The committee, consisting of George F. Robinson, Charles Cook and Stephen L. Case, has been authorized to further the organization and the legion will order instruments in the near future. In Hebron and Coventry, fife and drum corps were recently organized but this city has remained without such a martial aggregation since the disbanding of the Chapman Fife and Drum corps.

Action on the matter of a drum corps was taken at a meeting of the post held Wednesday evening. Lester H. Bliss, chairman of the On to Boston committee reported early registrations for the convention there and Joseph R. Morrison, chairman of transportation to the state convention at Bridgeport stated that many were planning to attend. The trip will be made in private cars.

Next Sunday the post will hold a picnic with the auxiliary at Windham. There will be two baseball games, quoit, swimming and other sports. Each family is to bring a basket lunch and the joint committees will provide "all hots," watermelon and lemonade. Friends of the families and the girls who sold poppies preceding Memorial day may be invited as guests. First Vice-Commander Arthur W. Swanson is chairman of the legion committee for the picnic.

With the addition of one new member taken in during the meeting, the post membership was brought to 301. It was announced that the whist held last May netted $271.35. Walter McNickle of the house committee was authorized to refund money for keys to those who have not renewed their membership this year. Commander Abraham Sussman was in charge of the meetings.

Pierre J. Roy Sr.

Pierre Joseph Roy, Sr., 64, died suddenly of cerebral embolism early this morning at his home, 22 Walnut street. The body was viewed by Medical Examiner Dr. Louis I. Mason. Mr. Roy had been a resident of this city for half a century and for 37 years was engaged in the ice retailing business for 37 years. He was born in St. Fabien, Canada, April 26, 1866, a son of Edward and Emelie Belanger Roy. Besides his wife, he is survived by three sons, Pierre Joseph, Jr., Adelard and Eugene and one daughter, Miss Julia Roy, all of this city; four grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. Francois Michaud and Mrs. Napoleon Roy of St. Fabien, Canada; and three brothers, Philip of this city, August and Joseph Roy of New Haven. It is the belief of many that a true cross-section of the hardships of industrial depression is to be found in no more true and pathetic light than in the police headquarters. At the police station here there is a nightly procession of "down-and-out men who ask for a night's lodging or who deliberately set to be placed under arrest. These men enter into the category of "bums" in that they seem to have no tangible foothold anywhere and are, in practically all instances, dead broke. A not unusual, yet forceful, incident showing the desperate stage which some of these wanderers have reached occurred at police headquarters Wednesday night. A transient, in the average age of over 50 which runs in members of his ilk, pleaded with Patrolman Roderick Lariviere to be arrested. There being no cause, the officer could not comply with the request, so the "bum" went to Lieutenant Edward P. Leahy at headquarters, asking again that he be arrested and given 30 days in jail. He said he had walked himself sick looking for a job and that the confinements of four gray walls held no terrors for him if he could only rest and eat. All the lieutenant could do was to give the man a night's lodging and send him along his weary way this morning. If he emulates the example of others, he will beg, borrow or steal sufficient funds to get himself a bottle of bay-rum or some other cheap intoxicant so that cause for his arrest and committment to jail will be made.

The faculty and students of the Willimantic State Trade school held their first annual outing at Crystal lake, Ellington, today, with about 130 in attendance. AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

SOIL COLOR GIVES CLUE REGARDING ITS CONTENTS

The color of soils is often a good clue to the presence or lack of desirable qualities, says W. O. Robinson, of the United States department of agriculture. Different colors in soils are caused by differences in composition, but the soil with the greatest amount of colored constituents as revealed by analysis does not always have the deepest color because the constituents of the soil are not always in proper combination to make them noticeable.

"A black soil is usually a rich soil, and in general the darker the soil the more productive it is. Black color in soils is due to organic matter in combination with lime. The actual quantity of organic matter may be small, but if it is saturated with lime or other bases it makes a most favorable condition for plant growth.

"Organic matter also colors soils brown. Such soils are generally acid, and the organic matter, while it may be abundant, is not saturated with lime. A reddish-brown color ordinarily indicates the presence of organic matter and iron oxide. Examples of such soils are the prized mahogany lands of the south.

"Red and yellow soils owe their color color to the iron oxide they contain in the free state. Experience has shown that the coloring matter is in the clay or finest matter in the soil. This clay is largely made up of silica, alumina, iron oxide, water, and organic matter. The color does not depend primarily upon the total quantity of iron present, as the percentage of this mineral varies little in the clay of surface soils, regardless of color. Reddish soils are usually rated high for farming."

White or light-colored soils are not regarded favorably for farming, except for special crops, says Mr. Robinson, for such color shows a lack of important constituents. Very light-colored soils are generally sandy and contain neither the clay nor the organic matter necessary to absorb and retain plant food and water.

SUMMER POULTRY MANAGEMENT SUGGESTIONS

Cool, well ventilated houses, day and night, play an important part in good summer egg production, and particularly during hot dry weather. Ventilation can be most easily taken care of by opening windows in the back of the house underneath the drop-boards. If there are no windows available, they can be cut out even though the sashes are not at hand, as these can be fitted in later. If the drop-boards are constructed to pull forward, this will do much toward changing and cooling the air over the birds' heads when they are roosting at night. The drop-boards and roosts should pull forward about one foot to allow a free circulation of air.

A constant supply of succulent green food is necessary, particularly in the summer. However, green food should not be fed to the extent of reducing the grain and mash consumption. Dry mash should of course be constantly supplied, allowing ample room for the birds to eat. The night grain feeding should be given late in the afternoon, as this will encourage greater dry mash consumption than if the grain feeding is given early.

While it is not advisable to start feeding wet mash any earlier than necessary, it is advisable to start at any time during the early summer rather than have production drop down. It is much easier to hold production than it is to restore production after it has once decreased. The so-called "lazy man's way" of feeding wet mash apeals to many poultrymen and gives excellent results for the time involved. This consists of pouring a small amount of milk on top of the dry mash in the hoppers at noon. The amount should be such that the birds will eat up all the mash that has been moistened within a couple of hours. Use either liquid milk, semi-solid buttermilk diluted about one-third, or powdered milk diluted with water about 1 to 8 or 9.

Any feeding practice that can be devised which will increase the total amount of food consumed will as a rule hold or increase production.

Summer Egg Requirements—1. Constant supply of dry mash. 2. Grain fed early and late. 3. Milk in some form. 4. Fresh, cool clean water. 5. Fresh, succulent green food. 6. Cool, airy houses. 7. Freedom from lice and mites.—Roy E. Jones.

BEES OFTEN FLY EIGHT MILES FOR HONEY LOAD

Confirming the honeybee's reputation for diligence, the United States department of agriculture recently learned that a bee will sometimes fly as much as 8 miles and return with its minute load. Under such circumstances a single pound of honey would represent approximately 18,000 trips of 16 miles each, or nearly 300,000 miles of flight by bees.

In a locality in Wyoming where irrigated alfalfa is virtually the only source of honey, the department placed some hives 8 miles from the nearest nectar supply. The bees made daily trips to the alfala, loaded with honey, and returned. Since the bees flew this distance regularly, the department apiculturists assume they might fly ever farther if necessary.

Flying these 16-mile trips, however, some bees fail to return home because sand storms overtake them or headwinds impede them. Laden with honey, they are forced to rest often on the way home, particularly when flying into the wind or in cool weather. When they reach the hive after such long trips they often make abnormal landings, and frequently fail to alight at the entrance of the hive.

Celery and Celeriac, Stem and Root

Celery is one of the vegetables not often attempted by the home gardener or compared with other vegetables yet it is not a difficult matter at all to raise a fine supply of home-grown celery. A light, rich soil and abundant moisture will produce first-class celery. It is now time to plant the seed or to order plants to set out for the crop next fall.

So far as growing the plants is concerned, it is as easy as growing lettuce or carrots. Set the plants a foot apart for the late varieties and eight inches for the early sorts. The main factor is to keep them growing at full speed. Cultivate and fertilize liberally. Do not work among the plants when they are wet with rain or dew as it is likely to promote rust and discoloration.

There are varieties of celery which are called self-blanching. This self-blanching applies only to the heart of the plant which from its closely held stems is blanched. The outer leaves while paler than the non-blanching kinds are by no means white. The self-blanching varieties need less blanching than the standard sorts. That is their chief advantage.

The blanching process usually is accomplished by old-time gardeners by drawing the earth about the stems of the plant as it grows so that when ready to gather the earth reaches up to the lower portion of the leaf growth. Another method which has the advantage of being cleaner and not getting soil into the heart of the plant consists of placing board strips close to the plants on each side of the row so that light is excluded.

There are also for small gardens paper tubes to slip about the plant protecting the stems from the light and blanching them. Any of these methods are practical but there is a theory which seems to work out that the old-fashioned method of hilling up the earth about the plant produces the whitest and tenderest stalks.

Celeriac or root celery is a celery that runs to a big tuberous root instead of stalks. It is useful as a flavoring for soups and stew and as salad material when boiled and sliced. It is useful to put in the cellar for winter use and a short row will give sufficient material for a season.

When BABIES are Upset

BABY ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready?

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria.

Can You Do Your Housework?

If you are not as well as you want to be, if you are weak, nervous or rundown, give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. Take at least three bottles. It will tone up your whole system and help you to eat better, sleep better and feel better.

Mrs. Marie Vriesenga,
New York, New York.

"My work is keeping a rooming house in New York. I was weak and tired and didn't seem to feel well at all. Some friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it four times a day. It has helped me very much. I feel better in all ways now."

Ask Your Friends

Mrs. Paulina Pascuzzi,
316 Tremont Ave.,
East Orange, New Jersey

"I never had any appetite and I could not sleep well, and I was irregular and often suffered from headaches because of my age. I read a booklet left at my door, and so I took eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have also taken the Herb Medicine. I feel stronger in every way now. I have gained weight and am not nearly so nervous and can do my housework without getting too tired."

Edna Sluraff,
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

"I was completely rundown from nursing. I took four bottles of your medicine with very good results. I have been a nurse for twenty years without losing a patient, I am proud to say. I will continue to recommend any of the Lydia E. Pinkham products at any time and you may use my name."

DANIELSON

PROULX DRAWS SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR JUNK YARD

DANIELSON, July 24—(P)—The first case of its kind to develop hereabouts involves Amadee Proulx of the West Side, and he has drawn a suspended jail sentence of 30 days for having a motor junk yard in sight of a trunk line highway, but no license to maintain such an establishment.

Mr. Proulx was presented before Justice Laura Pike of the town of Brooklyn for a hearing, with the result that the sentence was imposed, and suspended for 30 days that Mr. Proulx might have an opportunity to clean up the yard, where there is a great accumulation of decripit, rusting cars that in all probability never will roll over the highways again, at least not under their own power.

Mr. Proulx, who has been in business here for years, and has specialized in buying old cars and selling used parts of cars, has taken an appeal from the sentence and will battle the affair out in the superior court.

Mrs. Maria Cordelia Mowry was honored at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin I. Taft at their summer place at Alexander's lake yesterday with a dinner party in observance of her 97th birthday. Five generations of daughters and granddaughters were included in the party, the youngest 3 years of age. Mrs. Mowry retains a wonderful degree of good health for one of her age, and aside from the fact that she is slightly deaf has few handicaps physically. She loves to work and has a keen interest in current events and in the things that interest the average person of many fewer years. Mrs. Ellen Taft is a daughter of Mrs. Mowry's first marriage. Mr. Taft, her son-in-law, is 80 years of age. Mrs. Mowry, whose home is in Providence, has eight grandchildren, ten great grandchildren and six great great grandchildren.

Another extension of transmission lines by the Connecticut Light and Power company in the territory of the Danielson division will be from near the Union cemetery in Moosup to Sterling. This will be a 26,000 volt line. A sub-station will be built in the mill yard at Sterling. When the new line is built the light and power company will take over the street lighting and electrical distribution that heretofore has been controlled by the U. S. Finishing company.

FUNERAL.

Mrs. Madge E. Bowers.

This afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Madge E. Bowers was held from the home in Elliott, funeral services being at the chapel in Phoenixville at 2 o'clock. Rev. George B. Hawkes of Abington officiated. Burial was in Phoenixville cemetery. The bearers were John Fitts, Louis Calhoun, Frederick Woodward and Charles Pike. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

A steam shovel went into action today over on the West Side, starting the excavations for the repeater station that is to be erected by the American Telephone and Telegraph company close by where its underground Boston-New York cable passes. The building is to be of brick, one-story in height and of sufficiently heavy construction to permit of adding other stories in later years if the necessity arises. It is understood that work on the building will be rushed, that the structure may be completed during the early fall. The building will be the first of its kind in this part of the state. The site is on the southerly side of the Danielson-Brooklyn state highway, on the West Side, about opposite Day street.

In political circles in the 28th senatorial district outside of Ashford there was interest and the lifting of eyebrows today over the announcement that Senator Walter C. Brown is a candidate to succeed himself. Killingly is a part of the district. It is the generally followed practice in this senatorial district to give each of the six towns composing it a rotating opportunity to be represented by a senator every two years. In voting strength Ashford is about the weakest sister of the group. Giving that town the senatorship in two succeeding biennial elections would be a quite unusual procedure. There were indications today that other towns will have candidates and will work hard to get them the nomination. The election comes in November.

Stanislaw Saltenik of Furnace street was fined $1 and costs in the town court this morning for picking berries without permission of the owner of the land, Aden A. Tillinghast of South Killingly. The accused was ordered into court Tuesday by State Officer Lionel Poirier. Mr. Tillinghast has had his land posted for three years, and has not given permission for berry-pickers to invade his lands. Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill pointed out today that even though land is not so posted it is a violation of the law to go berry picking without permission of the owner of the property.

Members of the Danielson Rotary club held their weekly meeting this evening at Paco lodge. The speaker of the evening was Roy Tillinghast and his subject pertaining to a new type of motor and new varieties of motor fuels. Mr. Tillinghast has just returned from nearly a year in England.

On the occasion of Governor Trumbull's visit to Camp Woodstock yesterday a special event was the annual camp shoot. Herbert Barstow of Rockville won this with 96 out of a possible 100. W. E. Beers of New Britain was second with 93, and Dr. Kavanack of Hartford third with 96. In Class B, F. R. Fuller was first with 91, M. W. Crandall of Rockville second with 86 and F. E. Watkins of Hartford third with 80. Mr. Barstow also won the doubles with 46, Mr. Crandall being second with 43. As Mr. Barstow won the Colonel Harvey Allen trophy in 1927-1928, he won by virtue of his third win gains permanent possession of it.

Governor Trumbull made an address to the boys at the Congden Memorial chapel. He was introduced by Alexander Maitland of Thompson, chairman of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. organization.

Mrs. B. T. Northbridge of Worcester is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Payne and members of their family of Day street.

Lieut. Ross V. Urquhart, commanding officer at the Danielson barracks, said this afternoon that no department orders have been issued to him relative to making arrests of drivers of Massachusetts and New York cars equipped with the 32 candle power headlight bulbs that have been made legal in those states. Whether or not such bulbs have been used in this territory as yet by drivers from the states mentioned is not known. At least there have been no special complaints by local drivers over meeting cars with blinding headlights.

Old Killingly pond, Moosup pond and Alexander's lake were favorite resorts for numbers of Danielson people this afternoon, it being a half-holiday for many here. Bathing is the particular attraction for many at Old Killingly and Moosup ponds.

Spare time of many Danielson people is being spent just now in searching through the newly issued telephone directories for misspelled words. There are at least 50 such words, made that way purposely. Those who find them will have a chance to share in awards totaling $290. Telephone employes and members of their families are not allowed to compete.

The pageant, the title of which is "Saul of Taurus," will be given in the Condon Memorial chapel at three o'clock, daylight saving time. A pageant was given during the last camping period and about five hundred visitors witnessed it.

On Monday afternoon an athletic and aquatic meet will be held between Camp Mohawk, which is just outside of Torrington, Conn., and Camp Woodstock. This meet will be held at Camp Woodstock.

The camping period for boys will close next Wednesday, July 30, and will open for girls next Friday, August 1.

Mr. DeCoudres taught school in Putnam and later became superintendent of schools in East Hartford. He was also superintendent in Grafton and Upton, Mass., and in Bristol, R. I. Mr. De Coudres then gave up school work and returned. He then entered the grain business with Ray Bosworth who is his brother-in-law. A few months ago he sold his interest in the business and retired to private life. Mr. DeCoudres has always been active in the social and civic life in Putnam, at the present time being one of the directors of the chamber of commerce and for two years he was president of that organization.

Mr. DeCoudres has two daughters, Rhea and Ruth, both of whom at the present time are students at Brown university in Providence.

Ralph E. Thurston, manager in the Putnam of the Connecticut Light and Power company was notified yesterday that starting August first he would be promoted to general manager of the Putnam and Danielson division. Manager Thurston said that he was not familiar with the duties of his new position but that he thought that he would remain in Putnam. It is assumed that he will have a much wider field of supervision and that it would include more than the Putnam and Danielson divisions. Other changes in view are the changing of Thomas Ralph who is power engineer in Danielson to manager of the Putnam and Danielson offices. William Sangster who is manager of the Danielson division is to be transferred to the Waterbury district.

ITALY'S EARTHQUAKE

The more we learn of the earthquake in southern Italy the more appalling it becomes. Areas which are visited by such disturbances often pay heavily in death and destruction and such seems to characterize the one which has just occurred in the vicinity of Naples. The force of the quake appears to have been vented upon the smaller rather than the large communities. Naples escaped rather lightly where some of the villages lost half or more than half of their inhabitants.

Although succeeding messages have shown that the early reports failed to give a clear idea of the seriousness of the disturbance, it is certain that relief measures will be required to deal with the situation. With more than 1500 known dead there is a problem involved in dealing with the distress among the living, burying the dead and supporting the work of restoration. That this work will be undertaken by experienced hands is to be expected and it is certain that if the situation cannot be met by the area involved or by Italy there will be prompt and effective responses to any appeal for assistance. Under such conditions the hearts and the pocketbooks of sympathetic humanity never fail to open.

This disaster, according to latest reports, does not approach that which occurred at Messina and there is reason for worldwide satisfaction that its does not. Although Italy is a country which has experienced such trouble on many occasions there can be no desire for record breaking disasters. The slight ones come all too often and there can never be any desire for one part of Italy to outdistance another when it comes to the horrors attending the worst of the quakes.

Where earthquakes are next going to rattle cities, put villages in ruins, cause exensiv death lists, render a greater number homeless and without food is hard to anticipate. Even in the earthquake area residents become hardened of safety, and even if they are there are always others who either do not appreciated the situation or are ready to take the big chance. It is the record of history and there is no prospect of an immediate change.

QUARANTINES

It is inevitable that there will be those who will raise plenty of objections to the establishment of quarantines for the purpose of fighting the corn borer, or any other pest. They are supported not only by those who are inconvenienced but by those who are directly affected, and in the end are to be benefited. There isn't the right amount of appreciation for what is being attempted or for the cooperation that is needed in order to make any such effort a success.

When a pest gets established in a certain area it is not only a nuisance there but it becomes a menace to surrounding territory. If it can be restricted to the infested area protection will be afforded to the others. It means that those who have it will be obliged to experience the immediate penalty and bear a substantial burden in trying to eradicate it. It is much the same as a case of contagious disease. If nothing is done to present others from coming in contact with the germs much more sickness is certain to prevail. If through careful quarantine the diseases can be restricted to one person, one family or a few cases the danger to the community in general is greatly reduced. Likewise the suffering, inconvenience and expense that goes therewith.

Quarantines are not established for the purpose of injury to those in the area. The aim is to prevent as many as possible from being forced to bear similar burdens, and devastation which to a certain degree is preventable.

While there are many who refuse to cooperate, many who complain because of the slight inconvenience which comes to them and many who have no faith in the means of control, it requires no extensive imagination to realize that unless there is a united effort, unless all join hands in a common task, the conditions which are created by the corn borer or other pests will not only grow worse but do so rapidly. Those who should be the most seriously concerned are those who are directly involved. It is one of those situations where it should be realized that many hands make light work and do a more effective job.

DELAYED CONFIRMATION

Not as many appointments were confirmed during the closing hours of the special session of the senate as was expected. Not as many had been presented, in fact, as it was thought would be, and yet all but one of those that were ready for action went over until the session in December.

The hot weather played a most important role in concluding the special session on Monday. It also made it desirable for the senators to get away from Washington as quickly as possible without spending any time on the confirmation of nominations.

Nominations had been delayed for two reasons. The president realized that should he send nominations to the senate for confirmation while the senators were wrangling over the treaty they would at once be seized upon as an excuse for sidetracking the consideration of the pact. Nothing would have been welcomed with greater delight by the treaty opponents than a chance to investigate nominees, or threaten to spend weeks discussing the nominations, as a means of bringing about a delay in the action on the treaty. In the second place President Hoover has encountered considerable difficulty in getting the men he wants to accept a nomination, and the result was that the nominations were not ready for consideration.

It is a bit unfortunate that the tariff commission could not have been named and action taken upon it in order that it might get busy on the work that is awaiting it. It is possible for the president to make an appointment to the commission and for the appointees to serve until congress assembles. That would make it possible for the commission to get busy at once, as soon as named, but under such circumstances there remains the uncertainty as to what the senate will do regarding acceptance and the possibility that those getting a recess appointment would be refused confirmation. This would not be anticipated because of the men whom the president would name but because of the disposition which has been displayed by the senate in the past. There has already been evidence furnished which indicates that the power commission will be carefully scanned.

NURSED TROLLEY TRACKS

When electric railways seek to reconstruct their tracks in city streets, or when city streets are being repaved in which trolley tracks exist and must of necessity be relaid, the question arises today as to just what course should be followed. Ten years ago far less thought would have been given to the situation, but today there bobs up the question as to how long such rails can be expected to be used. This is not in the sense of how long they can be expected to wear under constant use, but how long before they will be abandoned and a change made from electric cars to motor buses.

Over in the city of Middletown electric cars have gone out of style and use. In their place buses are being used. That means that there is no further use for the tracks. Yet they were put down only a few years ago, put down to stay and much expense and highway disturbance would be involved in ripping them up. Nevertheless with no use for them they are so situated as to be considered undesirable and at times bothersome to vehicular traffic.

That is not the only city where abandoned rails have been left in main highways until such time as the need for new pravement arises. On many electric lines where service has been changed to buses the same situation prevails. At times it is possible to cover them up but it makes it apparent that in anticipation of highway changes where trolley rails are locates serious consideration may well be given to the coming of the day when transportation service there will go from trolleys to buses and rails will be a highway encumbrance.

When the abandonment of trolleys for buses have been urged on certain reconstructed lines in the past little if any hearing could be gotten for it. The situation is decidedly different these days. It is one of the things which cannot be overlooked.

GLENN H. CURTISS

Convinced that aviation was practical, that the day would come when flying would be generally practiced, Glenn H. Curtiss stood steadfastly by his belief and became one of the outstanding figures in aeronautics. He believed that he was right. He persisted in his efforts. He was not always successful, but he profited by his mistakes and partial failures. He studied and worked and succeeded. He didn't gain his reputation by a single flight. He didn't gain his standing through a single invention. It was through the combination of efforts and the determined way in which he stuck to his task that carried him through to fame and brought achievements which place him not only as a pioneer in aviation but one of its bulwarks for the last two decades.

Mr. Curtiss' genius had been demonstrated in other directions before the days of flying machines. It was natural however that he should gravitate into that field of activity. He was young and ambitious. It was something new. He was anxious to master it and he did. Not only was he a successful flier but he had ideas concerning the building of machines which were put into operation with most gratifying results. Flying machine construction today owes much to his efforts. He long since made a place for himself in aviation history.

When such men drop out they leave places hard to fill. The death of Mr. Curtiss removes one of the leading figures in aviation and at a time when there were reasons to expect many more years of fruitful influence upon the industry with which he was prominently identified and in which he was so deeply interested. His career clearly indicates what can be done where there's the will. He blazed new trails with confidence and won and the benefits of his success will long remain.

UNSOUGHT ADVICE

"Without doubt," confided the girl in the dahlia dress as she began on her chocolate malted milk, "he is the grandest and most romantic-looking man I ever have laid eyes on! To think of having a man like that notice one is thrilling—and then to have him ask one to marry him—well!"

"Take a deep breath," counseled her friend in hunter's green, who had level, liquid eyes and a calm mouth. "Then count thirteen and if you don't feel better we'll try something else. Nicotina, you don't know how fortunate you are to have met me today when you are in this state of mind. You might have run into some one else who would have abetted your madness. I had a cousin who felt just as you do and after she married her hero she found that he always insisted on tying an old wool stocking around his throat whenever he had a cold, and besides that, he crunched celery. It really was tragic.

"The experience so embittered her that after her divorce, when she married again, she just didn't care and her second husband had the general appearance of a kind butcher who was good to his mother. But he always remembered anniversaries and she adored him and was exceedingly happy. I am trying to point out to you how utterly useless is masculine beauty and fascination when you get through playing around and decide to take on janitors, grocery bills and order new calling cards.

"What your husband looks like does not mater in the least. After a man becomes a husband no one looks at him any way. Just consider all the husbands you know, and if you can name one who looks in the slightest degree romantic or thrilling I'll eat my hat with cranberry sauce. You know that they say when small boys are about 10 or 12 nobody loves them but God and their mothers. And likewise the general reaction toward husbands is that every unmarried woman wonders how in creation their wives ever came to marry them when the world was so very well filled with men. Nobody is envying their life partners and wondering whether another influenza epidemic especially destructive in regard to the feminine half of the population isn't about due.

"You just can't tell about them. I came back yesterday from visiting the girl I went east to be maid of honor for a couple of years ago. She married a man who looked like pictures of Rudy Vallee, John Gilbert and Valentino combined. He was so handsome and fascinating that oh, how our hearts ached with jealousy. He almost breathed for that girl. If she lifted her little finger he sprang to arms. If she sneezed he wanted the family to get six surgeons, three trained nurses and a bunch of assorted hospitals on the job immediately. Just as devoted as the saccharine couples on the old-fashioned ruffly valentines.

"Well, when I got there Angeline didn't meet me at the train. She apologized in an absent-minded sort of way when I reached the house and explained that there were some buttons off darling's shirts that simply had to go on because she never knew which one he would want to wear and they must be ready for him before he dressed for the party that evening. After he came home that girl ran five miles getting out the proper studs, the especial hanky he wanted, pressing a wrinkle out of the under side of his shirt sleeve and then after all we nearly stayed home. It was because he got worked up over the fact that he had only six white ties. What, he wanted to know in quite awful tones, would she have done if he had not made a success of the fifth tie? What if he had had to use the sixth and that, too, had proved a failure as a bow? Answer him, what would she have done then?

"I could have answered him without any effort at all from my room, which was so near I could not help hearing the cooing of the doves. Angeline didn't say much to him. She was sort of abstracted as though she were used to it and it didn't really matter anyway. By the time I left I give you my word I couldn't have told whether darling even wore eye-brows. I never looked at him. Hearing him was enough. He roared and he scolded and he yelled and he sulked—but who would have dreamed it before he got married and the girls were all crazy about him?

"Pick out some unobtrusive young man whom nobody wants to steal and maybe you'll draw a prize. Who knows?"

"Well!" sniffed the dahlia girl as she finished her beverage, "I never heard such talk in my life! It's plain to see that you know nothing whatever about true love! Just wait until you see my Arthur! He's different!"—Chicago News.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 24—In a sense it is regrettable that those famous "secret documents" relating to the London naval treaty probably never will be published.

For unless all signs fail, they would disclose Ambassador Dawes at his best when it comes to wisecracking. And the former vice president is a noted wisecracker.

Many a political observer believes it was that gift which did much to make him vice president.

It takes information broadcast on a national scale to create a national figure, quite aside from his abilities. And it was the Dawes tongue that so greatly attracted news writers and so tickled the fancy of American readers.

Comedy Behind Scenes

Searching the senate debate, it is hard to believe that any of the 53 senators who voted to ask President Hoover in his discretion, to submit all the "secret documents" to the senate, did so with any notion that they contained matter that might sway senatorial judgment on ratification of the naval pact.

That many so voted in order to uphold the senate's constitutional prerogatives in treaty-making is just as clear; but that has nothing to do with the language or subject matter of the suppressed communications.

If there is any doubt as to the actual nature of those papers, see what the only two senators who had examined them, David Reed and Joseph Robinson of the treaty negotiating delegation, had to say about them:

"There is an element of comedy in the matter," Robinson said. "That would be apparent if senators could read some of these 'secret' documents. I see that the senator from Pennsylvania (Reed) is highly amused at that suggestion."

Reed was grinning in rather sheepish fashion perhaps, yet grinning at his recollections of what those "magical and mysterious secret documents," as Robinson laughingly called them, actually contained.

Too Spicy

So the general assumption that what blocked publication of part of the papers, at least, was the spicy comments of Dawes which they contained, seemed well founded.

"Of course that is what it's all about," one very high government official said to the Bystander. "I don't have to read 'em. I know Charlie Dawes."

ACNE (Continued)

By Isaac E. Pels, M. D., Baltimore.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Continuing our discussion of Acne begun yesterday, formerly it was believed that acne was produced by indiscretions in diet, by constipation, ill-health, bacteria, and other as yet unproved factors. We do know, however, that sugars, starchy foods, greasy (fried) foods, etc., readily precipitate pimples. It has not been proved that bacteria (germs) actually produce the disease, but many kinds have been found in the pustules and in abscesses. All these facts must be taken into consideration by the physician who treats acne. The disinclination to the use of soap and water for cleansing the skin is often based on fallacious reasoning and observation. Finally the hostile attitude regarding the bad (?) results of opening of the pustles and abscesses is also groundless. It has been erroneously believed that such minor surgical procedures produce the pitted scarring, so frequently present, whereas the facts are that the scars actually result from not treating pimples and pustules. These ordinarily require a long time, even weeks, to disappear spontaneously, and almost invariably leave some mark or sign of their former presence. For the same and similar reasons it is essential to remove comedones which are frequently forerunners of papules.

In summary, acne is a disease of puberty and adolescence, self-limited in its course; very common; and has no serious complications of constitutional nature. It is, of course, not contagious.

The only rational plea for treatment would therefore be based on cosmetic grounds. Every young person naturally should wish to "look his or her best", both for social reasons and for reasons which require a healthy appearance in professional and commercial activities.

In treatment, therefore, the physiology of the skin should be considered from the standpoint of hygiene, both local and general. Soap and water and sunlight are necessary and valuable adjuncts. The special treatments which are necessary in selected cases should be determined by the physician. It may be added that the roentgen-ray (X-ray) treatment has superseded the use of vaccines, the latter being considered by the majority of skin specialists to be of practically no value. With the roentgen ray the oiliness of the skin becomes vastly improved, and in consequence such treatment is assumed to prevent the occurrence of comedones and of papules by its action supposedly directly upon the oil-glands. This form of treatment should be given only by direction of your physician experienced in both the tecnnicalities of the roentgen-ray and in knowledge of the cause, the pathology and the symptomatology of the various diseases of the skin.

How Tree-Rings Gave the Age of Pueblo Ruins

How America's first "apartment dwellers" lived in their many storied homes in the southwest 500 years before Europe knew there was a western hemisphere was told to delegates to the convention of the National Education association in Columbus, Ohio, by Neil M. Judd, archeologist of the National Museum, who conducted a seven year study of the largest known Pueblo ruin, Pueblo Bonito, for the National Geographic society. Dr. Judd also outlined the fascinating scientific detective story of the discovery of the building dates of the great communal structures of New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado by an associate scientist, Dr. A. E. Douglass of the University of Arizona, who constructed an accurate calendar from tree-rings found in the ceiling beams of the ruined dwellings.

"In Europe and Asia historians speak with calm assurance of events that happened several thousand years before Christ," said Mr. Judd, "but most of us, I suspect, are prone to forget that the Western Hemisphere is still a new discovery, comparatively. We do not always recall that the written history of the great southwest actually begins with the chronicles of Spanish soldiers and priests who boldly ventured northward out of Mexico in 1540, in search of 'The Seven Cities of Cibola' and their fabled stores of gold and precious stones. Until last fall, all that transpired before the Spanish conquest was vaguely described as 'prehistoric.' Now, thanks to the researches of Dr. A. E. Douglass, in behalf of the National Geographic society, we have added 8 centuries to the pre-Columbia history of the United States; we have ascertained the important dates of nearly 40 Pueblo villages abandoned prior to 1540; we have assembled a series of tree-rings that extends from 1929 back to 700 A. D. and thus provided a climatic record 1200 years in length.

"Let us take just a few moments to trace the known history of the Pueblo Indians. Their civilization is divided by archeologists into 5 distinct stages of development the last of which is that now existing in New Mexico and Arizona and which is partially familiar to all who travel to and from California by way of the Santa Fe railroad. The fourth Pueblo period ended with the coming of Coronado and his fellow adventurers, in 1540, while the first period lies in that dim, unmeasured past when Pueblo culture was still relatively crude; when the Pueblo social organization was still rather loosely knit and individual families lived in semi-subterranean dwellings. From these simple beginnings Pueblo society and Pueblo architecture slowly evolved into great, communal habitations such as Pueblo Bonito. And then decline set in.

"The National Geographic society began exploration of Pueblo Bonito in 1921; to ascertain the actual age of Pueblo Bonito, The Society initiated, in 1923, a series of tree-ring investigations that came to fruition only last fall. The Sherlock Holmes methods by which that secret finally was solved have ben described in the December number of the Geographic Magazine. In brief, the age of Pueblo Bonito was learned by counting the annual growth rings in its old ceiling timbers; by joining those rings with others in logs recovered from later ruins, from inhabited Pueblo villages and from living forests until we brought together 22 generations of Arizona pine trees whose overlapping annual growth rings form an unbroken series extending back to 700 A. D. Thus we learned the actual years during which Pueblo Bonito was inhabited. The oldest log we found there was felled in 919 A. D.; the latest in 1130.

"Pueblo Bonito was under construction, therefore, just 700 years before the Pilgrim Fathers landed on Plymouth Rock; it was undergoing extensive alteration and repair during the very year that William the Conqueror defeated the English at the Battle of Hastings; it fell into decline anpd finally was deserted 3 centuries before Columbus was born. By this determining absolute dates not only for Pueblo Bonito but for some 40 other ruined villages of the southwest we are destroying much of the glamour and romance with which certain writers have been wont to clothe the prehistory of America. At the same time, we are replacing mere speculation with real facts; we are contributing definite knowledge regarding the American Indians of a period when Europeans had not yet begun to dream of a New World."

Lantern slides exhibited by Mr. Judd in illustrating his address showed the semi-desert country of Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado in which the Pueblo Indians live, the cliff dwellings of the dry canyons, and the scores of ruined and modern Pueblo villages from which tree-ring material was laboriously pieced together. Other photographs showed the cluttered ruins of Pueblo Bonito in Chaco Canyon, northwestern New Mexico, when the National Geographic society's first expedition visited the spot in 1921; various stages in the work of excavation and restoration; and finally the village as it stands today, a huge communal structure, most of its room walls restored, with dwelling and ceremonial apartments that sheltered 1,200 inhabitants. A slide in color presented a view of the most spectacular object found in the ruins, a turquoise necklace of 2,400 graduated beads with turquoise ear-bobs.

Motion pictures of the Pueblo country reveal that life in the villages today goes on much as the archeological investigations have indicated that it went on a thousand years ago. Another film demonstrated the methods employed in constructing the tree-ring calendar and passed before the spectators a panorama of 1,200 years in tree-rings. This unique calendar, Mr. Judd pointed out, shows that the climate of the southwest has not materially changed in twelve centuries. There have ben the recurrent periods of drought and excessive rainfall that have been found in recent years.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Nearly two-thirds as many gliders as aircraft were manufactured the first half of 1930 in the United States, estimates of the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce show.

A check of licenses and identification marks issued to new civil aircraft reveal 971 airplanes and 613 gliders had been produced.

In addition to the airplanes manufactured for commercial use, 132 were exported and 279 were delivered to the military services.

If We Had But One Day

We should fill the house with the sweetest things,
  If we had but a day!
We should drink alone at the purest springs
  In our upward way;
We should love with a lifetime's love in an hour
  If the hours were few;
We should rest, not for dreams, but for fresher power
  To be and to do.

We should guide our wayward or wearied wills
  By the clearest light;
We should keep our eyes on the heavenly hills,
  If they lay in sight;
We should trample the pride and the discontent
  Beneath our feet;
We should take what a good God sent,
  With a trust complete.

We should waste no moments in weak regret,
  If the day were but one;
If what we remember and what we forget
  Went out with the sun;
We should be from our clamorous selves set free,
  To work or to pray,
And to be what the Father would have us be,
  If we had but a day.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The United States Aluminum Co., Fairfield

Following the invention of the commercial process of making aluminum by Charles Martin Hall in 1886, The Pittsburgh Reduction company, (now Aluminum Company of America), was formed in 1888 by him and his associates.

The most successful laboratory experiments very rarely solve the practical problems of commercial scale production and the early efforts of Mr. Hall and his associates were devoted to the solution of these problems. Crude apparatus and uncertain supply of electricity complicated the natural difficulties attendant on any new process. They were, however, soon able to attain an output of thirty pounds of metal per day, part—and only part—of which they sold at a rate of $8 per pound.

Having reached that scale of overproduction, the next step was to find markets for their product. No one knew of any practical use for a hitherto unknown commodity, and the founders of the industry were obliged to develop fields where it could be employed.

The industry is a sufficient measure of their success.

Their plants are row scattered throughout the United States—one of wihch, a most modern sand foundry, is located in Fairfield.

The products now produced are: Ingot; castings—sand, die and permanent mould; forgings; rod and bar; tubing; sheet; screw machine products; collapsible tubes; wire; cable; beams—for structural use; cooking utensils; bronze powder—("Albron"); moulding; planographic plates; rivets; furniture; and shingles.

The present officers are:

Dependable Treatment for Constipation

Millions of people have welcomed a new discovery of modern science that assures a safe dependable treatment for constipation. It is no longer necessary to shift laxatives or to suffer irregular, uncomfortable bowel action.

Science now knows that the success of any laxative depends on uniform internal distribution—that unless it is thoroughly and evenly distributed throughout the intestinal tract irregular and unsatisfactory action will result.

This explains the success of the modern chewing gum laxative known as Feen-a-mint. As you chew this delicious gum, the tasteless laxative it contains is mixed with the saliva and carried to the intestinal tract evenly, smoothly, without shock to the system.

Because of its thorough distribution you will find Feen-a-mint effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store.—Adv.

DROWNINGS GREATER IN MONTH OF JULY

"In the Wake of the Careless Diver" was the title of a broadcast over WTIC at 12 o'clock, noon, today by William C. Welling, B. A., director of the bureau of vital statistics, Connecticut state department of health. He said:

July and August are the months when most of us take our vacation. Some will prefer the sea shore and others the country, but the presence of water, either the salt water or an inland lake, is an indispensable feature.

Every year, in Connecticut, about 120 persons approach water with a reckless abandon that is not warranted. Their names appear Monday morning as victims of accidental drowning over the week-end. While statistics are not available, it is quite likely that a majority of these 120 could not swim, though frequently an excellent swimmer will overdo his powers and fall a victim to cramps or exhaustion. Swimming is a far more violent exercise than you suspect, and the exhilaration of the first few moments rapidly changes to fatigue. Muscles which probably haven't been used all winter are coming into play. A certain short windedness appears.

Let us see for the moment just what the figures for our typical year reveal. Well, in the first place, out of 120 victims, 114 were male and six were females. Evidently women have a far more wholesome respect for water than do men. You may prefer to look at it this way; for every woman who is accidentally drowned, 19 men will drown. That is an extremely high sex ratio. It is a biological fact that for every 100 females born, 104 males will be born. It is a wise provision of nature that this is so, as that sex ratio of 19 to 1 in the accidental drownings shows.

Let us see now how age enters into the tragedy, for this is tragedy of the most unnecessary sort. Of the 120, 52, or not quite half, were under 20 years of age. Twenty-eight of the victims averaged 15 years of age. Grouping the ages by periods of 10 years, it is not until aged 60 is reached that any group has less than 10 deaths charged therein.

Naturally we will expect a seasonal grouping of the deaths, and just half, or 60, out of the 120, occur in June, July and August with the greatest number, 23, in July. You may perhaps have suspected that more than half would have fallen in the summer months, but accidental drowning has a winter season as well as a summer season. The winter season opens in December, though there is a little evidence as early as November. In January the ice is generally safe and in this month there are fewer drownings than in any other months of the year. There is an increase in February, and the winter peak is reached in March. March is time of "bendigoes." It is a rare sport to see who can skate the closest to a hole of open water. It is also a very dangerous sport and likely to end in disaster.

Such are the figures. A great many don'ts are implied in them. Don't dive into water until you know how deep it is—you may decide to go wading instead. Don't go swimming until two hours after eating.

Above all things, learn how to swim. It will increase your enjoyment of the water many times. And learn how to resuscitate a person apparently drowned. You may get this information in the form of a leaflet if you will write to the Connecticut state department of health, Hartford, or in care of this station, WTIC.

FOUR PART DIVISION IN FARRINGTON ESTATE

Two cousins of the late Miss Lois E. Farrington, who took an appeal from the probate of her will, secured a half and half division of the estate with other beneficiaries named in the will, as is shown by the filing of the final administration account this week in the Norwich probate court.

The final accounts were filed in the estates of Lois Farrington and Mary E. Farrington and their brother, William C. Farrington, all of whom lived for many years at 34 Oneco street, the first named being the last to die. Mary Farrington left an estate of $15,665.78 and William an estate of $7,277.47, both being merged in the estate of Lois Farrington, which inventories $81,033.48.

Six days before her death on March 25, 1929, Lois Farrington signed a will by her mark, leaving her entire estate to Mrs. Alice F. Taft and Mrs. Charlotte C. Dowsett of this city. This will was contested by two cousins of Lois Farrington, who were Clarence M. and Harvey E. Farrington of Walpole, Mass., for whom Attorney Hibberd R. Attorney Earl Mathewson was administrator of the estates of Mary E. and William C. Farrington, while he and Charles A. Dowsett were administrators of the Lois Farrington estate.

REJECTS OVERTURES FOR COMPROMISE IN AUTOMOBILE TRESPASS CASE

Overtures towards an adjustment in the Church street automobile trespass case brought by Attorney William H. Shields against John F. Donahue and his sister, Mrs. Hannah T. Sullivan, have been rejected by Mr. Shields, according to his statement Thursday night, in which he declared that he proposed to see the matter through to a finish and make it a regular test case no matter where it might lead.

By furnishing a bond for $1000, with Simon Mandell as surety, Mr. Donahue and his sister are now in possession again of the Buick automobile, registration 3411, which was attached and seized last Tuesday by Deputy Sheriff George Hoxie, and Mr. Shields observed that it was parked Thursday on Church street, not however in front of the Shields property but about 40 feet farther along the street to the west.

As another move in the suit, Attorney Shields has now had an attachment placed on the house and land on Goldberg avenue, which is owned and occupied by the defendants, who have secured Attorney Josiah Greenstein as their counsel. The case will now go on the superior court docket and will take its turn for trial when the superior court comes in in September.

Bringing of the suit, the first of its kind on record, has aroused state-wide interest as the questions involved in it are of wide reaching application and even of nation-wide importance. Primarily Attorney Shields bases his suit upon the claim that the long, continuous, persistent and defiant parking of the car in front of his property and against his protest has constituted a nuisance and he declares that the law gives him the right to abate such a nuisance, even to the extent of having the car carted off to the city dump if he had chosen so to do.

Not only has this claimed nuisance been perpetrated in front of his Church street property, says Mr. Shields, but actually on his property, as the car has stood between the curb line and the center of the street which area Mr. Shields claims, is his property as this right of the property owner in the highway is established by old English law.

Mr. Shields claims that the municipality can give no right for a six hour parking on a person's land, which land in this case is the street area between the curb and the center of the street, and in extension of this idea he raises the question whether property owners before whose place theatre patrons and church attendants are wont to leave their automobiles for long periods of time might not raise the same objection and take the same action as he has done in the Church street case.

CUTS $30,000 FROM SHANNON BLDG. ASSESSMENT

An appeal taken to the superior court by the Shannon Building corporation from the grand list assessment of $297,570 has been settled by an agreement which cuts the assessment $30,000, making it $267,570. A stipulation to that effect was filed Thursday with Clerk John H. Walker of the superior court.

The company put the property which it owns in the grand list for $250,000, but when the assessors raised it to $297,570 which the board of relief refused to change, the appeal was taken. The property in question is the Shannon building and annex at 133-191 Main street and 4-10 Shetucket street.

The stipulation was signed by Attorney Thomas M. Shields, counsel for the appellant company, and by Town Counsel H. H. Pettis and Corporation Counsel E. W. Perkins, for the town and city respectively.

DON MOE ELIMINATED IN WESTERN AMATEUR GOLF

By PAUL MICKELSON,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

CHICAGO, July 24—(AP)—Don Moe of Portland, Oregon, wearied by his long golfing wars in England, went down fighting today in his struggle to defend his western amateur golf championship over the narrow fairways and pitfalls of the Beverly Country club course.

The smiling champion and Walker cup star fell before another fighting youth, Johnny Lehman of Chicago, one up after their quarter final battle had extended to the thirty-seventh green. The result forged another chain of jinxes that has followed champions of the western amateur not since 1923 has a title holder retained his crown.

A 36-foot putt, roaming down a treacherous course, accomplished the conquest for Lehman, who brought the big ten championship to Purdue just three years ago. Going to the 37th green both he and Moe were equidistant from the cup. Johnny putted first and dropped it. The fading champion also tried but his ball stopped two feet short of the cup and it was all over.

Three other sharpshooters, T. Phillip Perkins, lately of King George's golfing forces; Ira Couch of Chicago and Bob McCrary, trans-Mississippi champion from Des Moines, also reached the semi-final round but it was T. Phillip himself who gave the galleryites their next biggest thrill. Four down at the end of the 18-hole morning round, the bespectacled Briton who now resides in New York, came back with par-breaking golf to overtake Jack Westland, Chicago district champion, and then defeat him two and one.

He didn't have to finish out on the final green of the round but he kept on going to post a startling 69, two under par, for the exceptionally rugged course. The mark tied the course record but it was not accepted as such because of a few conceded putts.

His remarkable come-back and par-fracturing game was the best of the day and made him the one big favorite to win the championship. He meets Lehman tomorrow in the upper bracket's 36 hole match battle. McCrary and Couch clash in the lower field.

PELOQUIN AND LAVIGNE MATCHED FOR SHYMA SHOW

Matchmaker Leo P. Flynn of the Shyma Boxing club completed arrangements for what is expected to be one of the drawing cards for the coming boxing show of the club when he signed Rene Peloquin of Danielson and Young Lavigne of New London for one of the three star bouts. This match has been under consideration for several months but the boys couldn't seem to get together for one reason or another. Lavigne claimed that Peloquin would come in too heavy for him and declared he wouldn't give away five or six pounds to anyone. Peloquin on the other hand claimed that if he tried to make Lavigne's weight it would take so much out of him that his fighting ability would be impaired. However this has been overcome as Peloquin has agreed to make 122 pounds for Lavigne who is now willing to spot the Danielson boy a couple of pounds.

The fans have been clamoring for this bout as both the boys are popular and each has a large following. There is very little to compare them by as neither has fought an opponent that the other has. They have both performed well in local rings and are evenly matched.

Vic Darr has been signed for a six-rounder but his opponent has not yet been picked.

U. S. POULTRY INCOME TOPS BILLION A YEAR

WASHINGTON (AP)—An annual income of more than $1,000,000,000 now is produced by the nation's poultry industry, representing 10 per cent of the total farm income.

A survey of the department of agriculture shows this country to be the home of one-third of the world's poultry population.

There are more than 6,000,000 separate flocks in the United States, including about 442,000,000 chickens.

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Florida's newest fishing concern, which is taking an average of 100 seven-foot sharks a day off the keys, is emulating the pork packing industry in using "everything but the squeal."

Leather in several grades is made from the hides; materials for the backs of hair brushes and hand mirrors is manufactured from the shagree, or outside "armor"; pressed oil, rich in vitamins, is taken from the livers; the fins are dried and shipped to the orient as a table delicacy; the eyes are made into artificial pearls; the backbone turns in walking canes and the rest of the shark becomes fertilizer.

CANCER RESEARCH TURNS TO EFFECTS OF PRESSURE

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)—Cancer research at the University of California medical school will be directed in the near future to determination of effects of temperature and low pressure on malignant growths.

This study is indicated in a preliminary report by Prof. E. S. Sundstroem and his research associate. They report that cancer disappeared in rats in low pressure oxygen tanks. The rats were in the tanks three to six weeks.

GEOLOGIST EXPLAINS MEXICO'S ODD SHAPE

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Great horizontal earth movements are held responsible for the shape of Mexico, in a report to the Southwestern division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Charles Laurence Baker, Houston geologist, says these movements produced a wedge-shaped area at the southern end of North America, arched up the interior into the present shape and depressed both the Pacific and Gulf of Mexico margins below sea level.

CORN YIELDS DON'T DROP WHEN LEGUMES ARE USED

AUBURN, Ala. (AP)—The same field will produce the same yield of corn 34 years in succession, provided winter legumes are grown between corn crops, agronomists at Alabama Polytechnic Institute have found.

On the other hand, there was data to show that without legumes corn yields declined more than 50 per cent over the same period. Cotton was found to react similarly.

Yields of cotton and corn in a three-year rotation with legumes were found four times as great as those in the same rotation without legumes.

Pile Sufferers

End Your Misery Without Salves or Cutting

The cause is internal—bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel. The veins are flabby—the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles an internal medicine must be used to heal and strengthen the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, a specialist, after years of study discovered a real internal Pile remedy. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1000 patients, with the marvelous record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist.

Don't waste time on external remedies or think of the pain and expense of an operation. Get a package of HEM-ROID from Lee & Osgood with their guarantee of moneyback if it does not end all Pile misery.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

CALF LIKES SWEET FOOD, BUT DOESN'T GAIN ON IT

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Feeding experiments at the University of Minnesota's college of agriculture tend to show it doesn't pay to cater to a calf's sweet tooth.

Using molasses in grain mixtures fed to calves, it was found they appeared to relish the food, but it brought no greater gains in weight than regular diets—without the expense of sweetness.

VETERAN PRO LEADS FIELD IN CANADIAN OPEN

ANCASTER, Ont., July 24—(AP)—A canny veteran of close to 50, Nical Thompson, Sr., used his knowledge of the course to good advantage today to set the pace for the best professionals of Canada and the United States in the opening round of the Canadian open golf championwich at the Hamilton Country club.

Playing on his home course, the veteran Canadian pro shot a brilliant 66, equalling the course record, in the first 18-hole round to lead Al Watrous, Detroit pro, by two strokes. In a four-way tie for third place at 69 were four players from the United States, Leo Diegel, the defending champion; Ed Dudley of Wilmington, Del. Tony Manero of Elmsford, N. Y., and Charles Lacey, the English pro at the Pine Valley club in Pennsylvania.

Walter Hagen went around with Charlie Murray, veteran of the Royal Montreal club', and the largest gallery of the day saw them each travel the course in 70 strokes, as did MacDonald Smith of New York and J. R. Heaney of Rochester, N. Y., "Long Jim" Barnes of New York, George Von Elm of Detroit and Fred M. Lyon of Toronto, turned in 71s, the latter climaxing a steady round with a sensational eagle two at the home hole where he holed out with an iron from 200 yards off the green. Lyon's father, the famous George S. Lyon who has won the Canadian amateur title eight times, scored a 78 today despite his 72 years.

DUWELLS NOSE OUT ELKS BY SINGLE RUN

In one of the best contests ever witnessed at the Duwell field in the Junior Twilight league this season, the Duwells won a one to nothing victory over the Elks. By virtue of the Elks being defeated last night the Rotary team now holds, undisputed, the top-notch place in the league standing. The Elks and Duwells are now in a tie for second place.

Only three hits were recorded in favor of the Duwell team and on two of these three hits coming in the 2nd inning, the Duwells managed to secure their lone tally. With Lavarge on the mound for the Elks, Chick, the first Duwell batter to face him smashed out a nice two bagger that was just within the right field foul line. Stepanek won his own game when he followed Chick and also hit out a long drive to right field on which Chick scored.

DeBarros, the next player, grounded out to the first baseman and Stepanek roosted on second. Solonski secured a free pass to first and following a conference between Manager Jackie Wilson and Coach Bamber, Fuller was sent in to relieve Lavarge. Sydlo, the first man to face Fuller was hit on the second ball and this filled the bases. Fuller, however, a masterful pitcher, with plenty of stuff, managed to strike out Sadkusky for the second out of the inning. With the bases full, Zavistoski smashed out a long fly to left field which was pulled down in fine shape by Guillotte, thus terminating the Duwell rally and shutting off further scoring. The Duwells did not seriously threaten from then on.

Only one hit was recorded against Fuller in the four and one-half innings that he was on the mound for the Elks, this lone hit coming in the final stanza. Only sixteen Duwell players faced Fuller. In the third inning, Fuller struck out three Duwell players on ten pitched balls.

The Elks played good ball, but their inopportune hitting failed to bring in the necessary run to tie or runs to win the game. The Elks threatened to score in the fifth stanza after two men were out. Ulewich reached first after the third baseman had let an apparently easy grounder get through him. The runner stole second. Dugas, the next batter, sent a grounder to the infield and Ulewich attempted to come home. He was caught at home plate. When Umpire Gerald Burke called Ulewich out, there was some fault to find but the trouble blew over quickly. The Elks in the seventh inning made a last stand to win the game. Fritz, the first batter beat out a nice bunt. He was stealing second when Gallivan, upon orders of the coach, attempted to bunt also. It proved to be a small pop fly and Kos, the Duwell catcher, caught it and doubled Fritz at first. Fuller got on by a hit and he went to second when Ulewich walked. The game ended when Dugas flied out to Chick.

Stepanek was nicked for six hits, which he managed to keep well scattered. With one exception he was given fine support. Stepanek stopped several hot liners that resulted in several outs and the termination of what looked like a rally upon the part of the Elks. In the seven innings, only 25 men faced Stepanek. The score:

Duwells .. .. 0 1 0 0 0 0 x—1

Two base hits, Chick, Ulewick, Bamber.

PLAINFIELD BEATS MOOSUP IN SPECTACULAR BATTLE

MOOSUP, July 24—Plainfield defeated Moosup on the home grounds this evening 7 to 4 in one of the most exciting games of the season in the Eastern Conn. Twilight league before a crowd of over 1000. Cotnoir started the game with a short single to left, Quillette sacrificing him to second and then Beausoliel, Dissinger, Marriott and Mette singled to score four runs. Singles by Dissinger Pechie and Marriott in the third netted Plainfield two more runs and in the fourth inning singles by Quillette Beausoliel and Dissinger were responsible for the final run.

Hits by Stevens, Frechette, Allard and Foisey accounted for Moosup's two runs in the first. Three bases on balls by Clocher and an error by him gave another run in the second. Tetro opened Moosup's third inning with a two bagger and scored Moosup's final run on Silvia's single. The game was played under a dark sky and Moosup was guilty of stalling for time with the score 7 to 3 against them in the fourth. Capt. Frechette was ordered out of the game. Plainfield's three batters in the fifth deliberately struck out to hurry the game along. After the game there was a riot which included the spectators, players and umpires. Each team has now won three games Plainfield having shut out Moosup in two previous games while Moosup has won by the score of 5 to 3, 4 to 3, and 4 to 1. The teams play Friday night at Plainfield with Marriott pitching for Plainfield and Eno will start for Moosup. The score:

Two base hit, Tetro.

FISK CLUB BEATS JARVIS' ALL STARS IN CLOSE GAME

JEWETT CITY, July 24— Jarvis' All Stars lost to the Fisk team in a closely contested twilight game this evening by the score of 3 to 2. Sawicki starred with the stick for the tiremakers. Leo Jarvis, the Star's pitcher, was hit in the right arm by a pitched ball and was relieved on the mound by his brother, Lloyd, in the fourth inning.

Two base hits, S. Derda, Sawicki. Three base hit, Lefty.

Can you imagine some people always getting a kick out of reading about somebody else but when it's about themselves they get all hot and bothered.

Now a certain man in our good little town calls me up the other night and wants me to give a write up about a friend of his who had a party at the coach. Now that's all right for him but I'm the one who gets the blame.

The fellow who called up says, "Now you give this friend of mine a nice write-up about the party he gave for a few friends of his the other Sunday afternoon. Be sure and mention something about the Striped Adder, that's the name of the cottage, so's people will know who it is. And be sure and tell about how he wouldn't let his wife or any of the other women folks help with the cooking because he wanted to do it all himself. Tell about the big bungalow apron he wore and how he spilled chowder all over it." You might head the story up "Doings at the Striped Adder by the Man With the Wooden Teeth."

Then he goes on to tell how nobody knew what they was eating until somebody found a label in their plate that said "Choice Clam Chowder" and then they knew it was clam chowder. He says the meal was all right except that there was sand in the sugar and a lot of other stuff that didn't amount to much.

No, sir, you don't catch me giving write-ups on things like that and taking all the blame. Any man what will volunteer to serve a meal to a lot of critical housewives shouldn't get no razzing but should be given some kind of a medal, leather or otherwise. He's a hero in my opinion. As for letting a little thing like a label get in the chowder, that ain't nothing. They should have been thankful the whole can wasn't there. And as for the remark about wooden teeth I don't get it at all. I never heard of them before but I do know some people who make some realistic model houses to give to their friends.

Nope, I'm very sorry but I couldn't write-up that party, John, I know the fellow and I wouldn't write anything to embarass him for the world.

LINDSTROM'S HOMER WINS SHORT GAME FOR GIANTS

NEW YORK, July 24—(AP)—A home run by Fred Lindstrom, some fine pitching by Carl Hubbell and a timely storm enabled the Giants to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 1 to 0, today in the six inning opening game of their series.

Lindstrom clouted his homer in the first inning for the game's only tally and for the next five frames, Remy Kremer had the Giants helpless. Hubbell allowed only one hit and fanned five in his six innings. He weakened in the seventh and had filled the bases when the darkness preceding the rain forced a halt in the action.

Good fielding on both sides prevented scoring. Each team made two double plays while Wally Roettger halted what looked like a Pittsburgh score with a fine catch of Suhr's long drive when Bartell was on second.

New York ....1 0 0 0 0 x—1

BROOKLYN, July 24—(AP)—Brooklyn clung to first place today by winning the shortened second game of a double header from Cincinnati, 3 to 0, after the Reds had taken the first, 4 to 3.

The second game started with the Brooklyn runs in the first inning and a storm approaching. After considerable stalling by both sides, the required 4 1-2 innings were completed and the Robins opened fire on Frey for seven more runs in the fifth while Phelps allowed only three hits and no runs in the entire game. The game was called in the first half of the sixth on account of rain.

Cincinnati drove Vance from the mound early in the first game and held off the late Robins rallies. Brooklyn failed to put over the tying run when they had chances in the eighth and ninth innings. Campbell forced Boone to hit into a double play on the first occasion and Ash struck out Flowers and retired Frederick on a line drive to Heilmann in the final frame.

(Second Game.)

(z) Ran for Wright in 5th.

RICE PITCHES GREAT GAME TO BLANK POWERMEN

The Robertson Paper Box Co. blanked the Eastern Connecticut Power Co. at the Gair diamond at Uncasville Thursday evening by a score of 7 to 0. This is the first time this season that the Boxmakers were able to turn the tables on the fast Power team, who hold second place in the league and, by winning this game, the Boxmakers kept the Powermen one game and a half away from the league-leading Owls.

Rice pitched great ball for the Boxmakers, allowing only five scattered safeties and striking out seven batters. Sarayusa led the Boxmakers in hitting with two singles. Pete Moroskey was the leading sticker for the Powermen with a triple and a single. Killeen, for the Powermen, and Sisson for the Boxmakers, both played wonderful ball in the field, making seemingly impossible catches.

Score:

Three base hit, P. Moroskey.

FRENCH TENNIS ENTHUSIASTS ARE CONFIDENT OF RETAINING DAVIS CUP

PARIS, July 24—(AP)—French tennis fans openly boasted tonight while the native officials agreed with them in less boisterous fashion that the luck of the draw bids fair to bring France two victories in the opening pair of singles matches of the challenge round for the Davis cup Friday afternoon.

Big Bill Tilden, ace of the United States team, drew Jean Borotra, the bounding Basque, for the opening match which will start on the courts at the Roland Garros stadium at 2.15 p. m. George Lott, Chicago youth who will help the American veteran with the singles burden, faces Henri Cochet, world ranking star, in the second match at 5 p. m. The doubles teams, as yet unnamed, will clash on Saturday with the final singles, Lott against Borotra and Tilden against Cochet, on Sunday afternoon.

While the French are bubbling over with optimism, the American colony feels sure that Tilden's oft proven supremacy over Borotra—seven consecutive victories on grass and hard courts—will be shown again tomorrow, giving the challengers an even break in victories for the opening day. No one, either French or American, appears to grant Lott a chance against Cochet.

Four out of five Frenchmen believe that Tilden's spell over Borotra will be broken tomorrow. They point for support to the bounding one's duel with the top ranking American at Wimbledon where Borotra evened the count in sets at 2-all and led in the fifth set four games to two without the advantage of the ten minute rest which he will get tomorrow if the match goes beyond three sets. Tilden pulled that battle out of the fire but the French do not believe that he can do it again.

Tilden appears to feel heavily the responsibility of his eleventh hour selection as a member of the American Davis cup squad. Likewise the morale of the younger members of the team seems hardly to have been improved by the selection of Tilden. Although they openly welcomed Big Bill into the fold the youngsters seem to feel that the United States should sink or swim with the youthful element in the 1930 play.

Wilmer Allison, partner of John Van Ryn in America's first string doubles combination, made a particularly poor showing in practice today and the shoddy work of the young Texas buoyed the French up to the pitch where they no longer are willing to concede the doubles victory to the United States. They likely will give Jacques Brugnon and Christian Boussus. The French second string doubles pair, order to go right out in an attempt to wipe up the courts with the Wimbledon and American Davis cup champions.

Tilden and Lott again played three hard sets against each other in today's practice and Tilden once more outclassed the Chicago boy.

Cochet played five sets against Boussus and the French professional, Martin Plaa. Henri, at the top of his form, reeled off 30 games against the youngster and professional who shared the court together and could only win seven games. The only serene player on the courts was Cochet and he seemed blissfully unconscious of what was at stake either for France or for himself. He seems likely to electrify the crowded stands tomorrow with a complete reversal of the form that brought about his defeat at Wimbledon.

In the meantime the box office cash registers clicked along merrily. The advance sale already has passed the million mark point, breaking all records since the cup came back to France in 1927.

ROOKIE PITCHER GIVES YANKEES PLENTY OF TROUBLE

DETROIT, July 24—(AP)—Guy Cantrell, who came to Detroit from Toronto this week, made his first American league start today and gave the New York Yankees a great battle before succumbing, 5 to 2.

Cantrell allowed eight hits, one of them a drive high into the bleachers in right center by Babe Ruth for his 36th home run of the season, putting him five homers and 17 days ahead of his 1927 record, when he set his great mark. The Babe had only 21 on July 24 and did not make No. 36 until August 16.

Roy Sherid of the Yankees did his best pitching with men on bases. He allowed only seven hits but often was forced to bear down as the Tigers had runners on the sacks in every inning. Sherid received good support while Detroit errors allowed two Yankee runs to score.

(z) Batted for Cantrell in 9th.

Two base hits, Johnson, Stone, Dickey. Home run, Ruth.

Webb pounded out a home run, double and two singles for a perfect day at bat, and batted in three runs. For the Browns Kress carried the heavy stick, making three hits in four times up.

Russell, who went the route for the Red Sox, was effective in the pinches, and held off a threatened rally in the ninth when the Browns scored two runs.

A victory tomorrow for Boston will send St. Louis into the cellar, the two teams exchanging places.

CUBS TAKE WEIRD GAME FROM PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, July 24—(AP)—The Cubs defeated the Phils today 19 to 15 in a wild and wooly game. Each team made 17 hits, but the Cubs took advantage of the early Philly pitchers to pile up a 13 to 3 lead in the first three innings. In the eighth the Phillies scored seven runs but fell three short of tying the count.

There were many arguments through out the battle and Umpire Jorda sent Klein, Hurst and Thompson to the club house at the end of the eighth inning.

HAFEY HITS TWO HOMERS BUT CARDS ARE NOSED OUT

BOSTON, July 24—(AP)—Despite the heroic efforts of Chick Hafey, St. Louis Cardinal left fielder, who hit in two home runs, a double and a single in four trips to the plate, Bobby Smith pitched the Boston Braves to a 5 to 4 win over the visitors today in the first game of the current series, with the westerners.

Hafey drove in three of the visitors' four runs. His two homers brought his four bagger total to 14 for the season. Berger, sensational Braves' recruit was another who had a perfect day at bat. His 27th home run of the season which came in the first off Haines brought Maranville in ahead of him. Haines was credited with the loss of the game. Score:

(z) Batted for Haines in 5th.

(zz) Batted for Bell in 7th.

(zzz) Batted for Grabowski in 9th.

EAST MEETS WEST IN ESSEX TENNIS FINALS

MANCHESTER, Mass., July 24—(AP)—An East-West final for the Essex Country club's invitation tennis tournament which attracted 15 of America's top-ranking twenty, resulted today when Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, and Marjorie Gladman of Santa Monica, Cal., won the semi-final matches.

Miss Morrill took but a half hour to overwhelm Dorothy Weisel, the Californian champion, 6-0, 6-2, and avenge the setback she received from the Sacramento girl last week at Longwood. Miss Gladman gained the championship round by again defeating Josephine Cruickshank, her neighbor from Santa Ana, 1-6, 6-4, 6-1, in a match much closer than the score indicates.

ROYALS TROUNCE ITALIANS, 7 TO 2

Minus their star hurler, Lefty Lucier, the Italians took the field against the Royals last night and were trounced by a 7 to 2 score. The Parkmen, by virtue of two big innings, sewed up and stowed away a verdict before the contest was three innings old. After counting twice in the second, they ran wild in the third, tallying five times on six hits and two Italian errors. In this frame the Royals drove Rabbitt Gauthier to cover with a barrage of singles.

Alex Arico, a first baseman by trade, was drafted for the Italian mound duty and did a good job of the work. He went into the box after all of the Royal counters had been recorded and held the opposition to a single hit in three and a third innings. In the meanwhile he whiffed four of the Royals.

Eddie Nevins, youthful Greeneville merchant, went the entire distance for the winners and pitched nice ball. He gave but four scattered bingles and fanned five. Eddie also worked nicely on the offense, connecting twice in as many attempts. Jab Burns and Arico also got two clean swipes. The fielding feature was provided by Ralph Bargnesi, Italian centerfielder. In the third he backed up against the fire escapes on the manual training building and pulled down Kozlersky's hit.

The score:

Two base hits, Burns, P. Tomback.

Ideals Vs. Smokers Tonight

A duel to determine which club shall have possession of the City league cellar will be provided by the Smoke Shop and Ideal teams at the campus tonight. At the present the Smokers are the tenants with 6 defeats and a single win, but the Ideals are not far from the bottom of the ladder. The Servicemen have won 2 and lost 6.

Despite the fact that they are trailing the pack, both clubs have strong lineups and are really capable of making better showings than they have to date.

The Ideals snapped out of their slump Wednesday and provided the biggest upset of the season, defeating the Citizens 4 to 3 in an extra inning game. Bernard, Ideal pilot, is confident that his outfit is through losing ball games and predicts a long string of wins for the remainder of the season. The Smokers are equally as confident that they are through losing.

Gero or Magnan will do the Smoke Shop hurling and either Buck Shahan or Pepin will toe the Ideal rubber.

Canadian Tennis

TORONTO, Ont., July 24—(AP)—G. Lyttleton, elongated Irish tennis star, advanced in the Canadian tennis championship tournament today with the straight set defeat of C. W. Aikman of Montreal. The score was 8-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Slow to start the Irishman increased his pace after losing the first four games and thereafter Aikman was strictly on the defensive. Rogers varied deep drives with soft drop shots.

RETAIL MERCHANTS ENJOY OUTING AT SMITH COTTAGE

WESTERLY, July 24. — Nearly fifty members and guests of the Westerly and Pawcatuck Retail Merchants association enjoyed the hospitality of Water Commissioner Farquhar Smith at a full-fledged Rhode Island clambake held on Thursday afternoon and evening at his camp on the shore of Charlestown pond. Besides the usual clams, lobsters, etc., there were added the viands of real bluefish, sweet potatoes and green corn, all prepared by Chef Henry A. Stahle and served by Commissioner Smith and his able assistants.

In charge of President James McCormick of the local retailers, a short business session was held. Many members improved the opportunity by arriving at the pond early enough in the afternoon to enjoy a swim in the salt water before indulging in the bake.

Coast Guard Has Practice Row

Members of the crew of the Watch Hill Coast Guard station, Capt. George W. Streeter, "skipper," held their first practice row on Thursday morning in their eight-oared barge on the waters of Little Narragansett bay and made a very creditable showing for the first day's practice. The drill was in preparation for the Watch Hill Coast Guard's entry in the coast guard races to be held in New London in the near future. Threatening weather caused the first day's practice to end early and their craft was brought alongside the wharf of the Watch Hill Yacht club and the long oars house in the Watch Hill fire station on Bay street just before the drenching downpour of rain began.

A former superintendent of the Westerly Light and Power company, a predecessor of the present South County Public Service company, Francis S. Thayer of Woonsocket, R. I., was among the last passengers to ride in the last electric (or trolley) car leaving the Rhode Island city on the Providence line last Thursday morning.

Success has crowned the efforts of the newly organized chamber of commerce. Dr. John Champlin, Sr., president, in having the west-bound evening express, known as Train No. 27 on the New Haven railroad, and 183 on the Pennsylvania system, in having it again restored to a Westerly station stop. On the Penn. system the train is also known as The St. Louisian.

According to the new schedule Train 27, now leaving Boston at 4:30, daylight saving time, for New York will leave at 4:25 p. m., Providence 5:30 p. m. and will make a regular daily stop at Westerly at 6:22 p. m.

From Westerly the train will continue to operate on the present schedule to New London and New York, being due at the Grand Central station at 9:52 p. m.

Other trains of local interest effected by the new time-table are Train 41, leaving Boston at 5:10 p. m., Sundays only for New York, which will be scheduled three of five minutes later from Wickford Junction to New York.

Train No. 40, leaving New Haven at 6:29 a. m., Sunday only, for Providence, and Boston, will have schedule 8 to 10 minutes later New London to Providence, due 9:32 a. m., due Boston 10:50 a. m.

The sudden death of Charles L. Kenyon of Wyoming, R. I., occurred from heart trouble at his home Wednesday at 10 o'clock. He was enjoying good health up to the time of his death which came as a shock to his relatives and friends.

Born in Hopkinton, September 10, 1868, the son of David R. and Sarah Worden Kenyon, the deceased lived in that vicinity practically all his life. He was treasurer of the Howe Waste and Packing company of Taunton, Mass. He was a member of the Westerly Order of Elks. His wife died in 1918.

He leaves a son, Albert C. Kenyon of Taunton, manager of the Howe Waste and Packing company, and a daughter, Mrs. Doris Dow of Wyoming and three grandchildren.

Annual clambake and outing plans being perfected for that yearly event of Westerly lodge, No. 678, B. P. O. Elks, which will be held Sunday at the Eldredge house, Quonochontaug, were made at the regular meeting of the organization held last evening.

Other routine business was transacted, and a preliminary report from the charity carnival committee was received.

The committee named to have charge of the clambake was as follows: James MacKnight, L. C. Purtill, Thomas Shea, Norman C. Church and John L. Twomey.

Among Westerly Italian families with relatives in the quake-stricken zone of Italy is that of F. Samuel Nardone and there undoubtedly are a number of other families, the members of which in this town were born right in the very territory where the quake has done the most damage. Last year, a number from Westerly visited the scenes of their childhood there, but fortunately this year, as far as is known, there are none from here in the ill-fated territory.

With hundreds of their relatives in danger, the Westerly families are avidly reading every account of the catastrophe. As yet no word has reached here from relatives there and it is not yet known whether any of the quake victims are known by Westerly residents.

Mrs. Myra E. Greene, wife of Stanton S. Greene, of Pawcatuck, is a visitor in Northfield, Mass. this week, convalescing from recent illness.

Frederick O. Lanphear and Harry E. Langworthy were Westerly business callers in Boston on Wednesday going on the New England express.

Miss Marion M. Kelsey and Miss Mildred Brackley, R. N., both of Natic, Mass., returning from a two weeks' motor vacation trip in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, after being guests of Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Smith in Westerly, left Thursday for Miss Kelsey's home in Amherst, Mass.

Oscar Crepeau, having been the guest for several days of Oliver R. Portlance in Westerly, returned on Wednesday night to his home in Fall River, Mass.

David McG. Newall, after a business visit the past week in Washington, D. C., and in Concord, N. H., was a caller in Westerly on Thursday, returning to his home in New York.

Arnold H. Burdick, who has been confined to his Spring street home for eleven weeks by illness, was able to be down town in Westerly for the first time the first of the week.

Directors of the South County Public Service company of Westerly enjoyed a dinner on Wednesday evening at Stoneridge Manor Inn, off the Westerly-New London road.

The fourth of the series of open air band concerts was rendered on Thursday evening from the band stand in Wilcox park, when the program was greatly enjoyed by the many present.

William Brian, for a number of years chauffeur with the Aldrich family in Providence, has entered the employ of the Hoxie Taxi company.

Charles N. Alexander of Boston, former proprietor of the Westerly Food shop, is the Boston guest of Westerly relatives and friends.

Dr. Thomas E. Robinson was a Westerly business caller with friends in Wickford, R. I., the first of the week.

While the business center of Westerly was visited on Thursday morning by only a few spatters of rain at 10:45 a. m. at Watch Hill there was a drenching downpour of rain which flooded streets and gutters.

Members of the church school of Grace Methodist church, Rev. Henry C. Buter, pastor, enjoyed their annual picnic and outing on Thursday afternoon and evening at Weekapaug Dunnes.

GALES FERRY

PUBLIC LIBRARY ISSUED TOTAL OF 4614 BOOKS IN YEAR

When the annual meeting of Gales Ferry Public library was held at the Country club, Monday evening, the president, Miss Grace E. Povey, presided. The secretary, Mrs. Mary C. Watrous, read the minutes of the last meeting. The report of the treasurer, D. R. Povey for the year was read by Walter M. Buckingham. The librarian, Miss Grace E. Povey, read her report and this was given as usual for publication.

To the Gales Ferry Free Public library association—Gentlemen:

It is my pleasure to present the tenth annual report of the work of the Gales Ferry Free Public library for the year ending July 1, 1930.

The survey of the work shows that the library is a living factor in the community, shows, also, a considerable increase in the activities of the readers. 4,614 volumes were issued for home use. This is an increase of 512 volumes over that of last year.

It is interesting to look back to the first year's statistics and find, there were circulated 2,350 volumes, showing an increase, in the ten years of 2,264 volumes. This fact is a proof of the appreciation of the library by the community.

The total number of volumes in the library is 3,101. 214 volumes were added during the year, 47 by purchase, 18 were our state grant, and 149 were gifts. With the fifty dollars voted by the association for new books we were able to purchase 41 volumes.

It has been said, "that the public library is a brother to the schoolhouse," therefore in our purchasing of books we have tried to prove this by providing books which will help the teachers in their work with the children, also those that will interest the child.

The Audubon bird charts have been displayed in the children's section. Some of the back numbers of the children's magazines have been sent to the school in the Stoddard district.

During the year two books were bound; seven were destroyed because of contagious disease. A number of books, discarded because of missing pages, others because they were beyond mending, were with a lot of old magazines sold. From our Silver Tea of July 17, 1930, we received $48.55. Seventy-five guests were present, showing that the popularity of this afternoon increases each year. The sale of candy at the community fair in August 1929 was very successful.

Among the gifts to the library is a revolving bookcase from Rev. and Mrs. Critchlow, and sums of money from different friends.

Louise and Richard Howard, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. S. Crandall, Mrs. Nelson Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wightman and family, Mrs. Charles Comstock, Mrs. Josephine Birch, Miss Katherine Kent, George Frost, Lucille Garren, Harold Bayliss, Miss Adelaide R. Butts, Mrs. Jerome Greer, Mrs. Henry Hurlbutt, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Delphine Fish, Miss Ruth Burnham, Mrs. Bertha Hoyt, Enid Latimer, Margaret Parker, Bernice Coman, and others, who, in leaving their gifts did not leave their names. Among the list are several children who have given some of their own books. Their kindness in sharing with the other children what they themselves have enjoyed shows a very generous spirit.

Many thanks are due those who have acted as attendants at the library. If it were not for their willingness to give their time we would not be able to have the library. These willing helpers for the library year 1929-1930 were:

Mrs. Joseph DeRusha, Miss Caroline B. Freeman, Mrs. Delphine Fish, Mrs. Alton Stoddard, Mrs. B. F. S. Crandall, Miss Adelina S. Povey, Mrs. Nelson Parker, Mrs. Bertha Hoyt, Mrs. Andrew Miller, Mrs. Everett Noyes, Mrs. A. S. Bush, Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt, Mrs. Arthur Faford, Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham, Mrs. J. Edmund Norman, Mrs. Gertrude B. Latimer, Mrs. Alton Chapman, Mrs. Josephine Birch, Miss Laura Perkins, Frank Davis.

A note of appreciation of our courtesy in choosing books, for her, was received from one of the summer residents, who, being unable to walk to the library had to send her small daughter.

During the year the librarian has made an author, subject, and title card catalog of the adult books of fiction and non-fiction. This has meant the typing of nearly three thousand cards. The juvenile books will be cataloged during this coming winter.

In looking back upon another twelve months we are convinced that as the year closes our library finds itself in closer touch with our people, stronger in helpfulness and eager to do as much as possible with our limited means for the village it serves. All the officers were re-elected: President, Miss Grace E. Povey; vice president, Judge Billings F. S. Crandall; secretary, Mrs Mary C. Watrous; treasurer, D. R. Povey. Members of the board of directors, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham and Mrs. Dudley C. Perkins, were reelected for three years. years.

On report that the library building needed painting, the building committee was empowered to attend to the matter. It was voted to expend $50 for books. Mrs. Povey explained the system of procedure in cataloging the books at the library. A meeting of the board of directors followed adjournment, Vice President Crandall presiding. Miss Grace E Povey was re-elected librarian. Fletcher Wilson was elected to the board of directors for two years to fill a vacancy caused by the removal from town of Stephen H Norman.

Sage took it home, but it died in two days. Examination revealed a gold ring around its neck, which had choked it to death. The ring was completely covered by the feathers. After it had been removed and cleared the lettering "M. G. H. to L. S. W." was found inside. It is supposed the mother bird picked up the ring after it had been lost and when the older bird attempted to feed its young the ring slipped over the head, eventually causing death by starvation.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

THE GOLDEN RULE IN FARMING

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Farmer Randall has a good corn farm and has been accustomed to raise good and profitable crops of the cereal, every year.

But, last spring, when planting time came round, Farmer Randall lay helpless in his bed, just beginning to convalesce from an attack of pneumonia. His fever had gone. But his strength had not returned. The prospect of a corn crop this year seemed utterly hopeless, as he had no boys to step into his shoes and the country-wide impossibility of securing adequate hired help made that equally out of the question. Farmer Randall was worried as well as sick. There were the expenses of a long illness to be paid, as well as the taxes, insurance, etc., and he could do nothing to earn the money. Summer was at the threshold; nature stood ready to do her part; but he could only turn from side to side on his bed and worry, worry, worry.

When the sun set, that day, they had plowed, harrowed, marked and planted 45 acres of corn.

After which, Farmer Randall was told about it and was given to understand that, if he hadn't recovered sufficiently to do the cultivating himself, when the time for that came around, they would see that the job was attended to.

Will you kindly join me in giving three hearty cheers for Farmer Randall's 15 neighbors?

After which, will you kindly consider for a minute just what would be the effect on farming, on country affairs in general, on society as a whole, if we all were actuated, every day, and in every relation of life, by the spirit which led to this one day's spurt by 15 Ohio farmers?

Just what was that spirit? We can't, of course, analyze all the motives of other people. But suppose you yourself had been one of the fifteen; what would have been your reason for taking a day off from your own driving needs and turning it in to help a temporarily helpless neighbor?

You'd have said to yourself something like this: "Ben Randall is no sponge or shirk. He's always taken care of himself without whimpering. He's been a good neighbor in numerous ways. He's always been willing to help out any of us if we got in a hole. Now the poor fellow is himself in a hole. He simply can't get out alone. I can never stand by and see a good fellow go under without a motion on my part to assist him. - - - Besides, I may sometime be as bad off as he is. - - - Why shouldn't I now do to him as I would want him to do to me?"

Ah, men and brethren, right there we come back to the one and only solution of all our troubles! "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

I have a pessimistic friend who asserts his profound belief that a great majority of men and women are irrational, self-blinded, wrong-headed nitwits. When I try to calm him and mollify his bitter judgment, his first retort is always to point to this truly Golden Rule, the simple adoption of which as the rule of life would end all our economic, social, political, sectarian troubles, and ask what other theory than that of distressful human junk-headedness can explain the race's stubborn refusal for 1900 years to adopt it?

Whereupon I, not being casuist enough to answer him, usually turn the conversation. After he's gone, however, I invariably scratch my head and wonder if, after all, he hasn't some real basis for his pessimism.

There have always been a few choice souls who have seen and appreciated and humbly adopted as their own guide this rule of treating others as they would like others to treat them. One important church body, in reverent recognition of their spiritual eminence, has a way of canonizing them, after they have died. But even the adherents of that church will usually admit, despite the growing roster of canonized saints, that the census shows a vastly larger number of sinners. Moreover, the saints are dead while the other kind are vigorously alive and fertilely reproductive.

Well, we mustn't wade too far from the shore of the theological pond. It's a little too deep and the bottom a little too uncertain for any but the strongest and, - - - sometimes, - - - most reckless swimmers. Let's content ourselves, as severely practical men, with just picturing to ourselves what would be the result if every farmer in the land should start, this week, to act along the line followed by Ben Randall's 15 farm neighbors out in Ohio.

We'll leave the ministers and the doctors and the lawyers, the storekeepers and the bankers and the mechanics, the railroad men and the sailors and the aviators out of it, for the time being. We're not their legal or moral guardians. Until we've cast out the beams from our own eyes we will scarcely have time to attend to the motes in theirs.

There are understood to be some seven or eight million working farmers in the United States. Ben Randall of Ohio wasn't, in all probability, the only one in that vast army who was invalided and helpless when spring opened. The law of averages presumes that there were many others in as bad if not in worse shape than he.

It would be unsafe to say that his was the only case in which the neighbors put the Golden Rule into practice. But his was the only one which "got into the papers," so far as I know. And in these days when the reporter is almost ubiquitous and every cross-roads hamlet has its newspaper, it is even harder to doubt that similar goings-on would have found chroniclers, if they had occurred. It is the unusual which makes "news," and that sort of thing is not yet out of the unusual class.

One is constrained to believe that, anyway, a vast majority of those in Ben Randall's case failed of getting Ben Randall's treatment.

Why not?

My pessimistic friend is ready enough with his answer. "Because their neighbors were too short-sighted and too thick-headed and too dumb to appreciate the merely practical wisdom of doing as they would be done by."

Are we willing to agree with him? I don't want to; it's dollars to doughnuts that you don't want to. But "fax is fax," and just how are we going to answer him?

I can recall at least three other incidents of a somewhat similar sort to that of Ben Randall's neighbors and their friendly "bee," which we have talked about during the more than 20 years we have been chatting in this column. And I have heard, less directly and less fully, of two or three others whose details were too dim to put into cold type. Probably there have been many more which none of us typewriter pounders ever heard of. They all spell hope.

Have you ever stood on a high mountain, like Graylock in Massachusetts, for instance, on a foggy morning when all the valleys below were hidden in vapor and only here and there some tall peak showed its projecting summit, like an island rising from a fog-ocean? As the sun rose it was only these points which caught its first rays. But the power of light and warmth was not to be denied. As the day broadened these small islands grew bigger, the fog slowly dissipated, the valleys cleared up, till at last the whole wide landscape was disclosed and you knew that another day had come in all its beauty and glory.

We optimists may have those pesky "fax" against us, this early in the day. But we have the right to hope and the certainty that the sun is on our side. It was said of old that the stars in their courses fought against Sisera. The sun in all his permeating power, fights for, not against, us. The fog may cling stubbornly to the valleys and swales, and there may be times when it will seem as if the day would fail to dissipate it wholly. But "the sunrise never failed us yet," and no fog, however thick and ancient, has yet been able to withstand its influence.

Every such isolated peak of neighborliness as that displayed by Ben Randall's fellow farmers serves as a promise to the optimist that others will grow out of the fog of blinded greed and selfishness and unwisdom, till in God's good time the whole countryside will share in and reflect the light of the better day.

Once I knew a truck farmer who raised and sold vegetables, etc., to his neighbors - - - never to dealers or commission men. At the outset, simply as a business proposition, he adopted the rule of treating his customers as he would want them to treat him, were the relation reversed and he the buyer. He frankly told them all so, and, sometimes to his own temporary loss, pernickettily stuck it out. Perhaps the most striking result of this conduct was that, in 25 years of selling to hundreds of different customers, he never lost but one through dissatisfaction with him. And that one was a notorious Tartar who had quarreled with every other dealer in town and was in constant dispute with practically all her neighbors.

One reluctantly stoops to defend the Golden Rule as a matter of policy. But, if there are those to whom policy is the main thing, even an argument addressed to it may be worth considering.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

The market was mostly unchanged today. Supplies were liberal and low priced and good buys of native produce fresh from the gardens were in evidence everywhere.

Demand for sweet corn remains active and with moderate offerings and a downward price trend. Shipped in peas furnish the bulk of supply of that product as natives are practically off the market. Native tomatoes and spinach were scarce. Native potatoes are as yet lightly offered and a lower price trend in these as well as in the shipped ins which are liberal and mostly the Long Island product. Beets, cabbage, beans and squash continued to be the dull spots on the market with sales slow.

Southern apples were quite liberal but moving slow and being fast replaced by the native stock which is coming more freely and of better quality. The supply of other native fruits was confined to blue, black and huckleberries and a few red raspberries.

The egg market is showing a firmer tone on all grades and prices are working upward. The poultry market was unchanged. The demand is slow and buyers scarce.

BEARS AND BULLS WERE RELUCTANT TO TAKE CHANCES IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 24—(AP)—Stocks declined today in one of the year's dullest markets. The bull faction, cautious after the advances of yesterday and Tuesday, was active in only a few stocks, but supported leading shares on a scale down.

The bears likewise seemed reluctant to take chances in view of the market's recent strength, and profit-taking rather than short selling was probably the dominant factor in the dip. Losses averaged about two points.

Those espousing the long side took some comfort from the fact that trading volume shriveled. Total sales were only 1,475,000 shares, the smallest since July 3. The decreased activity was interpreted in the bull camp as evidence that the market was consolidating its gains, and also taking care lest an advance be carried too far at a time when confidence is beginning to be restored.

There were two or three attempts at a rally, none of which got very far. American Can touched its best price in more than a month and Westinghouse Electric rose about a point, accompanied by pool accumulation in a few issues like Vanadium and Commercial Solvents. But the improvement for the most part was temporary, and the market sagged throughout the greater part of the afternoon.

Announcement that Southern Pacific had already acquired a minority interest in St. Louis Southwestern and planned to get control, subject to interstate commerce commission approval, thereby necessitating a change in the commission's consolidation alignment, brought a one point gain in the cotton belt road's common, while the preferred made a new high. Atlantic Refining was actively sought, particularly in the late dealings. Coca Cola, American Power and Light, American Chain and Autostrop also moved against the trend, the last named making another new high.

General Motors earnings report stimulated accumulation of the shares, which were firm almost all day, reacting only a small fraction. Reports that American Can's statement would be favorable and that U. S. Steel could show about $3 for the second quarter, thereby assuring that the year's dividend would be nearly covered in the first half, were well received, although Steel lost 1 3-4 on the day.

U. S. Industrial Alcohol was conspicuously weak, tumbling nearly 8 points net on selling in anticipation of the unfavorable first half report. National Cash Register was in supply after the announcement of the 10 per cent wage reduction. Follansbee Brothers broke 3 on the dividend cut.

Stocks off two to three points included American Telephone, Columbian Carbon, Vanadium, Worthington Pump, Foster Wheeler, Chesapeake and Ohio, and American Tobacco "B." J. I. Case, R. H. Macy and Allied Chemical suffered larger losses. International Harvester, Radio Keith Orpheum, General Electric and Radio yielded about a point.

The decline of $17,000,000 in brokers' loans, reflected the market's reaction last Saturday and Monday, and was somewhat of a surprise, for in many quarters a small increase had been expected. However, Wall street's interest in the loan figures these days is largely academic.

The federal reserve statement showed a drop of $36,000,000 in the amount of credit outstanding. Discounts and open market bill purchases were off about $17,000,000 each for the system.

Changes in grain quotations were narrow. Wheat closed virtually unchanged, while corn was moderately higher on bullish reports from Iowa and Kansas and news of crop damage in Texas. Cotton lost 18 to 25 points net.

Foreign exchanges eased slightly. Another $1,500,000 in gold was withdrawn for shipment to Canada.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 24—(AP)—In the face of depressing reports of Russia doing a big export business in wheat, grain values showed a fresh upward trend today. Corn scored a maximum jump of nearly 2c, finishing at about the day's top level, with complaints of widespread damage to the corn crop the main influence. Statements were current that Russia has sold nearly 4,000,000 bushels of new wheat for August shipment to various European countries, the price to be governed by quotations on the late October delivery.

Corn closed unsettled, 3-4a1 7-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Wheat closed nervous, unchanged to 3-8c up, oats unchanged to 1-4c off, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 5c.

Provisions averaged higher as a result of upturns in the value of hogs.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, July 24 — (AP) — Treasury receipts for July 22 were $5,209,273.06; expenditures $3,382,357.07; balance $204,373,019.16.

Offering is to be made tomorrow of new financing aggregating $33,730,000 first mortgage, 5 per cent gold bonds of the Texas Electric Service Co., due in 1960. They are priced at 97 3-4 and accrued interest, to yield over 5.14 per cent and the proceeds will be used to retire indebtedness incurred in the acquisition of properties and to reimburse the company for additions to property.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 24—(AP)Curb shares fluctuated uncertainly in dull and listless trading today. Oils and the more active utilities were inclined to sag. Among the industrials and specialties, there were numerous firm spots, although some of the low priced issues sagged to new lows. Sales aggregated 400,700 shares.

Gulf Oil lost 2 and Humble and Vacuum about 2 points. Cities Service sagged more than a point, but soon attracted support and closed off only 5-8. The oil shares on this market have failed to make notable response to the improvement in petroleum statistics of late. With the price situation still none too satisfactory, market sponsorship has not been forthcoming.

In the utilities, such active issues as American Super Power, Middle West, Electric Bond and Share and United Light A, sagged fractionally. American Light and Traction lost more than a point. Tampa Electric, however, shot up 7 points in a fair turnover for this closely held issue. Power securities, an investment trust specializing in power stocks, advanced 5 to a new high at 34 1-2, which is just 20 points above the year's low.

In the investment company group, Transamerica, in its last day of trading before transfer to the big board, sagged about a point in realizing on yesterday's rise. Removal of this active stock will cost the curb's volume of trading about 25,000 shares a day or more. United Founders was firm, not only retaining yesterday's gain, but adding a fraction to it.

Among the industrials and specialties, firm spots were Corroon and Reynolds, Detroit Gasket, Anglo Chilean Nitrate, Mead Johnson, Mesta Machine and New Jersey Zinc, up a point or two at the close. Ford, Ltd., gained about a point in active trading, and Babcock and Wilcox mounted more than 4 in a few odd lot sales.

Aluminum company dropped 4, and Deere 3, the latter, getting down to within 1-8 of its record low at 82. Campe corporation, Cohn and Rosenberg, Outboard A and B, and Sherwin Williams, were among issues recording new lows.

The Standard Oil company, of New Jersey, has reduced the tank car price of gasoline on the eastern seaboard one-half cent to 6 3-4 cents. The company said the reduction was a readjustment to bring its price in line with that quoted by other companies.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 24—(AP)—Under the leadership of obligations of railroads operating in the southwest, carrier bonds developed real strength on the New York Stock exchange today. The market as a whole showed no reversal of the firm trend which has carried the price level upward at a consistent but slow pace and the increased demand for prime rails provided impetus for broadened activity. The volume of sales was the best in two weeks, approximating $9,855,000.

Confirmation of reports that the Southern Pacific railroad was seeking control of the St. Louis, Southwestern railroad, having already acquired a large minority interest turned the spotlight on carrier bonds of roads in that section. Unusual activity in several issues developed and net gains ranged up to nearly 2 points, and a dozen or more new 1930 high marks were established.

Marked activity developed in bonds of the Southern Pacific, St. Louis San Francisco, Kansas City Southern, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and Southern railway. Kansas Southern 5s, gained 1 1-8; M. K. T. 4 1-2s, 1 3-4, to reach new highs. Southern railway gained 2 and accumulation in other issues was at generally higher prices. Other marked advances were in Atlantic Coast Line 4 1-2s, Chicago and Northwestern 3 1-2s, Canadian Pacific 4s to reach the peak prices of the year. All in all, rails made the best showing of the week despite quietness of some of the most popular issues.

Utility issues moved slowly, apparently affected by the large volume of new issues which shows no signs of slackening for some time. As the latest offering of the so-called electric bond and share group of utilities, Texas Electric Service company will place $33,730,000 in five per cent bonds on the market tomorrow. Nominal gains were made by American Telephone issues, Consolidated Gas 5 1-2s, and International Telephone 5s, Detroit Edison 5s sagged.

Especial interest was displayed in Liberty 4th 4 1-2s, and Treasury 4 1-4s, with the former reaching a new high price for the year. Other governments were irregular.

Stock privilege issues were hesitant but dipped slightly at the close in sympathy with shares on the big board.

With the exception of a few high grade issues, foreign issues received little attention and fluctuated within a narrow range. Belgian, French and German issues were moderately accumulated and firm. Austrian 7s lost ground and lower Austrian 7 1-2s sagged 3 points. South American bonds were lethargic. Bolivian 7s developed weakness, losing about 3 points. Chile Mortgage bank 6s, rose one point. Cuban Republic 5s, were strong.

NEW YORK, July 24—(AP)—The Pennsylvania Railroad on July 1 had 207,869 stockholders, a new high record and an increase of 49,418 over the same date last year and an advance of 1,010 over the preceding month.

A total of 112 crude rubber producers, representing 38,906 tons of production, have declared themselves in favor of proposals of the rubber producers association to restrict all Dutch East Indies rubber producers, including native, to 75 per cent of the 1929 crop, according to private cable advices to the rubber exchange of New York. The plan, however, was opposed by 21 producers representing 25,892 tons, including 11,800 tons belonging to American producers.

An extension to September 30, has been granted in the time for exchange of Amrad corporation stock for stock of Magnavox, Ltd., the basis of the exchange is seven shares of Magnavox for one of Amrad.

DRIVING HAZARDS STRESSED BY JUDGE IN TRAFFIC SCHOOL

MINNEAPOLIS —(AP)— A traffic school where graduation doesn't mean diplomas, but where attendance and punctuality are nearly perfect is operated here and has 1,700 "alumni."

It is directed by Judge Levi M. Hall, who believes that education rather than jail sentences and fines will improve driving, encourage more caution and reduce the accident rate.

Instead of sending first and minor offenders to routine punishment, he suspends sentences and then "sentences" them to the school.

There they are instructed in traffic laws, accident hazards, first aid, and are re-taught how to operate a motor vehicle. Those who "play hookey" find their original sentences levied. A "class" of 551 was graduated recently.

Silk Net Is Worn

It had short puffed sleeves, high waistline and a plain skirt with flounce descending from the knees.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Jim Crow

Take things as they come, and grin;
That's the spirit that will win.
—Jim Crow.

The venturesome young Crow, who had fallen from the nest almost at the feet of Farmer Brown's Boy, was a frightened young Crow, to say the least. The fall from the nest had been bad enough, but now a creature such as he had never seen before had picked him up. He remembered what Mother Crow had said when she had warned the young Crows to be careful; and he was certain that this creature was going to eat him. So naturally he was a very frightened young Crow.

Farmer Brown's Boy carefully picked the young Crow up, taking care not to hurt him. He looked him all over, to make sure that he had not been injured. Apparently the young Crow was all right. Farmer Brown's Boy looked back up at the nest. He was trying to decide whether he would take that young Crow back to the nest or whether he would take it home.

"If I take you back up there, Jim Crow, you'll probably fall out again," said he. "I think I'll take you home. You'll like me better when we've really become acquainted."

So it was that the young Crow got both a name and a new home. He was rather noisy on the way home, and Blacky the Crow heard him. You know, Blacky was his father. Blacky gave the alarm, and soon not only Blacky, his father, but his mother and all of his relatives who were within hearing, were making a great fuss over there in the Green Forest, screaming at Farmer Brown's Boy and calling him all manner of names. Farmer Brown's Boy didn't mind at all. He kept right on, and all the crows followed for a short distance. Presently Jim Crow stopped his noise. He was rather out of breath. Besides, he was very curious. He was seeing things that he had never seen before. He was so full of curiosity that he forgot to cry. Now, when he stopped crying, the other Crows began to lose interest. Most of them had families, anyway, and they were anxious to get back to them. Blacky and Mother Crow followed as far as the edge of the Green Forest. There they stopped, for Mother Crow was anxious about the rest of the children and in a hurry to get back, to see if anything had happened to them.

Home to the barn Jim Crow was taken. How his black eyes did twinkle as he looked at all the strange things! Bowser the Hound came out to make his acquaintance. So did Flip the Fox Terrier. Jim Crow was afraid of them at first, but he was too smart to let them know it. He pretended that he wasn't afraid. And, being smart, it didn't take him long to find out that they wouldn't hurt him; and then, of course, he wasn't afraid.

Farmer Brown's Boy took Jim Crow into the house to show to Mother Brown. "For goodness' sake!" exclaimed Mother Brown. "What under the sun are you going to do with that Crow?"

"I'm going to keep him for a pet," replied Farmer Brown's Boy.

"You mean you are going to keep him for a nuisance," declared Mother Brown. "I feel it in my bones that that Crow will get into just about as much mischief as that young Bear did."

Farmer Brown's Boy chuckled. "If Jim Crow does as many funny things as Cubby Bear did," said he, "this farm is going to be a lively place. Now, I want some bread and milk to feed the rascal."

Mother Brown got the bread and milk, and farmer Brown's Boy took Jim Crow out on the back doorstep to feed him. He actually had to feed him, for, you see, Jim Crow hadn't yet learned to pick up food for himself. Not having left the nest, he had always been fed by Mother Crow and Father Blacky Crow. So now Farmer Brown's Boy had to put food in Jim Crow's mouth. It was new food to Jim Crow, but he liked it, and he actually made himself sick at that first meal, he ate so much.

QUAKE WAVES GO FASTER UNDER OCEAN THAN LAND

WASHINGTON (AP)—Commander N. H. Heck of the federal coast and geodetic survey says long earthquake waves travel about 29 per cent faster under the Pacific ocean than through continents.

Different density under the ocean, he says, may account for this changed speed.

Whether the waves travel with the same speed under the Atlantic ocean as under the Pacific he says has not yet been determined, and when it is may have effects on the theory that the moon was torn from what is now the Pacific ocean.

Commander Heck says recent studies in this country point to the possibility that differences in speed under the Pacific and the Atlantic oceans are negligible.

U. S. LIGHTHOUSE SERVICE HAS 78 RADIO BEACONS

WASHINGTON (AP)—The lighthouse service of the United States now has 78 radio-beacon stations.

Th beacon s are being established at the more important lighthouses and lightships along both coasts and on the Great Lakes.

By furnishing the navigator with means of knowing his exact position even when shore stations are not visible and sound signals can not be heard, they are making it possible for vessels to avoid excessive loss of time.

Poultry Pays Profit.

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP)—A total income of $8,670.28 from 21,468 hens for one month has been reported to Fred A. Sease, extension poultryman at State College. The reports came from 138 poultry growers in 36 counties. Over half the income was profit.

THIEVING GYPSY DUPES CONFIDING GROTON WOMAN

The time-worn scheme of gypsies in carrying on their thieving was repeated this week and with success by one of a band encamped in Groton, but the perpetrator of the theft, Shoshese Charmake, 50, has been arrested and is being held for trial in Groton town court Monday next. The members of her band have been ordered to vacate the town of Groton. The gypsies, numbering about 25 camped earlier in the week on Fishtown hill. Two or three days ago, Mrs. Elizabeth Seymour, who resides in that vicinity, between Mystic and Groton, was taken ill. The gypsy went to the home of the woman and finding her indisposed proposed an alleged remedy for the woman's ailment. Mrs. Seymour was advised to go to bed but just to secure $500 and place the money in a stocking, which should be made secure about her waist. Mrs. Seymour was informed that the money encased in the stocking would cause impure blood to be absorbed and that the ailment would vanish. Mrs. Seymour had but $40 but this money she foolishly placed in the stocking and then followed directions. Two days later, Wednesday, the gypsy returned and removing the stocking, claimed a discoloration of the money, which, it was explained, was the blood. The gypsy then placed the stocking in a stove where fire destroyed it and represented that the money was disposed of, when in reality the money was secreted about the person of the gypsy. The latter departed. This forenoon, Mrs. Seymour discovered that two turkeys of her flock had been stolen. Surmising that the thief was the woman Mrs. Seymour made complaint to the state police. Officer John Smith arrested the gypsy, who admitted the theft of both money and turkeys. The $40 has been returned to Mrs. Seymour.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Madeline Grimley, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Grimley, New Haven and Thomas P. Elder, son of Rev. Joseph Elder of this city. The wedding will take place next month.

DRIVERS WHO WERE DRUNK RUN UP AGAINST THE LAW

Two cases of driving while under the influence of liquor were presented in the police court this morning, but only one of the cases was disposed of and then on an amended complaint. Henry E. Cushman, 21 of 19 Glenwood avenue, one of the drivers, was arrested on North Bank street, corner of State, last evening by Patrolman Dennis Murphy. In the police court the complaint was amended to that of reckless driving, to which the driver pleaded guilty and was fined $75 and costs. Cushman drove his car from State street into North Bank. That the car did not crash with other cars that were parked beside the curb was due to the fact that Cushman was more lucky than skillful in handling the steering wheel. Officer Murphy, who observed the course followed by the auto, held up the driver and when he did so Cushman was arrested for he was unquestionably drunk. He was locked up, but later was released upon bail in the sum of $150, being furnished by Louis Elfenbein.

The other driver was Harry Northrup and his case was again continued, this time to Tuesday next. He furnished a surety on his bond of $150. Northrup was arrested on Howard street at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning by Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran and Patrolman Louis Pine. The officers had noted the zig-zagging of the car as it passed through Howard street and followed it. When the auto was rounding the curve leading from Howard street to Pequot avenue, it came close to colliding with a traffic beacon. Northrup was stopped and as he was clearly under the influence, he was arrested. A pint of liquor was found in one of the pockets of the auto.

Three cases of intoxication were also tried. One man, arrested on Howard street and who has been before the court frequently of late, was fined $10 but execution of the sentence was suspended for a month. Another, arrested on North Bank street yesterday afternoon, was fined $5 and execution of the sentence was suspended for a month. The third man, also arrested on North Bank street yesterday, was given suspension of judgment.

Woman Failed To Appear

Edith Milne, Old Lyme, was charged with violation of the traffic law in parking overtime on State street yesterday. She did not appear, so her bond of $2 was forfeited. Three other drivers, all non-residents charged with the same offense, were released upon being advised to observe the rules and regulations governing traffic in the future.

Nathan Pumerantz, Bank street merchant, reported today to the police that a spare Ford wheel, tire and rim, belonging to Morris Fox, submarine base, were stolen last night while the auto was parked in the rear of Pumerantz's store.

Myrtle Perkins, Riverside beach, Waterford and Windsor, Conn., today reported to the police that her pocketbook containing $85 had either been lost or that it had been stolen.

Charges Against Swanson

Frederick R. Swanson, 266 Lower Boulevard, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant John Courtney, charged with evasion of responsibility and will be in court tomorrow. Swanson was arrested upon complaint of Henry J. Marikle, proprietor of a trucking business in Mystic. Marikle said that Swanson's auto had hit the former's car twice and that Swanson, after verbally abusing Marikle, speeded away without stopping to ascertain the extent of the damage occasioned.

Robert D. Orton, submarine base, was arrested yesterday in Groton by State Police Officer Peter Busch, charged with abandonment. He will be in the Groton town court Monday next. Groton allowed his automobile to remain in the highway near Crystal lake two days.

Palace Theatre

Is the rich man always immoral and the poor boy always possessed of a heart of gold? To read the popular novels, you might think so, but in actual life is it really so? That is the question which patrons of the Palace theater are going to have answered for them when they see the great double feature program which is showing there for the rest of this week.

There are two men in "Not Damaged." Two men and a girl. The girl is poor, but she is amazingly pretty and she has a refined and vivacious manner. A young radio mechanic, Charlie Jones, has fallen in love with her and is hoping she will marry him. He starts to furnish a flat and is slowly getting the place in shape when a rival shows up.

Dropping like a Prince Charming out of the void, Kirk Randolph comes into the girl's life to bring to her an atmosphere of which she knew nothing. Soon she was more eager than he for the kind of life he represented.

NORMA SHEARER

She entreated him to take her to a wild party, and he did. And she, not being used to liquor, drank too much and passed completely out. She awoke next morning to find herself in bed in Kirk's apartment. From this point on the picture swings and moves with astounding force, and the climax comes stunningly.

"Pardon My Gun" meets the popular demand for a western production which combines comedy and dramatic action, and life as it really is lived in the great wide open spaces. No one should fail to see Sally Starr in the star role of this excellent twin feature on the Palace bill.

Broadway Theatre.

The last actor one would expect to see playing a convict in a prison drama is Robert Montgomery, debonair hero of "So This Is College," and Norma Shearer's leading man in "Their Own Desire," but still it was just that paradoxical fact that put him over.

He has the role of Kent, the college boy sent to prison after an auto accident, in "The Big House," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's grim drama of penitentiary life and prison riots, which opens at the Warner Broadway theatre tomorrow. And despite Montgomery's penchant for comedy, his role is one of the most serious and important in the picture.

MAY FIGHT PIRATES WITH RADIO ROBOT

HONG KONG (AP)—A radio robot to fight pirates infesting the South China seas, has been conceived by an inventor of Hong Kong.

A wireless alarm, easily fitted to any vessel, starts broadcasting distress in case of a pirate attack.

The alarm has a radius of several hundred miles. It connects with buttons on the bridge, in the engine room and at other accessible parts of the ship. By pressing any one of these buttons a signal of alarm, with the name and position of the ship is radioed continually.

Lieut. Neil Richardson of the Indo-China Steam Navigation company, who is the inventor of the device, has asked the Officers' Federation of London to adopt it.

BRIGHT LIGHT IS GLARE, BUT NOT TO HUMAN EYES

The two persons talking see each other's "television faces," and near these images is a small, mild, blue spot of light. The blue spots are the lights scanning their faces for the photo-electric cells which transmit them to the opposite ends of the wire.

BRANCH LINE TRAINS CUT BY NEW HAVEN

With the issuance of a new timetable to take effect July 27, The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company is taking off a number of trains on branch lines where such trains were being operated at a loss to the company.

pany, "and the only trains which are fected," says a statement by the company, "and the only rtains which are being discontinued are on lines where the passenger travel has practically deserted the railroad for other means of transportation, resulting in the operation of trains at a loss. GILLETTE'S MINIATURE TRAIN ON HADLYME ESTATE

The coaches are each large enough to carry a half-dozen or more passengers.

NORWICH TOWN

118 FARMERS PARTICIPATE IN COUNTY TOUR OF ALFALFA AND PASTURE FIELDS

New London county farmers went on tour Thursday, under the auspices of the county farm bureau, to see what was being done in alfalfa raising and in pasture improvement which are of much importance to the dairy interests of the county.

Forty-two automobiles were in the caravan which made up the line as they moved from place to place and the 118 farmers who made the trip declared it a most instructive and valuable experience. They fired a battery of questions at each place they visited and always found the owner and his farm helpers ready with helpful answers.

County Agent Walter T. Clark was in charge of the tour, which started from the meeting place at Salem Four Corners at 10 o'clock in the morning. From there it was a short run to the Mitchell dairies where a 26 acre field of sweet clover and orchard grass pasture gave the demonnstration.

The next stop was at the East Great Plain farm of W. B. Lathrop to see what has been done with five acres of alfalfa ready for second cuting and five acres of sweet clover, newly seeded alfalfa and permanent pasture improvement.

From there the caravan moved to Mohegan park in this city, which was the place for basket lunch and a talk by J. S. Owens, extension crop specialist, upon "The Value of Alfalfa as a Dairyman's By-Product."

After lunch the farm of Pisarko Brothers at Taftville was visited to see alfalfa in the different stages of harvesting, nearly ready for harvest and being seeded down, as well as a sweet clover pasture lot.

The line then headed for the Avery farms in the town of Franklin where the demonstration was on fertilizer, as well as alfalfa, and B. A. Brown of the state experiment station, gave a talk on "Pasture Fertilization," which was followed by a talk on "The Feed Replacement Value of Good Pasture," which was given by Prof. G. H. White, head of the dairy department at Connecticut Agricultural college.

The tour concluded at about 4 o'clock with a visit to the Franklin farm of J. H. Hyde, where alfalfa and pasture fertilization were demonstrated.

One of the observations made on the trip was that a good gentle rain of about ten or twelve hours duration would be a lot of help to some of the plots at the present time.

TELEPHONE DIRECTORY HERE IS THE LARGEST EVER

Delivery of the summer issue of the telephone directory was completed Thursday and, it is hoped, without skipping a single subscriber. Exchange Manager H. H. Lyon said, however, that if there is any subscriber who has not received a directory by tonight a telephone call to the business office of the company will bring one by mail at once.

The directory for this district is the largest ever produced by the telephone company, containing more listings than ever before and the yellow, or classified section also contains more complete information of the industries and other business concerns in this section of the state.

Hundreds of changes in addresses, some of them involving telephone number changes and many additional listings appear in this issue and it is therefore urged by the exchange manager that all subscribers use the new directory, upon receipt and that the old one, now obsolete, be destroyed.

Delivery of the directory began a few days ago, but it has required until now for the young men doing this work to reach all the telephone subscribers in this district. The book is effective on receipt and should be used now. Better service results will be obtained by consulting the book for all numbers because of the many changes that have been made.

RECLUSE DAUGHTER IS MADE SOLE BENEFICIARY

The will of the late Peter Wilson, East Hampton farmer who died several months ago at the age of 96 years, was filed in probate court there Thursday and leaves his entire estate and fortune to his daughter, Miss Lillie Wilson, who remained at home and cared for him all her life. When she left the farm at the time of his death she saw electric lights, telephones, street railways, autos and other modern improvements for the first time.

In leaving the estate to Miss Wilson, the deceased said he was not unmindful of his other two daughters living in New York but wrote that he considered Lillie should have his fortune inasmuch as she had cared for him for many years with no recompense. There will be a hearing on the will before Judge P. W. Brown Monday morning. It is not expected that the other two daughters will contest the will. Mr. Wilson leaves a considerable amount of property and some money in various banks, the exact amount of which has not yet been tabulated.

AUTHORIZES THREE COTTAGES FOR LONG LANE FARM

The state board of finance and control at a meeting Thursday at Hartford authorized the trustees of Long Lane farm in Middletown to award the contract for the construction of three cottages to replace the Russell building at a total contract price of $131,290. The work must be done within 150 working days.

The meeting was the first the board of control has held since June 19, due to the absence of Governor Trumbull. The board authorized the printing of 1,200 copies of the state treasurer's report and 6,000 copies of election and naturalization laws for the state secretary. The board also authorized the printing of 3,300 copies of Bulletin No. 48 for the geographical and natural history survey.

The board authorized the retirement of three bonds of the town of Chatham, now East Hampton, one of North Canaan and six of Portland.

CAN PROVIDE FOR 20 FRESH AIR CHILDREN

Families in Norwich and vicinity are willing to provide for 20 fresh air children from New York city, according to Miss Mary E. Bundy, assistant secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce, but the chamber points to placing at least 50 here. All those desiring to take care of one or more children are asked to get in communication with the chamber officers either by telephone or letter.

Through the chamber last year about 40 children had an opportunity to enjoy two weeks' vacation in the country, away from the crowded tenement section in the metropolitan city. This is accomplished each year through a fund created by the New York Herald-Tribune. The children are expected to arrive here on August 17.

MOTORIST PAYS DAMAGES FOR FAILING TO SIGNAL

In Connecticut the man on the sidewalk still retains certain rights. A motorist recently looked back, thought he saw that all was clear, and backed without signalling or blowing the horn. The jar which followed was caused by impact with a pedestrian. The Connecticut supreme court of errors spoke the last word in the matter to the effect that the driver was negligent in that he did not signal his intention to back, as required by statute.

The residence property at 78 McKinley avenue has been sold by Mrs. Elizabeth A. Morris to Abe Davidson of New London.

PORPOISES SCARCE NOW OFF NEW ENGLAND COAST

Where are the New England coast harbor porpoises of yesterday? One seldom hears a fisherman refer to them nowadays, yet half a century ago they abounded between Cape Cod and Passamaquoddy bay, writes Alfred Elder, in a Boston newspaper. Winter is the season of the year when the playful porpoise dons its winter underwear in the form of a thick, protective layer of fat. From a commercial standpoint these gamboling creatures of the sea are then at their best; yet they are no longer hunted in New England waters.

It is easily within the memory of elderly folk that 40 or 50 years ago the Passamaquoddy Indians waged systematic winter warfare on the porpoise. Indeed, the fishery was one of their principal means of support. They took the creatures well inshore, where they evidently found plenty of food, for they were always fat.

The Indians were very clever in securing their quarry. They had to be, for when in frightened flight the mad rushes of the mammals, their beautiful leaps above the water's surface, their dizzy dodging, all told of great strength and speed. Generally the hunters went two in a canoe. One wielded the paddle, the other knelt in the bow, a dusky executioner, watching his chance to administer the "coupe de maitre."

Sometimes a spear was thrown with unerring accuracy. To the shank would be attached several fathoms of strong though fine cord. The other end of the line would be tied to a heavy block of wood. After striking his prize the Indian would toss the free line and wooden drag overboard. In towing this incubus about the maddened prey would soon exhaust itself. Then the Indians, who had paddled along in the wake of the bobbing block took it abroad, hauled in the victim and dispatched it with a lance.

In very early days the Indians used bows and arrows to kill the porpoise. Later rifles were substituted. These methods necessitated very fast work, for, with no retrieving line attached, if the creature sank in deep water it would be lost. So the canoemen had quickly to paddle alongside the thrashing victim and kill it with lance thrusts.

Occasionally it was possible to capture porpoises in stout nets if they could be driven into narrow estuaries or coves. But the mesh had to be very strong to hold them. The larger of these New England coast harbor porpoises measure about seven feet in length with a girth of five feet and will weigh 300 to 350 pounds. Many were taken, of course, that ran considerably smaller.

The blubber of a good-sized porpoise is two inches thick and will weigh in itself 75 pounds or more. The yield of oil is from five to six gallons. The average quantity, however, of oil for all porpoise taken by the Indians was not more than three gallons. They stripped the blubber off, cut it into small chunks and placed them in iron pots which they stood on stones previously heated red hot.

The very superior oil in the jawpans they extracted by hanging the jaws in the warm sunlight and permitting the oil to drip slowly into cans. One porpoise would supply about half a pint of this extra fine quality oil which was used for lubricating watches, clocks and intricate machinery, and sold for high prices. Oil from the blubber was sometimes skillfully adulterated by the Indians with seal oil and sold for from 60 to 80 cents a gallon. As an illuminant it gave excellent satisfaction.

The Passamaquoddies also prized porpoise steaks as a flavorous food, tasting, as they explained, like something between venison and liver. Their custom had plenty of precedent, for porpoise was formerly much esteemed in England and reckoned fit for the royal table. In some singular directions for the management of the household of King Henry VIII we find among the dainty dishes to be "set before the king" a porpoise, "and if too big for a horseload, an extra allowance be given to the purveyor."

In the time of Queen Elizabeth porpoise was still used by the nobles of England, being served with bread crumbs and vinegar. Europe, however, has long accepted as good food sea inhabitants that in this country are disdained. Among these might be mentioned the despised dogfish, which is consumed abroad in immense quantities under more or less camouflaged names.

According to the bureau of fisheries, Cape Hatteras, North Carolina, is the only point in North America today where a porpoise fishery has ever been regularly conducted and where the creatures can be found near the shore and beaches with drag seines. In those waters porpoise have been taken in a more or less desultory manner and with but little capital invested for upward of 200 years. The largest number taken in a single year is 1,500.

The porpoise are valuable for their jaw oil, hides and body blubber in the order given. The oil now brings from $30 to $60 a gallon, according to its age and purity, and represents the greater part of the value. An attempt has been made at Hatteras to utilize the carcasses for fertilizer, but because of the isolation of the locale the cost of getting fuel for the cookers was deemed prohibitive and the project was abandoned.

FESS SLATED AS CHAIRMAN REP. NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Huston Has Issued Call For Meeting of Executive Committee On August 7 to Select His Successor As Party Chairman —Senator Fess Is Choice of the Hoover Administration Leaders—Robert Lucas of Kentucky, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Will Become Assistant to Fess In Active Charge of Campaign Work.

WASHINGTON, July 25—(AP)—Claudius Huston sent out the call today for the meeting of the executive committee of the republican national committee on August 7 to select his successor as party chairman.

Senator Fess, of Ohio, was the choice of the Hoover administration leaders to take Huston's place, and there was no doubt in party circles here tonight that the Ohioan would be named.

Robert Lucas, of Kentucky, commissioner of internal revenue, was slated to become executive assistant to Fess in active charge of the campaign work.

Mr. Hoover has consulted most of the republican chieftains on this reorganization program and it has been given formal approval, pending any unforeseen developments in the next 2 weeks.

While the executive committee has full authority to fill vacancies there was some talk today at the White house of having the entire national committee assemble here early in September to ratify the new officers to be selected next month.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, discussed the party situation today with the president and he is understood to be in accord with the proposed new officers.

The backwash of speculation set in today over the final announcement by Huston of his resignation after a White house conference last night, but all authentic reports of the final meeting between the president and the chairman told of a peaceful session.

The new speculation centered about possible reprisals by Huston and his group against those who were active in bringing about his retirement. However, there was nothing to indicate that the harassed chairman contemplated such a move.

It was reported that Lucas, who was an active party worker in his state before becoming commissioner of internal revenue early this year, was to be groomed for the chairmanship of the party. Senator Fess was represented as slow to accept the post. However, he was regarded by the republican chieftains as a man above attack and one experienced in congressional campaign work such as is involved in this year's election.

The letter sent out today by Mr. Huston to the members of the executive committee said:

"A meeting of the executive committee of the republican national committee, of which you are a member, is hereby called for Thursday, August 7, at 11 o'clock a. m., at the above address, for the consideration of such business as may properly come before it.

"Because of the imminence of the campaign for the election of all the members of the house of representatives and more than one-third of the senate, and the importance of the matters to come before the meeting, a full attendance is desired, and I trust you may find it possible to be present or represented by proxy."

The executive committee comprises Claudius H. Huston of Tennessee, chairman; Ralph E. Williams, of Oregon, vice chairman; Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, of Kentucky, vice chairman; Daniel E. Pomeroy, of New Jersey, vice chairman; J. R. Nutt, of Ohio, treasurer; James Francis Burke, of Pennsylvania, general counsel; and Mrs. Grace Semple Burlingham of Missouri, Mrs. O. P. Clark of California, Miss Dorothy Cunningham of Indiana, Mrs. Manly L. Fosseen of Minnesota, Mrs. Guy P. Gannett of Maine, Clarence C. Hamlin of Colorado, Charles D. Hilles of New York, Earle S. Kinsley of Vermont, Miss Martha McClure of Iowa, Maurice Maschke of Ohio, Mrs Bina West Miller of Michigan, David W. Mulvane of Kansas, J. Henry Roraback of Connecticut, Mrs. Worthington Scranton of Pennsylvania, William G. Skelly of Oklahoma, Patrick Sullivan of Wyoming, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer of Massachusetts and Mrs. Ellis A. Yost of West Virginia.

BROODING LED BOY TO COMMIT SUICIDE

VALLEY STREAM, N. Y., July 25—(AP)—Weighted down by boyish woes, 18-year-old Edward Davis wandered through the streets of Valley Stream all last night. Through the long hours he brooded on his belief that the girl on whom his affections centered did not return his love, and adding to his adolescent misery was the firm opinion that he hadn't enough spending money.

Just at dawn, he sat down and wrote two notes, then threw himself, police said, in front of a Long Island railroad train. An engineer on another train saw his body hurtle across the tracks and called an ambulance, but the boy was dead.

In the pockets of his trousers the police found two notes. One said: "I love you F. E. P." It was written on a small piece of dirty paper. On the other side was written "K. Bennett of 137 Ethel street, mail address." The other note said:

"Give my ring to Florence Elizabeth Phillips. Give my bike and blouses to K. Bennett. Don't let my parents see my body. Throw it in the ocean. Tell Florence (F. E. P.) I died because I could not have her."

ANOTHER HOT WAVE IN THE CENTRAL STATES

CHICAGO, July 25—(AP)—A fresh hot wave swelled across the central states today. Temperatures between 90 and 100 prevailed in almost every section from Kansas to Chicago and as far north as Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The heat was particularly intense in Kansas, where the mercury generally was between 95 and 100. It was above 95 in the Chicago area and a similar temperature was reported in most of Wisconsin, a gentle southwest wind keeping back the lake breeze which ordinarily moderates the lakes region.

Three deaths were attributed to the heat in Milwaukee.

The mercury mounted above 90 in the twin cities and hovered around the same temperature over most of Iowa and Nebraska. It was some milder in Missouri.

Cloudy skies with prospects of thunderstorms were more or less general, but the weather bureau's forecast said showers would afford only slight temporary relief and predicted continued heat tomorrow.

The message to the Coast Guard and a similar one to Thomas' wife did not give details of what happened to the party.

The trio will disembark at Jacksonville tomorrow morning. They left here in a 20 foot speedboat, the "Lillian B," Mrs. Thomas said, and carried only a gallon of water. Two boxes of salt crackers and a watermelon as provisions, intending to return the same day.

NEW HAVEN, July 25—(AP)—Nathan Laplansky, 74, blind in one eye, sick and enfeebled, petitioned the city today for $2,050 of a $5,000 bail bond forfeited by a man whom he alleges swindled him with fake diamonds a year ago.

The petition says one Joseph Keller induced him to part with his life savings, $2,050, giving a handful of "diamonds" as security. The "diamonds" proved to be glass.

A month later, Keller was arrested and held under $5,000 bond for court. He failed to appear and the bail went into the city's coffers.

He claims he is forced to live with his daughter who has nine children and whose husband is out of work.

Five Men Were Killed By Crashing Planes

MEXICO CITY, Jul[illegible]—Less than a mile from th[illegible] center of Mexico City, tw[illegible] airplanes collided today and [illegible]ed to the ground. Four military [illegible]iators and a civilian, who was playing handball below, were killed.

One of the aviators jumped with a parachute, but it failed to open and he fell to his death. His body was buried in the soil.

Both airplanes, colliding as one was landing and the other taking off from Valbuena Field, fell on the cement hand ball court of Carranza Athletic Field. Their wreckage ripped off a foot of thick cement wall between two court.

An unidentified peon, who was playing handball as the plane fell, had no chance to escape, but the man with whom he was playing scurried out of the way.

Two squadrons of nine planes each were maneuvering in the air when it occurred, and their zeal to outdo one another was blamed for the accident. The airmen, before taking off, had agreed that the squadron that performed best would be treated to lunch by the losers.

INTEREST IN AMERICAN LEGION ELECTION TODAY

BRIDGEPORT, July 25.—(AP)—Supporters of Edward L. Newmarker, Rockville banker, and Captain E. P. Armstrong, of Waterbury, former state commander of the American Legion, claimed tonight on the eve of the annual state election to have mustered sufficient strength to assure their elections as state commander and state treasurer, respectively, on an early ballot Saturday morning.

Despite the claims of the Newmarker-Armstrong combination, the prevailing sentiment at the convention seemed to be that great uncertainty still surrounded the election scheduled as the first matter of business to come before the final convention session. At midnight conferences were still being held and delegates were to convene in caucuses after the midnight festivities at Pleasure Beach.

Newmarker-Armstrong forces appeared confident, notwithstanding the endorsement of Frederick B. Burr of Fairfield, for commander, and James Case, of Danbury for treasurer, at the Fairfield county caucus, the endorsement of Andrew Johnson, of Norwich, for treasurer, by the New London delegation today, and the action of the New Haven county delegation on Thursday, pledging for Rev. Daniel A. Strickland, of New Haven, for treasurer.

Russian Pulpwood Barred From Entry

Treasury Acts Because Convict Labor Entered Into Production.

WASHINGTON, July 25.— (AP) — Large consignments of Russian pulpwood purchased by the International Paper company today were barred from entry into this country by the treasury because convict labor entered into their production.

Acting on information that poorly fed groups of Russian convicts had been used in loading the wood at Archangel, Assistant Secretary Lowman issued general instructions to customs collectors along the Atlantic seaboard to deny it admittance. He said the International Paper company had purchased a large amount of Russian pulpwood from the Amtorg corporation, the official Russian commercial organization, and added the orders would apply to all shipments of pulp wood from Russia.

The pulp wood embargo has no connection with Lowman's recent decision admitting two shiploads of Russian lumber. The lumber had been refused entry by the customs bureau but after a hearing Lowman said there was no evidence that convict labor had entered into its production and ordered it admitted. Four other shiploads of lumber are en route to the United States but if before it arrives evidence is secured that convict labor entered into its production it also will be barred.

The action today was taken under the tariff act after the treasury had secured evidence that convicts had been used in loading the pulp wood. Part of this information included a statement that women convicts were used in unloading the wood from the trains which brought it into Archangel and ragged convicts with hands and feet wrapped in canvas were forced to load the wood on ships.

The report said the convicts worked in a wire enclosed space on the loading piers for twelve hours a day with two hours rest at lunch and that they were fed only bread and water. It told of the execution without trial of three of the convicts because they stole bread from one of the ships they were loading.

At the recent hearing at which the Russian lumber was admitted to this country representatives of the Amtorg corporation testified no convict labor had entered into the production of the lumber and representatives of the International Paper company appeared on behalf of those urging entry. Treasury officials expected representatives of the paper company would appear tomorrow to file a protest against today's action.

Lowman's decision to admit the two shiploads of Russian lumber was followed by protests filed by the National Llumber Manufacturers association and the American Wage Earners Protective conference. The latter organization called particular attention to the pulpwood importations by the International Paper company.

SOVIET WARNS AGAINST EXCLUSION OF GOODS

MOSCOW, July 25.—(AP)—A warning to all countries imposing obstacles to the admission of soviet products was delivered today to a group of foreign newspaper correspondents by Maxim Litvinoff, new Russian commissar for foreign affairs.

M. Litvinoff, who recently succeeded Georges Tchitcherin at the commissariat, said the soviet government might sharply reduce or even stop its purchases in such countries.

The United States was obviously foremost in M. Litvinoff's mind. It has recently placed embargoes on soviet timber, coal and matches.

"We are convinced that all these anti-soviet campaigns are doomed to complete failure," Litvinoff said, "since they are bound ultimately to strike a still heavier blow at the interests of the countries participating in them than at our own interests.

"At present, when an economic crisis has spread almost over all countries, the exclusion from world trade of such a vast state as the soviet union can hardly be considered wise or as meeting the interests of a realistic policy."

LEADER OF DISOBEDIENCE CAMPAIGN STILL EVASIVE

BOMBAY, July 25.—(AP)—Indian politicians who know Mahatma Gandhi intimately today foresaw nothing but long negotiations growing out of the visit of the Sapru-Jayakar commission to the "holy one" in the Yeroda jail, which led to a long discussion and the writing of a letter to the leaders Nehru at Allahabad.

The opinion was ventured by observers that Gandhi did not commit himself to any cessation, compromise or change of the campaign of civil disobedience which his salt raids beginning last March set in motion.

Many nationalist campaigners believe, it was frequently stated here today, that the Mahatma is dodging the issue.

By Fleet of Motor Vehicles

If you've been a tourist in foreign lands, you've probably come to have a high regard for a standard guide book, an authority which tells you where to go and what to do.

Consider your ordinary shopping tour in the same light. Without an up-to-date guide book of merchandise appearing daily within the page of The Bulletin, your most casual trip to the shore would be more or less like a ramble in foreign countries.

We're speaking of the advertisements of course. If it were not for the advertisements you would be a stranger in the market. Buying would be guessing. As it is you can make a shopping trip in a few minutes and buy with confidence.

Take full advantage of the great guidebook of this modern age... read the advertisements in The Bulletin every day and remember that The Bulletin is delivered by a fleet of motor vehicles to all points in Eastern Connecticut on the main routes for the breakfast table.

HENRY FORD'S NAME BROUGHT INTO COMMUNIST INQUIRY

Rev. Charles E. Coughlin At Detroit Characterized Ford As An Unconscious Cause of the Spread of Communism—Declared That Ford Is "The Greatest Force In the Movement to Internationalize Labor Throughout the World" —Cited Occurrence At the Ford Plant In Detroit.

DETROIT, July 25.—(AP)—A Detroit priest characterized Henry Ford as an unconscious cause of the spread of communism in testimony given here today before the congressional committee investigating communistic activity in the United States.

The statement was made by Father Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, who was called before the committee because of his series of radio addresses on communism.

The congressional committee arrived in Detroit from New York today and opened its hearings in the federal building. It planned to take up communistic activities in Michigan.

Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, chairman of the committee, asked Father Coughlin for an explanation of his statement.

Father Coughlin said that Ford is "the greatest force in the movement to internationalize labor throughout the world."

"A year ago, on the eve of the automobile show in New York," the witness continued, "Mr. Ford issued a statement that was printed on the front page of every daily newspaper in the United States that he required 30,000 more workers at his plant in Detroit.

"As a result of that statement more than 30,000 men, who were out of work, flocked to Detroit from Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas and other southern states, and while the weather was at zero stood in front of the Ford plant trying to get those jobs. There were no jobs for them and the only redress they had was to have the fire hose turned on them to drive them away."

Father Coughlin stated that he believed action such as this at the manufacturing plant of a leading capitalist would tend to embitter laborers against all capitalists and cause them to listen to the teachings of communists.

"Getting all those men here in that manner was not done on purpose was it?" Chairman Fish asked.

"No, it was done through ignorance," Father Coughlin replied. "Just as the peace ship was sent to Europe through ignorance."

Father Coughlin added that Ford's money is helping the soviet government in Russia and referred to the $13,000,000 contract Ford signed with soviet representatives.

HELP FOR VICTIMS OF EARTHQUAKE IN ITALY

ROME, July 25—(AP)—Help for the stricken population of quake torn southern Italy was pouring into the devastated region today as the Italian government threw every resource into relief measures.

King Victor Emmanuel himself, who had started for the scene as soon as the gravity of Wednesday's shocks was realized, reached the town of Rochetta in the province of Avellino, which suffered heaviest of all in the earth convulsions.

The monarch came to inspect the relief work in progress and to bring comfort to his subjects. With him were various officials who are actively engaged in the work of aiding the injured and sheltering the thousands of homeless. He travelled over the area by automobile and planned to visit other stricken towns.

At the same time, Monsignor Spirito Chiapetta, a special envoy of the Pope, started a tour of the region and reached Benevento which also suffered heavily in the disaster.

The exact number of dead in the great quake was still somewhat obscure tonight and the government was compiling a detailed account which will be made public as soon as possible.

The latest government figures place the number of dead at 1,883 with the injured at 4,264.

Of these by far the largest number of victims were in the province of Avellino where the government reported 1,607 lives lost.

PARIS, July 25—(AP)—The desire of 73-year-old Princess Amadee De Broglie to marry Don Luis De Bourbon, 42, son of the Infanta Eulalia of Spain and cousin of King Alfonso, was the subject of pleading before the tribunal of the seine today.

Henri Torres, specialist in defending communist agitators, appeared for the aristocratic princess. He pleaded for her to be granted the right to seek happiness wherever she sees it, no matter what her age.

Maitre Aubepin, head of the Order of Advocates of Paris, defended the suit of the princess' family, represented by her nephew, the Duke De Brissac. He pleaded that the princess was mentally unsound and asked the court to name a council of three doctors to examine her.

Aubepin declared that the very fact that the princess considered marriage with Don Luis, a discredited prince barred from France for misconduct, was enough to show she was unbalanced.

The decision of the court will be handed down tomorrow afternoon.

DETROIT PAID TRIBUTE TO SLAIN RADIO ORATOR

DETROIT, July 25—(AP)—Thousands of men, women and children today and tonight paid their tribute to Jerry Buckley, slain radio orator, walking in a never-ending line past his bier in the living room of his home.

This spontaneous procession, which started last night, grew throughout the day and showed no signs of diminishing as the hour for closing the home approached. Police estimated the crowd at 50,000 or more. The family announced that no visitors would be received after midnight, when preparations would begin for the funeral tomorrow morning at St. Gregory's Catholic church.

Meanwhile, police were holding a man and a woman whom they considered important figures in the investigation of the killing. The man is Jack Klein, motion picture operator. Klein was sitting beside Buckley in the lobby of the La Salle hotel early Wednesday when he was killed by three gunmen a short time after he had completed announcing the results of the mayoralty recall election.

NEWS VENDOR ASSAULTED BY CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

NEW ORLEANS, July 25—(AP)—Angered by a news vendor's cry of the contents of Governor Huey P. Long's weekly newspaper, the Louisiana Progress, Augustus G. Williams, candidate for congress from the first Louisiana district, jumped out of his automobile today and knocked the man down with a punch on the nose.

Charles Mooty, the 34-year-old news seller, was yelling out a story printed in the paper reflecting on Williams and Senator Ransdell, who is being opposed for the senate by the governor. Mooty was taken to a hospital to have his nose treated and later swore out a complaint before the district attorney, who ordered Williams arrested and fixed bond at $1,000.

CHICAGO BABY CASE MORE MIXED UP THAN EVER

CHICAGO, July 25.—(AP)—The Bamberger-Watkins baby case was more mixed up today than ever.

Yesterday a jury of scientists decreed the two three weeks old infants had been correctly tagged at birth but confused in the hospital and that the Charles Bamberger heir was in the William Watkins home and vice versa.

Watkins accepted the verdict, but Bamberger did not.

Last night a jury of physicians declared the offspring were in the right homes but with their labels confused. Later the Watkins and the Bambergers were reported to have agreed. Each couple took back home the youngster they had been caring for all along.

But today Watkins, haggard and unshaven, asserted that the Watkins household has not agreed to anything—either the scientists' decision that they have the wrong baby or the physicians' that they have the right one.

The Bambergers, however, are right where they were from the beginning when this thing came up—they are certain they have a young Bamberger, and Mr. Bamberger said: "They can debate and deliberate until the cows come home, but we are going to keep the baby we've got."

LITTLE ROCK MAN LEADS ALL-AMERICAN AIR DERBY

SAN ANGELO, Tex., July 25.—(AP)—Lieut. Lee Gehlbach of Little Rock, Ark., led the dozen fliers participating in the All-American air derby into San Angelo from Houston today, swooping down to a landing in his Little Rocket plane at 11:18:35 a. m.

He flew the 329-mile lap in 2 hours 15 minutes, 35 seconds, nearly 16 minutes faster than his closest competitor, and his elapsed time since the racers left Detroit Monday was 17:38:07, almost two hours ahead of the runner-up, Stub Quinby of Moline, Ill.

Quinby followed Lieut. Gehlbach in, making the flight from Houston in 2:31:20 hours, bringing his total elapsed time to 19:29:29, for second place in the race thus far.

Lowell Bayles of Springfield, Mass. arrived third, his time for the hop being 2:38:29, bringing his elapsed time to 19:32:18.

Herman Hamer of Chicago, Ill., fourth to land, had third best time for the day's flying, 2:38 hours flat. However, he had no elapsed time to compute since he dropped out as an official contender when he was forced to land before reaching Houston yesterday, losing several hours.

NEW BUILDING DONE FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

NEWINGTON, Conn., July 25.—(AP)—Confidence in the usefulness and happiness of crippled persons of the future was expressed today by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, at the dedication of the new building at the Newington home for crippled children.

A cripple himself as a result of an attack of infantile paralysis, Gov. Roosevelt exemplified the hope and optimism he expressed as he stood on the platform, leaning on a chair for support, before an audience largely made up of patients at the institution. Some of his listeners heard his message of cheer from wheelchairs, others lay in white cots which had been wheeled into the auditorium.

Two governors participated in the dedicatory exercises—Gov. Roosevelt and Gov. John H. Trumbull, of Connecticut. With them on the platform also sat Edgar F. Allen, of Elyria, Ohio, president of the International Society for Crippled Children, affectionately known to thousands of crippled children as "Daddy" Allen.

DETROIT COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC WORKS RESIGNS

DETROIT, July 25—(AP)—The recall of Mayor Bowles today sent his chief ally into a self-imposed political exile.

The mayor, holding office in the interim between his recall by a majority of 30,000 last Tuesday and a special election on September 9, received John Gillespie's resignation as commissioner of public works. At the same time Gillespie, storm center of the administration and target for its critics' sharpest darts, announced he was through with politics forever.

His ambition, Gillespie said, had been to win the confidence of the people.

"I am now frank to acknowledge that it is impossible," he said.

VELICKA BOUND OVER ON CONCEALED WEAPON CHARGE

WILLIMANTIC, July 25—Walter Velicka, 17, of 1 Ann street, New Britain, was arraigned in the Columbia town court this afternoon on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. Through Police Officer Arthur M. Hurley, as guardian ad litem, he pleaded not guilty. Justice of the Peace Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch found probable cause, however, and bound the youth over to the next criminal term of the Tolland county superior court under bonds of $2,000. The youth was taken to the county jail.

Velicka's arrest followed his treatment in St. Joseph's hospital for a bullet wound, in which the bullet of a 38 calibre revolver had lodged in the flesh below the joint of the left knee. Dr. Fred M. Smith, who attended the boy this afternoon, reported the matter to the police and Officer Arthur Hurley began an investigation.

Velicka was traveling in an Essex coach owned by Armand Lamontagne and also occupied by Venicio Garofano, New Britain youths, when the machine broke down on the Andover road in Columbia. The story told by one of the boys under questioning by Captain Frank W. McLean was that when the car broke down Velicka got out and pulled the revolver from his pocket. He was handling the weapon when it was discharged and the bullet entered the knee. A previous story told by the trio was that one of two men who seemed to be target practicing had shot Velicka.

Deputy Sheriff Harvey S. Collins of Columbia and Officers Hurley and Albert Montie of this city found the revolver in a clump of bushes where Velicka had thrown it after the mishap and it was then that the charge against the young man was made. Sergeant Harris J. Hulburt of the Stafford Springs state police barracks has started an investigation presumably into the ownership of the revolver.

While the police were seeking for a revolver with which Walter Velicka, 17, of New Britain, is alleged to have wounded himself on the Andover highway in Columbia this afternoon, they located the wrecked automobile reported as stolen from Norwich Thursday night. The car, a 1926 Hudson brougham with the Connecticut registration N-6689, owned by David Bokoff of North Thames street, Norwich, had been driven into a stone wall some distance from the highway, and was quite badly damaged. Bokoff came for the machine this afternoon.

At the Windham high school substantial progress is noted in the construction of a 60-student study room on the third floor and Contractor O. L. Willard believes that the work will be completed by August 15. The first floor of the building, including the offices, is being redecorated. At the Natchaug grammar school the entire first and second floors and basement of the annex are also being repainted and 10 rooms will be finished in cream tint with trimmings to correspond. Redecoration work is also underway at the Windham Center school. This work is being done under the direction of the properties committee, William B. Sweeney, Stanley J. Sumner and H. Clinton Lathrop, of the town school board. The North Windham school property, which was brought up to a modernized condition last year does not require any attention this year other than the installation of two drinking water fountains.

Audit Contract to be Signed.

The town selectmen are expected to sign the contract for an audit of all town books and vouchers within a day or two. The contract is a slightly revised one such as was drawn up early in May between Walter A. Musgrave of Hartford and the special citizens' committee appointed by the townspeople to select an auditor. Dr. George E. Wilcox, member of the committee, stated that work will begin as soon as the selectmen sign the contract. The work must be completed by November 15 and the cost is not to exceed $10,000.

Pursuant to a unanimous vote of the parents of the north Coventry parish school children, the seventh and eighth grade pupils of the five grammar schools in the Coventry district will be taught in one school next year. The town school committee, G. Hersey Robertson, chairman will advertise for bids for the transportation of the children to the No. 10 or Rail schoolhouse which has been selected for this purpose. The lower grades of No. 10 school will be transferred to the Pond Hill school. It is hoped that the movement, which has the endorsement of Supervisor Levi T. Garrison, will result in more adequate instruction for the pupils of the higher grades than has been possible with a teacher responsible for all grades. The system is one that is now in successful operation in the south parish of Coventry.

GOOD MONEY

PREVENTING FIRES

Last year the fire losses of the United States reached the alarming total of over $250,000,000. More than 15,000 lives were lost! A very large percentage of these losses were in small towns and on farms.

Now, a large, nationally-known Ohio Corporation has taken a step to prevent fires. They are appointing men of good character to represent them in every community in the United States. The men they appoint will act as their trained Fire Prevention Experts and receive an exceptionally good income for their services. No experience is required. The training will be given free to the men appointed. The work can be handled in either spare time or full time. Many are now making as high as $300 a month in spare time. Any men in this territory who are interested can get details by writing to Mr. Ray C. [illegible], 1917 Fyr-Fyter Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.—Adv.

COLCHESTER

There was an unusually large crowd of local and out of town people in attendance Thursday evening at the dance held in Grange hall for the purpose of raising funds to cover a shortage in the recent Colchester Fire Co. fireworks subscription. During the first part of the evening music was furnished by Dember's Elmwood hotel orchestra, after which music was furnished by Levy's Grandview hotel orchestra. Mr. Dember and Mr. Levy generously furnished their orchestras for the evening, free of charge, which kindness resulted in keeping the expense for the affair down to a very low figure. Following an unanimous vote for the Fire company members, notes of appreciation were sent Friday to Messrs. Levy and Dember. A large number of New York and New Jersey boarders at the several summer hotels about the town were present, as well as people from Colchester, Norwich, New London, Fitchville, Salem, Westchester, Marlborough, Hartford, Lebanon and Willimantic. In addition to over fifty dollars door receipts, a good sum was secured from the sale of iced drinks. Chief Brown was master of ceremonies and Assistant Chief Conrad was prompter for the dancing. The efficient committee in charge of arrangements was Samuel Freedman, Bob Fedus, H. F. Brown and Augustus Gregory. The affair proved so successful that the members of the Fire Co. are planning to hold similar benefit dances at frequent intervals during the coming months.

BOROUGH-TO-NEW LONDON CANOE TRIP BY TWO BOYS

A trip from Stafford Springs to New London in a canoe was the novel experience of Arnold Baldracchi, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Baldracchi of Willington avenue, and Alfred Marin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Marin, of Center street, Stafford Springs. The boys started in their canoe just below the T. F. Mullen mill on River street Thursday morning at 5:30 and arrived at the state pier in New London Saturday afternoon at 2:30. They camped at Eagleville Thursday night and at Baltic Friday night. They encountered 13 dams and crossed them by carrying the canoe around the dam. On account of low water the boys had to wait four hours just above Willington for water to flow from the Rockville-Willimantic electric light storage reservoir and when they reached the Thames river the waves from the coast guard cutters were difficult to overcome in their small craft. After arriving in New London they sold the canoe to two sailors and spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cini, formerly of Stafford Springs. It is said that this is the first successful attempt to paddle a canoe from Stafford Springs down the Willimantic and Thames rivers to New London.

DANIELSON PEOPLE ASKING ABOUT TRANSPORTATION

DANIELSON, July 26. — There are many citizens, who have no interest whatsoever in who has the contracts for transporting pupils from one district or another of the town of wherever they may study within the limits of Killingly, who have awaited in vain for a full week for some word from the town school committee as to why these transportation contracts have not been advertised for bid, as yet, or a denial of the allegation that no opportunity to bid for the transportation work will be offered for the coming school year.

Here is a matter that last year, fiscally, entailed an expenditure of upwards of $8,000 by the town. This is regarded as rather an important item of expense in the town's budget. No criticism is made anywhere in town of the efficiency with which the transportation was carried out during the last year. It was admittedly very good.

There are those equally efficient, however, who would like a chance to bid on the transportation contracts. There are whispers of favoritism on the part of the school committee in dealing with this matter. There are even those who regard the school committee as in a position defiant of at least a part of public opinion, in a situation involving a very considerable expenditure of money.

Critics call the present situation irregular, inasmuch as the practice has been, for years past, to permit those interested to bid for school transportation work. Again, one hears threats of political reprisals, unless something is done about the affair.

Over and above all this, there are men who operate public service cars in town who insist they will underbid last year's contract prices on some runs if they are given the chance to do so. The particular problem in no way involves the selectmen, it being a matter exclusively in the hands of the town school committee.

It does have to do with a heavy item of expense that can be cut unless clamoring protestors are talking entirely out of turn, and they insist they are not. Putting the transportation jobs up for bid is the only manner in which this matter may be decided to everyone's satisfaction. That, at least, is the expressed opinion of many taxpayers.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Harriet E. Soule.

Mrs. Harriet Ellen Soule, 86, died this morning at East Killingly. She had been feeble for the past two or three years and had failed beyond the point of any hope for recovery during the past year. Mrs. Soule, the wife of Elisha F. Soule, was born in Glocester, R. I., April 13, 1844, a daughter of Thomas B. and Lucinda Simmons Hawkins. The many years of her long life had been spent in her native town and in Killingly. She was a member of the Union Baptist church at East Killingly, where funeral services for her are to be held. Two sons survive in addition to the husband, now nearing 90 years of age and the sole remaining veteran of the Civil war resident in East Killingly. Mr. Soule was a member of K company, 7th Connecticut Volunteers. The sons are Clarence A., of East Killingly, and Frederick T., of Pawtucket. There are also 12 grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren.

The long continued heat-wave appears to be "getting" people. The excuse for this comment is that the state officers at the Danielson barracks had among their reports today one relative to someone stealing the wheels off a hayrake down at Central Village. Sherlock Holmes types that tried to analyze the reason for this theft today decided early in their deliberations that it couldn't have been either a Ford or Chevrolet owner, and thanks for the advs! Hayrake wheels do not fit those kinds of cars. The last guess that one heard about it under a temperature of 90 degrees late this afternoon was that probably some deluded person had taken them to put on a glider—one of the kind that cannot be trusted to glide.

A vigil that lasted from last midnight to 8 o'clock this morning on the part of state officers from the Danielson barracks stationed at Sherman's Corner, over in the town of Chaplin, yielded one lone subject for court appearance, one Daniel Casey, Jr., of Providence. He was ordered into court for operating a vehicle with commercial registration that was lacking a reflector.

Moses T. (Jack) Sherwood, who died at Milldale, suddenly of a heart attack yesterday afternoon, is mourned by numbers of friends in this territory who had come to know him and admire him. He was a very close friend of Henry Gilbert of Broad street and frequently his guest.

Forecasting the political duties that rest upon the electorate for the coming fall season are the published notices of registrars about enrollment of voters. Killingly registrars are to meet for the first time this season on Friday of next week, and also on the Friday thereafter.

There was an exodus from here today, and it will continue Saturday morning, for the famous camp meeting at Old Douglas, Mass. The series of meetings that have continued for more than a week will be concluded for the year on Monday next. This series of meetings has been continued annually, a week each summer, for more than half a century.

Berry-pickers were unabashed today, notwithstanding an arrest and prosecution in the Killingly town court for picking on land without the permission of the owners thereof. They went out in droves this morning, taking their chances, that they might come home with overflowing pails. Incidentally, some owners of berry lands are capitalizing their position by allowing pickers to enter and help themselves at 25 cents a head, a price that is far from exorbitant considering that berries were being offered about town today at 25 cents per quare. Mention is of huckleberries.

The nurses home fund for the nurses home of the Day Kimball hospital has now passed the $5,250 mark and is rapidly climbing toward the goal of $25,000 set as the amount necessary for the completion of the home. The visit to the gardens of the Pomfret estates netted the fund approximately $400 and the dance held at Wildwood park Wednesday night added $250. The trustees of the hospital have voted to go ahead with the construction of the home as the situation at the hospital is becoming very acute. There were four bids submitted by the building committee ranging from $49,850 to $42,210. It was decided that it be better if the hospital board undertook the building themselves, with the work under the direction of some competent construction engineer. Albert J. Daniels of Shrewsbury, Mass., has been engaged for this purpose. The building of the nurses home has been left in the hands of Ernest Kent, Ray Bosworth, Alexander Gilman, S. Nikoloff and Archibald MacDonald, Jr., who will act as the building committee.

The work will be under the personal direction of Mr. Daniels who will hire all help and buy all materials subject to the approval of the committee. Mr. Daniels has been in Putnam for the last few days and plans to start work on the home immediately.

JEWETT CITY

HOW A VALOROUS UMPIRE KINGED IT OVER 18 GIRLS

As an aftermath to the ball game which was played between the Plainfield girls and the Ashland girls, Thursday evening at the Ashland park, it is reported that of the something over 200 local fans that made up the ultra-enthusiastic gallery, fully twenty-five per cent of the older birds were in Norwich, Friday, looking for treatment for eye strain. Baseball people or any other sort of people are asked to calmly consider the remarkable feat that was performed, and gotten away with, by Mr. Burda, the umpire. After satisfying himself that his insurance policies were valid and in full force, he bade his friends and relatives all good bye, and stepped into the field to umpire this classy contest, voluntarily taking over the task of undertaking to render satisfactory rulings for 18 girls. There was sure an Eden, if ever there was one—young misses with glowing cheeks, fluttering skirts and twilkling stockings. This last must be construed to mean that where hosiery was to be noted, the same twinkled, or appeared to do so. The umpire's position was surely enviable from some viewpoints, for during one short hour of doubtful supremacy, he was the boss, and actually told the most imperious of the bunch where she might be expected to alight. The horrors of one situation may be readily imagined. Knotted score, 15 all, darkness approaching rapidly. Genevra, the pitcher, delivered one right over the heart of the dish and Gladys at bat kissed it right on the nose and over the fence. Across the plate breezed Madeline with the tally that would have won. Then, then up to the box romped Rosalie to inform Mr. Umpire that it was a foul. Oh, boy! then was the time for disappearing! Mr. Burda, and he is some removed from being hard to look at, seemed to somehow stem the current of protest. If one should think it was not some situation, he will be privileged to try it at the return game. Nine fair blondes crying "foul," nine determined brunettes shouting "fair." Eighteen arguing girls all clad in their tantalizing baseball togs, from which all spare equipment had been eliminated, all pleading their prettiest to one much frightened mere man umpire. Well, it just had to be a foul, leaving the tattered umpire in full possession of the facts, of why some men leave home.

Fisk News via Boston

The Fisk mill here, which employed close to 400 hands, has been still since July first. Hardly any of the operatives' families have moved away, as they are being charged no rent for the tenements they occupy. Any news or rumor that imparts information relative to what the future may bring forth, is of vital interest to Jewett City. The following editorial is from he Norwich Evening Record, of Friday, July 25:

Fisk and Goodyear

In the course of a semi-editorial news article on the condition of the rubber-goods manufacturing industry, the Boston News Bureau says:

"The reduction in tire prices probably was more serious to Fisk Rubber company than to any other large organizations. Fisk reported a net loss of $336,713 in first six months of 1929 and will undoubtedly show a considerably greater net loss for first half of this year. It faces a poor year as far as earnings are concerned.

"There is a possibility that Fisk may be absorbed by a larger company before end of the year. Goodyear has been mentioned as a possible purchaser if it could be done on satisfactory terms. Fisk's New England plant would give Goodyear added geographical manufacturing diversification, although there is some question as to whether Goodyear needs additional manufacturing facilities at present."

All of which is interesting, whether true or not. And it certainly isn't true that Goodyear would be getting "added geographical manufacturing diversification" by re-opening the Fisk Jewett City plant, seeing that it already has a plant of its own at Goodyear—formerly Williamsville—which is only about a hop, skip and a jump away. So let not Jewett City be too optimistic, at least on the serength of this report.

WHATSOEVER CIRCLE NOTES FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The fortieth anniversary of the organization of Whatsoever circle of The King's Daughters was observed by its members and guests in the vestry of the Baptist church Thursday evening. A supper of cold ham, beef loaf, potato salad, pickles, rolls, cake and iced tea was served at seven o'clock. The tables were arranged in the form of a cross, with purple fluted runners, the emblem and color of the order. Beautiful bouquets of phlox, roses, Queen Anne's Lace, baby's breath and maiden hair ferns were the table and piano decorations. Miss Alice A. Brown, leader of the circle, presided. After the supper, at which the divine blessing was invoked by Rev. E. E. Scates, the hymn O, Worship the King, was sung. Rev. Mr. Scates read the 45th Psalm. The King's Daughters special psalm, and offered prayer. Miss Brown made a most gracious speech of welcome, basing her remarks on certain features of Eagle camp which she recently visited. She spoke of the welcome she received, and which she in turn, passed on to those present at this anniversary. The camp spirit, the obedience to its laws, the feeling of humility and not importance, and the acceptance of leadership were applied to The King's Daughters. Mrs. R. A. Wilbur recited an original poem, Forty Years Ago, which was apt and clever, both in expression and sentiment. Miss M. A. Burdick, leader of Dorcas circle, gave a congratulatory speech calculated to weld the friendship between the members of the circles much closer, so warmly appreciative was it, of the worth of this particular circle and its individual members. Miss Ellen Prior sang the song composed by the late Charles Edward Prior for Whatsoever circle forty years ago, Only A Cup Of Water. Mrs. Grace Manning, of Norwich, county president, read an original poem composed for this circle. John MacLean sang Danny Boy, with Rock of Ages as an encore. Mrs. G. H. Prior, state president, and one of the charter members of Whatsoever circle, spoke principally in a reminiscent way, recalling many incidents and persons. The circle, as well as the Christian Endeavor society, was the result of the enthusiasm of Mrs. Laura Phinney, in the second year of the late Rev. J. W. Payne's pastorate. Its members were Miss Mary M. Brown, Mrs. Sarah Cheney, Mrs. Phinney, Miss Maggie Fiskin, Mrs. Lucy Franklin, Mrs. Eunice Reynolds, Mrs. Ellen Phillips, Mrs. Mary Prior, Alice Phillips Prior, Emma Campbell Starbuck, Grace McKinney Boyle, Mrs. J. W. Payne. Mrs. Prior had a large photograph of this group, and spoke of their characteristics and accomplishments, paying well merited tribute to them. She spoke particularly of the steadfast hold Mrs. M. E. G. Wilson, a former leader, kept upon the circle and its members. And, may it go down in history, that one member bcame leader, county president, state president and international president, and is now again state president none other than Mrs. Prior herself.

One of the beautiful stained glass windows in the church was the gift of this circle, and is one of very few ever given by a King's Daughters' circle to any church. In all these years, the circle has been full of good works; years ago, when there were not so many organizations which did charitable work, the selectmen occasionally reported needy cases to this circle. The late Frederick H. Fanning, senior, was a first selectman, and he always referred to this circle as the Daughters of Zion.

No program is ever complete when Mrs. Manning is present unless she gives one of her inimitable recitations. Miss Brown asked her to thus entertain the guests, which she did by reciting Aunt Polly at the Rural Aid Society, giving The Census Man for an encore. Miss Brown closed this very delightful celebration with thanks to all who have assisted in arranging for the anniversary, and the Mispah benediction was repeated. Guests of the circle, besides the state president, Mrs. Prior, and county president, Mrs. Manning, were:

Mrs. Vera Manning of Norwich, the county secretary and Bulletin reporter, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox; Jewett City Press Reporter Miss Grace Olin Dorcas Circle Leader Miss M. A. Burdick, and the members and their husbands. The committees were: Program, Mrs. E. M. Gray, Mrs. J. T. Barry, Mrs. E. E. Scates and Miss Alice Brown; invitations, Mrs. Scates and Mrs. Lewis Hewlitt; supper, Mrs. Edward Raney, Mrs. John MacLean and Mrs. R. A. Wilbur; reception, Mrs. Scates and Miss Brown. The waitresses were Marian Wilbur, Margery MacLean and Evelyn Pollard. Miss Ellen Prior was the accompanist.

MEETING CONNECTICUT'S REQUIREMENTS.

Connecticut has a considerable area that is used or available for agricultural purposes. It doesn't make full use of that area and it doesn't begin to supply the needs of Connecticut consumers in such ways as are possible.

In an endeavor to show what Connecticut is producing and to get consumers more interested the Hartford Market Gardeners' Inc., staged a parade in Hartford this week in which there were 40 truckloads of products of the farms in that vicinity. We have the impression that it was a bit of enlightenment for many who witnessed it. It showed what is being done agriculturally and if it didn't arouse an interest in state grown produce and create an increased demand for it we'll be surprised.

Such a demonstration is needed in other cities of the state. Stress may well be laid upon the fact that fresh, state grown produce can be had. It has frequently been the experience of many that state grown produce was not obtainable. Requests for it have been met with the statement that it couldn't be secured. What is true of truck garden products is also true of fruit.

Thus the situation appears to be one in which there is need for showing the consumers of Connecticut that they can get Connecticut produce, that raisers are anxious to meet their requirements, that such products will meet copetition. The Hartford display will do much to stimulate interest but when it is found that markets provide state grown goods then Connecticut consumers are going to be encouraged to insist upon as well as ask for them.

Instead of importing so much that can be raised right here at home, and therefore better the agricultural opportunities, there should be a broadening of activities and an endeavor to get and retain a larger part of the Connecticut business. Connecticut farmers are the logical ones to serve Connecticut consumers. They are close to their markets and they are in a position to supply a greater share of the Connecticut requirements. Even an industrial state is anxious to see its agricultural possibilities developed.

MIXED BABIES.

Chicago is experiencing more excitement. This time it is not because of the gangsters. The trouble now centers in a certain hospital where the nurses have gotten two babies so mixed up that their own parents are not sure which is which, the doctors are equally uncertain, the nurses are not sure and scientists who have been brought in to decide have experienced unusual difficulty in reaching a conclusion because the babies are identically alike in so many particulars. Even after the final decision has been made by experts the parents are divided in their opinion about the correctness of the decision and one fond and doting father is unwilling that any exchange should be made.

This is a situation which has occurred before. Other hospitals have had unpleasant experiences because of just such mixups. Naturally the parents are much disturbed. They want their own child and not some other but the question now is whether they will ever be convinced that whatever they do is right.

While it is not often that such a situation develops there is always the possibility where there are so many children and where two children are as much alike unless a system is in use which will make such an exchange impossible.

Because of just such cases it becomes evident that too much care cannot be exercised. The idea of placing tapes with the baby's family name on the child's back seems well enough until the time for the bath comes and the tape is washed off. For it then to be placed indiscriminately upon the back of any child will hardly do. Other systems are in use and some ideas have been advanced to provide safeguards against any possible confusion. It is quite evident that a hit or miss scheme is inadequate. There may be babies who require no mark of identification but there are others who do, and it is the duty of the hospitals to see that they are provided. It may not be so simple as it might seem unless there is extreme care taken. A bit of carelessness, lack of attention or hurried oversight can, as is shown in the Chicago case, cause no end of trouble and make uncertain whether the mistake can ever be corrected.

THE ROOSEVELT OPPOSITION.

One of the appointments which was ready for action by the senate before adjournment was that of Nicholas Roosevelt of New York to be vice governor general of the Philippines. No action was taken because it was indicated that there was objection to his appointment from the islands and delay was provided in order that there might be a hearing upon such objections.

There is nothing to indicate that Mr. Roosevelt isn't the man for the place or that he is unfit through ability or lack of experience in such work to administer the duties of the office. Neither does it appear that he is objected to because he knows nothing about the Philippines.

From all indications it would appear that the opposition being displayed toward him is based solely upon the fact that he is committed to the policies which are being carried out in the islands under the present governor general and his predecessor and not one who looks favorably upon early independence for the islands and not mildly or otherwise advocating the setting free of the Philippines.

With this country committed to look after the islands in the east and with no action taken looking to the setting free of the possessions, it would be a strange thing indeed if a vice governor were to be named who would be contrary minded to the governor and to the administration at Washington.

This government is desirous of doing everything possible for the advancement of the Philippines. Its labors have produced excellent results already and there have been no convincing arguments set forth as to why the islands should be set adrift. Certainly it cannot be expected that any officials will be sent to direct their affairs who is known as an advocate of any other course. For the islanders to raise objection means that they should be prepared to advance some sound reason for not confirming the appointment, and it certainly would not be a sound reason to advance that the nominee didn't favor independence.

Mr. Roosevelt knows the islands, knows their needs and has been named because it is believed he is specially fitted to hold the office.

THE NIGHT ROAD WALKER.

The question has been raised as to where the pedestrian must walk at night if he musn't walk on the cement roadbed. This has come about because of the many accidents to pedestrians who have been walking the much used roads at night.

It should be realized that the pedestrian has a right to use the highways. Because he is there doesn't mean that a motorist has the right to strike him. He should be considerate of where he walks under all conditions and particularly so at night, but the great trouble with the walker in the highway at night is that he carries no light by which to warn the motorist that he is there.

It is quite evident that on most roads there is no decent place for the pedestrian except that he uses the pavement. His right to use it isn't in question but he must appreciate the fact that in ambling along the outside edge of the highway, as he would naturally do, he is not easily seen and this is particularly true when a car is being driven around the inside of a curve.

That the person walking the highway should carry a light or wear a reflector is a need that has long been recognised. The motorist can then give timely warning of his approach and so guide his car that the walker will be allowed plenty of room, or the motorist can slow down if he is about to pass another machine at a point close to the pedestrian. It is a matter of precaution, a means of prevention, that should so appeal to the highway walker that he would insist upon it for his own good. A person walking a "black" road at night is not easily picked up but a light or reflector would indicate something ahead to look out for. Pedestrians as well as motor vehicles should be designated by lights when on the highway at night.

THE TRANSCRIPT'S CENTURY.

It is 100 years ago since the Boston Transcript was published and it marked the occasion by a special edition of merit and interest. Like other papers in the century class it has watched others come and go while steadfastly maintaining the even tenor of its way and serving the needs of a discriminating constituency. The Transcript has long since been known as one of those journals which are necessary in order to make the day complete.

The paper which serves for a century gives evidence that it fills a need, that it understands the requirements of the community in which it is located and that it has become an asset of high value. The Transcript is an outstanding newspaper which reflects the high ideals of its producers. It stands in a field by itself and presents its news in a dignified, attractive and careful manner. Pride is taken in the manner in which its news is edited and presented and care is exercised in the character and dependability of its reports. Its departments are of the highest class and characteristic of the paper's policy.

The century has seen many changes in the Transcript. It has participated in the march of progress with the idea of giving the best service to its readers and it is not too much to believe that there has been a hearty appreciation of that endeavor. The fact that it has passed the century mark in a most healthy state is one of the best evidences of it. The Transcript is one of the papers that is read, not simply glanced at. It is the kind that lends character and gives influence to a community and it is a pleasure to congratulate it upon its 100 years and to express the belief that its second century will find it even more robust and successful.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

That "truth is stranger than fiction" never had a stronger concrete illustration than in the life of Moses. Strange and unusual as his career was there is nothing in it that challenges our credulity. From the very beginning it seems to have been a career foreordained of God to carry out some of His great purposes in the development of civilization. If even a man was used of God to carry out his purposes in the development of humanity along broad lines that man most assuredly was Moses. And yet how modest and diffident he was! When the Almighty handed him his credentials in the wilds if Midian to visit Pharaoh with that amazing demand to liberate the Children of Israel from their long term of bondage—which seemed like a most hazardous proposition; in fact it was like asking him to throw his treasures into the Nile—what an answer he gave to that commission!

In the July issue of The Review of Reviews, Charles Lathrop Pack, a professional forester has a very illuminating article on the protection of our forests. This article is both timely and unanswerable. It is timely because we are making far greater demands on our forests than they are in replacing. Unless we have in the immediate future a new and different policy in dealing with the tracts denuded of their products there will be in the not far distant future a lumber famine right here in the United States. It may not reach the terrible conditions that now prevail in China. In this unfortunate land they have alternate floods and famines because they do not have men like Mr. Pack to bring the matter intelligently before the public. To reforest the cleared timber fields will require a large appropriation of money from the national treasury, and it is right here where the shoe pinches.

Not long since a committee was considering some means by which forests might be protected from devastating fires that have made such havoc among the timber districts. At length one member remarked: "Well what is to become of this little child that we call Conservation?" Mr. Pack says: "This is a quection which no one as yet answered. That little orphan child is certainly not one of the pampered wards of government. Other more favored children have done nicely—that sturdy pair of twins, the Army and Navy, have never lacked for proper nourishment. That touble-some youngste, Prohibition Enforcement, sits in the high chair at table and is carefully tended by the Congressional nurse maids. But the little red-headed step-child, Conservation, whenever the senatorial Santa Claus brings around his big bundle of good things, has always been sent to bed without his supper."

On the night when this immortal paragraph was written it was so chilly that one needed wraps if he sat in his summer house. This leads one to inquire if the weather is under the control of a fixed and immutable law. If it is how shall we explain these sudden and unseasonable changes? If it is not, to what agency can we impute such phenomena? Again, while we here in the east are under the spell of abnormal heat, why is it at the same time portions of the west and south are having a hard frost? Before these words appear in print we here at the north may have a burning wave. Is it all haphazard, or is it under the dominion of law that we only imperfectly understand? But can we determine why law acts in this way? Sometimes we experience the reverse of this: the east swelters while the west shivers. But after all it is fortunate that man does not control the weather.

Now what was presented in the above paragraph raises the question if it is possible for the finite mind to reconcile this apparent fickleness on the part of the weather with the unchangeable working of law. That this great universe was created and then left to run in any old way is clearly unthinkable. This would violate any intelligent conception of the cosmic order. No machine was ever made to run itself; it must be under the control of law. We find analogies to this in this great world of human beings. Man is endowed with intellect, but he does not always use it; in other words he does a great many fool things. I think we will all agree that old Samuel Johnson was a great man, but he did some funny things. In walking along the streets of London he was in the habit of touching all the lamp posts. If he omited one he would go back and touch it—just like a little four year old boy.

Wherever one goes in this old world of ours he will find tragedy scattered all along the trail. The name of this tragedy is "legion." Sometimes it is financial, or domestic. It may be physical, or worse still, mental. About the saddest thing in this world is a diseased mind. Not long ago the writer received a letter from a dear friend whose ordination he attended years ago in the northern part of this state. The letter was written from a certain institution. He claimed that he had been betrayed and kidnaped when he was giving lectures and made an inmate at the institution. The other day I called upon him and he seemed overjoyed to see me. I listened to him for more than an hour and was perfectly amazed at his learning and brilliancy, but at the same time I saw clearly that he was badly "off," and did not realise it. Fortunately a son is soon to take him home in the west.

In a world where selfishness looms up a hundred times bigger than it ought to, the following paragraph taken from last Sunday's lesson may be helpful: "In a competitive society there are always some people who look on getting a living as a scramble. As they see it, a man cannot get on unless from time to time he pushes somebody aside. To them it seems a necessity. The man gets in their way, and they have to clear the track. Their consciences rest all the easier if the man shoved aside is a weakling. In that case they try to unload their own responsibility on him; he brought his reverses of fortune upon himself. Jacob no doubt quieted his scruples by arguing that he was born for mastery, while Esau's personality simply begged to be mastered. Esau would hold special privilege in a nerveless grasp, therefore it should be wrested from him."

A great moral, fully as much as a political, question now faces the people of this country. And the burning problem is, how are the people of this country going to meet it. In times past, from the Revolutionary to the Civil war and since, the people of this country have never flinched when they faced problems that had to be settled in one way or another. This problem has recently been stated very clearly by Elihu Root, former secretary of state, and that problem is the rapid spread of communism in our public schools and elsewhere must be dealt with, and without delay, with an iron hand. No calamity could be greater along material lines than to carry out here such a communism that has nearly bankrupt Russia. No crime could be greater than to rob men of wealth, whose fortunes have been accumulated by energy, thrift, and financial ability!

Thirteen centuries ago the bishopric of Norwich, England, was founded, and in honor of the anniversary a celebration "worthy of the occasion" is planned to take place next month in the old Norfolkshire town from which this city received its name. The chief services in the Protestant Episcopal cathedral church are fixed for August 13. These services will be attended by the archbishop of Canterbury and by a majority of all the Episcopal bishops in the world. Three factors contribute toward bringing such an important ecclesiastical representation to Norwich. The first is of course, the historical event which is to be commemorated. The second factor is to some extent fortuitous. It arises from the circumstance that 300 out of the 400 bishops of the Anglican communion are holding a month-long conference at Lambeth palace, London, and at the close of the conference on August 7, they plan to go to Norwich in a body.

Contains More Than 40 Churches

The third reason to make Norwich a particular center of interest to churchmen at this time is its wealth in ecclesiastical architecture of which it contains more than 40 examples. The most important church structure of course is the cathedral, which is situated in the hollow between the castle and the river. It was founded in 1096. In the thirteenth century a considerable portion of the building was destroyed by fire and was rebuilt thereafter. The architecture of the cathedral as it now stands is composite. The two chapels at the east end are the original Norman. The perpendicular spire, which replaced two earlier wooden spires, belongs to the fifteenth century. The magnificent cloisters were completed in 1430, and the vaulted stone roof of the nave in 1472. The carved work of the oak stalls and misereres dates from the fifteenth century.

Of the other churches in the city, the largest, St. Peter Mancroft, dates from the fifteenth century. It is the finest parish church in ngland and one of the first. St. Andrew's Hall, a fine Gothic edifice, was originally the nave of the Blackfriars monastery church. The Guildhall is a fine flint perpendicular structure, occupying the site of the ancient Tolbooth and dates from 1408. The grammar school belongs to the early fourteenth century; it was formerly a chapel of St. John, and has a fine crypt.

Few Roman Remains

The history of Norwich long antedates even the oldest of these structures, though there is no conclusive evidence that, prior to the coming of the Angles, the community was important. Caistor-by-Norwich, four miles south of Norwich, is on the site of what was probably a Romano-British country town. A few Roman remains have been discovered in Norwich itself, but not enough to indicate any real occupation or habitation.

According to tradition Uffa made a fortification here about 570, but its history as a royal borough cannot be traced before the reign of Ethelstan (924-940), when it possessed a mint. After being destroyed by the Danes Norwich enjoyed a period of prosperity under Danish influence and was one of the largest boroughs in the kingdom at the Conquest.

Ralph de Guader, earl of East Anglia under William I, formed the nucleus of a French borough with different customs from the English, and after his forfeiture, which involved the ruin of many of the old burgesses, a masonry castle was built and the center of burghal life gradually transferred to the new community west of it.

Chartered in 1158

By 1158, when Henry II granted the burgesses a charter confirming previous liberties, the two boroughs seem to have amalgamated. A fuller charter given by Richard I in 1194 and confirmed by later sovereigns made Norwich a city enjoying the same liberties as London.

From Henry IV the citizens obtained a charter (1404), making their city a county with a mayor and two sheriffs instead of four bailiffs, and Henry V added 24 aldermen and 60 common councilmen (1418). The cathedral precinct became parcel of the city at the Dissolution and in 1556 the neighboring hamlets were incorporated in the county of Norwich. The charter of Charles II (1684) remained in force till 1835, when one sheriff was removed and the number of aldermen, common councilmen and wards diminished. Since 1298 Norwich has been represented in parliament by two members.

The Historic Markets

Two annual fairs, existing before 1332, were formally granted to the city in 1482. One was then held in Lent, the other began on the feast of the commemoration of St. Paul (June 30). These have been succeeded by the Maunday Thursday horse and cattle fair, and the pleasure fairs of Easter and Christmas. The market, which must have existed before the Conquest, was held daily in the thirteenth century, when citizens enclosed stalls by royal license. Edward III made Norwich a staple town, and the importance of its trade in wool and worsted dates from his reign.

Diversified Manufactures

The manufactures of Norwich, England, like those of Norwich, Conn., are very much diversified, including foundries and engineering works, iron and wire fence works, brewing, brick works, chemical works, tanneries and the production of mustard, starch and crepe, gauze and lace; and there are large boot and shoe factories. The great cattle market lies below the castle.

The municipal, county and parliamentary boroughs are coextensive. The city is governed by a lord mayor (this having been conferred in 1910), 16 aldermen and 48 councilors. The area is 7905 acres; its population is about 121,000.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 26—You would not, off hand, assume that results of the republican senatorial primaries in Maine could have much bearing on the dispute in the senate between two democrats, McKellar of Tennessee and Copeland of New York, as to whether there should be ordered an investigation of shipping board activities.

There is a connection, however, and it works out something like this:

McKellar, who is an anti-ship subsidy man, was desirous of investigating circumstances of recent ocean mail contracts. Copeland opposed, and stuck it out single-handed in closing days of the session to prevent a vote on the McKellar proposal, frankly resorting to filibuster tactics.

The Connection

Over in the house, meanwhile, White of Maine had tried out his senatorial ambitions in the primaries and won. Being a republican from Maine, it is more or less assumed that he already is over the senate door sill.

White heads the house merchant marine committee. Next to him on the committee seniority list is that doughty New Jersey republican, Fred Lehlbach.

That is a good committee from a member's point of view. It has rich political possibilities, but Lehlbach already has made it known that when White surrenders the merchant marine committee job to make the senate grade if he can, the New Jersey member intends to exercise his right of seniority selection and move over to head the merchant marine group.

Stalled

And—getting back to the McKellar-Copeland dispute about the shipping board—Lehlbach also is urging investigation of the board, although for different reasons.

He has suspicions there is British money behind a lot of the companies taking over north Atlantic American flag lines from the board.

The leverage the chairmanship of the merchant marine committee will give him in driving that idea forward makes it seem likely that the board will get such a looking-over when congress reconvenes in winter, which will give McKellar opportunity to dig into those mail contracts.

In stalling McKellar's attempt, Copeland produced a two-foot pile of bound volumes covering the last congressional investigation of the board. There were 13 books of it and the New Yorker seemed prepared to read it all if necessary to prevent a vote on a new investigation.

But that would not help at the winter session. A filibuster is only a useful tool in the closing days of a parliamentary session unless backed by a substantial number of long distance talkers. So the shipping board's number seems to be up again.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Jim Crow Plays a Little Joke

What is life that knows no fun?
Better it had not begun.
—Jim Crow.

It didn't take Jim Crow very long to make himself very much at home at Farmer Brown's. Farmer Brown's Boy had planned to clip one of Jim Crow's wings, so that he wouldn't be able to fly away; but he didn't have to do that. Jim Crow didn't want to fly away. He was quite satisfied not to fly away. In other words, Jim Crow was smart enough to know when he was well off. Farmer Brown's Boy made a place for him in the barn, and every night when it began to get dark Jim Crow would go there of his own accord. Like his father and mother,

Now, Jim Crow was very much interested in the Crows ested in the Hens

he had no desire to be roaming around after dark. He might be very bold and brave in daylight, but as soon as it got dark Jim Crow was afraid, and he didn't care who knew it.

Now, Jim Crow was very much interested in the hens. Every morning he would go out to the henyard with Farmer Brown's Boy and watch the latter feed the hens. He would sit on one of the posts of the henyard and, with his head cocked on one side, he would watch everything that Farmer Brown's Boy did. Then he would ride back on the shoulder or head of Farmer Brown's Boy. He dearly loved to see the hens all come running when Farmer Brown's Boy called them. When Farmer Brown's Boy wasn't around and he was sure that no one else was listening, Jim Crow would try imitating Farmer Brown's Boy when he called the hens to be fed. Over and over he would try it, until at last he was satisfied that he could do it pretty well.

Then one morning Jim Crow wasn't to be found when it came time to feed the hens. "I wonder where the rascal is," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "It isn't like him not to be on hand to help feed the hens." He called Jim, but got no answer. He looked around the barn for him; he looked in all of Jim Crow's favorite places. He didn't see so much as a single black feather of Jim Crow.

"Well, I can't wait for him," said Farmer Brown's Boy. "The hens must be fed." He started for the henhouse. Perhaps you can imagine his surprise when as he turned the corner of the barn he heard some one calling those hens. He looked up to see the hens all racing across the henyard, and there [illegible] was Jim Crow, poking sticks through the chicken wire. He was pretending to feed those hens, and all the time he was calling them. Then he flew up on the nearest post and Farmer Brown's Boy was sure that Jim Crow was laughing, even if he made no sound.

"I wouldn't have believed it, if I hadn't seen it myself," said Farmer Brown's Boy, as he told Mother Brown about it afterward. "There were those hens, walking around with the most surprised and disappointed looks, and there was Jim Crow, enjoying his little joke. There isn't any doubt about it—he was enjoying his little joke. You should have seen his eyes twinkle when I went over to him and spoke to him."

After that Jim Crow played that joke often. Whenever he could think of nothing else to do he would go over and call the hens, and then offer them little sticks or pebbles. He would do it several times a day.

Now, hens are not such stupid creatures as some people think. After a while they refused to come to Jim Crow's call. They were no longer fooled. And finally Jim Crow gave up his little joke in disgust. But while it lasted it was a very funny performance to watch.

The Relation of Weight to Food

By Emery R. Hayhurst, M. D.
Columbus, Ohio.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

"Food is the medicine for health," wrote Oliver Wendell Holmes. The question is to get a food that is really healthful and at the same time economical. After all, the two are the same thing. Many foods of civilized man today are neither healthful or economical. As we look into this situation one is impressed with the fact that nature supplies a few simple but essential articles of diet, with modifications, of course, for infancy, debility, and old age. These are milk, eggs, vegetables, (including flesh, fish and fowl), water, and appetizers (salt, spicy flavors and perhaps stimulants in the nature of the coffee bean, tea leaves, and cocoa). A subsistence upon this keyboard would truly constitute the "medicine for health."

An economic arrangement for diet has been promulgated by nutrition experts as follows, the sum of the figures representing a dollar spent for food:

Milk and its products and substitutes, such as butter, cream, cheese, ice cream, oleomargarine, and perhaps lard—40 cents.

Fruit and vegetables a part of which should be fresh, the balance canned or otherwise preserved—25 cents.

Bread and cereals, some of which are to be made from whole grains, crushed or lacerated—15 cents.

Meat, preferably rare, and including animal organs, and eggs, raw or lightly cooked—15 cents

Sweets, coffee and other stimulants, salt, pepper and flavors (each to be used, not for food, but as bait to guide the appetite to food)—5 cents.

It is on such a diet that health is known to subsist. Preferable as little elaboration in these articles should take place in preparing them as is possible. Slightly unripe fruits and vegetables are, after all, the chief reasons for cooking. The appetite alone can be used as a guide for this normal diet since none of the food items in themselves create an abnormal appetite, leading to over-eating and also none depresses the appetite and thereby leads to under-eating. The dangerous appetite is the one which increases with eating, which means that the foods have been made up too tasty. Surely, milk, vegetables, and grains, rare meats and raw eggs do not produce an undue appetite.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

More Time for the Master's Work

What is the Master's work? Jesus said, "This is the work of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." The fundamental work, then, for all time followers of Christ is belief in the Son of God. A Christian who is full of faith will be faithful. Jesus also said, "He that believeth in me, the work that I do he shall do also." The Bible meaning of faithfulness is not simply a painstaking performance of our duties in a perfunctory manner. A servant may do that a master requires and yet have no faith in him; but the first requisition of the servants of the Lord Jesus is that they believe in Him.

In any vocation of life, to be successful one must believe in his business, and believe that the time and labor expended will secure desired results. So the Christian must believe in Christianity, before he can have the seal that leads to activity. Christ must become to him a living reality, His work an imperative need, and His spirit a ruling power.

"Why so little time for the Master's work?" Because "so slow of hearts to believe." The two disciples had heard of the risen Lord and as they talked by the way, they had a vague trust in Him; but not until He had entered in and abode with them, did they know Him as Lord indeed. So we need to abide with Christ until we know Him in the fullest, as the Saviour of the world, know Him as the master who said, "Ye shall be witnesses of these things both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in Samaua and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Seemingly to many Christians "these words are as idle tales and they believe them not.

Oh, if we believed with an intelligent humble, intense faith that this truth is true, there would be results. What are we doing to convince the world that Christianity is true? We can not hope to induce others to enlist in a cause in which our own faith is wavering. Then let us test His promises, and no longer be faithless, but believing. Faith is strengthened by exercise, and prayer. Let "Lord, I believe, help thou mine unbelief," be our prayer, and let us pray it from an understanding and loving heart.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Flying Over the Amazon Islands.

Flying over Marajo, the giant island that looks like a huge stopper loosely mounted in the broad mouth of the Amazon, and the smaller island of Mexiana, scene of great crocodile hunts, is described by Captain A. W. Stevens, U. S. A., aerial photographer with the National Geographic Society's party that is making the air survey of seaplane routes from Washington to Buenos Aires.

"We flew twice across Marajo," Captain Stevens writes. "From a former trip I had an idea that it must be a forest-covered island. To my amazement we flew for nearly a hundred miles over a flat plain that, for the most part, was treeless.

"Only at the edges of the island, where the Amazon flows, is there much forest, and this forest extends inland but two or three miles. If one could fly high enough he would see Marajo as a grass-covered island completely encircled with the merest fringe of forest. The interior is a mighty plain on which appear, many miles apart, the fazendas of the land owners. Occasionally we saw a shallow lake, fed by small, winding streams, usually having no visible outlet. These lakes are watering places for the herds of the campos.

"Marajo, only a few feet higher than the many huge shoals that exist at the Amazon's mouth, is unbelievably low and flat. Nevertheless, this slight elevation guarantees safety and provides life for hundreds of people and countless thousands of cattle. Wherever you look there are cattle. The herds average a hundred head, from 40 or so in the smallest to 200 or more in the largest. Frequently, from the plane, a dozen herds were in sight at one time.

"Rarely did we see cowboys. Usually they trotted along in pairs. Occasionally a fence stretches, threadlike, across the plains. Many parts of Brazil are fenceless and an annual roundup is held to separate cattle and brand calves. The cattle, seldom in contact with men, and besieged by crocodiles and jaguars, are almost as wild as the beasts of the jungle.

"With us in the airplane were Senor Jose Pambo and his son who own the smaller island of Mexiana, just to the north of Marajo. As we flew over Mexiana, these gentlemen pointed out the shallow lakes where the great crocodile hunts are held yearly on their island.

"Great crocodile hunts are held at the dry season of the year, in October, when as many as 1,300 crocodiles are killed in a day. The reptiles are slowly driven together into shallow ponds, and so massed are relatively helpless. Jaguar hunts are held more frequently. This animal, powerful and dangerous as he may sometimes be, allows himself to be treed by a dozen yelping dogs, and is then quickly dispatched with rifles. Guns and pistols are used to do away with the crocodiles, but to save ammunition the ranchers more often have men drag the huge creatures away by the tail, from the massed group into which they have been driven, when they are killed with axes, or their throats are cut with knives.

"Unlike Marajo, Mexiana has a heavy tropical forest covering about a third of the island, and the streams have banks covered with thick jungle growth. Large lakes exist in the center of the island, and thousands of cattle and calves, browsing around the lakes, must offer tempting bait to crocodiles, jaguars and large snakes.

"The cattle have another enemy, the Capivara, or river pig. When crossing streams, they are occasionally attacked by the piranha, a voracious fish. Ticks, gnats and mosquitoes pester the cattle. The result is that the beef animals are not the well rounded, sleek specimens of our northern states, but rival the Texas longhorn in angularity.

"It was over the island of Mexiana that the long expected happened. A bird hit us. Not only that, but it hit me, and it is partly because my head is hard, and because I did not get the extreme force of the blow, that I was not killed. Every day thousands of birds fly up and away as we approach. It is the bird above that must be watched. Bewildered, it may try to dive under the plane. Pilot Hawkins and the mechanic saw this bird, a fish-eating bird of the gull species, perhaps three feet wing spread and ten pounds weight, dive at us from 200 feet above. Hawkins swerved the plane in an effort to avoid collision. I was just emerging from the rear hatch and the sudden movement of the plane made me turn my head forward. I had no time to see anything! Smash! Something struck me between the eyes and down I went, inside the plane. Dazed, I got to my knees and looked up at the hatch, where a skin lay whipping across the edge of the opening. Felled by the blow, my first thought was that some part of the engine or cowl had come off, had been hit by the propeller, and driven back at me.

"I looked a second time at the object hanging on the cockpit edge, and saw on the under side some feathers. Then I realised what had struck me. We completed our aerial photographs of the island and, some 15 minutes later, landed on the Amazon to make an examination.

"We found that the bird had hit across three cylinders on the inside of the starboard motor. No injury was done the cylinders, except that the wiring was knocked loose from the forward spark plugs. The portions of the bird's body that passed between the cylinders was what had knocked me down.

"Years ago, when Walter Hinton and I were together on the Amazon, it was sometimes exciting dodging the giant buzzards that flew from sand spits on our approach. I am thankful that it was not one of these we hit!"

Hector Avalon, an insurance agent, was shot in New York by one or two men who held him up as he was leaving a Bronx apartment house where he had been collecting premiums. Both robbers escaped. Avalon was taken to a hospital in a critical condition.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Veeder-Root Incorporated, Hartford

Veeder-Root, Incorporated of Hartford and Bristol, was organized on May 15, 1928, a consolidation of the former Veeder Manufacturing company of Hartford, and the Root company of Bristol. Their histories, though widely different, are very interesting.

The Veeder Manufacturing company was established in 1895 by Curtis H. Veeder, who invented the well-known Veeder cyclometer, David J. Post, then treasurer of the Hartford Cycle company, George F. Kehew and Edward A. DeBlois.

The company was incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. Rooms were hired in the Courant building and manufacturing was begun. From this small beginning grew the well-known Veeder Manufacturing company, manufacturers of small, accurate counting machines for every known use, and fine die castings.

The Root company was originally started in Bristol, in about 1866 by Joel H. Root, in a small wooden building in the section of the town known as Root's island. He manufactured small hinges and counters in a small way. The business was continued by him until 1885, and after that time by his son, Charles J. Root, until his death in 1907. During the settlement of his estate, John T. Chidsey assisted in taking inventory, and with some associates formed a new corporation known as the C. J. Root company, and later as the Root company. The small hinge business was expanded to take in continuous or long hinges, metal stampings and job plating, until today their factory is one of the most complete in the country for the manufacture of special hinges and stampings for special purposes. Most automobiles at some time or other have used their hinges for use on windshields, hoods, etc. Their line of counters has been continually improved and increased and these counting devices are noted for their sturdy construction and durability.

The merger of these two companies formed the world's largest manufacturer of precision counting equipment, and during 1929 their counters were sold in 46 of the 48 states, eight of the provinces of Canada, and 25 foreign countries. In fact, their counters went to the South pole with Rear Admiral Byrd, to measure the miles traveled by his dog sleds.

NOAH'S LANDING PLACE BECOMES BATTLEFIELD

Mt. Ararat, Christendom's most famous peak, where, according to the Biblical narrative humanity had its second start after Noah landed his Ark, has become the world's most recent battlefield. News dispatches tell of clashes on the flanks of Ararat between Turkish forces and Kurdish raiders from across the Persian border. The mountain is the subject of a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Because of the wars of the past century, Mt. Ararat has been a sort of fugitive mountain," says the bulletin. "It has not moved as Mohammed would have had his mountain move, but its change of jurisdiction has been just as effective by the simpler device of shifting boundary lines.

"Before 1878 Ararat was shared by Turkey and Persia, with the main peak, Greater Ararat, in Turkish territory; and the smaller eminence, Lesser Ararat, six miles to the southeast, marking the Persian-Turkish border. Then came a further southern advance of Russia that made the Ararat mountain mass a three-way boundary mark. From that time until the World war the mountain marked the southern boundary of Russia. During the war the Muscovite line surged back and forth over Ararat, only the Persian border remaining fixed.

"The Treaty of Sevres, signed in 1920, which attempted to fix the status of Turkey and adjoining territories, created an Armenian republic which included Ararat and pushed the Turkish boundary approximately 100 miles to the south. But the same year the Turks pushed the boundary back even beyond the point established in 1878, placing Greater Ararat entirely under Turkish sovereignty. This has been the status of the mountain since that time.

"Ararat, capped with eternal snow, has a certain austere beauty from a distance; but on close inspection it discloses little to endear it to a beholder as 'the mother of the world,' as Armenians have called it. Owing to its peculiarly porous structure the water from its melting snow is swallowed up and does not produce a rill or torrent to water the lower slopes and near-by plains. This is in striking contrast to other mountains of the general region.

"Today the slopes of Ararat are arid. A certain amount of herbage exists during the rainy season up to an altitude of 12,500 feet. Between that point and the snow line at 14,300 feet the peak is bare. The total altitude of Greater Ararat is 16,750 feet and that of Lesser Ararat, 11,680 feet. Sheep graze on the lower slopes during the moist season; but when the dry season sets in and the sun beats down glaringly, everything is parched and the mountain becomes uninhabitable. Even the birds leave.

"Ararat is difficult to climb and for ages the Armenians asserted that it was supernaturally guarded to prevent any man from gaining its summit. When it was first scaled in 1829 by Parrot, the Armenians insisted that he was lying. A number of mountain climbers have since reached the top and in 1850 a Russian engineer passed five days there making triangulation observations.

"The mountain is volcanic and had an eruption of considerable magnitude in 1840 from an old crater on the side. The village of Arguri with 2,000 inhabitants, on the lowest slopes, was destroyed. The Armenians looked upon Arguri as 'the oldest village in the world,' asserting that it was founded when Noah planted a grape vine there. Vines did not find their first resting place over-hospitable. In the vicinity of Ararat they must be buried each winter to protect them from the extreme cold.

"The name Ararat, supposedly of Aramaean origin, means 'supereminence.' To the Armenians the mountain is Masis, meaning 'sublime.' The Turkish name is Agri-dagh, or 'steep mountain.' The Persians alone bear out the Hebraic and Christian tradition. To them the peak is Koh-i-Nuh, 'Noah's Mount.'

"Armenians, Kurds, and Tatars live around Ararat. In the past the mountain was the center of a large Armenian population. Now most of the Armenians have been pushed beyond the Araxis river about 15 miles north of Ararat, which marks the Russian boundary. The Kurds are scattered, but are in considerable concentration to the eastward across the Persian border.

"North of the Araxis river, a short distance from Ararat, is one of Asia's strange lesser mountains—Mt. Kulpi, a mountain of solid salt. This shares in the Noah legends; it is asserted that there Noah obtained the needed savor for his food. This salt mine has been longer worked, probably, than any other outside China. In abandoned workings obsidian hammers and other tools of the Stone Age have been found."

BLACK AND WHITE MOTIF AT CLIMAX OF SEASON

PARIS, July 25—(AP)—Big hats, colored shoes and gloves and a general background of black and white were the style high spots of polo at the fashionable Bagatelle, which climaxed the Grande Semaine and social season here.

Shoulder wide hats of rough straw and drooping picture hats of leghorn or horsehair, much in evidence, were particularly popular with the debutantes, including Miss Emmeline de Broglie, debutante daughter of the Hon. Mrs. Reginald Fellowes.

There were many matching accessories in vivid colors around the tea tables where society congregated after the match.

White costumes with colored accessories were general favorites. Green, red, dark blue and tobacco brown are the shades Parisiennes wear with white. They match up shoes, handbag, a big handkerchief, belt and hat. There were plenty of examples of matching colored gloves and shoes but the majority of Paris women prefer white gloves for day wear.

VICE PRESIDENT'S SECRETARY TO MANAGE HIS OFFICE

WASHINGTON, July 25—(AP)—The first woman secretary to a vice president of the United States, despite a strenuous year, will preside over the Curtiss offices this summer.

Vice President Curtiss soon will depart for his home in Topeka, Kas., for rest and relaxation, and he will leave Miss Lola Williams in charge of duties that may arise in his Washington office.

It won't be all work, however, for there will be few callers and few telephone calls during the summer months. Miss Williams will just be holding down the fort."

Since a year ago last March she has listened patiently to the steady stream of visitors who have come to lay some cause before Mr. Curtis.

"I don't mind staying here this summer, because I like my work," Miss Williams smiles. "My father and mother are here with me. Last summer I took a two months' cruise on the Mediterranean."

That was the summer following the presidential campaign, when Miss Williams virtually took charge as Mr. Curtis' manager in Washington. He left all the duties ordinarily performed by a manager to the quiet little blond secretary who has been with him for more than 10 years.

In 1918 Miss Williams came to Washington from Kansas to take a clerical job in the aviation service. A few months later, hearing that Senator Curtis needed a secretary, she applied for the job and got it.

STAFFORD SPRINGS WANTS BETTER BUS SERVICE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, July 25.—The matter of better bus service between Stafford Springs and Rockville is being considered by the public utilities commission. There is now only one bus a day between these two places, which is entirely inadequate. When the trolleys were removed two years ago Stafford Springs was promised good bus service and for a few months this service was fair but it gradually declined and became so infrequent that Stafford Springs people have been obliged to stay at home if unable to own automobiles. The trolleys made 18 trips a day in each direction and their removal without substituting adequate bus service was a severe blow to the traveling public of this community. Stafford Springs awaits with interest the removal of the trolleys from Rockville to Hartford and there are many misgivings as to the bus service which will be provided. Several good bus lines run through Stafford Springs daily, but as they are interstate busses, people from this town cannot ride on them to Rockville and Hartford. Local people believe that if one of these interstate busses were allowed to pick up passengers in Stafford Springs for Rockville and Hartford it would be a great improvement. Frequent bus service between Stafford Springs to Rockville by way of Crystal Lake, especially at this season of the year when so many pleasure seekers are going to the lake would be quite welcome.

NORWICH BUSINESS HOUSES IN LIST OF "NEW ENGLAND CENTURY PLANTS"

TWO COLS—CENTURY PLANTS

The Boston Transcript's issue of Thursday this week was an anniversary issue in celebration of its 100th birthday in which it compiled a list of New England's "century plants", these being the industries in the six New England states which have been continuously in business for 100 years or more.

In the Connecticut list The Bulletin is to be found along with a number of other "century plants" in Norwich and vicinity, which are described as follows:

1764—Iron, Sugar, Glass, Coffee

Eaton, Chase Co., Norwich, Conn., owes its origin to Jesse Breed who did business at 7 Commerce street in 1764. In 1814 the firm was John W. Breed & Co., and sold iron, sugar, coffee, molasses and glass. Among the other firm names are Wm. Breed & Co., Breed, Prentice & Co., H. W. Prentice & Co., Eaton Chase & Co. The Eaton, Chase Co. The business of the firm now is hardware and electrical supplies.

1786—A Family Drug Store

Lee & Osgood Co., Norwich, Conn. Since 1786 a drug store has been continuously on this location. It was known as Dr. Ripley's Drug store until 1831, and was then conducted by Charles Lee until 1843, when he and his nephew entered into partnership as Lee & Osgood. The business was carried on under this name until 1901, when Mr. Osgood died and the firm was incorporated as the Lee & Osgood Co., by the heirs and others. It now conducts a wholesale and retail drug business and has been in the family since 1831.

1790—Many Names, One Paper

Norwich Courier—Cooley's Weekly, Norwich, Conn., was first issued in 1790 under the name of The Weekly Register by Ebenezer Bushnell. His brother-in-law, Thomas Hubbard, joined him as publisher and bought out Bushnell in 1793. In 1796 the name was changed to the Chelsea Courier. In 1805 Hubbard's son took charge and the paper became the Norwich Courier. The paper changed hands several times, Rev. Dorson E. Sykes becoming editor in 1842. He published the paper as a daily for a few months and as a tri-weekly from 1842 to 1858. For a brief period Geo. B. Smith ran the paper as a daily, 1858-9. The daily was dropped and a semi-weekly begun. The property was acquired by the Norwich Bulletin in 1860. In 1927 the Norwich Bulletin acquired the Pullen Co., publishers of the Norwich Evening Record and Cooley's Weekly. The latter was at once combined with the Courier. During all these changes the paper has been published without interruption since 1790.

1792—New London Claims "Oldest Bank"

Union Bank and Trust Co., 61 State street, New London, Conn., claims to be the oldest bank in the state and the fifth oldest in the United States. It was organized in 1792 as The President, Directors and Company of the Union Bank of New London, and located at Hallam and Water street.

1822—A County Bank

Windham County National bank, Danielson, Conn., was organized as the Windham County bank, Brooklyn, in 1822. Later it became the Windham County National bank and was moved to Danielson, Conn.

1824—Never Missed a Dividend.

Norwich Savings society, Norwich, Conn., has never missed a dividend since its organization as a mutual savings bank in 1824. It now has deposits of over twenty-two million dollars and a surplus of two million dollars.

1840—His Father Swore by The Transcript

Bishop, Bidwell & Co., Norwich, Conn., represent Cody and Hammond, 1840, and Norton Bros., 1860. Back of Cody and Hammond is another firm going well beyond the century mark, but the data are lost. B. P. Bishop has been in the business 49 years and G. L. Bidwell 51 years, both entering the business when Mr. Hammond was living. These two links carry back the business to 1840. Mr. Bishop's father took the Transcript and "swore" by it.

ROY F. HISCOX COMPLETES U. S. TERM OF SERVICE

Roy F. Hiscox, son of Harold A. Hiscox of Norwich, recently arrived home from Honolulu. He has been absent for a period of three years, and greatly enjoys being back in Norwich, the Rose of New England. During his travel, he has seen what he calls one of the richest possession of Uncle Sam and is very enthusiastic about Hawaii.

His career in the army was of wide experience and travel, and during his journeyings he has seen what the majority of people would enjoy—the city of Honolulu, which has many curiosities of different natures. On the outskirts of the city are located the two famous hotels, Royal Hawaiian and Moana, and in the rear of the Royal Hawaiian hotel is the famous Waikiki beach, where surfing is the great sport of the Hawiians.

On the island of Hawaii are located the largest volcanoes in the world, Moana Loa and Moana Kea. The volcanoes are inactive at present, but Moano Loa was active a short time ago and bellowed forth smoke and lava. Eathquakes are only recorded when one of the volcanoes comes to life, after a long rest.

His visit there he considers the greatest pleasure of his life. He said Friday that he would urge Norwich people who never had the opportunity to visit the Paradise of the Pacific to do so, as it is one of the greatest privileges possible to see those marvelous island possessions.

Mr. Hiscox has completed his 3-year term of enlistment.

J. C. MACPHERSON SELLS LONG ESTABLISHED BUSINESS

By the sale of his men's furnishings business in the McGrory building at 291 Main street, James C. Macpherson has retired from active business life in which he has been one of the leading merchants of the city for the past 37 years. The business has been sold to one of his employes, James P. Moran, with whom Walter D. Moran is associated in the purchase. For the past four years Mr. Macpherson's health has incapacitated him from active participation in the conduct of the business, resulting in his decision to put it in other hands.

His early experience in the line which he followed was obtained in Providence and in 1893 he returned to Norwich and purchased the men's furnishing store of T. J. Falvey, then in the Shannon building, where it continued till the fire which destroyed the building in 1909. For the past 15 years his "Toggery Shop" has been in the McGrory building.

Mr. Macpherson is a former president of the Y. M. C. A. and of the town school board. He is a 32nd degree Mason and past eminent commander of the Grand commandery, Knights Templar, of Connecticut.

STATE WILL NEED HOME FOR WORLD WAR VETERANS

Additional accommodation for World war veterans in the State Soldiers' home must be provided in the near future, and funds for a start on a building program may be requested of the next legislature, it was indicated this week by state officials. If the present proportion of veterans of wars continue to apply for care at the state home, 1,400 World war veterans will be under the care of the state before the peak demand on the state passes, it is estimated on the basis of a study of the records of the home in the past.

With this fact in mind, it will become necessary for the state to decide definitely within a few years whether to build at the site of the present Fitch's Home for Soldiers at Noroton Heights, or to select a new site for the home. It is possible that the legislature will be asked at its next session to determine this question, as members of the board of finance and control are convinced that it will be necessary to replace nearly all of the existing buildings within the next few years.

It has been the experience of the veterans home commission that approximately two per cent of the veterans of past wars who enlisted from this state will appeal to the state for admission to the home. This held true of Civil war veterans, and the present population of the home includes just five men over two per cent of the Spanish-American war veterans who enlisted from this state.

It is estimated by state officials that approximately 70,000 enlisted men from Connecticut for the World war, or who served with the allies, might become eligible for admission to the home. On this basis it is believed that not less than 1,400 World war veterans will ultimately be cared for by the state in the home.

100 Per Cent Increase In Year

The situation first came to the attention of state authorities several months ago, when it was discovered that the population of the home had increased more than 100 per cent in a single year. The resident population of the home at that time reached 259 as compared with 110 last year. Fifty more veterans were being cared for in outside hospitals, making the total number of veterans under the care of the home 333. The capacity of the home is 400, of which 100 would be quartered in the hospital and 300 in the home proper.

Although it may be several years before this capacity is strained, the state must look ahead to the time when many more will seek admission, and prepare accommodations for them, state officials pointed out.

The difficulty last year was principally budgetary, as the budget for the biennium did not anticipate any such increase in the number of inmates for the home. It was possible to arrange for the transfer of funds in order to cover this situation, but state officials point out that it will not be so easy to provide buildings in a hurry to accommodate veterans.

Present Buildings Unsuitable

The present buildings were branded as "old and unsatisfactory," by state officials following a visit to the home Tuesday. It will be necessary to replace these structures if the present site is continued, it is believed by state officials, and there is some question whether or not the present site will be satisfactory for the accommodation of the estimated peak load.

Some time ago the proposal was advanced that this home should be relocated in a more central portion of the state, it being the opinion of officials that the site, practically suburban to New York, is too expensive a place for the location of such an institution, in addition to being out of the way as regards to easy access from other sections of the state.

It is believed that the legislature will at least appoint a special committee to study the matter in conjunction with the veterans home commission at its next session. It is still possible, however, that some provision for the establishment of a new home or the replacement of certain buildings at the present home will be included in the state budget for the next biennium.

MOHEGAN PARK PICNIC BY HANOVER SCHOOL

An enjoyable picnic was held Friday at Mohegan park by about 40 members of the vacation Bible school of the Hanover Congregational church, Rev. Dwight C. Stone, pastor. The school, which all children of the town were at liberty to attend, has been in session for two weeks and the picnic marked the closing of the period of study. A picnic lunch and the attractions at the park were enjoyed.

The teachers, Misses Ruth Lee, Jean Peck, Dorothy Thomas, Eunice LeBourveau and Ruth Morrell and Mrs. Arthur Moorcroft, assisted by Miss Ethel Headley and Mrs. Dwight C. Stone, were the committee in charge of arrangements.

CONN. FAIR OFFICIALS POOREST PAID INDIVIDUALS

Connecticut fair officials are probably the poorest paid individuals of any group in the state doing a similar volume of business. State pride and community betterment leads them to contribute much of their time and labor to sponsor institutions with a background as old as the hills of New England. Figures revealed by the state department of agriculture show that last year officials of 28 fairs conducting a business totaling more than $100,000 received an average of only $116.46 for their combined services as presidents, secretaries, treasurers, and managers.

Nine of the 28 fairs reported no expenditures for salaries and those that paid their officers had an outlay ranging from $12.10 to $915.29. Connecticut fairs are a heritage that have been handed down from generation to generation and the zealous guarding of this heritage accounts largely for the volunteer labor which endeavors to keep them going and improving each year.

North Stonington Grange fair paid $35 in salaries last year and the state department of agriculture believing that the spirit existing at that fair is so similar to what is taking place in 31 different communities that it issues in part a letter received from John B. Perry, the secretary, in response to a questionnaire. It shows conclusively what the fairs are doing to make their grounds and buildings more attractive and how they are endeavoring to increase the agricultural interest of boys and girls.

Mr. Perry writes as follows: "We are repainting our buildings—all outside—main hall, inside. This will cost several hundred dollars. All other changes including a new ticket booth at the gate will be of lesser importance. We are stressing more and more the exhibits of 4-H clubs in the county and adding some new premiums. We are promised by Mr. Whaples, the county 4-H club leader, a larger and fuller cooperation this year than ever before. Last year we paid nearly $125 in money premiums to 4-H exhibitors. The total premiums for this year will be the same as last. 4-H classes will be made fuller and premiums correspondingly paid.

"This will be our 20th annual fair. We have steadily grown each year—buildings added and everything all paid for. We have good grounds—ample shade in the grove at the rear of the grounds—good water and plenty of it. Not so many oxen as formerly but in this respect we suffer as all fairs have. We do have wonderful vegetable exhibits and displays of culinary arts. The second day of the fair is an 'Old Home Day' when we see everybody having a good time visiting old friends they have not seen since last year and making new friends to meet next year."

Mr. Perry closes his letter with, "Glad to see you, come on everybody," which the department of agriculture believes is typical of the spirit prevailing at Connecticut's fairs. The fair offers a wonderful opportunity to see rural Connecticut in action. As a whole they are just plain old-fashioned country fairs and proud of it, glad to welcome back those who have found occupations in the cities and striving to entertain all patrons from the community, town or city in as pleasing a manner as possible.

Shortly after 11 o'clock Friday morning the fire department was called out for a fire in the residence at No. 92 Talman street, when a three-burner oil stove exploded, resulting in slight damage. A section of one side of the kitchen was scorched before the stove was removed from the building by Mrs. Sidney G. Vars, who, with her husband and family, occupy the structure. She received a slight burn to one hand and was given first aid treatment by the firemen, who extinguished the blaze with three gallons of chemical. The building is owned by Edward Edwards.

DRIVERS CUT OUT AT THE WRONG TIME

It is becoming increasingly more difficult to cut in and out of traffic and correctly estimate the speed of a car coming from the opposite direction. According to the records of the Connecticut department of motor vehicles the number of drivers who get into serious trouble while trying to pass other cars is larger in each successive year.

In an article prepared in the interests of highway safety and read from WTIC, the Travelers station, this afternoon, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel pointed to the fact that speeds today are being stepped up continuously as one of the reasons why the practice of cutting in and out of a line of cars is dangerous. "The average speed is far above old speeds which were once considered reasonable and proper," he said. "It is no longer safe to presume, after a hasty estimate, that there is time to get around one or two cars before an approaching car gets too near. Expert drivers often misjudge the speed of an approaching vehicle, even in the daytime."

"Last year, 408 drivers cut out at the wrong time and found themselves in accidents. Death resulted in several cases, there were numerous personal injuries, and in every accident there was considerable damage to property. More than 200 of these accidents were on straight-aways, where the view ahead was good. And yet the drivers failed to judge conditions and the speed of other vehicles correctly. Many of the others cut in on curves, hills and at intersections. Most of these accidents, obviously, were the result of reckless driving. The operators were without even the excuse that they could see for a long distance ahead."

"Cases coming to department attention illustrate clearly that even experienced drivers need a long straight distance to pass two cars, the act should be undertaken only when there is an absolutely clear road for a long distance ahead."

"While it was common practice a few years since, when traffic was lighter, for a car to dash out of line and pass a whole line of cars, the practice has been curbed by police discipline, and by the fact that conditions have become so dangerous that few drivers are reckless enough and careless enough to try it. It is necessary to stay in line to be safe."

HEARING IN LIQUOR CASES GOES OVER TO WEDNESDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 25—Prohibition Enforcement Agent Harry W. Avery, late yesterday conducted two raids upon residences where liquor is reputed to be sold and with the assistance of members of the New London police department the raids were successful for much liquor was found. The raiders first went to the residence of Attila Paolina, 90 Trumbull street where two barrels of wine and a small amount of liquor was seized. The officers then descended on the home of Mrs. Therese Paoletti, 225 Shaw street and there seized 16 cases of beer and 100 bottles of wine. Both proprietor and proprietress were arrested and presented before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran this afternoon. The hearings were continued until next Wednesday. Tsinan.

"Tsinan Surrender Reported Imminent," read a recent American newspaper headline. That is news for 1930, but it is a story often retold of Tsinan in recent years. Almost annually the Shantung capital is threatened by one warring faction or another.

"Tsinan is a city of about 350,000 inhabitants situated on the plains of Shantung, the Chinese province that was made famous a little more than a decade ago by discussion in the United States senate of the Versailles peace treaty," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Although nearly 200 miles from the sea, Tsinan is an important commercial center. Small native boats navigate canals that connect the city with the sea. Perhaps more important, however, are Tsinan's railroad transportation facilities, for it is here that the railroad which penetrates the Shantung peninsula connects with the trunk line joining Peking, Tientsin and Shanghai.

"Products from the western grain fields reach Tsinan. Grain is stored in Tsinan warehouses and milled in Tsinan mills while large quantities of peanuts and tobacco from nearby Shantung plantations are also shipped there for disposal. Flour mills and peanut oil factories are among the city's largest industries. Some of the peanuts are cousins to American tubers that were introduced into Shantung by American missionaries. And the tobacco, some of which are introduced by American tobacco companies, might claim relationship to the leaves that had a part in bringing fame to Sir Walter Raleigh.

"In Tsinan homes and factories fine Chinese rugs are woven. When long hair was the crowning glory of the American girl and speedy roadsters undid the patient strokes of the boudoir comb, Tsinan prospered making hairnets. But each American girl who, in recent years, has emerged from a barber shop with shorn locks unwittingly did her bit to cripple this industry.

"Tsinan is more than a thousand years older than the Christian era. Guides will tell the traveler that the city was once situated 25 miles from its present site and was moved piece by piece by a continuous line of men stretching from the old to the new site. From remote times, the natives have believed that an imaginary chain from the nearby Pagoda hill keeps Tsinan from blowing away in the wind blasts off the Shantung plain, or being washed away by the frequent floods of the murky Yellow river. That sinister stream is about six miles north of the city.

"Two walls surround three sides of the city. The inner wall is an irregular square with many gates. The outer wall flares outward on a zig zagging course from the northeast and northwest corners of the square wall. On the southern side of Tsinan, the two barriers are more than a mile apart.

"Until 1906, Tsinan was a strange city of foreign traders. Then it voluntarily opened its doors. Most of the foreign trading is done at Shang-pu, a small commercial town west of the walls. There the traveler finds wide western-like streets and modern government and business buildings. There are natives there, too, but one is more likely to rub elbows with one of the 300 Americans in Shang-pu than inside the walls.

"In the quarter of a century that has elapsed since the Tsinan gates were opened, automobiles have traversed the few streets that are wide enough for their passage; a few modern stores have been wedged between native shops; and electric light bulbs dangle from corner posts.

"Tsinan is one of the most important Christian educational centers in China. The Shantung Christian university and numerous other mission schools are situated there. Native schools also dot the city, and there is a museum and a library. The museum displays a model of the capitol of the United States."

DOW AHEARN BEATS HAVILAND 5 AND 4 IN ONE OF THE UPSETS AT SHENECOSSETT

It was Dow Ahern, youthful Willimantic golfing ace, who provided one of the startling upsets of the championship division of the Shenecossett invitation tournament yesterday by trouncing Paul Haviland of Brooklawn, one of the leading amateurs of the state, 5 to 4. In disposing of Haviland, Ahern won his way to the quarter finals where he meets William B. Franklin of Philadelphia who disposed of Charles C. Claire of New Haven 3 and 2 in a second round match.

Ahern won an easy first round match from Dr. Vincent D. Eldred in the morning beating the Norwich doctor 8 and 7. In this round Ahern was one over par for the twelve holes that he played. Haviland defeated Hugh Hamill of Philadelphia 5 and 4 in the first round match.

The Willimantic boy shot brilliant golf to win from Haviland, who, it must be said, was not playing the game of which he is capable. But even if he had been on his game it is doubtful if he would have been able to take over Ahern who was one over par for the first nine and then eased up when it was certain that Haviland had no chance to win. Ahern had Haviland dormie 6 at the 13th, the Bridgeport lad being only able to halve a few of the holes out of the first twelve. Haviland won but one hole during the match, that the 13th when Ahern's second wood shot found the trap and he took two to get out.

The first three holes of the match were halved, Ahern getting a break on the first hole when he missed a short putt only to leave Haviland a perfect stymie. The break came on the fourth when Ahern was to the left of the green in a deep trap and Haviland was just off the green. Ahern came out of the trap with a beautiful shot to stop a few inches from the pin. Ahern picked up another hole on the one-shot sixth when Haviland sliced and was stymied by a rain shelter. Ahern sank for a deuce.

Again on the long ninth Haviland on his second shot was behind another rain shelter, had to sacrifice a stroke to get out. From then on Ahern had things his own way taking the 10th, 11th and 12th holes in 4, 3 and 6. The 13th went to Haviland but Ahern halved the 14th to end the match.

The cards:

Ahern:
Out—5 4 3 3 5 2 5 4 4—37
In —4 3 6 7 4 x x x x

Haviland:
Out—4 5 4 3 5 4 5 4 5—41
In —5 4 7 6 4 x x x x

The three Norwich players in the championship division did not survive the first round, Eldred losing to Ahern, Dave Morton dropping a hard-fought match to Val Fine of New London 2 and 1 while Noble C. Miller lost to Max Marston 6 and 5. In this last match Miller was out in 37 one over par but Marston had a 32, four under.

Morton in the afternoon won his beaten sixteen match with F. J. Jackson 2 up but Miller lost to Y. Shudo, 4 and 3. Eldred came through with a default by Hugh Hammil.

Eddie McKay won by his matches in the third flight as did William "Cy" Jenks. McKay won from Fred Patience 3 and 1 in the first round and then beat H. B. Ellis of Springfield one up in 19 holes. Jenks won easily from Buisman 4 and 3 and then trounced Wallace by the same count in the afternoon. Jenks in the 30 holes he played was two over par. McKay and Jenks clash this morning.

In the fifth flight F. Russell Smith won two matches beating Tom Cassara one up in the first match and then taking A. B. Jenks 4 and 3 in the second round match.

In the beaten eight of the fourth flight Frank Welch beat Tracy Sheffield 6 and 1. Johnny Sayles in the same division won from R. E. Lesneski 5 and 4.

CORKRAN GIVES MARSTON A GREAT BATTLE

NEW LONDON, July 25—(AP)—Three Philadelphians provided the excitement in the second round matches of the men's invitation golf tournament in the Shenecossett Country club here today. Max Marston of Philadelphia, defending champion won a thrilling duel with a fellow townsman, D. C. Corkran, one up. The lead changed several times and the margin was never more than one hole.

Philip Corson of Philadelphia, sank a 30 foot putt from the edge of the green at the 18th hole to clinch his victory by a margin of one up over Frank D. Ross of Hartford, Connecticut champion. Ross was putting for a birdie three to square the match at the home hole when Corson cupped the 30 footer, halving the hole against a conceded six footer.

Dow Ahern, young star from Willimantic, Conn., scored a smashing victory over Paul Haviland of Bridgeport, winner of the tournament in 1928, by a margin of 5 and 4.

Howard A. Tryon of Elmira, N. Y., defeated George Smart of Springfield, 3 and 2, but in order to do it had to play the first nine holes in 31 strokes, five below par.

Robinson Cook of Hartford defeated Quincy Ryan of Short Hills, N. J., 4 and 3; William B. Franklin of Philadelphia eliminated Charles C. Clare of New Haven, 3 and 2, and Ralph L. Rooks of Providence, won from J. E. Lewis, Jr., of Norwalk, Conn., 3 and 2.

The semi-finals will be played tomorrow afternoon and the 36 hole final will take place Sunday.

First Round Matches.

R. H. Cameron of New Haven had to play 20 holes of golf to win, one up, from Fielding V. Jackson of Providence, R. I.

THOMPSON RETAINS HIS LEAD IN CANADIAN OPEN

ANCASTER, Ont., July 25—(AP)—Leading professionals from the United States unleashed one attack after another today but could not dislodge Nicol Thompson, Sr., veteran Canadian pro., from the lead in the Canadian open golf championship.

Tonight with half the 72 holes behind him, Thompson, approaching the 50 year mark, led the field by one stroke with a dozen stars from below the border just behind him. The Canadian, with the advantage of playing over his own course, the links of the Hamilton Country club, shot a consistent round of 71 today which with his 66 in the first round gave him a 36-hole total of 137 and the lead by one stroke over Tony Manero, of Elmford, N. Y., who shot his second 69 in as many days for a total of 138.

IDEALS BEAT SMOKERS IN HECTIC BATTLE

A long, hard struggle to keep out of the cellar of the City league was won by the Ideals from the Smoke Shop at the campus last night. In a seven inning contest, that lasted nearly two hours and was featured by plenty of long distance swatting, the Servicemen won 7 to 6 from the West Siders. As a result they are now clear of the league basement and close onto the heels of the Italians, who are in fourth place. It was the Ideals second win of the week and their third for the entire season.

Despite the fact that the game was a long drawn affair it was mighty interesting, the outcome being in doubt until the final out. The fans, who like their hitting, got their full and it was a rough night for pitchers. The Smokers used two and the Ideals three.

Gero started for the O'Briennmen and Buck Shahan was on the Ideal rubber at the opening of the game. The latter was driven to cover in the late third, giving way to Pepin. Pep lasted about two innings and was then relieved by Bob Shaw, who finished. Gero, after working five innings, took a temporary leave of absence in the sixth in favor of Magnan, who moved inot the box from center field. He came back in the final frame and held the winners scoreless.

A final checkup of the tally sheet showed that the Ideal trio yielded a total of 15 bingles while the Gero-Magnan allowance was 10. Chubby Gibbs of the Smoke Shop and F. Smith, Ideal shortstop, led the hitters with a trio of clouts apiece and Nap Liberty and Buck Shahan did the long distance clouting. Liberty hit his second homer of the season and Shahan had a triple.

One of the real features of the game, in the eyes of the spectators, was the work of Tony Bernard on the sidelines. Bernard, the Al Schacht of the City league, kept the crowd in an uproar with a steady line of chatter and a well stocked bag of trick tactics.

DUGAS IS IN SIXTH PLACE IN WESTERN LOOP

Lefty Dugas, local boy who is playing right field for Wichita in the Western league, continues his heavy sticking and up to game of July 17, had a mark of .349. Dugas is leading the league in hits with 129. He has been to bat 370 times in 90 games, scored 68 runs and batted in 74. Lefty is sixth in batting in the league.

On July 14, Walter Brown, Oklahoma City pitcher, had a no-hit game until Lefty banged a double down the left field foul line to ruin his effort. This turned out to be the only hit of the encounter.

H. N. S. vs. Sterling at Jewett City

Sunday at Ashland park the Holy Name team will meet the Sterling A. C. at 3 p. m. These two teams played a almost perfect 11-inning game at Sterling last Sunday, the Jewett City boys nosing out the Sterling team in the 11th. No doubt as these teams are very evenly matched this game will furnish as many thrills as the one at Sterling. For the Sterling team the probable battery will be Parkhurst in the box with Brunson catching. There is a chance that Sterling will again pitch Left Whitford, who pitched wonderful ball until the ninth inning last Sunday. For the H. N. S. the probable battery will be Pizzo behind the bat with Vachon or Walkosky pitching.

Applications for patents totaled 91,420 for the fiscal year of 1929 to set a new record.

SHERDEL HAS INDIAN SIGN OF CARDINALS

BOSTON, July 25—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals doffed their hats to their teammate Wee Willie Sherdel, here today as Sherdel pitched the Braves to a 5 to 4 triumph over the Cardinals.

The Braves won in the ninth after Rhem had filled the bases with Richbourg's double, his own muff of Maranville's bunt and a pass to Sisler.

Ray Blades accounted for all of the Cards' runs. His single in the fourth scored Gelbert, who had tripled and he got a homer into the left field stands in the seventh with two on. The score:

TERRY'S HOMER GIVES GIANTS A VICTORY

NEW YORK, July 25—(AP)—For the second day in succession, a home run gave the Giants a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates as New York triumphed by a 3 to 1 score today. Up to the eighth inning, Bill Terry's homer in the second gave the Giants their only margin in a mound duel between left handers Clarence Mitchell and Larry French.

An error by Grantham let a third Giant tally cross the plate in the eighth with Glenn Spencer as the victim. French was removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth. Mitchell continued his fine pitching by holding the Pirates to seven scattered hits. The one Pirate run, made in the second on singles by Hemsley and Lloyd Waner and French's sacrifice, was the only one Mitchell has allowed in his last 15 innings.

DODGERS POUND LUCAS IN THE EARLY INNINGS

BROOKLYN, July 25—(AP)—Timely hitting in the early innings enabled the Robins to beat Red Lucas and the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 2, in the third game of their series today. Brooklyn made ten hits off Lucas and nine of them were bunched in second, third and fourth innings for all seven runs.

Ray Moss started for the Robins but his wildness kept him in trouble and Fred Heimach, former American league southpaw, hurled the last two innings.

Glenn Wright, who drove in three runs with a single and a triple and Johnny Frederick, whose triple accounted for two more tallies, led the attack. Score:

Red Stars Have Two Games

The Plainfield Red Stars have two games for this week end. Saturday they play Willimantic a return game and Sunday they play the New London Colored Giants at Plainfield.

The Red Stars had their winning streak broken by Westerly last Sunday, but they are not a bit discouraged and they intend to start another at Willimantic, Saturday, and with the Colored Giants, Sunday. A good crowd is expected Sunday as this is the first time a colored team has played in Plainfield.

TILDEN DISPOSES OF BOROTRA IN FOUR SETS; COCHET WINS FROM LOTT

By SMITH REAVIS
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

PARIS, July 25—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden, veteran of ten Davis cup campaigns, hung a French scalp to his belt to begin his eleventh today.

He defeated Jean Borotra—a Borotra at the top of his form—in four sets 2-6, 7-5, 6-4, 7-5, justifying his last minute inclusion in the invading American forces, and did it with such decision that not a soul in the 10,000 who watched the opening of the 1930 challenge round had the least doubt who was the better of the two.

Two hours later Little Henri Cochet had taken his revenge for Wimbledon by sending Young George Lott to the showers with a straight set defeat 6-4, 6-2, 6-2. Thus the score when evening shadows settled over Auteuil was America one, France one and the fate of the Davis cup for 1930 still hung very much in the balance. The doubles match will be played tomorrow and the final pair of singles on Sunday.

The crowd, eagerly partisan as it was, gave Big Bill the cheer of his life as he walked off the court. It cheered just as heartily when George Lott came on to face Cochet but the second match of the day was but a pale shadow of the battle that went before it.

Except for occasional lapses Cochet dominated the play from beginning to end. It was a case of the Cochet of today meeting the more youthful and inexperienced Cochet of a few years ago for the similarity of style of the opponents was instantly apparent. Both drove cautiously from the baseline and both scurried to the net at the least sign of an opening. Both tried for drops and crosses that seemed out of reach.

Lott simply failed in stroke control. He drove out of the court time and time again while Cochet in critical moments had a killing smash and certain placements lurking in his racquet. Except for one period in the first set Lott never was in the lead.

The French, with honors easy for the first day, apparently took a serious view of the doubles tomorrow and after the matches it was announced that Cochet would team with Jacques Brugnon to meet Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn. The doubles play begins at 3 p. m.

LEHMAN AND COUCH ARE WESTERN AMATEUR FINALISTS

BEVERLY COUNTRY CLUB, CHICAGO, July 25—(AP)—The western amateur golf championship was made safe for Chicago today as Johnny Lehman and Ira Crouch, two of the Windy City's highest ranking young stars, crowded into the finals with surprising triumphs.

Lehman, co-medalist and conquerer yesterday of the defending champion, Don Moe of Portland, Oregon, galloped into the final round with a crushing 8 and 7 defeat of England's last hope, T. Philip Perkins. Couch, never before a victor in an important tournament outside of Chicago, reached the round by defeating Bob McCrary, the "Fighting Scott" from Des Moines, Iowa, two and one.

Of the triumphs today that of Lehman's was the most startling. The Methodical Mriton, who dazzled the championship Beverly course yesterday with a record-equalling 69, went into the fight a three to one favorite but didn't have a chance against his younger rival.

HOME RUNS FEATURE ATHLETICS ONE-SIDED WIN

CLEVELAND, July 25—(AP)—Lusty swatting including three home runs, coupled with 10 bases on balls and two triple steals, won for the Athletics here today the second game of the series with the Indians. The score was 14 to 1.

Three Cleveland pitchers were unable to stem the tide of Athletic sluggers but Jablonowski was credited with the defeat. Grove was effective throughout.

The first triple steal came in the first inning with Simmons, Miller and Williams participating in the theft, and Simmons scoring. The second triple steal came in the fourth with Cochrane, Simmons and Foxx on the bases, Cochrane reaching home. Bishop, Miller and Simmons each knocked out home runs. Miller led the batting attack with four hits.

REYNOLDS' DOUBLE WINS FOR CHICAGO IN NINTH

CHICAGO, July 25—(AP)—Reynolds' double to right center with Mulleavy on first in the last half of the ninth inning gave the White Sox a 6 to 5 victory over Washington here this afternoon.

The victory was the 8th out of the last ten games for the White Sox, and the second straight over the Senators.

Chicago rallied in the seventh and eighth to tie the score at the beginning of the ninth. Hadley saw most of the punishment and therefore was charged with the defeat. McKain got credit for the victory when he went in to pitch after Thomas had been relieved for a pinch hitter.

BROWNS KEEP CLEAR OF CELLAR BY BEATING BOSTON

ST. LOUIS, July 25—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns managed to defeat the Boston Red Sox this afternoon, 6 to 3, and remain out of the American league cellar. If Boston would have won, the teams would have exchanged places.

Goose Goslin was largely responsible for keeping the Browns in 7th place, hitting his 18th home run of the season, a double and single in four times at bat, besides driving in four runs.

St. Louis got to Lisenbee early in the game, driving him from the mound at the end of the second inning. Durham, who succeeded, hurled superbly, not allowing a counter during the remainder of the game. Blaeholder pitched creditably for the Browns.

Game called at 3.15 p. m.

The third and deciding game of the inter-village series of Taftville, the game that holds the greatest interest for the baseball faithful of eastern Connecticut, will be played at Martin field, Sunday afternoon when the J. B. Martin and Army and Navy teams wage a stubborn battle for the baseball honors of the village.

Each team has a victory to its credit. The Velvetmakers behind some effective pitching by Walt Linder, their mound ace, romped home with a well earned victory in the first game. In the second contest the service boys turned the tables on their village rivals and with their "hired man" from Providence college serving 'em up in fine fashion, came out on the big end of the score.

According to latest reports neither team will be strengthened for Sunday's tilt. With the exception of Lemieux in right field for J. B. Martin to replace Eccleston, who was severely injured in a game at the state hospital last Wednesday, the lineup of both teams remains unchanged.

The Velvetmakers will depend upon Linder, who has won seven out of eight games this season, to hold the service men in check. "Jimmy" Murphy will do the catching. "Tommy" Connors, the big "I told-you-so" guy from Somerville, Mass., who turned the Martins back with seven scattered hits in last Sunday's game, will again be on the firing line for the Army and Navy. "Charlie" Lamory will be his battery mate.

Both teams are confident of victory and judging from the two previous games, tomorrow's tilt has all the earmarks of being a humdinger.

Hamel and Flynn will umpire.

TIGERS PLAY LOOSE BALL TO DROP GAME TO YANKEES

DETROIT, July 25—(AP)—The Tigers made seven errors today and allowed the New York Yankees to score nine runs, their margin of victory in a 14 to 7 triumph by Detroit's misplays.

Detroit scored five runs in the first inning, driving Ed Wells from the mound, but tossed away the lead in the next four frames. The Tiger errors made Waite Hoyt the main victim. Hoyt was taken out in the sixth after the Yankees had scored nine runs, only two of them earned. Elon Hogsett finished. Roy Johnson was the chief offender, making three errors.

Henry Johnson followed Wells on the mound and Detroit could do little with his curve. Lou Gehrig put the Yankees ahead in the fifth by hitting his 29th home run with one mate on base after New York had scored three runs in the fourth to tie the score. Easterling also hit a homer.

BASEBALL BITS

George Sheffiot, the New London boy and a former Bulkeley high catcher, is seeing a bit of the country this year in his baseball travels. Sheff started off with Columbus in the American association but a couple of weeks ago was sent to Topeka in the Western league, the same league in which Lefty Dugas and Joe Faber, local boys, are performing. He was returned to Columbus by that team in about a week and the next day or so was shipped to Peoria in the Three-Eye league, where he now is. Peoria and Columbus are "farms" for the Cincinnati Reds.

Hal Cummings, star third baseman of the Royals and former Academy luminary, was at shortstop for the Deep River team of the Middlesex County league last Sunday.

Jack Curtis of Willimantic, the star pitcher for the league-leading Ivoryton club in this same circuit, was operated on for appendicitis in Willimantic last week and will without a doubt play no more baseball this season.

'Lloyd Jarvis is murdering the pitching in the Jewett City Twilight league, having a .500 mark at present to lead the loop.

Baseball via WNAC or WEAN, broadcasting the home games of the Boston teams, is a popular pastime with local fans this season.

LENGTHY HEARING ON AIRPLANE ACCIDENT CASE

WESTERLY, July 25.—The regular session of third district court with Judge Oliver H. Williams on the bench, took the entire morning on Friday with only one case on the criminal trial calendar and one on the civil calendar, the latter requiring the lengthy hearing. Court business was disposed of as follows:

New writs entered before the call of the docket—Michael D. G. Papalla vs. Holden P. Ballou, of Hartford. Charles G. Stimpson of Philadelphia, Pa., vs. Russell L. Slocum, a suit brought to recover $900 damages as the result of an automobile accident involving parties at the intersection of Pierce street and Mountain avenue with High street.

Judge Williams announced that he would hold the papers for another week in the trespass and ejectment case, Peter C. Olchowck vs. Frank Labareck.

John O. Mills, Inc., vs. Angelo Pucci. Continued one week.

John O. Mills, Inc., vs. Anthony S. Catalano. Continued one week.

Criminal docket—State, Sherwood Healey, officer of the Rhode Island department of state police vs. Elmer F. Dedels of Providence. The defendant pleaded guilty to the operation of an automobile on the Nooseneck Hill state highway near Hopkinton City in the town of Hopkinton on July 21st at a rate of speed greater than reasonable and proper. Following a statement of the case by the state trooper Dedels was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs which were paid and he was discharged.

Trial calendar— Florence T. Jennings, R. N., of Westerly, vs. Ernest Panciera and Antonio Panciera. The plaintiff declared the action brought by Miss Jennings for nursing services, care and attention rendered Arthur Manning, airplane pilot of Hartford, for burns sustained in the airplane accident which occurred on Sept. 2, 1929, at Misquamicut, and resulted fatally for two women passengers in the plane. Services were rendered at the Westerly hospital from Sept. 3, to Oct. 1, 1929, when the nurse was called by Dr. John Champlin, Jr., after he had been assured by Mr. Panciera in the hospital that "they" would care for the expense incurred for Pilot Manning, employed by the Atlantic Airport, Inc.

Witnesses for the plaintiff were Miss Jennings, Miss Constance L. Dudley, R. N., who was also a nurse for Manning and now at West Kingston, R. I. Dr. John Champlin, Jr., who testified to his being at the hospital and securing two nurses.

Besides the defendants, other witnesses were Joseph Stanton, Mystic garage man and secretary, treasurer of the Atlantic Airport, Inc., Robert Earl Bitgood, Hope Valley, R. I., of the Charlestown airport, and Mr. Samuelson of Mystic.

At the conclusion of the arguments Judge Williams found for the plaintiff to recover in the sum of $174 and interest of $4.78, the rate of compensation being at $6 a day. Attorney Harris gave notice of intention to file an appeal and the case will be heard before a jury in the September term of Washington county superior court.

OBITUARY

Albert Babcock

The death of Albert Babcock, native of Westerly, and well known retired Providence business man and philanthropist, occurred on Thursday at his Providence home, 126 Waterman street.

He was born in Westerly on Dec. 5, 1848, being the son of Edwin Babcock and Olivia Cady. The Babcock family occupied the home on Elm street now owned by Clifford W. Campbell. Mr. Babcock was educated in the public schools of Westerly and later took a number of courses at Yale university.

He was married on June 6, 1881, to Miss Sarah Perkins Johnson of Norwich, Conn. Shortly after his marriage Mr. Babcock moved to Providence where he first engaged in business with Campbell company, wool brokers. A few years later he became associated with the American Surety company and remained as an active member of that concern at the Providence office until 1911.

The deceased was one of the oldest members of the Providence chamber of commerce and was a member of the Providence Art club, the Rhode Island School of Design and the Squantum association, and the Agawam Hunt club.

Mr. Babcock was for many years a leader in philanthropic enterprises of the city in which he lived. After his retirement from active business in 1911 he devoted himself more particularly to benevolent, charitable and church activities.

He was for 33 years a vestryman at Grace church and had been assistant treasurer and chairman of the finance committee of St. Elizabeth's home. For nearly a quarter of a century he was a trustee of the corporation of the Rhode Island hospital and at one time he was president of the Home for Aged Men and Aged Couples. He continued his interest in recent years in that institution as vice president and treasurer.

He was also for many years treasurer of the Rhode Island Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Mr. Babcock is survived by his wife and two sons, F. Huntington Babcock, and Donald S. Babcock of Providence.

The death of James Birbeck, former Westerly resident, in his 65th year, occurred on Thursday at his home on the Old Mystic road. He was in his 65th year.

Mr. Birbeck was born in England, but he came to this country when a young man. For nearly 40 years he lived in Westerly, and was employed for some time at the Lorraine Manufacturing Co. About nine years ago he went to North Stonington to take up farming.

Robinson, and party from Sewickley, Pa., occupants of Sunnymade cottage, Ninigret avenue, Watch Hill, arrived in Westerly Friday morning on the special combination observation Pullman private car "Advance" attached to the rear end of the New England express on the New Haven road. The car was cut off west of the Westerly waiting station and the locomotive attached to a west-bound passing freight train took the car and parked it on the siding near the west-bound train shelter, where the occupants left at their leisure and were taken by automobiles to Watch Hill.

The New England express was 35 minutes late and many passenger and regular commuters to Providence did not take the accommodation train but waited for the express, which was scheduled to pass the accommodation somewhere east of Kingston, R. I.

July 25. Ellen Holly of San Diego, Cal., to Emma A. Friedman of New York city, a certain tract or parcel of land, being Lots Nos. 51 and 52, Section 7, Bungalow sites of Dr. Lawson at Shelter Harbor, formerly Musicolony off the Boston Post road.

SCOUTS AT GARDNER LAKE TELL OF THEIR GOOD TIMES

Several members of the Boy Scouts troop went for two weeks to Gardner lake, a few miles outside New London, enjoying the best time of their life. Men from the Y. M. C. A. were in charge. The schedule for each day was put on the bulletin board in the mess hal. It is a beautiful lake, about 5 miles long and almost three across it. There is a raft 150 feet from shore. In order to take part in boat races, the boys have got to swim to the raft. Each afternoon the races were held by canoes and row boats. Bugler Walter Carpenter won many first places rowing and shooting a canoe over the course in fast time. Robert Johnson, who can stay under water a week, led them all under water, staying under for 18 minutes and taking a rock in his arms. He will walk with 50 feet of water over his head to shore.

Each member had to work in the mess hall, wait on table, and learn how Uncle Sam's soldiers do at the forts. Three days a wek were for visitors, when Camp Terrehegan was crowded with relatives of the boys. Watermelons were given the boys as a treat, with candy, and they were happy to see some one from the fishing village. "What is the news? How is Austin Lamb? Has he sold any cows? or how is his beets coming on?" and things like that they asked. The group that kept the table clean for so many days won a flag and Noank troop had the honor of winning twice, while New London troop was the highest for so many times. At the Noank table, some one would spill the soup or drop Dinty Moore special corned beef on the floor. The ones in charge sure fed them good, for each Noank boy gained 6 to 9 pounds and came home as brown as a derby hat from the sun. A baseball throwing contest took place on the ball field where each boy was ready to try a Babe Ruth stunt from field to home plate. Every time each throw was made, a man on the committee got the number of feet and some could throw far.

It came Clifford Sullivan's turn. It was his first time away from home, also at camp and he liked it great. So taking the new white ball in his good right hand, winding up like Earnshaw for the Philadelphia team he made a long heave straight as an arrow. The man with the tape line found it did not tell a lie; the ball went 164 feet and 4 inches, taking the prize for throwing the farthest. He received a big hand from his pals. All the head men were more than pleased with the ball-throwing contest.

In the Noank tent, a cool breese came at night. A box of candy was the prize for the one who did the loudest snoring while sleeping. One judge had to sleep with one eye open and a good eye to hear. The next morning the report was read to the ones in the race. Johnson was the one to win the candy, with Alden Hewitt second. More wood was cut that night than at a saw mill!

Every morning when the bugler blows down to the shore for a swim before breakfast that means everybody in camp. Only one boy was homesick and had to go back to his home town. The Noank boys felt sorry for him.

Shooting the arrow from a bow proved good sport and not many hit the bulls' eye. An old-timer who was the owner of the bow and arrow had an eagle eye and two out of three would hit the mark. He must have been with Chief Sitting Bull in wartime with the Indians.

The sad time came for the Noank boys, to pack up and leave for home, after getting used to each other and spending two real weeks at Camp Terrehegan. Those who went are Clifford Sullivan, Norman McDonald, Alden Hewitt, Norris Budrick, Robert Johnson, Ted Reid, Tom Brooks, Walter Carpenter, Duncan Carson. Their good times were told about to the rest of the members of the Boy Scouts troop.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Nothing of importance occurred in Norwich fifty years ago, according to the files of the Norwich Morning Bulletin. Brief items taken in part from the files, beginning with the week of July 19, 1880, are as follows:

Monday, July 19, 1880—An interesting lusus nuturae was discovered on Laurel Hill last week. A king bird or "tyrant fly catcher" which, instead of being brown like its kind, was pure white, except its wings and tail, which were of a creamy hue, stunned itself by some accident and fell in front of Judge Park's residence.

A Norwich physician recently found in Taftville nine cases of typhoid fever, four in one house and five in another. The houses were not 100 feet apart.

It will not surprise the Norwich Bulletin if ice brings the same price as pork before September, but The Bulletin don't say anything about dropping ice and taking pork through a straw.—Waterbury American.

Tuesday, July 20, 1880—The Mother Bailey boom continues. It is related of this patriotic woman that she was in the habit of showing her visitors a box which with its contents, she valued, as she said, at $1,500. The box was of gold, about the size of an ordinary snuff box—this the old lady said was worth $500. The contents of the box consisted of a lock of gray hair—this she valued at $1,000. The box was presented to her by General Andrew Jackson, who called upon her while on a tour through New England, and the lock of hair which the box contained was from his own head.

The health of the city is in an extremely satisfactory condition. The medical faculty are despondent, and talk of opening a co-operative store for the sale of green apples and aged watermellons.

Early Sunday morning, John Hamilton, an Englishman, 71, living in Taftville, fell down stairs and received so severe injuries that he died in a few hours.

Wednesday, July 21, 1880—The late Calvin Hall of Somers, Tolland county, seemed to have almost a mania for building churches for Spiritualists, he having built one at Willimantic, one at Stafford and one at Somers.

Leap year is on its third quarter, but if the front gate is properly braced up, there is no occasion for the girls to grow despondent.

There are about 15 miles of telephone wire and 20 miles of telegraph wire strung in this city.

A. M. Norcross who has set two hens on 14 eggs, one hen dedicated to Garfield and the other to Hancock, expects to have his political dilemma settled next Saturday or Sunday. Both hens are setting as hard as possible to see which will hatch first.

Thursday, July 22, 1880—Last Sunday afternoon four elderly people took tea at the house of Charles Spicer on School street in Westerly, whose combined ages were 329 years. Each of the four was over 80 years.

The young lady on the excursion train, Monday, who left her handkerchief here, will take better care of it, we fancy in future.—Windham County Transcript. Now then, will someone explain what this means.

A Noank man, Henry Davies, was the boss carpenter who supervised work at Alexandria, for removing the obelisk and stowing it aboard the Dessouk.

A carpenter named Lynch, living in Preston, had his middle finger amputated by the cog wheels of a derrick, with which he was at work.

Over 400 persons were found by the Windham county census takers who had attained the age of 80 years or over.

Friday, July 23, 1880—The Bozrah string band has been engaged to play for the Yantic Engine company, tomorrow, the day of their excursion to the Peninsula house.

Carpenters and painters are rapidly putting in order the brick building at the foot of Broadway formerly occupied by the Norwich Pistol company and more recently used as a storehouse for cotton. The building is to be occupied by Hood and Osgood for the manufacture of pistols.

One of our leading business men sat down the other day to count up how many men there were now residing in the city who were in active business here, either as principals or clerks, 40 years ago. He was able to recall 24.

We have had a dry time, now we are having a wet one, and Prof. Vennor promises frost soon, and still we are not happy.

Saturday, July 24, 1880—H. L. Reade of Jewett City, who has done considerable evangelistic work in various towns of Connecticut and Massachusetts, is supplying the pulpit of Rev. O. D. Hine of Lebanon during the latter's vacation.

Just after sunset yesterday a beautiful double rainbow was visible in the sky. Its position indicated that the fabled pot of gold must be buried down in Montville somewhere.

Abundance of bluefish are running at Montauk now, says the New London correspondent. Thursday Jack Stanners, better known as "Gaff Topsail Jack", caught 400 weight.

Up in Putnam, instead of taking their best girl crabbing as they do in Norwich, they take their best rod and pail of helgramites and go to Webster pond and snake out a big string of bass and let their best girl cook them.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

"Let Us Be Gay!" That is the watchword at the Palace theatre, beginning tomorrow when the great new talking picture of that name begins a four-day's run. "Let Us Be Gay!" Why shouldn't we be?

Norma Shearer plays the leading part in this magnificent social drama and plays it with all her old verve and vitality. As some one has said of Miss Shearer, she is one of the "most alive persons in Hollywood." She seems to radiate beauty and energy.

Playing along with Miss Shearer is a cast that will make your eyes pop out in astonishment. Think of it! Besides the beautiful Norma we have no less than Rod La Rocque, Marie Dressler, Hedda Hopper, Sally Eilers, Gilbert Emery, Raymond Hackett and Tyrrell Davis. What a group that is, and all in one picture, too.

Norma plays the part of a young wife who has to vamp her husband, and does she play it well? This is what the dramatic critic of The Hartford Courant had to say about the picture after he saw it:—

"Let Us Be Gay" scores another victory for the talking screen. With the gay sophistication and the diverting dialogue of Rachel Crothers' famous stage play, the comedy is adopted for the movies with a deft craftmanship. Intelligent character portrayals are in harmony with the smartness of the picture."

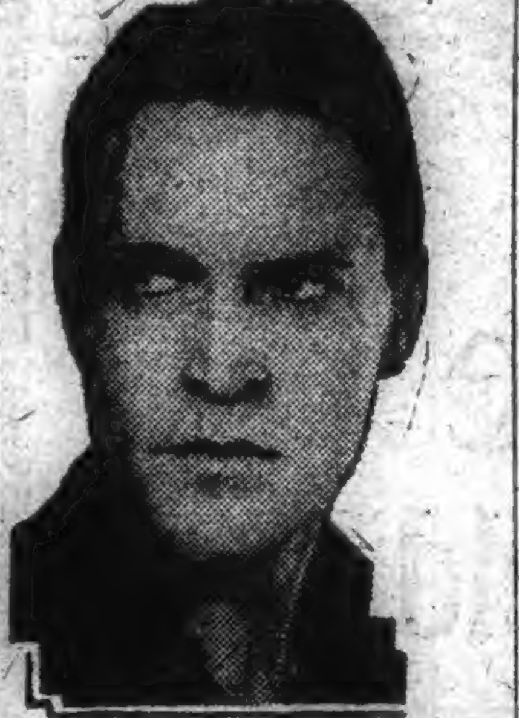
Certain critics have said that Marie Dressler runs away with the picture, but if she does, she certainly has to be good. Anybody that runs away with any picture starring Norma Shearer does have to be good, with a capital G.

Today for the last times the Palace presents "Not Damaged" and "Pardon My Gun," a splendid double-feature bill.

Broadway Theatre

"The Big House," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's much heralded drama of penitentiary life and prison riots, is the attraction which opens at Warner's Broadway today for a four-day engagement.

The picture is a sensational expose of the cause leading to recent prison riots, climaxed with an actual riot in which a hundred men battle. Prisoners in revolt are besieged in a cell house, where they kill guards and drop them out one by one until quelled with army tanks. As a contrast a romantic love story is woven into the grim tale.



Chester Morris, Wallace Beery, and Robert Montgomery play the three central roles as the convict cell mates, and Leila Hyams appears as the heroine, whose love eventually redeems Morris. A sensational mess hall riot, escape of Morris in the prison morgue van, his recapture, his rescue of the guards during the riot, are salient points in the picture. Montgomery, as the college boy sent to prison for an auto accident and herded with hardened offenders until he becomes worse than they, has a remarkable part in the story. Others in the cast are Lewis Stone, Karl Dane, De Witt Jennings, George Marion, J. C. Nugent, Claire McDowell and Mathew Betz.

Next Week At Central Baptist Church

Monday-Friday—9:00-11:30 a. m. Vacation church school. Tuesday — 6:00 p. m. Senior young people meet at the church. Thursday—7:45 p. m. Closing program of the central vacation school in the assembly hall.

COUNTY EXPERIMENT CUTS RURAL MOTOR ACCIDENTS

WILMINGTON, Del. —(AP)— A county's experiment in mounting rural guards at country crossroads during heavy week end traffic is showing the way to prevent motor accidents.

No accident has marred the scheme of using part-time inter-section police, inaugurated a year ago in New Castle county, at 14 rural crossroads.

The experiment was initiated by Charles E. Grubb, now with the American road builders' association.

With a cost of $300 a season for each intersection, the service was found to be less costly than traffic lights and more flexible in character.

RIO PLANS NEW AIRPORT, LARGEST SOUTH OF EQUATOR

RIO DE JANEIRO —(AP)— Earth which once formed Morro do Castello here where the Capucine convent stood for years will be the basis of the most important airport south of the equator, according to plans of the city.

Plane services along the Brazilian coast includes Condor syndicate, a German-Brazilian company, the New York-Buenos Aires line, an American company, Pan-American airways and French aeropostal, which has been operating a mail service from South America to France.

"PROP" TEST SHOOTS AIR AT HIGH SPEED

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Air shot from a jet at speeds greater than the velocity of sound enables bureau of standards scientists to study the design of airplane propellers.

Air flowing at 1,360 feet a second past blade tips simulates the action of a propeller whirling in regular operation, and condensing vapor reveals the lines of flow like eddying clouds.

FAIR TAX DISTRIBUTION IS TRAFFIC SURVEY'S AIM

LANSING, Mich. —(AP)— A year's survey of Michigan traffic has been undertaken to base distribution of highway taxes on the use of the roads.

Counts on the origin and destination of traffic will be taken on all roads, local and state, in sample townships in the 83 countries of the state.

Following the survey, which is being conducted by the federal bureau of public roads and the state highway department, a one-month special study will be made in Ann Arbor, Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Jackson, Lansing and Niles to determine the amount of city and outside traffic.

AUTOS BLAMED IN PART FOR HAY FEVER INCREASE

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Increased use of automobiles is partly blamed by the public health service for gains in hay fever cases.

Motoring has brought more people in contact with quantities of pollen, the department believes, and "war" against weeds is recommended.

Increases in suburban living, also attributed partly to the use of automobiles, also was held a factor in hay fever gains.

Hay fever has increased until nearly 5,000,000 people in the country are believed suffering from hay fever or asthma, or both.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

THE PRAYER OF CYRUS BROWN

"The proper way for a man to pray,"
Said Deacon Lemuel Keyes,
"And the only proper attitude
Is down upon his knees."

"No; I should say the way to pray,"
Said Rev. Dr. Wise,
"Is standing straight with outstretched
Arms and rapt and upturned eyes."

"O, no, no, no," said Elder Slow,
"Such posture is too proud;
A man should pray with eyes fast closed
And head contritely bowed."

"It seems to me his hands should be
Austerely clasped in front,
With both thumbs pointing toward the ground,"
Said Rev. Dr. Blunt.

"Las' year I fell in Hodgkin's well
Head first," said Cyrus Brown,
"With both my heels a-stickin' up,
My head a-p'inting down;"

"An' I made a prayer right then and there—
Best prayer I ever said,
The prayingest prayer I ever prayed,
A-standing on my head."

WON BY A SMILE

He tried to smile, when things looked "blue"
And never held a "gloomy view";
He strove to see life's "rosy hue",
And forged straight to the top!

"Luck", people said: a big stand-in - -
A pull's the thing that helped him win!" - -
He heard their comments, with a grin,
But naught could make him stop!

He tried to smile, when "odd" were thick;
Through thick and thin, he'd bravely stick,
And in the end, he'd "turn the trick",
In spite of fortune's take;

He wasn't "fazed" - - he never "flopped";
Each difficulty must be topped;
He set his course, and never stopped - -
Now hundreds call him "Boss"!

He tried to smile, in storm or gale";
He closed his ears to that word "fail"
And buckled down, and "blazed the trail";
And faced things as they came!

He had his share of "fret" and "rile",
And yet no matter what the trial
He'd try to meet it with a smile - -
That's how he won the game!

LIFE

Life is a gift to be used every day
Not to be smothered and hidden away.
It isn't a thing to be stored in the chest
Where you gather your keepsakes and treasure your best.
It isn't a joy to be sipped now and then
And promptly put back in a dark place again.

Life is a gift that humblest may boast of,
And one that the humblest may well make the most of.
Get out and live it each hour of the day.
Wear it and use it as much as you may.
Don't keep it in niches and corners and grooves,
You'll find that in service its beauty improves.

God's Garden

God plants His gardens anywhere.
Who but God
Would set the roadside all aflame
With golden rod,
Or plant ferns upon a rock,
Or send gentians blowing
Anywhere His winds that day
Might be going?

Gentian seed goes east or west
Any way the wind lies best.

God takes a corner of a field
For chicory as blue
As any sky in summer time
Spreads over you;
Columbine upon a hill,
Arbutus in a wood;
Anywhere the plant will grow
To Him seems good.

I saw His tawny lilies gay
Against an old stone wall today.

All wild flowers belong to God,
Blue asters His,
Close packed berry, reed, and pod,
No matter where it is.
Cardinal flower beside a brook,
Lonely spire of flame;
Vervain with its purple top.
He calls them all by name.

Little things like mint and dill,
He lets them grow just where they will.

GREETINGS FROM MARIGOLD

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Just a few lines. They say if you haven't anything to talk about, start with the weather. Well, we are having some nice warm weather and everybody is enjoying it; also the fine vegetables from the garden. We'd love to see some of the lovely flower gardens the sisters write about.

Jennie: I think Mary France has stolen a march on you with her hollyhock. It's a regular giant and keeps on growing.

When the tip on a shoe lace comes off it's hard to lace the shoe. This is a good way to remedy it: Take a needle full of thread, wind thread around the end, then use needle and fasten so it will not slip off.

Golden Glow: Hear you have moved. Thought you were settled for good in your last place. Hope to see you at some of the Willimantic gatherings.

Mary France: Hope you had a nice time spending a week with Noma and she doesn't get too lonesome; but her chickens are quite a little company.

I miss Ann Tenna's letters. Hope she is getting along nicely.

Good luck to all. MARIGOLD.

CHEERING UP PISCES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: I wish to write a few lines of sympathy to our dear sister Pisces who feels so physically broken up. I do understand about how you feel and suffer. Only those who have been through these various ills know how they grind us to atoms. I have had a little experience through three different sieges that have taken nearly all of life out of me. I have been a wreck three times over and still here I am still a hanging on, I am not well but I must get out to the Corner when it is possible to do so.

I would like to meet you at the Club 4 on July 24th. We anticipate a nice time. I do hope you will find yourself able to be among us very soon again. I am particularly interested in you, because one of your letters inspired me to dare to write my first letter to the Corner page. Cheer up, sister friend you still have much to live for and brighten up the Corner where you are, even if it is just a little. Yes, it is hard work when you are suffering, but it is God's business to help both you and me. Sincerely your well wisher,

AUNTY NO. 1 ON THE GAIN

Dear Social Corner Members: I must take this way to thank all the sisters that so kindly sent me cards while I was so sick. As there are too many to mention all the names, about 60 letters and cards, I must say thanks through the corner page. After being confined to my bed and room for about six weeks I feel safe to say I am on the gain. As it will be some time before I will be strong and able to do very much work I cannot think of having the annual picnic this year. I shall miss it as well as you all, for I always looked forward to meeting you all at my home and the larger the crowd the better. You know we all have to "Lay down the shovel and the hoe" sooner or later. I feel that I have laid mine down for the present anyway. My heartfelt sympathy to all sick and shut-ins this weather.

Thanking you all once more. I am as ever, AUNTY NO. 1.

AN ANSWER TO CASSAGNAC

Dear Corner Sisters and Readers: A dear friend residing in Willimantic sends me the Corner page quite frequently, which I enjoy very much, but sorry to read that the letters are becoming few and far between. Well, I'm going to try and do my bit by writing an answer to "Cassagnac's" letter a few weeks agos, on prohibition. Now as I have studied the question from all points, and have observed, with an unprejudiced view-point the effects of prohibition, I am prepared to say that it has been far from being a success, and a sane and logical solution has not yet been found, and is the greatest tragedy of our day. This is the opinion of men like State's Attorney Alcorn, Supreme Court Judge William Maltbie and Professor Norman of Fordham University Law school, and many others. Now some laws are passed that do infinite mischief, because they are made without due deliberation, or forethought. Lives are lost and others wrecked for lack of efficiency or intelligence, or because the doctor was in a hurry. Now to quote former Governor James Cox of Ohio. He says the people will never bring back the saloons nor will any private interests be allowed to become allied on any side of this issue, and he further says that there is need of some government provision that will prohibit the sale or manufacture of alcoholic liquors in America, by private or corporate interests. The country is getting tired of inefficiency, poor judgment, feeble efforts, and indecision. A state-wide meeting to protest against the present prohibition situation, is to be held here in Hartford. Oct. 2, under the auspices of the Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform. Mrs. Lucius Robinson, chairman, Mrs. Stuart Clement, secretary are to be among the chief speakers. More power to them. They stand for temperance, for law enforcement, and for controlled liquor traffic, based on the principal that no law will be respected or can be enforced unless supported by moral sense and the conscience of the communities. We are not living in the "Carrie Nation" days, and her poor little hatchet would be a weak weapon indeed, against the gangster, gunman, and bootlegger whose warfare extends even into the homes and ranks of private citizens. Every time you cast a vote, friends for the present day enactment you are putting the dollar into the pockets of the bootleggers whose brand of liquor is such that lowers moral force, incites a man to crime, or insane acts. We cannot blind ourselves to the fact that the law is evaded and violated. The people today are drinking poison whiskey and our citizens are slinking into side-doors and "speak-easies," and buying at prohibitive prices. Human nature is peculiar. The unattainable is always the most desirable, resentment follows the infringement of right, real or imaginary, and the attempt to enforce total abstinence is a threat to our country's well being. Friends, let us wake up, before the damage in hypocrisy, loss of life and corruption, increase in crime, endangers the land that our forefathers died to make safe for democracy. We go through the motion of making laws, and then select officers who take oaths that mean nothing but outward formalities. When an office holder takes an oath it is to the country, state and people that he serves and to those who vote for him. He pledges himself, body and soul to the state and its welfare. Give us honest and fearless men, whose love of right is greater than love of power. Vice and crime have numbed our moral sense, until we are no longer horrified by things both degrading and shameful, and our very indifference is an encouragement of evil.

Well, "Cassagnac," I'm afraid I got all "het up" over my subject, and perhaps I had better apologize for trying to "howl" over some of your opinions, but problems sometimes look so easy in contemplation, but what a difference when we try to carry them into execution. Well, at least let us be thankful for our blessings. The saloon is a thing of the past and let us hope that through the efforts of clear-thinking men and women, this country-wide and most vital problem may at last be solved.

Hope Cobweb: Hope this finds you chirp and well. Will take time to run into Willimantic for a day or two.

Aunty No. 1: Real sorry to hear of your illness. Also Little Sister who I hear has been in St. Joseph's hospital.

Mary France: How's everything in Coventry? I hear the Thimble clubs are doing well.

Rose Lee, Eliza Jane, Wiltwyck, Conawah: Will try to see you at Alfara's picnic barring all accidents. Well I must close with greetings, good luck, good health and happiness to all the Social Corner sisters. I am as ever yours, SIS HOPKINS.

A VISIT TO LEBANON.

Dear Social Corner Editor, Sisters and Friends: Every week after reading the nice letters in the Corner I always say, "Well, next week I will write to let the friends know they are not forgotten." but when next week comes it is the same thing over again and the letter remains unwritten, but now I am going to write a little even if it is a short letter.

There are a great many good ideas we can get from the different writers and they are from Maine to California. The page used to be full, but now as it is vacation time with many, some at the seashore, some at the mountains, but when they return I am sure the page will be full of the interesting letters telling of their pleasant vacation.

Last Sunday morning my daughter came in my room and said, "How would you like to take a ride to Lebanon and go to church there?" I told her that "I would enjoy that so much." So I got ready and my daughter, grandson and myself went to the Baptist church at the upper end of Town street where I joined when I was about 16. I met friends I haven't seen in many years. I met Dorinda and her husband with whom I went to school in 1866-7. I had nice little chats with them, but the time was so short we couldn't say all we wanted to.

Lebanon has changed so much since I lived there that it doesn't look like the same place, with old friends gone, new ones have taken their places, but that is the way of the world.

"Changes must come, friends must part, but distance cannot change the heart."

Yellow Daisy has not forgotten you, although she has not written for a long time. She is busy with her tea room and serves lunches, breakfasts, dinners and suppers and it keeps her quite busy. Those she serves once always come again.

Best wishes to all.

SILVER LOCKS.

SUMMER READING

Dear Social Corner Friends: The scarcity of letters is my excuse for writing again so soon. I was glad to learn that my last letter had something in it which was helpful to Aunt Susie. In this case I do not know "Who is Who" but hope I may know some day. Perhaps when she has leisure this writer would also enjoy the latest book on Lincoln which this library affords. It is by John G. Nicolay and is a condensation of the ten volume book by Nicholay and Hay. I am reading it now and it scarcely seems possible that so much could be put into one handy size volume. It is interestingly written too, but one needs to be quiet when reading it in order to fully appreciate it. Some might call it a bit heavy for this weather but I find it best to take out a wanted library book when I find it in, regardless of the temperature.

My flower garden is coming on well. Nasturtiums blooming profusely, calendulas in bloom, two blossoms already on velvet marigolds from seed sent me by Elm Tree Robbie, various blossoms on my variety tub collection of plants from seed sent me by mail last year. I know not the donor's name. I do not know all of these flowers by name. A lot of old acquaintances are among them but there are several varieties of a daisy like blossom I do not know. One of them has horizontal stripes and is a very gay affair. I enjoy watching the unfolding of these strangers. I have some marigolds of the large variety that are fully three feet tall and the buds are starting. They look like small trees. This is a good standby and the blossoms keep in bouquets wonderfully well. I have two colors, orange and lemon and these are the only colors I have ever seen in this variety. I feel sure there are fine gardens among corner members of which we have heard nothing as yet. Why not? Those of us who do not find it possible to attend the picnics enjoy the reports of them. With the hope that Saturday's page may be overflowing and with appreciation of the letters that do appear. EVELINE BURR.

VISITING OTHER GARDENS

Dear Social Corner: Have any of you been to see Pernickety's garden yet? No one has stopped to see mine but I have not been so bashful myself for I visited two gardens last week. In one of them I noticed some of the new kind of gypsophila or baby's breath. This has larger flowers than the old kind and is therefore more desirable.

In the other garden there were many thrifty phlox plants in full bloom. Contrary to the advice of florists, this gardener allows the plants to ripen seed and raises the seedlings. This doubtless explains why she has so many faded looking blooms. I am interested in Pernickety's experiment in raising phlox from seed.

Last year Pernickety and I visited the gardens at Red Oak nurseries. I wish she had been with me when I saw them again today. In the perennial borders the blue and the white platycodon attracted my admiration. This is also called balloon flower because of the shape of the buds. In the section devoted to annuals I saw many old favorites such as zinnias, candytuft, mignonette and marigold. The bed of California poppies was a mass of bloom in shades of red and yellow. I found the shapes of the flowers interesting as some were fringed and others ruffled.

Are some of you planning to attend the meetings for homemakers at Storrs? Wouldn't it be fine if we garden lovers could meet at the flower beds there? That is one of the places I like to visit every summer. Another time I shall write about a helpful suggestion that I received at one of the demonstrations.

And now for a word about my gladioli. My neighbors thought I was putting them in too early when I set them May first. But they have grown well and are now at the interesting stage for everyday new buds are unfolding. As I had a lot of new bulbs this year, I am watching them with great interest. About a week ago the primulus began to bloom and now the regular gladioli are opening their buds. My old collection contained red and pink shades only, so I wanted a good white and a clear yellow. Therefore, you can imagine my delight when the first to bloom were two lovely whites and a nice lemon yellow. I am pleased with the large pink blooms of LeMarechal Foch and the apricot Prince of Wales. There hasn't been much rain lately so my garden is getting very dry.

SISTER RHODY.

MY FIRST BUSINESS TRIP TO NORWICH

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: A few days ago, after returning from a few hours work in my garden I seated myself in my easy chair for a rest, and to read the Bulletin. Before I was aware of it I had laid my paper aside and the thoughts of old times, old places, old friends, old faces, also child-hood and young manhood scenes and doings came plainly to my mind.

Through the mist of years came pictures, that in a way had become partially obscured by the dust of nearly seventy years, but at this moment were as plainly pictured, as though yesterday was the day of their happenings.

First I thought of the brook that ran but a few minutes walk from our house, where brother and I passed many happy hours building dams, installing water wheels, from which was belted, trip hammers, buzz saws made of wood, and other minor contraptions.

Other boyhood scenes and doings passed before me in review. My inner eyes rested upon old scenes of long ago. Some no doubt are buried in the innermost recesses of memory, that may come to me later, but before my mental eyes passed beloved forms of playmates, schoolmates and friends.

I now hear my father's voice, asking mother: "Where are the boys?" "They have finished husking the corn in the barn that you told them they must do before playing, and have taken some tools, and have gone to the brook to install other water wheels and trip hammers I expect.

"Well, I have loaded and brought from the woods, that cord of wood that must go to Norwich tomorrow as it is promised, and I don't want to disappoint the customer. I am just about sick, and don't feel as if I could possibly tramp that distance tomorrow with the wood to Greeneville and then go to the Landing and put on a load of pig iron for the Backus foundy; they must have it, for they have but just enough for this week's melting. I wonder if (calling my name) would like to go in my place. I know he isn't but 14 mother, but he can drive the two yoke of oxen as well as I can, and do the errands."

"Let's see, this is Thursday, Nov. 13th, and he may get a chance to see his brother Edward and some of the neighbors as the 26th Regiment is to break camp today, and start for rebeldom. None of us may see him again. O, yes, and school commences Monday, and the boys must have their new boots to wear to school; their old ones are looking pretty shabby."

"Well father, if you think he can drive the team, deliver the wood, load the iron and do the errands, it may be well for him to go, as you are not feeling well. I hope he will be careful and not meet with any mishaps; perhaps you will feel better in the morning, and be able to go yourself. What time will he have to start?"

"I usually start about three or half past."

"Well, I will get up and get him a good warm breakfast as it is quite cool and frosty so early in the morning."

As I put the tools away in the shed I heard this conversation between father and mother; I jumped with joy to know that I was to go to Norwich with the wood, and to do the work like father.

At 3 o'clock I was out of bed; hastened to the barn and fed the oxen. A good warm breakfast was waiting my return. Breakfast eaten I soon had the oxen yoked and hitched to the load of wood. Mother came to the door with memoranda of things to get. Father, the night before had told me where the wood was to be delivered, and where to go to do the errands, and not to forget to put the shoe onto the wheel going down hill, for there was no brake on the wagon.

At 3:30 or soon after I started with the team. With whip in hand, having a long lash fastened to a well tapered handmade hickory stalk mounted with three silver ferrules. General Grant never felt more proud after a victory, than I did as I swung the whip, and sang out man fashion to the oxen. Each one straightened himself and the load moved on the road; 12 miles to Norwich.

As I reached Hanover, the smoke from the chimneys of the early risers, was coming lazily out of the tops. Further along I smelled the odor of tasty ham cooking for breakfast. As I stopped to water the oxen at John Enoch Allen's watering troth, he came out with milk pails in hand, to draw the lacteal fluid from five or six fine looking cows that stood chewing their cuds, just as the sun appeared over the hills and woodland to the east. Deacon Browning was the next to say good morning to. He responding: "Guess you crawled out early to get this far along; going to Norridge I spose?" "Yes, and I want to get there by half past ten or 11, as I have a lot of errands to do." As I reached the Lovett home, I heard the rumble of the train from Providence, crossing the bridge. As the train stopped at the station, the train hands made haste to pile the tender with wood, as here was no coal burned by the locomotives at this time. Two of Captain Lovett's boys, John and Day, stood near their house, watching the departure of the train, and waving their hands to the engineer; he returning the salute.

As soon as the train sped over the crossing, I cracked my whip, and away we went down the hill, (not forgetting to put on the wheel shoe) over the crossing at a good jog toward Norwich, or Greeneville, where I arrived at 10:30. Finding my customer and getting my pay, $4.50 for a cord of all oak and hickory wood.

While unloading the wood the oxen ate their diner. I stopped for them to drink at the Gleason hotel watering troth, over which was this sign: "Stop your horse and let him drink, Before you farther go. The water is better here I think, Than it is a mile below."

Going on I was soon through Toonytown, and in a short time had entered the store of Rawson and Whipple on Water street, where I was to do my first trading as father had told me the night before: "You will see the sign over the door and in the window a sign, 'Cash paid for game'. He keeps a general line of groceries both dry and wet." As I entered the store I saw signs, reading: "If you don't see what you want, ask for it"; "Mother Miller's Smoking Tobacco"; "Jo Allen's Potato Onions"; "Jones Portsmouth Ale"; "Flanigan and Wallis Ale and Porter"; "Thick and Thin Boots Upstairs."

As the clerks were busy Mr. Rawson got off of the stool at his desk and asked me what I wanted and looking under his glasses, asked, "Who's boy are you?" Telling him, and also what I wanted, I said: "I have a bushel of chestnuts; will you buy them Mr. Rawson?"

"Yes I will, and give you $3 for them. Now what else can I do for you." I want two pairs of good boots, one pair for myself and a pair for my brother, and here is the stick the length of his foot. The boots purchased, were up stairs, and there I saw two men drinking ale from pewter mugs that held a pint. Other articles to purchase were 20 pounds of brown sugar, a pound of "Old Hyson" tea, a barrel of Niagara flower, a pound of java coffee, and a half pound of Mother Miller's smoking tobacco. The next store was Doctor Tyler's drug store, where I was to buy a bottle of his make of cough syrup, a bottle of Dyer's healing embrocation, a bottle of Perry Davis paid killer, and a package of composition for colds.

From there to Backus and Barstow's store where I was to get instructions where to get my load of iron on Central wharf.

After putting on my load of 3,030 pounds of pig iron, it being afternoon, I went to Charles Harris restaurant on Water street where I ate dinner, after which I went to the wharf to see the boat Commodore, on which the 26th regiment of nine months enlisted men were seen to take passage for the seat of war. Several of the members were friends, neighbors and schoolmates; my brother was one of the number. On my way up Main street, I was to stop at Morgan Safford's book and periodical store, and buy a Webster's elementary spelling book and two writing books. As I came out of the store, I heard the band playing. The streets were crowded with people to see the soldier boys march by to the boat. With their new uniforms they made a fine appearance. Being well drilled, they were many times cheered, as they marched by in perfect line time and step to the band that was playing some patriotic tune, followed by "The Girl I left Behind Me," as they marched down Shetucket street to the boat, where many a sad, and to some a last farewell was said. I looked with all my eyes to catch sight of my brother, but failed to recognize him. I asked myself, will I ever see him again; will he come back?

Going to where I left my team, putting my basket of purchases into the wagon, I was soon on my way home. After passing the old Point Tavern I rode across "Sachem's Plain," stoping to examine Miantinomo's monument, then standing on the level just below the ledge where it now stands.

I rode much of the way, walking only up and down the steepest hills.

Before I arrived home it was dark and as I passed by the scattered farm houses, and through villages, I saw the flicker of the tallow candles through the windows, as the busy housewife plied her evening care. Few if any kerosene lamps and no electric lams or plights at this time, and yet the people were happy and contented.

Just as the old kitchen clock told the hour of nine I was home and was seated at the table doing justice to a very appetizing supper that mother had prepared; after which I was plied with questions. Why so late home? I replied I waited to see the soldiers. "Did you see Edward? Did you have any trouble in finding the places to do the errands? Did you load the iron alone? How much did you put on?" Other questions would have been asked, had I not suggested that I was too tired to tell of all the sights and doings of that memorable day, but tomorrow I would unload to them the sights and doings witnessed on my first business trip to the "Rose of New England."

The price of memory is dear, when you have crossed the bridge of many years.

Yes, Black Eyed Susie, I had a good time the Fourth. As I believe in "Safety first," I bought a box of crackers, (soda crackers), they are safer for kids to handle if not hot from the oven. Yes I am enjoying the summer with good health and I am busy with work in my garden.

A. sends best regards and wishes, so does the little "lady in pink."

FOR CONVALESCING CHILDREN

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: My little girl was very ill—but, I'm oh, so glad, to say that she is now convalescing. As this is her first illness and she's usually very active, I find it rather taxes my ingenuity to kep her amused—or rather it did—until I tried the following: She loves to mold, but I had no molding clay and here's what I did: Use equal parts of flour, salt and water. Heat the salt, mix flour and water until smooth and add to this powdered Easter egg dye, and any color preferred, bluing, cake coloring, or water paints, but the Easter egg dye is lovely. Add this mixture of flour, water and color to the hot table salt and mix. It should be thick enough so that it doesn't stick to the hands. If it does, add a bit more flour. She has molding clay now in beautiful colors and at "practically" no cost which was also to be considered.

It also passes many an hour for little sister which helps a lot. I roll it in wax paper and keep in jars when not in use, as wind or sun causes it to harden.

For the older girl who would be interested in making pretty and useful things during enforced idleness, using the same recipe one can make really lovely beads by taking a tiny pinch and rolling in any shape desired. Pierce with needle and run through with fine wire or pins and allow to dry. Combined with the glass type of bead they are very pretty. With a small paint brush go over the beads when dry with olive oil. Some even add a few drops of their favorite perfume to the mixture.

I hope this will help the long hours to pass happily for many little children travelling the good old road of recovered health.

Peach Bran Muffins: One cup bran, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 tablespoons shortening, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, sliced canned peaches, 1 egg, cinnamon, 1 1-4 cups flour, sugar. Soak bran in sour milk. Cream shortening and sugar. Add egg and beat well. Add soaked bran, and flour mixed and sifted with soda, baking powder and salt. Pour into greased muffin pans. Put three slices of peaches on the top of each muffin and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 to 25 minutes.

It is a long time since I have written but I notice the Corner needs letters. O. I. C.

MAKING DILL PICKLES

Dear Social Corner: Someone (was it Theoda) asked for a dill pickle recipe. This is the way I'm going to make mine. Put dill in the bottom of a quart jar. Fill jar with small cucumbers. Put more dill on top, also a teaspoon of salt. Put in 1 cup strong vinegar and fill jar with cold water and seal.

Aries: Can you manage Henry yet, or are you still afraid of him? Yes, I have mint, and never mind the lemon lily—have had one promised me.

Wonder if Pernickety's Paradise has been christened yet? How would Good-time Garden do? If it is as crazily designed as she says it is perhaps The Nut Patch would be appropriate.

Sister Rhody: Open the green gate and walk in. I shall be pleased to show you my garden, but truly there's nothing wonderful about it, and probably not even interesting to any one but me.

Seldom get very far from home, now, but if I do will be looking for that linden tree, and when I see a tree I do not recognize, will stop and ask if it can be a linden.

BETTY BOBBET.

SOME GOOD SUGGESTIONS

Dear Cornerites: Here are a few hints which some of you might find interesting: To make a delicious cake frosting add maple syrup to confectioners sugar until it is of the right consistency to spread on the cake. For a tasty luncheon or tea biscuit, make the ordinary baking-powder biscuit dough and roll it to one quarter inch thickness. Cut with a medium sized biscuit cutter and spread each biscuit thickly with deviled ham. Roll up and bake.

To wash heavy rag rugs soak for five minutes in cold water, then spread them flat on the grass, sprinkle well with any good washing powder. Scrub the rugs with a clean broom dipped in hot water. Rinse in clear water, using a hose if possible as the wet rugs are very heavy.

Ma of Greene Cabin: I have been using a recipe for rolls which you sent to the Corner page several years ago and always have excellent results. It makes delicious rolls. I add raisins sometimes as the children like them.

Golden Glow: We miss you out this way. How are you?

A sister inquired several weeks ago about the care of delphiniums. For the hardy kind dig around the plants every spring and put in a shovelful of well rotted cow manure. If this is not obtainable use some other fertilizer.

Will some one please send in some suggestions for refreshments to be served at evening card parties. Best wishes to all Corner members.

A TRIP TO MT. WACHUSETTS

Dear Social Corner Sisters and all: I would like to add my bit to the Corner. Just now all who can are taking trips. I would like to tell about the wonderful trip my family and I took the other day. Leaving home at 8:30 we went by way of the Victory highway to Princeton, Mass. From there it was up grade. We reached the entrance, as it seemed, a pine grove with lovely winding road up to the top of Mt. Wachusett. The elevation is 2,018 feet, a fine view all the way up. At different curves there are rustic shelters where one can view the surrounding country, with mountains in the distance. The top of the mountain seems like solid rock. The summit house is quite a large building. It has a tower, which is reached by three stairways, something over 50 steps. One is well repaid by going to the tower. From there one can see a portion of three states, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, also Bunker Hill monument. There are many pretty lakes, trees, flowers and lovely ferns. A fine drive down seems much shorter. Near Mt. Wachusett is Redemption rock and upon this rock May 2, 1676, was made the agreement for the ransom of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson of Lancaster, between the Indians and John Hoar of Concord. King Philip was with the Indians but refused his consent.

It was a delightful trip. Wish others could enjoy it as much as we did.

I wonder if any of the members of Club No. 6 would enjoy a basket picnic or are those out of date. It would be nice for August, we could all work. Greetings to all the shut-ins.

MELKSHAM.

WHEN POLISHING FLOORS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: When polishing floors woodwork and so forth, one will find it lots easier and cheaper by dipping a clean rag in hot water, then wring until almost dry and then pour on paraffin oil. It will cover scratches and mars.

The cost of paraffin oil is about 15 cents and can be bought at hardware stores.

Fresh Pineapple Ice Box Cake: 1-2 pound lady fingers, 1 cup rich milk or cream, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1-2 cup sugar, 3 eggs, separated, 3 tablespoons pineapple juice and the grated rind of half a lemon, 1 cup shredded fresh pineapple, 1-2 pint heavy cream.

Mix the sugar and cornstarch and add the milk slowly, stirring all the time. Add to the slightly beaten egg yolks and with the butter and grated lemon rind, cook in a double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Add the pineapple juice, cool slightly and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Line a spring mold with wax paper and then with the lady fingers, separated, and placed with the rounded side against the pan. Pour the mixture into the mold and place in the refrigerator 24 hours. When firm, spread with the shredded pineapple and the thoroughly chilled sweetened whipped cream.

Candied Sweet Potatoes: Pare from four to six sweet potatoes and cook in salted water until tender, but not long enough to become mealy. Drain, cut in half or in thirds lengthwise, and arrange in buttered baking dish. Boil one-half cup of sugar with enough water to dissolve it (about three tablespoons) for three minutes. Add to it a heaping tablespoon of butter. Baste potatoes with this sirup, adding it to the pan after potatoes are well basted. Bake in moderate oven until brown, basting frequently with the sirup in the pan.

CLEANING HOOKED RUGS.

Social Corner Sisters: Here I am again; this makes three letters in a month and that is more than some are doing. It has been too hot to work, so just do what is necessary and put on bathing suit, take the truck full of kiddies and go bathing, sure do feel better and every one has a good time.

I think it was Sister Rhody that has trouble with Golden Kerria as I have had the same thing happen for years, just when I thought they were growing fine the tips will die. Each spring the bushes are almost all dead, then start all new. One day in May I passed an old disbanded house that had not had any care for years; among a lot of brush and grass was an enormous Golden Kerria, in full bloom and beautiful, while mine was so little and puny it must be something besides care that they need.

Doris: I have many hooked rugs and I find the easiest way to clean them is to shake them; the rugs look like new and it only takes a few minutes. They dry quickly and the odor is gone. Am not going to say any more this time, maybe I will write some other time. MILKY WAY.

GLINTS OF SUNSHINE

Dear Editor and Friends: Well here I am once more. What fine weather we are having. It is awful hot but we don't want to complain for we will need some of it next January and February. Then we will wish we had some of this warm July weather. There is a lot of sunshine just now and let us give glints of sunshine as we walk along life's highway. Give a few cheerful words or a hearty handshake to some one that is in sorrow or trouble. If we cannot give wealth, sometimes a few words of loving sympathy and encouragement goes a long way to lighten their heavy load of care and trouble. They go farther than weather sometimes. A glint of sunshine through a dark cloud is greatly appreciated sometimes, and goes far to lighten some one's heavy load. There are so many ways to give these glints of sunshine. A jolly letter helps, it gives one something to think about. It shows there is some one that thinks of you and that means a whole lot. I know it does to me. It seems so nice to get a letter from some one even if I have never seen them. It shows they do think of me some times, so let us give all the sunshine we can. There are so many dark clouds in every one's life. Give a little encouragement, a cheerful word, it falls on a tired heart like dew on the flowers and may God grant we may lighten someone's dark way with our little glint of sunshine.

Skipper: Well, how are you and yours? Well, I hope. You thought I would get over being home sick but I am more so today than when I landed on "the rock of ages."

Ann Tenna, L. T. H. Violet and all the others: Hope you are all well. It is not good to be sick this nice cool weather.

Kochia: I think you and I are in the same boat about writing. It is not because I don't want to write but there has been so many things to prevent writing. Will try to do better in the future. Have you had a reunion this summer? Wasn't that a fine one we had? If it had not been for those olives poor Dan and Peter Prose would have been all right, but next time we will have the olives at home. Dan says they are all right if left in the bottles. What do you think about it?

Well may God bless all in sickness and trouble.

NONESOPRETTY.

MY "HAPPY THOUGHT" GARDEN.

Dear Editor: As some of our members have written about their gardens, I will tell you about mine. I have a piece of ground about 60 by 60 feet surrounded by a low stone wall. Many years ago I planted a few fruit trees and lilac seedlings and red currant bushes near the wall, here and there. Whenever any friend gave me a root of any plant I tried to find a suitable place for it in this plot. The center grows a good crop of grass so I let it go to hay now, but each flower and shrub remind me of the giver and happy times. Lindsey gave me a peony; L. T. H. gave blue spider lilies, blue bells and several others; Violet gave a rose; True Blue a cactus; Bee True a century plant; friend gave red balm; Mrs. S. gave shrub with pink blossoms; Mrs. D. gave purple iris; Joan ox salas; Aunt Jerushia gave peony; Theoda gave glads and dahlias; Nonesopretty sent dahlias also; Auntie Jane gave sweet William; Betsy Bobbet sent Chinese forgetmenots, spider plant and mallow.

This year my garden looks more like Pernickety said her garden looks—"hodge podge." I planted some nasturtiums between potato seeds, and asters and marigolds among tomato plants, much to the disgust of my good man. There are hollyhocks nodding above the onions and strawflowers flirting with the cucumber vines. Bachelor buttons have a corner to themselves and can look at the corn. Petunias shake hands with the carrots and taking it altogether we are a happy family.

I wanted to tell you what a splendid time I had at Club No. 4's meeting today in Dayville. I hope some of the other members will write in detail about it as my time is limited just now but I had a dandy time. The dinner was fine as usual and the games and contests clever and amusing. Glad to have seen so many smiling faces but was sorry Turquoise was ill. We arrived home about 5.30 after getting lost somewhere on country roads and landing in Foster and elsewhere. Good luck to all.

GREETINGS FROM SUMAC.

My dear Fellow-Members: Quite a warm spell of weather we have just had. Rather hard to sleep but a cold sponge bath the last thing before retiring will usually cool us off sufficiently to induce sleep on the hottest night. Last Sunday I acquired a respectable sunburn that adds to the heat more or less. My finger is better, I am glad to say but is still very tender and I wear a rubber glove when using strong soap of any kind. I was very fortunate to have taken it to the doctor in time. Not much like your father and husband, Ina. I only made six calls on him but you better believe I did exactly what he told me. He hurt like sixty, too.

I have had a week of swimming (?) this week. I went Sunday, Monday and Wednesday so far. I can make plenty of motions but don't seem to get anywhere.

Pernickety: If all the members were as faithful as you and Little Rhody what a page we would have. As it is what would the page be a good many weeks if it wasn't for your letters. I hope you will keep it up though as your letters are so interesting at this time of the year.

Cosmos: Am sorry but I can't make Durham this year. I hope you can go. And you have Mr. Gardener on Friday night which will be over before this is printed. We have a lobster supper Thursday night and I furnish the program at Quonochontaug on Saturday night so won't be able to make it.

Pleasant vacations everybody,

SUMAC.

EXTERMINATING DANDELIONS.

Dear Social Corner Friends: Do you know pesky dandelions on the lawn can be exterminated without the laborious task of cutting them out by the roots? Well it can be done very nicely. Here is how one man did it.

He walked over every inch of his lawn. In one hand he held a three ounce bottle of sulphuric acid. In the other he had a medicine dropper. To each dandelion he came across, he gave a drop or two, being careful to drop the acid in the crown of the plant. Presto! The dandelions disappeared! Only a few tough oldtimers had to be given a second dose to finish them.

But my goodness! When all the dandelions are exterminated what will the home-brewers do?

ENGLISH RACERS PROPOSE SPEEDWAY 15 MILES LONG

SKEGNESS, England —(P)— A beach speedway twice the length of Daytona beach probably will be built along the coast here as a result of a treasury grant of tidal lands to the Automobile Racing association.

The grant embodies 8000 acres, and the association is negotiating with private landowners for another 2,000 acres.

A straight concrete track, 15 miles long and 200 yards wide, will be built along the north shore of the Wash, and a breakwater 21 feet high from Skegness to Freiston will reclaim a further stretch.

The German housewives association has opened an "eat-more rye bread" campaign to aid sale of the German rye crop.

SPEAK GENTLY

Speak gently; it is better far
To rule by love than fear;
Speak gently; let no harsh words mar
The good we might do here.

Speak gently to the little child;
Its love be sure to gain;
Teach it in accents soft and mild;
It may not long remain.

Speak gently to the aged one;
Grieve not the care-worn heart;
The sands of life are nearly run;
Let such in peace depart.

Speak gently, kindly, to the poor;
Let no harsh tone be heard;
They have enough they must endure,
Without an unkind word.

Speak gently to the erring; know
They must have toiled in vain;
Perchance unkindness made them so;
O, win them back again.

Speak gently; Love doth whisper low
The vows that true hearts bind;
And gently Friendship's accents flow;
Affection's voice is kind.

Some sixty or seventy years ago a traveler on the winding hillside road, or what is now John Ball park, Grand Rapids, found a horseshoe and nailed it to a tree with a couple of nails. Recently the oak was cut down. When the saw refused to go through a portion of the wood, investigation revealed the horseshoe with fifty-four yearly growth rings around it. For the rings to form outside the horseshoe probably took from six to seven years, experts say.

LITTLE BOOST BY BULLS IN CLOSING HOUR OF THE STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, July 25—(P)—The bulls gave the stock market another little boost today, but they waited until almost the last minute to do it.

Until the final quarter hour trading promised to be the dullest of the year, with prices declining under fitful short selling and an apparent lack of interest. When the decline had amounted to one to three points in the favorites, however, pool operations for the advance were resumed and closing quotations averaged nearly a point higher. Nevertheless, at best it was a quiet day and sales totaled only 856,000 shares, which, save for July 2, was the smallest full day turnover in two years.

As has been the case since early in the month, the market went stale on the decline. Wall street is inclined to believe that stocks have been passing into strong hands from which they can be dislodged only by a strenuous liquidating movement, and this theory gained support from the behavior of the list while under pressure today. Offerings dried up so completely that until the late rally it appeared as though sales would barely exceed a million shares, establishing a new low for the past two years.

The recovery was led by U. S. Steel, which converted a loss of about a point into a net gain of 2 3-8. American Telephone, which has been passing into investment accounts, turned a similar drop into a one point advance. American Can's extreme loss was slightly larger, but it finished nearly a point higher. General Electric's nominal decline was eased and the stock closed firm. General Motors was the steadiest of the leading shares, closing up a fraction.

A larger export demand helped the wheat market and futures closed unchanged to slightly higher. Corn made more impressive rallies, ranging from nearly one cent to 1 3-4, reflecting unfavorable crop reports from Oklahoma and a good cash demand. Cotton was up 1 to 10 points net.

Oil shares were quiet and steady, Houston rallying a point. The day's news affecting this group included announcement of further restriction plans in Pennsylvania Crude, bringing several additional counties into line.

Any fears that may exist as to the immediate course of money are being dissipated. Rates on trade loans were again pared, while call funds were available in the unofficial market at 1 per cent. This level, seen earlier in the week, is the lowest in 15 years.

The outflow of gold to France was swelled by the withdrawal of an additional $3,000,000 for shipment to Paris, bringing the total of recent exports there to about $35,000,000.

Fluctuations in many of the active stocks were narrow. Case broke nearly 8 points but closed more than 4 higher. Auburn Auto dropped a few points, finishing unchanged. Eastman Kodak was strong holding above the previous close, and working nearly 5 points net higher.

There were advances of one to three points in Bethlehem Steel, Foster Wheeler, Gillette, International Harvester, Vanadium, Westinghouse and Radio. National Cash Register was sold for a loss of more than a point.

Foreign currencies were quiet. Sterling and the French franc were steady, while the German mark rose a shade.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 25—(P)—Fixed income securities on the New York Stock exchange gave an indifferent performance today. Progress was nominal with some recession in evidence in spots, and trading slowing down with the approach of the week-end.

The rally of railroad bonds which developed yesterday was short-lived. While the greater part of the activity today centered in carrier issues, only a few rails continued their climb to higher levels, and a slight downward trend was in evidence at the close, with losses of a minor character.

Missouri Pacific general 4s and Pennsylvania general 5s, gained a full point, and Atchison general 4s were firm. Chicago, and Eastern Illinois 5s, and Great Northern 5 1-2s, were strong. Small concessions were made by New York Central issues, Union Pacific 4s, Big Four 4 1-2s, St. Paul 5s, Delaware and Hudson 4s, Southern Railway 5s, Seaboard issues, rose about 2 points.

Stock privilege issues fluctuated with stocks and the late rally influenced a firm position. Atchison 4 1-2s gained a full point. Chicago and Northwestern, Rock Island 4 1-2s, Philadelphia, Reading Coal and Iron 6s, were firm. St. Paul 5s and Warner Brothers 6s, were soft.

Foreign issues were steady. Fluctuations were small and sluggishness developed during the afternoon. Such issues as German 5 1-2s, French 7 1-2s and 7s, and Belgian 6 1-2s which have been strong this week, closed 1-8 lower. Austrian 7s, Westphalia 6s, Japan 5 1-2s and Vienna City 6s, were active and firm. South American issues were dull and steady.

United States governments were neglected and changes of small consequence occurred in dealings which were largely confined to Liberty bonds.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 25—(P)—Corn prices jumped today to within 3c a bushel of wheat, and at some places in Illinois maize was commanding 14c a bushel over wheat.

As a rule, corn is 25c to 30c a bushel cheaper than wheat, and the present extraordinary reversal of the comparative position of the two cereals attracted widespread attention. Worldwide over production of wheat, with big carry over stocks on hand was generally given as a reason, together with record breaking drought cu[illegible]ing supplies of corn.

Closing quotations on corn were strong at virtually the topmost level reached of late, and 2-4a2c higher to 3-8c up. Oats 3-8a1-2c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 22c.

Provisions declined as a result of meagerness of demand.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, July 25—(P)—Treasury receipts for July 23 were $6,004,391.65; expenditures $7,324,655.64; balance $201,551,756.17.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 25—(P)—Curb stocks maintained a fairly firm tone in the dullest trading of the year today. The absence of Transamerica, long and active feature on this market, was at once felt, the day's total sales falling to 350,000 shares, this issue moved up to the stock exchange.

A conspicuous burst of activity and strength in Chemical National associates was a feature of the day. This issue, which had not been very prominent since its listing on this board, was the most active issue of the day. It moved up nearly 2 points to a new high at 26 7-8. The company is an investment trust formed last year by Chemical National bank interests. Elsewhere in the investment company group, Goldman Sachs sagged fractionally while United Founders moved up 1-4 in fairly active trading.

The utilities displayed group strength. Electric Bond and Share and American Commonwealth Power issues gained about a point, while American Gas and Tampa Electric mounted about 2, and Northern States A, 3. Oils were largely neglected, although Cities Service continued in fair demand, rising a fraction. Vacuum lost a point.

In the industrial and specialty group, the Bahia corporation issues were firm features of the low priced shares, rising more than a point to new highs, this company's subsidiaries mine carbon diamonds in Brazil which are used in the manufacture of drills for cutting hard substances. Aluminum company rose 4 1-2 in a small turnover. Insurance Company of North America was in fair demand, gaining more than 2.

Ford, Ltd., reacted fractionally in realizing on its recent advance to within striking distance of the year's high, but closed off only 1-8 at 13 3-8. This company has recently acquired a virtual monopoly in the low priced car field in Italy, in addition to its strong connection in England and Germany. It is learned that one of the larger investment trusts has become interested in the stock, and that an international banking house has been purchasing it, presumably for London account.

Deere sagged a point to a new low at 81 1-8, then rallied. National Rubber Machine dropped 2 1-2 to a new minimum at 14.

SECRETS OF INDIAN HERB MEDICINES GLEANED BY WOMAN

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—Old Indian women of the western reservations are teaching a white woman, Frances Densmore, research worker for the Smithsonian Institution, their age-old secrets for making medicine out of herbs.

Miss Densmore is a Minnesota woman who has spent most of her life on Indian reservations. She treads wilderness trails and sometimes sleeps in tepees to get the long-hidden knowledge of ancient tribal customs.

This summer she is camping in places where campfire smoke curls up among the pines, gleaning from old, bright-eyed Indian women their methods of making medicines.

Big Bear Woman, 73, who has given the white woman much valuable information, has a keen sense of humor, says Miss Densmore. The two understand each other and visit together for hours. Big Bear Woman has told of an herb which she says is a marvelous cure for rheumatism.

Miss Densmore is an authority on aboriginal music in the United States. Last year she brought two Indian boys to Washington to sing their native songs for phonograph records to be preserved at the Smithsonian Institution.

She is a collaborator in the Bureau of American Ethnology and a member of the Society of Woman Geographers.

Nearly 3,000 American autos and trucks have been sold in Chile as a result of a better roads campaign there.

Over The Edge

ELIZABETH J. HARING

ALTHOUGH DIVORCED FROM HIM FOR MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS, NORA FELT THAT JIM BRADLEY STILL WAS HER MAN

UNLEASHED at last, the thought slipped into words that echoed harshly in Nora Bradley's ears as soon as she uttered them. Beyond her own reflection in the mirror of the dressing table, where she was putting a finger wave in her hair, she met the pained incredulity of her daughter's expression with one of equal concern.

"I didn't realize it would sound so awful, Natalie," she defended, laying down the brush and turning on the bench to face the other directly. "But I have felt this way about your father for years—it's just that I never gave it voice before. I don't know what ever came over me this morning—yet I would be happier if I knew he were dead!"

Natalie, sitting in a low rocker, holding her 2-month-old son, regarded her mother with mute solicitude, waiting for some explanation of the trend of reasoning that had induced this unusual mood.

"Time and again I've vowed I would forget him and put him completely from my mind," resumed Nora, rising and moving restlessly about the room as she talked. "But it's not that I haven't forgiven him everything—everything, Natalie, even to marrying another woman. It's that he's still my man—unworthy though he be—and as long as he's this side of the grave he lives in my heart and is part of my life. If I knew he were dead he would still be mine, but there would come a peace that is impossible to me now. It's out of patience I am with myself—not with any one else—to know that I cannot be like other women and think of him as a no-account wanderer on the face of the earth. I should have nothing but contempt for the man who would go and leave me—with you like that infant there—his only excuse being that he was the kind who could not endure bonds of such nature! Twenty years, Natalie, I have faced these facts—and yet the smile of him—the voice of him—would blot it all out the instant I laid eyes on him. So I pray that Larry Bradley will never come within sight or hearing—I could not answer for the consequences. I am young still—neither fat nor 40—though I am a grandmother. Bless the fuzzy head of him! There have been men these past years who have spoken the flattery that is ever on their tongues. I know that I am not distressfully plain."

"You are beautiful," interposed Natalie softly. "I can't remember my father, of course, but I have always thought that the greater punishment is his. Some day he will have knowledge of the loss his selfishness brought him."

Nora's tenseness dissolved in a dimpling smile at Natalie's vehemence.

"We'll speak no more of the man and I'll try harder than ever to close the door of my mind on him entirely."

"No, mother, I don't agree with you there. Better to take our thoughts out now and then. Even ugly ones will be better for the airing—and every time we do this, pretend it's housecleaning time! Throw those away that are not worth keeping—mend some up a bit—and there may be others worth passing on to some one else. Whenever it comes into your mind to speak of my father, help yourself to memories, as it were. You haven't answered the question I asked you when you said you would be happier if you knew my father were dead. Do you know that he is living?"

"Natalie, I have had no word since he wrote ten years ago from the Philippine Islands that he wanted me to set him free.

"There was the necessary exchange of documents," continued Nora. "It did not take long. Desertion was the charge I brought and the suit was uncontested, naturally. Then Larry was free—although no legal script could ever make me feel that way! For several years—long before this happened—he had been sending a bit of money now and then in letters to my mother. His parents died before we were married. But I have had nothing direct since that one letter from the islands."

"You do not know, positively, that he remarried?" persisted Natalie. "And he may be dead for all you know to the contrary."

"Come, child! There'll be no more airing—as you say—of thoughts that have to do with Larry and me! But I must confess I feel the better for this morning's talk. It was, as mother used to say—a 'wet cry from the heart but no tear drops!' Let us hasten to the unpacking of the rest of my belongings. Thanks to Bob's pull with that heating company, I'll be getting into uniform again soon. I've worked so many years that even with the responsibility of young Robert, there would not be sufficient for my hands to do to keep my mind healthy."

"You do not start your new job till after Christmas. You're more than two weeks left and in that time you've got to go places and do things. We'll have some one in to stay with Junior between feedings and I can get out quite a bit that way. Bob only has the use of the company car for business purposes, but Mrs. Gilmore has a perfectly luxurious sedan and she told me that when you came she would show you Seattle."

"You've sung the praises of this Mrs. Gilmore till I'm fearful I'll be jealous or not appreciate her as you seem to be certain I shall!" rejoined Nora. "I'll never forget the first mention you made of her in your letters—'our lovely grocery woman' you called her."

"Well, of course, her husband is part of the business, too. But we haven't seen as much of him. It's a neighborhood grocery and she was so kind when we first moved out here and did so many things outside of regular service that Bob and I sort of regard her as a real friend now."

"There's your phone ringing. It's nearly 10 o'clock and Bob is no doubt on the line to find out if you like him as well as you did yesterday at this time. Be off with you."

Natalie, re-entering, said: "That wasn't Bob, it was Mrs. Gilmore. She suggested luncheon downtown and a matinee if I could arrange it. I told her that I could not get away today. I just have to finish my Christmas gifts for the Eastern boxes. But I could see no reason why you should not go and accepted for you. So doll up your prettiest, Mumsie, because Mrs. Gilmore goes to the smartest places to eat."

"Natalie, you know I'm simple and my clothes are simple."

"I was merely making conversation. When you don those simple clothes you are elegant in your inelegance. That's what you call a subtle compliment. Mrs. Gilmore will be here in an hour. You probably won't like her at first. She's quite unconventional and different. But she's been everywhere—used to be on the stage and was an entertainer overseas during the war. Now, don't look so Detroitish! She does glitter, but there's plenty of gold in her composition, no matter what the world might call it."

Mrs. Bradley slipped an afternoon dress from its hanger and regarded it critically. It was of coral satin, and as she held it against her for Natalie's inspection the girl clasped her hands in delight.

"Exquisite! You never wore that shade that I can remember. How did you ever get so reckless with colors? Always it's been white uniforms and conservative tailored things. It's chilly enough for your winter coat and I've a hat that will be the last word with the outfit. Mrs. Gilmore will be overwhelmed because she's expecting to see a grandmother."

FOR the first time in years Nora felt a pleasurable excitement in the matter of her personal appearance. She had bought the dress at the insistence of a friend, a saleswoman, who, hearing that she was planning a coast trip, had telephoned, informing her that she had "just the gown for your Irish complexion." There had been honest doubt in Nora's mind that she would ever have occasion to wear it."

"I'm fearful that Mrs. Gilmore will find me a grandmother in spite of all I may do to disguise my years, Natalie. I've never been outside the state I was born in—as you well know—till I made this journey. With the exception of a meeting now and then of the Business and Professional Women's club and affairs where I demonstrated fancy flours or other commodities of the business I'm in, I'm absolutely ignorant of the things women talk about these days. It's not that I'm disinterested, it's that I've never had the time. I'll do my best to be agreeable to your grocery woman, but she's not likely to ask me out again."

Contrary to her prediction, Mrs. Gilmore kept her busy with engagements the remainder of the week and also fulfilled Natalie's prophecy that she would win her mother's interest and admiration. They took drives, visited places of amusement, lunched and dined together and appeared to find mutual enjoyment in each other's society. One afternoon, over toasted muffins and marmalade in a downtown tearoom, Nora found herself regarding Mrs. Gilmore's mirrored image across the room. What was the secret of this woman's attraction for her? She—Mrs. Gilmore—must be ten years younger. By her own admission, she had been married twice. Daringly made up, yet in a way that emphasized her natural good looks. Poise and charm—but if it had not been that Natalie had sponsored her in the first place, she would never have been given the chance to prove her worth to Nora Bradley.

"And we're just the opposite in disposition as well as in appearance!" commented Mrs. Gilmore suddenly, smiling mischievously. She had caught Nora's contemplative gaze. "You're a lovely foil for my hennaed beauty! You're also sedate and regular, being born that way. I suppose you've never stepped out of the strait and narrow in your life. You've been a widow a long time, too. Mrs. Mason tells me that she cannot remember her father."

Nora saw no reason why she should correct the impression Natalie had given the other and made no reply.

"Well, the young die good and that should be a consolation to you. I have had two husbands—one left me for another woman but fortunately he also left me $10,000 in insurance when he was killed at Chateau-Thierry, as I was still his widow. This money helped in landing Big Boy—my present incumbrance. I love to see your eyes widen that way, Mrs. Nora! Honestly, though, I think I love Big Boy as much as I could any man—I've no faith in any of 'em. He's been steady and reliable since I surrounded him with groceries. If I can keep him busy all the time, as he is now, and feeling under obligation as he still does for some reason, I'll make a real husband of him yet."

Before the week ended Mrs. Gilmore's particular weakness was brought to Nora's knowledge in a way that, strangely enough, grieved her more than it shocked. Nora was at home with the baby while Bob and Natalie were enjoying the evening out together. Mrs. Gilmore telephoned and inquired if she would not like to see a certain "talkie." Nora explained that it would be impossible for her to get away and invited her over.

"I'm coming, anyway," replied the other. "Got a proposition for you."

When she appeared, Nora realized that Mrs. Gilmore had been drinking. This was almost immediately verified when the woman took a flask from her purse and remarked that she had brought along the "makings."

"Now, grandma! You don't need to look so wild-eyed. This won't blind you. It's real stuff—an' jus' make the prop'shian more interestin'!"

Nora's schedule of living had never brought her in contact with a woman under the influence of liquor, and to behold one now, whom she admired and respected, was a sickening experience. She was at a loss as what to do or say and watched in helpless bewilderment as Mrs. Gilmore flung off her wraps and proceeded to the kitchen, where she began opening cupboards and drawers.

"Like 'em strong? Lotsa sugar?" she called out.

"Really, Mrs. Gilmore, I never drink anything—I——"

"Never drank anythin'! Say, woman, they don't make 'em that way any more. Here I'm framin' up nicest li'l' party—an' you say you don't drink anything! Two nice men—perfectly dashin' widow—and Big Boy safe in bed. Go put on the rose dress—you'll knock 'em dead in that. I told the fellow I picked for you that you were a cream crush—he's crazy to meet you—an' here you say you won't even take a li'l' drink. My car's outside—I've lined up a woman to take care of li'l' Bob. C'm'on! Be a good sport!"

She was standing in the doorway with two glasses on a dinner plate, but Nora's actual horror and repugnance were so evident that even in her condition Mrs. Gilmore seemed suddenly to realize that no amount of persuasion would make her entertain the "proposition" a moment longer. With a noticeable effort she tried to remedy her mistake.

"I'm sorry," she half whispered. "Sorry. You're not my kind, I know, but I like you jus' the same as ever. No use wastin' good liquor, though. One more—two more—drinks never hurt li'l' Eva!" She drained both glasses and began putting on her wraps.

"Please, Mrs. Gilmore," entreated Nora. "Don't go out in your car—the way you are. Something will happen—you might be arrested. Stay with me all night. Bob and Natalie will never know why—and we can make some excuse to your husband."

In her earnestness Nora caught at her to detain her forcibly, if necessary, and the next moment Mrs. Gilmore was crying on her shoulder. Nora had never seen any one in this stage of inebriety and now her only desire was to put her to bed. She succeeded in doing this before Bob and Natalie returned, when she explained that Mrs. Gilmore had come over to spend the evening and later complained of not feeling well and she had insisted on her remaining all night.

"Will you look at my car!" she exclaimed.

It had turned colder in the night and the fog had crystallized until the automobile was festooned with frost and icicles. The streets gleamed like mirrors in the early light.

"Big Boy will have more than his usual questionnaire when I get in this time!"

Not a word about her escapade of last evening. She was as serene and indifferent, reflected Nora, as if she had spent the night with a sick friend. It was simply incomprehensible—but the woman surely should have a bite to eat before she left. She began to throw off the bed covers.

"Don't dream of getting up! It's too early for decent folks. I'll call you later and you are a good scout after all! I know you're glad you aren't me, but, well, I'll always be myself." She came over and tucked Nora under the quilts, then impulsively kissed her hair. "I love that white strand in the shiny black, Mrs. Nora! And I find myself almost loving you, too!" With a farewell wave, she tiptoed out the door and down the stairs.

Natalie was disturbed when she found that Mrs. Gilmore had left without breakfast and called the store earlier than usual to inquire about her health. Nora could tell by the conversation that it was Mr. Gilmore to whom she was talking and was rather uneasy as to what they were saying. Finally Natalie remarked, "Thank you so much. I am sure mother will be glad to meet you, too, Mr. Gilmore." Evidently everything was placid and Big Boy either did not know that his wife had been away all night or she had explained her absence to his satisfaction.

"Mrs. Gilmore forgot to tell you when she was here last evening that you are to be their guest tonight," announced Natalie, after hanging up the receiver. "Dinner reservations, show and everything. She knew Bob and I were taking the baby with us to the Murrays' and that you did not care especially to go along. Aren't they the dandiest people?"

It was just three days before Christmas and Natalie was trying to get her shopping completed. She was hurrying even now to get downtown while Junior was having his nap. When she left, her mother decided she would make some old-fashioned spice cookies to surprise her. She donned a white uniform such as she had worn so many years in various model kitchens where she had been a highly paid demonstrator. Soon the Mason kitchen was redolent with spicy fragrance and Nora was flushed and happy. Next year, she reflected, little Bob might have a bite of Christmas cookies—still, there was no telling whether he could or not—it all depended upon what the regulations were for children of that age! Natalie had enjoyed the drumstick of the Christmas turkey when she was less than a year old and Larry had even suggested that she have some of the dressing!

Mrs. Mason had failed to get her order in early enough for the regular delivery from Gilmore's and Nora rather hoped Mrs. Gilmore would be dropping in with them. She was vaguely disappointed when she heard the car stop and a man's tread upon the walk outside. Possibly it was Big Boy himself and perhaps he would quiz her about last night's adventure. In response to the knock she called "come" and then hastened to open the door, remembering that no doubt he had his arms piled high with groceries. In another moment she stood face to face with Larry Bradley! There was instant recognition in the eyes of both. Nora's heart seemed to turn over, something swelled to suffocation in her throat, the floor heaved and the gray day became black.

"Nora! Nora, darling!" Strong arms clasped her as she reeled forward. Mrs. Bradley was not the fainting type of woman, but the sudden vortex of thoughts into which she had been whirled was sufficient momentarily to stupefy any normal person. Lying helpless in this man's arms, she wondered hazily if he were Big Boy—or perhaps extra hired help the Gilmores had called in for the holiday rush? He was certainly Larry—and there were the groceries. Larry still held her closely. She could breathe the freshness of the winter air on his rough coat—his face was very near and he was staring wonderingly—yes, hungrily—down into her eyes. Ah, it was good to be so close again, and when he crushed his lips on hers there was nothing but thankfulness in Nora's heart. Then she fully remembered. It must have come to him, too, at the same moment—the realization that they no longer had the right. There was no protest when she drew from his embrace.

"Is Mrs. Gilmore—is she the woman? Your wife?"

Larry nodded dumbly, then questioned in return:

"And you are Mrs. Mason's mother? I never dreamed. I don't remember Eva ever calling you by name—she always spoke of you as the little fellow's grandmother. You're married again, Nora? Surely it can't be that Mrs. Mason is our—my little Natalie! Then the baby is—but I deserve this hell for being the rotter that I was!"

His abjection was terrible. If Nora had ever ceased loving him and had thought of him as the "renegade villain" her mother so often termed him, she would have been conscious that vengeance was hers at this moment. Instead, she felt only a devastating pity for him and herself.

"We must not let Natalie know—I could not bear the humiliation, Larry."

"I'll go away—I'll cut adrift at once, Nora. I meant to come back to you—the urge was always with me. I never made the money I needed to make the going back easier and I couldn't have—as you know. I was on the seas for years—a 'devil dog' during the war. I met Eva—'Little Eva' they called her over there. She was tired, too, she said, of banging about, and we planned to come here to live and cut out the jazz. But she's so much younger than I—and it's still in her blood. I never blame her for anything she does—she's had a hard lot. And me—nobody cares!"

TO NORA the hours they sat and talked was like a meeting in the Great Beyond. There was no argument. Just Larry's scathing arraignment of himself and her realization that everything must continue this way until the end.

"Let me look at the little one, Nora, before I go," requested Larry, his voice thick with a man's unshed tears. Together they stood above the sleeping child. Quietly, reverently, Larry raised a tiny hand and brushed it with his lips. Then he turned and kissed Nora on the forehead.

"God bless you always—there is no happiness I would not give you if I had the power, Nora. Tomorrow I'll clear out and that will make it easier for all of us. I'll think up an excuse so I won't have to go with you and Eva tonight. I can arrange to have a phone call before dinner that will be important business taking me out of town—and I'll never come back. I don't believe that would surprise Eva much, although I must admit that she has been the most reasonable woman I ever knew. I changed my name, Nora, when I went that first time—so if ever I should get into a scrape I would not bring disgrace to you and Natalie. I can do this again. I'll try never to come back to you." With no other word, he walked from the house.

The moment Natalie stepped into the room from her shopping tour she sensed something wrong. "Mother, what is the matter? Has something happened to the baby? Tell me quickly!"

Nora forced a reassuring smile and reported that Junior had not peeped once. "But I do have a terrific headache for some reason," she faltered, "and that's unusual for your old mother."

Natalie was all sympathy and suggestions. "I'll make you a pot of tea, Mumsie, just like I used to. That will refresh you so you'll feel like your dear self when the Gilmores come after you. We will be going before you—as soon as Bob can get away. I'm so glad you have something interesting for the evening. You've never met Mr. Gilmore. He's quiet, but, poor man, how could he be otherwise with that scintillating wife of his? Be sure to wear the coral dress."

When Natalie went into the kitchen to prepare the beverage, the phone rang and she called to her mother to answer it. It was Larry's voice.

"Nora? This is Larry. Hello, are you there? Some one on your line, I guess. Listen, I've everything figured out and you mustn't worry. But there is something I want to leave with you while I can see you personally—a keepsake, Nora. I'll bring the groceries over myself in the morning—so please try to give me a minute alone."

Nora was about to make some reply that would not arouse Natalie's curiosity if she overheard when a woman's voice chimed in:

"Is this Mrs. Bradley? Grandma Bradley?"

It was unquestionably Mrs. Gilmore and Nora replied after an appalling second of thought:

"Yes, this is Mrs. Bradley."

"Well, well!" and there was a low ripple of mocking laughter. "I did not mean to break in on a tete-a-tete—just lifted the receiver on the extension upstairs and like all listeners got an earful. You remember I said you were too good to be true. And didn't Big Boy work fast? I didn't know you two had even met. Pretty clever, pretty clever!"

Nora could hear Larry groan. "Eva!" he broke in. "You don't know what you are talking about. I'll explain everything——"

There was a peal of incredulous laughter from his wife and Nora thrust the receiver back on the hook as if it were a red-hot iron.

"Your refreshments are ready," announced Natalie. "Nothing but the tea. You'll be dining out in state, remember."

Mrs. Bradley was so dazed by the tangle of events that she moved like a mechanical toy. She did not want Natalie to suspect that the Gilmore party was off, for then she would certainly insist that she accompany them to the Murrays. There was nothing she wanted just now but to be alone. Natalie reminded her that she must change into the coral dress before Bob came for herself and the baby. She brought her carved ivory beads and clasped them about her mother's throat. The bitter mockery of such dressing—all this finery on a day like this!

"You certainly need rouge, Mumsie. I never knew you to be so colorless. If you don't feel well enough we'll telephone Bess and Jimmie and stay home with you."

Such an event would be more disaster, when every moment Nora expected the phone to peal with some kind of denunciation from Mrs. Gilmore! It seemed to her frenzied senses that Bob would never come and take Natalie and himself away. At last he arrived, and when the car cleared the driveway the tension lessened in some degree for the harassed woman. Some way this trouble must be cleared up without the knowledge of Natalie and Bob. Larry would explain—surely he would. He said that Eva was reasonable. Surely she had no more reason than Nora to feel malice!

The short day was drawing to a close. Christmas packages were delivered and a red-cheeked boy brought a small tree—Junior's first.

Nora could neither read nor sew. She found a deck of cards and decided to play solitaire. It had always been a fancy of hers to cut the cards and make a wish when she was alone in this way. Idly she dropped portions of them in three piles. What should she wish? Never again that Larry would come back to her, as she had done so many, many times. She would wish for happiness for Natalie, Bob and the wee one. That would be the only blessing left for her now—surely that was sufficient for any woman? The ten of diamonds, the ace of hearts, the ace of spades. Unexpected money, her wish and a death message. She shuffled quickly for Canfield. One should take no encouragement whatever from such a source, she rebuked herself. She wished it were time to go to bed, but it was not even 5 o'clock. Suddenly the telephone jangled shrilly. It was Larry again.

"Nora? I'm coming for you right away. In a taxi." There was the rasp of fright in his voice. "I've just had a call from the emergency hospital. Eva—they've brought her there—she wants us both."

In less than ten minutes the car was at the door and Nora was ready and waiting.

"It's awful slippery," cautioned the driver, helping her to the cab. "But we'll drive as fast as we possibly can."

Larry, hunched and white-faced, scarcely touched her hand as she climbed in beside him. "She crashed head-on into the concrete viaduct, Nora," he whispered. "Twenty miles out on the boulevard. I begged her not to take the car out today—but she said she would only go over and have a talk with you. I thought she was there all the time until they called me. After I told her everything she was reasonable—just as I knew she would be. Wanted to do anything she could to make things right. Said she'd get a divorce and even let us have the store. I told her your religious faith might not justify re-marriage in your sight. You see, Nora, she knew I had been married before—just as she had been. But she never referred to anything in her past and often said she had no curiosity whatever about my history up to the time we met. And, Nora, they say she is dying—and I'm to blame for it all!"

FROM a white table in the operating room, turbaned in bandages and strangely motionless under the sheet, Eva Gilmore opened her eyes wearily as her husband Nora stood beside her. A ghost of her old smile curved her lips and one hand made a fluttering effort to reach Larry.

"Big Boy!" Her voice was low and halting. "You and Nora will stay here—right here, won't you? You know—Big Boy—I've always been dancing on the edge of things—and—now—I'm—going—over. And—this time—I'm glad—to pay the fiddler!"

Her eyes roved over Nora. "Glad you wore—that dress. Promise me—you'll be married—in it. Don't waste—time—on me. Grandparents—you know. Wish I could see—you married—funny idea!"

She seemed to sink for a while into a breathless coma. Larry raised imploring eyes to the doctors' faces, but they gave him negative gestures in return. Presently she was conscious again and whispering.

"Anyhow—you and Nora—can take each—other's hands—my presence. Let me feel them. I can't—see. Promise—never leave her—again, Big Boy! My sake—and little—Bob's."

Larry's tears mingled with Nora's on the clasped hands. It seemed an eternity they stood there at the high table. Noiselessly, attendants moved about—doors opened and closed softly, voices were subdued—there was the pungency of disinfectants. Eva Gilmore lay so quiet now that Nora was sure she was gone. Then a sigh and a murmur like that of a drowsy child.

"Happy—ever—afterward!"

She was over the edge! Blinded with tears, Nora was led away. Later she and Larry were in a taxi together, but there was no conversation. As Larry helped her to the door he merely suggested that they say nothing to Natalie until morning. "It will be hard enough then, but we will tell her everything."

Natalie came down into the living room before her mother had time to slip unobserved to her own room as she prayed that she might be able to do. Tawnyhaired, yawning and sleepy-eyed, the girl padded over in her bathrobe and slippers to be kissed good-night.

"I've just got Junior to sleep—he was perfectly irregular tonight in every way. Don't start to tell me a thing about your party—I'm just dead! You can tell me tomorrow. Why, mumsie! Your cheeks are wet! I bet you went to some weepy show. Mrs. Gilmore always says that she never cried over her own troubles—but she thoroughly enjoyed shedding tears over other people's!"

CANTERBURY GREEN

"In the Light of Truth," a pageant depicting the development of temperance sentiment in the United States since the Revolution, and portraying conditions in our own day, will be presented by a carefully trained group of townspeople in the Congregational church at Canterbury Green, Sunday evening, July 27th, at eight o'clock, (daylight saving time), at a union meeting of The Fifteen Church Fellowship. Rev. Harry E. Olcott, author of the pageant, has made several trips from his home in Bloomfield to give personal supervision to rehearsals. A spirit of fine co-operation, minute attention to detail, and close application on the part of all connected with the undertaking, insure a successful presentation. Mr. Olcott is quoted as having remarked that, in his experience with this and other pageants he has never been more efficiently supported than by those taking part in Canterbury. The cast follows: A Boy and Girl of 1830, Maxwell and Elizabeth Wibberley; Spirit of Truth, Mrs. Dwight Bushnell; Dr. Benjamin Rush, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, Nelson Carpenter; Dr. Lyman Beecher, clergyman of the early 19th century, Lewis Safford; John B. JOHN McGARRY DIES—RETIRED BUSINESS MAN

John McGarry, 68, 302 Williams street, died early today at the private hospital following an operation for a ruptured appendix and a weakened condition of the heart. He is survived by his wife, a son, Attorney John J. McGarry, three sisters, Mrs. Peter Fitzmaurice, Mrs. Catherine Gleason, and Mrs. John Kilkenny; also two sisters who reside in Ireland, and two brothers, Bartholomew McGarry, Worcester, Mass., and James McGarry, of Sligo, Ireland.

Mr. McGarry, who has long suffered from a weakened condition of the heart and, who nearly a year ago, was compelled to seek hospital treatment in London, when touring the European continent, experienced severe pains Monday and it was believed another heart attack was imminent. A physician was summoned and Mr. McGarry's case was diagnosed as one of gangrenous appendix. He was taken to the hospital, where the operation was performed Wednesday. He failed to rally expiring during the forenoon. Mr. McGarry was born in Ireland and came to the United States when a youth. He first located in Nashville, Tenn. A short time later he came to New London and opened a clothing and shoe store on Bank street. Later he changed the location of the business to a larger store and afterward removed to the present Neptune building, corner of State and Atlantic streets. Mr. McGarry was in business in this city about 25 years and retired about 12 years ago.

HORSE TRAMPLES GARDEN—AID OF THE LAW IS SOUGHT

Isaac Snell, Waterford farm worker, who was arrested by state police several weeks ago when the man became angered because two saddle horses trespassed upon his property, yesterday assumed the role of the complainant for when a horse owned by James Misarky entered Snell's land and trampled a garden, Snell appealed for relief. State Police Officer James Dygert went to Waterford and arrested Joseph Misarky charged with permitting his charge to destroy private property. Misarky will be in Waterford town court Monday next.

COURT GIVES BARKEEP FINES OF $425 WITH COSTS

Edward Sullivan, employed at the drinking resort at 60 Golden street, was in the police court this morning charged on two counts of violation of the liquor law and violation of the gaming law. On the first two counts, Sullivan was fined $200 and costs, each and on the gaming charge a fine of $25 and costs was imposed. He paid. Sullivan was arrested yesterday when a raiding force went to the two story brick building and seized a large quantity of whiskey and gin. This afternoon the liquor was taken to the city's dumping ground, off Riverside avenue and destroyed.

Joseph Lewis, a sailor, was charged with breach of the peace. His case was continued a week. Lewis was on State street shortly before last midnight and when he refused to obey an order by Patrolman William Riordan to move, the bluejacket was arrested and locked up.

George McClanahan, 115 North Bank street, was charged with obstructing traffic. He failed to present himself in court and his bond of $2 was forfeited.

Charles Kaplan, charged with passing an automatic danger signal, corner of Crystal avenue and Main street, was fined $5 and costs, but the fine was ordered remitted. He was arrested yesterday by Patrolman Ernest Opperman.

Joseph Solecki, Broad street, arraigned on a charge of evasion of responsibility, had his case continued to August 2. Solecki was driving his automobile at Huntington and Federal streets several nights ago and it hit a bicycle of Clifford Gilliam, colored of 28 Hill street and damaged the wheel. LODGE NOTES

MOOSE

Notwithstanding the present economic stagnation of the country, there are more opportunities now for success than there have ever been, believes James J. Davis, director general of the Loyal Order of Moose and U. S. secretary of labor, according to a report of a commencement address recently made by him, in the current issue of "Moose magazine."

"There are more opportunities in America today than ever before in all history," declares Mr. Davis in the "Moose magazine" report. "It seems but yesterday that I saw James Farrell, president of the United States Steel corporation, trudging his way up Carson street on the south side of Pittsburgh to his daily toil in the steel mills. Charles Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, was doing more or less similar toil in the steel mills in his youth. The great ministers of many religious denominations today were yesterday sons of the laborers in the mills, or were laboring there themselves. One of the great bishops of the Episcopal church was employed by a railroad, and one of the foremost cardinals of the Catholic church was a coal picker as a boy. There may be men from the state of Iowa who remember Herbert Hoover, president of the United States, as an orphan boy on the plains of that state. There are no end of opportunities today, greater than any these men enjoyed.

"You will first have to demonstrate your ability before success will reward your efforts, and even when success comes, you will be surprised to learn that it is more difficult to retain what you have already won than it was to win it. Keep your head in the clouds, but above all, keep your feet on the ground. The greatest riches of all is a pure heart, a good character, and a healthy mind in a healthy body. In striving for success in life, I urge young people not to make the mistake of believing that money is the thing to be sought nor that it is even a measure of success, although the world uses it as a hurried yardstick for that purpose. The material things in life fade away with the passing of the years, but the spiritual things grow and prosper."

MOOSEHEART LEGION

Women of Mooseheart Legion held their regular meeting Thursday evening in Moose home with Senior Regent Margaret Comire presiding. Past Regent Minnie Smith was reported ill. Members are requested to call on her. After the regular meeting there was a meeting of Jean Davis degree team with Captain Teresa Watters presiding. It was voted to pay bills and members who are in debt to the degree team are requested to attend the next meeting and pay up, in order to straighten out the degree team books. From now on the meetings will be held immediately after the regular meetings.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich grange, No. 172, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening in grange hall with Worthy Master A. W. Lillibridge presiding. The grange voted to accept an invitation to the Franklin celebration on Aug. 3. The grange auxiliary is busy these days making rugs, aprons, etc., for the grange fair to be held in September. A picnic will be held at Atlantic beach Aug. 14, for the grangers and their families. The lecturer's program was as follows: Song, by the grange; original paper on Norwich Industries and Manufactories, by Chas. P. Learned, was very good; address, The Federal Farm Board, How its Problem of Relief May Affect New England Agriculture, by Worthy Secretary Ida E. Richardson; roll call, No. 1. Some of the most beautiful sites of Norwich brought out so many responses that it was a unanimous decision that Norwich is rightly named "The Rose of New England." Roll call, No. 2. What are you planning for grange fair. Responses from this showed all grangers interested and planning to help make Norwich grange fair a huge success. A song by the grange The Church in the Wildwood, concluded this very interesting programme.

Refreshments of fruit salad, rolls, cookies and iced tea was served by Division A, Mrs. Phoebe Beetham, chairman.

JAMES McLAUGHLIN, ECCENTRIC, WEALTHY LUMBERMAN HAS PASSED AWAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 25.—There will be laid at rest in St. Francis' cemetery in Providence Saturday, following a solemn requiem high mass at St. Charles' church in Woonsocket, the body of James McLaughlin, as picturesque a character as this generation has known in this and other sections of eastern Connecticut, as well as in Rhode Island, where he was born, at Cumberland Hill, 70 years ago.

Thousands of people throughout eastern Connecticut will recall Mr. McLaughlin, a lumber dealer, as shrewd a trader as they come, a man of much wealth for many years, and as quaint a personage as is to be found in this day and age.

Born of humble parentage, but endowed with an intelligence and an adroitness such as few inherit, he battled his way up from obscurity to a place of pre-eminence in the lumber manufacturing business, in which he was long associated with his brother, John, who died about a dozen years ago.

More than 35 years have elapsed since he first came into this territory to buy timber lands in nearby towns to cut them off and dispose of the timber they produced.

As the years rolled on the activities of the firm were extended until they covered much of the United States having lumbering interests. At one time the McLaughlins had a shipping station at New London, and loaded millions of feet out of that port.

Mr. McLaughlin was of the type that conceals its true power and vision. He just didn't look the importance he rated, and those who know him well figure that he looked so purposely. Tall, angular, diffident, usually poorly dressed, having little to say, unless there was reason for saying it, he never would have attracted much attention in a crowd. It was difficult to penetrate his shield.

Illustrative of this is a story he used to like to tell his cronies and chuckle about it. He was over in Boston one day, not so many years ago, dressed as poorly as usual, when he stepped into a glittering new Cadillac car and started to drive it off, only to be summarily halted by a police officer who was convinced he was stealing the machine.

Failing to satisfy the officer's disbelief of his owning the car, Mr. McLaughlin invited the officer to go with him to the Shawmut National bank to be identified. A vice president there is said to have looked more or less scornfully at the officer and told him that if "Jim" really wanted to he could buy several carloads of Cadillacs without denting his roll to any great extent.

Then there is another little yarn that is vouched for by a woman who lives here now, but was a resident of Wauregan 30 odd years ago. In those days she was taking roomers to help out the family revenue, and one day Mr. McLaughlin appeared to find a place for four woodchoppers in his employ. He was dressed as well as usual, no better. He did not make much of an impression with the woman, who asked about payment in advance. "Sure," said Jim; they'll be here for weeks; take some money." And he flashed a $100 bill, throwing it on the kitchen table. That woman said today "I never saw one before, and I have never seen one since!"

Mr. McLaughlin lived in Providence much of the time for the past few years. His wants to the last remained as primitive as in the days when he wasstruggling to get a start in life. Often he would purchase a pint of milk and a few crackers for a supper to be eaten at his hotel room. Not that he was stingy, because he was anything but that, but just because it was his particular way.

He is said to have been worth approximately $500,000 at the time of his death.

Mr. McLaughlin married Belle Stanton of Norwich but their married life led to the divorce courts and she finally secured a divorce from him in September, 1925, in the supreme court at Carson City, Nevada. She also obtained $500 per month alimony and $1,000 for counsel fees.

This was the second divorce decree obtained by Mrs. McLaughlin during the long drawn out litigation which had been begun in 1921. Her husband also secured one decree against her in Reno, but this was vacated by the high court of Nevada.

Mrs. McLaughlin's first decree was secured in Rhode Island in September, 1921, at which time she was awarded $20,000 and counsel fees.

This decree was to become final in six months, but before that time had elapsed Mrs. McLaughlin filed a discontinuance which amounted to declining to accept the divorce, and she won out in the legal proceedings, when Chief Justice Sweetland of Rhode Island ordered a writ of prohibition commanding the superior court to refrain from entering a final decree.

After this Mr. McLaughlin got his divorce in 1923, in Reno, which was set aside, and the couple finally legally separated when Mrs. McLaughlin secured divorce in 1925.

A. L. PEALE'S NEW BOOK ON INDIAN LORE

Probably Norwich has no more enthusiastic student of Indian history in this part of the state than Arthur L. Peale. For years he has been delving into the activities of the original inhabitants of this territory and the places which they made famous or when memorials have been established in their honor.

In the course of this study and visitations, Mr. Peale has amassed a rare fund of information concerning Indian tribes, leaders, trails, battles, forts, burying grounds and the legends connected with them and this has been recently produced in book form.

Memorials and Pilgrimages in the Mohegan country is the title of the 50 page volume which deals with such subjects as the City of Kings, Memorial to Uncas, the Royal Burying Ground of the Mohegans. Uncas Sachem of the Mohegans, Monument to Miantinomo, Miantonomo Sachem of the Narragansetts, the Wabaquassets and John Eliot, More's Indian Charity school and Samson Occom, the Leffingwell Memorial, the Mohegan church Memorial to John Mason and the Founders of Norwich, Major John Mason, Buffalo Bill at the Grave of Uncas, the Mohegan Trail, the Nipmuc Path and Joshua's Tract, Dedication of Fort Shantok, Fort Shantock State Park, Memorial Boulder at Great Plain, the Mamohet Memorial, Mamohet, Notes on Mohegan Anthropology and Archaeology.

Mr. Peale has assembled a volume of important facts concerning the Indians and early settlers in this locality and so arranged them that they are highly entertaining and instructive and are bound to be invaluable for those who are seeking such information in the future. Gathered together under one cover they provide a most interesting story for residents of this part of the state and all others who are concerned directly or indirectly with its Indian history.

LAWNS IN CONNECTICUT HIT BY NEW FUNGUS

Hot, dry weather works at least one kindness. It has slowed down the epidemic of a fungus that has never been known before in Connecticut, according to botanists of the Connecticut agricultural experiment station. The disease is damaging lawns in the southern part of the state to an extent they have never seen before.

Fungi need dampness to prosper. This disease, which is caused by a fungus of the genus Helminthosporium, started in the rainy weather of June and recently was reported as injuring lawns and golf courses in New Haven, Branford, Guilford and other communities. It appears in brown patches of dead grass similar to those of a more common disease known as "brown patch."

Station botanists have never known such an outbreak as the one this year. The grass is matted down as if it had been saturated with gasoline or kerosene and under the microscope the dead leaves show black spots. Lawns recently seeded seem to be the most susceptible. Bent grasses, especially the creeping bent, appear to be most severely attacked.

Lawns so damaged should not be watered excessively, the station warns. Persons mistaking the injury as due to lack of moisture have sprinkled their lawns and caused the fungus to spread in a widening circle. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture is suggested as a remedy. In wet weather applications should be made twice a week. Experiments with various sprays are underway at the experiment station.

Fungus Damages Connecticut Oaks

A fungus desease of trees which has been reported from all parts of Connecticut this summer, has appeared less severe in the recent dry weather. Commonly known as oak anthracnose, it has attacked white oaks and sycamores. The oak injury shows in leaves that appear brown and scorched. On the sycamores the disease kills twigs at the ends of branches, where it enters the tree every spring. The trouble is caused by a fungus of the genus Gleosporium. Spraying will prevent spread of the disease, but this is impractical except when it is wished to save a particularly fine tree.

AMERICAN YOUTHS SHOOT WELL AT CAMP DEVENS

American youths are reverting back to the characteristics and qualities of the pionees, army officers on duty at the rifle range at Camp Devens believe for the number of citizens military training camp students qualifying on the range this year is greater than ever before. Better than 70 per cent of the first battalion qualified and of this number not more than 10 per cent ever handled a rifle before. According to the range instructors the present day youth has a firmer grip, steadier hand and sharper eye than was the case not so many years ago. All of these qualities plus a quick mind are essential in shooting.

It has been easy for the students to grasp the fundamentals of rifle shooting, all having been taught how to handle the rifle before going to the range. There the "coach and pupil" method was used, the student being placed in charge of either an upper course student or a regular army man. Then, step by step, the student was instructed: how to sit or lay prone, how to dig in, the proper grip and adjustment of the strap, etc. Finally, the coach dropped a cartridge into the chamber, the student locked the gun and took aim. Usually the first few shots went wild but after a while the youth generally landed a shot somewhere near the bulls-eye and, elated, put the next few right through the center rings, some times making a perfect bulls-eye. The basic students had to make 55 points out of 75, at both kneeling and prone positions at 200 yards to qualify for a marksman's medal. The advanced students were required to shoot better than 75 out of 100 for a marksman's medal and better than 80 for a sharpshooter's medal.

Marksman medals were awarded to Connecticut men as follows: J. P. Mikolaitis, Ansonia; William F. Dow, New Haven; Ralph J. Geduldig, Bridgeport.

The highest students shooting the basic course, who were awarded marksmen's medals were George J. Green, East Boston, Joseph B. Ivaldi, Winthrop; Robert E. Curtis, New Haven; Walter L. Flaherty, Woburn; John V. Carisi, Bridgeport; John B. Knight, Brockton; D. J. Dempsey, Somersville; J. M. Pascal, Dover; W. R. Walsh, Adams; R. C. Schofield, Wealesley Hills.

SWATTED AT BEE AND CRASHED INTO POLE

A bee that flew into a Hudson sedan said to have been driven by a man from Springfield, was to blame for the car crashing against a trolley pole on West Thames street about noon Friday, when the machine was badly wrecked.

The man was driving towards the city and when near the West Thames street school the bee buzzed alarmingly around his head. He made one or two swats at it without success and then turned in his seat to open a window so that the insect would fly out. As he twisted in his seat, he turned the wheel at the same time and the car charged into the pole.

The hearing will be held in the council chamber.

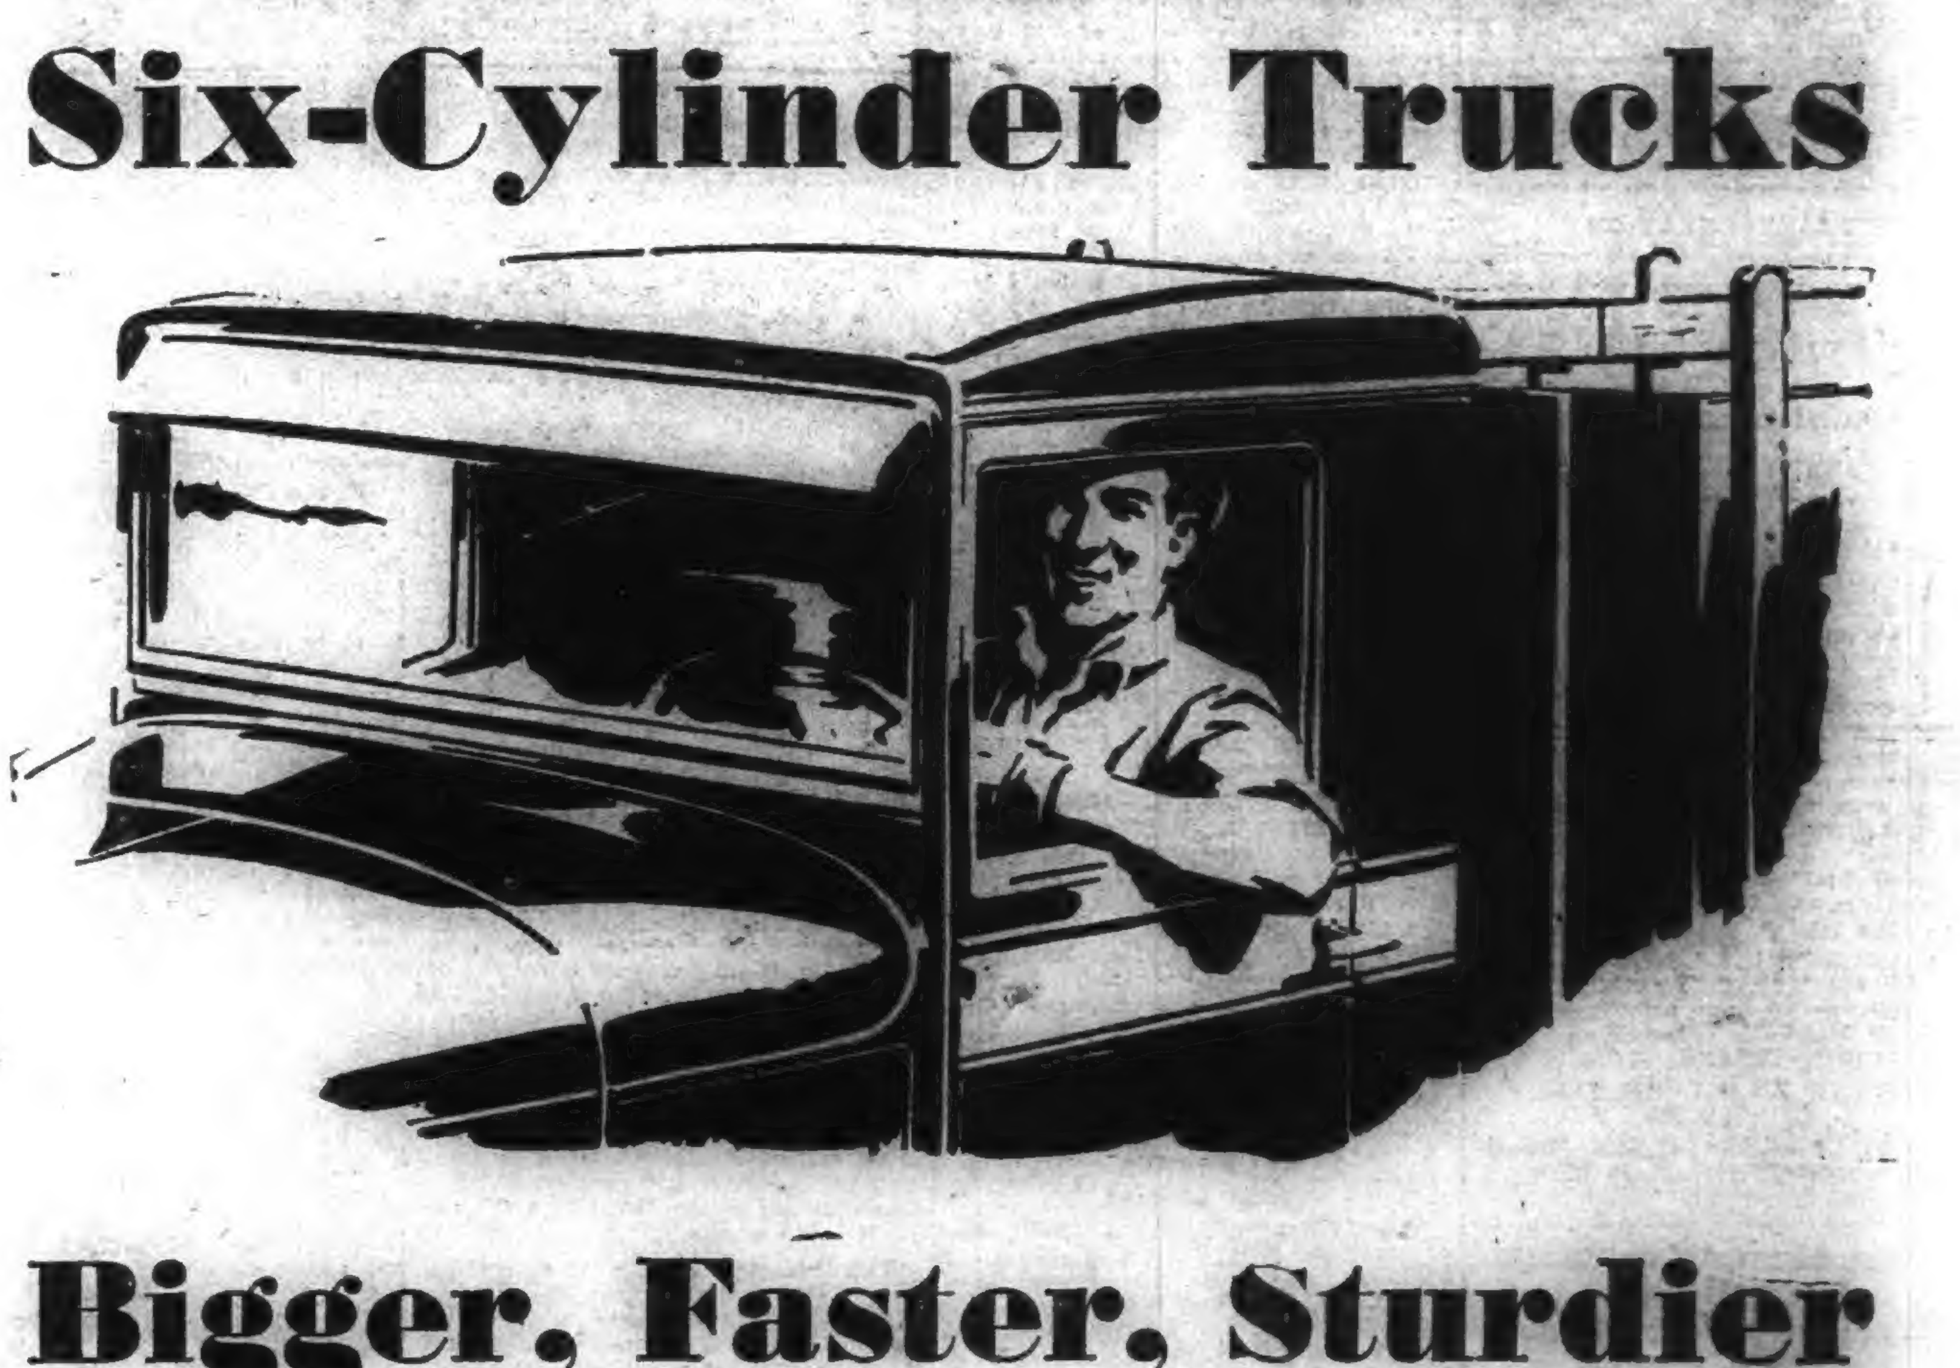
Six-Cylinder Trucks



Bigger, Faster, Sturdier
and more economical

In size, speed and durability, the Chevrolet Six-Cylinder Truck is superior to any haulage unit ever built by Chevrolet. Yet, for all these decided advantages, it shows (according to many prominent fleet users) a lower maintenance cost than any other low-priced truck of similar capacity!

These basic facts should be borne in mind by everyone considering the purchase of an inexpensive haulage unit—because capacity, speed, ruggedness and operating economy are the big points to consider in these days when business men are watching transportation costs.

Many important features of the Chevrolet Six-Cylinder Truck are given below. Study them carefully. Then use them as a basis of comparison—to prove quality—to prove modern design—to prove OUTSTANDING VALUE!

"MA" FERGUSON LEADING IN TEX. DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY

Unofficial Returns From 241 of the State's 253 Counties Give Mrs. Ferguson a Lead of More Than 50,000 In the Gobernartorial Contest—Morris Sheppard, Incumbent, Leads His Nearest Opponent By More Than 200,000 For Nomination For U.S. Senate—Vote In the Republican Primary Was Light.

DALLAS, Texas, July 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Miriam A. "Ma" Ferguson, former governor, and Ross S. Sterling, wealthy Houston publisher, tonight appeared certain of places in the run-off for the democratic nomination for governor.

Based on the report of 65 counties complete, the Texas election bureau estimated a vote in yesterday's primary of 780,000. Of that total 663,184 votes had been unofficially tabulated.

The figures which represented at least partial returns from 241 of the state's 253 counties, were: Mrs. Ferguson, 194,018; Sterling, 139,501; Clint C. Small, 103,876; Thomas B. Love, 66,427; Jim Young, 63,093; Barry Miller, 48,063; Earle B. Mayfield, 42,709; C. C. Moody, 3,703; Paul Loven, 2,360; Frank Putnam, 2,350, and C. E. Walker, 2,185.

Governor Dan Moody, who four years ago defeated Mrs Ferguson for re-nomination, said tonight he would support "anyone who goes into the run off against the Fergusons." Mrs. Ferguson entered the lists this year when her husband, James E. "Farmer Jim" Ferguson, also former governor, was denied permission to place his name on the ballot. Permission was denied because of his impeachment while in office.

Run-off primary elections are held in Texas between the two high candidates for nomination when no candidate has a majority. Democratic nomination generally is considered equivalent to election.

Senator Love, one of the defeated candidates who led the successful democratic bolt in Texas from Alfred E. Smith in the 1928 presidential race, pledged his support to Sterling and said he would do all in his power too prevent the return of "Fergusonism" to the state capitol.

United States Senator Morris Sheppard, dry, was renominated in the democratic primary as had been expected. Latest returns gave Sheppard 388,938 votes to 130,807 for Robert L. Henry of Houston, a wet, and 30,727 o C. A. Mitchner of Sherwood.

Election bureau officials estimated the republican vote for governor and United States senator at not more than 10,000.

In the republican gubernatorial race, 36 counties 10 complete, gave H. E. Exum, Amarillo cattle man, 970; Dr. George C. Butte, of Austin, 412; John F. Grant of Houston, 212, and John Pollard Gaines, of Wichita Falls, 15. Potter county, Exum's home, returned 100 per cent of its republican strength, 324 votes, for Exum.

The same returns in the republican senatorial contest gave C. O. Harris of San Angelo, 522 votes; Doran John Haesley of Dallas, 473, and Harvey H. Haines of Port Arthur, 344.

With the exception of John C. Box, congressman from the second district, all incumbents standing for renomination and having opposition, apparently were successful.

Returns from 13 of 14 counties, including three complete, gave Box 23,244; Martin Dies, 27,718.

RELIEF WORK IN ITALY GOING ALONG SMOOTHLY

ROME, July 27—(AP)—Relief work in the Italian provinces devastated by last Wednesday's earthquake was going forward smoothly today, and there were no indications that the toll of 2,142 dead and 4,551 injured would be greatly increased.

In the second official report to Premier Mussolini, Minister of Public Works Crollolanza announced that the various relief services had been completely adjusted. The work of bracing or demolishing dangerously damaged buildings was going forward smoothly. The clearing of the principal streets was well under way, and the distribution of rations and other supplies was regular and equal to the people's needs.

The report said many local bakeries were functioning again, and emergency chemist shops had already been installed in the various townships. The minister announced that tomorrow morning the last convoy of injured, now grouped at Saint Angelo De Lombardi, would be taken to hospitals by special train.

40-STORY BUILDING TO BE ERECTED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, July 27—(AP)—Plans for the erection of a 40-story building to be known as the New England building and a 30-story professional arts building, in the heart of the Park square district at a cost of $30,000,000, were announced today by Boston financial interests headed by W. J. McDonald, real estate broker.

61 ALLEGED ANARCHISTS ARRESTED IN PARIS SUBURB

PARIS, July 27—(AP)—Sixty-one alleged anarchists, mostly foreigners, were arrested by French police today on the banks of the River Seine near the suburb of Villeneuve-Saint Georges.

They were attending a meeting of an association known as "The Federation of the Spanish Tongue," which according to the police is more occupied with subversive propaganda in Spain than with linguistic questions.

Five of those arrested turned out to be men already officially expelled from France, who had illicitly returned. The police seized a large quantity of anarchistic literature and say they obtained evidence that the meeting's real object was to choose delegates to go to Spain to provoke disorders.

DETROIT, July 27—(AP)—Sixty detectives and patrolmen besieged a gangsters' hide-out in the exclusive Grosse Pointe suburb this morning and finally gained entrance and arrested five men, believed to have been involved in a dozen recent gang slayings here.

Detroit detectives, Michigan state police and Grosse Pointe police and firemen took part in the raid, after a man leaned from the window and shouted that he would "bump off the first copper that sets foot on the doorstep."

Among the weapons found in the place, police believe they may have those used in the slaying of Gerald E. (Jerry) Buckley, political commentator for radio station WMBC, shot to death last Wednesday. Bullets from a German Luger revolver and an unidentified .38 calibre weapon were found in Buckley's body. A German Luger with the barrel missing was found in the place raided today.

CONTEST OVER POSSESSION OF BODY OF SLAIN WOMAN

GREENWICH, July 27.—(AP)—Police today were called out to allow the body of Mrs. Anthony Andreon to rest in peace in the home of her sister.

Mrs Andreon was shot to death Friday evening by her husband who was himself seriously wounded in a battle with police to avoid arrest.

Today the body of the slain woman was moved from a local undertaking establishment to an apartment house owned by Michael DiSapi, where her sister, Mrs. Lena Verisi, lives. There it will rest until tomorrow morning when the funeral will take place from St. Rocco's church nearby.

Police Chief Patrick Flanagan warned DiSapi that any interference with the funeral plans would result in his summary arrest. Two policemen were stationed at the apartment house throughout the afternoon.

Andreon, under arrest in the hospital here, today was reported in a slightly improved condition and hospital attaches believed he wauld recover.

HOOVER CONSIDERING WESTERN TRIP PLANS

ORANGE, Va., July 27.—(AP)—President Hoover relaxed today in the welcome shade of his mountain camp, chatted with friends and considered plans for the western trip he intends to take next month.

It was a day of almost complete inactivity for the president and his guests. The heat from the low-lands had edged upward to the mountain retreat and the presidential party sought relief in the shade.

The chief executive went over plans which have been presented for his summer vacation in the west but no decision was announced. It was understood he would decide upon a definite schedule this week.

A walk to the top of a hill near the camp with Mrs. Hoover was the only activity engaged in by the president. From this vantage point he and Mrs. Hoover obtained a panoramic view of the surrounding country. They saw a number of small forest fires scattered about in the distance.

The fires had sprung up as a result of the dryness due to the lack of rain. The drought also had lowered the supply of water in the reservoir and the president's party were careful not to waste any of it.

TWO CHICAGO BANDITS SHOT DEAD BY ROAD HOUSE OWNER

CHICAGO, July 27.—(AP)—Two bandits were shot to death early today by the owner of a road house which they held up.

A confederate, running a gauntlet of shotgun fire, escaped with $300 in cash and jewelry but left behind the bodies of his companions, identified as Milton Simons, 30, and Alexander Zill, 25, an ex-convict.

As the trio stripped valuables from the patrons of the resort, near suburban Lansing, the proprietor, Tony Sodo, caught a shotgun, crep unobserved from the building and hid in ambush near the front door. The marauders left hastily, to be met by a withering broadside of slugs that cut down Simons and Zill. The third sprinted to an automobile and drove away.

Authorities questioned Simons' brother in an effort to learn the name of the fugitive.

"RUDY" VALLEE NOT IN FEAR OF IMPENDING DISASTER

NEW HAVEN, July 27.—(AP)—"Rudy" Vallee today denied that he was "obsessed with fears of impending disaster." He said newspaper reports from Boston last week quoting him to that effect were erroneous.

"I do not fear anything that may be based upon fact," the radio crooner said at a banquet in his honor, "but there is nothing to which sensation mongers will not stoop to drag one down. I told my friends in my home town, Westbrook, Me., last week that I sincerely hoped that I might come home to them, even though in disgrace, and always find a welcome. The people of my home town understood what I meant. But I am now informed that my statements there have been misquoted and misconstrued."

Partial Payment On Mexican Bonds

Holders Are to Receive From 1 to 10 Per Cent. of $350,000,000 Interest Arrears.

NEW YORK, July 27.—(AP) —Owners of defaulted obligations of the Mexican government and the Mexican National railways will receive fro[redacted] 1 to 10 per cent of the $350,000,000 o on interest arrears. The amount p will approximate $11,750,000.

Announcement of the sharp reduction in the accrued interest payments was made tonight in a supplementary statement issued by Mexican Finance Minister Montes De Oca and Thomas W. Lamont, chairman of the international committee of bankers on Mexico, who last Friday signed the agreement for the refunding of Mexico's debt.

The statement said that in liquidating the long over-due debt of the Mexican government, which totals $275,302,000 principal amount, and approximately $197,900,000 unpaid interest, retirement of arrears will be on the following basis:

Receipts for interest in arrears, Series B bonds, one per cent; Series A, 2 per cent; current interest scrip, cash warrants, coupons and rights to interest maturing prior to Jan. 2, 1931, except interest represented in arrears receipts, 10 per cent.

Payment of the arrears will be made, the statement said, from a fund to be established. The plan provides for the consolidation of government issues into one new issue, and payment of annuities beginning with $12,500,000 for 1931, increasing to $15,000,000 in 1936 and thereafter. Out of the early annuities the committee plans to reserve sufficient money to establish the fund to pay a portion of the overdue interest. It is to be accumulated during the first three to five years and payments will be made, the statement said, when it reached the necessary amount of $11,750,000.

Retirement of the arrears on the National Railways debt on similar terms is contemplated, the statement said.

Old government bonds will be exchanged for new issues to be known as Prior Series A and Junior Series B. Prior Series A will be exchanged for the present secured direct debt and the Junior Series will be issued in exchange for the unsecured debt.

A sinking fund will be established calculated to be sufficient to retire the entire bond issue by its maturity in 45 years. Cash warrants and current interest scrip receipts applicable thereto dealt with under the 1922 agreement. Holders of such receipts assenting to the plan have the option of receiving cash at the time of deposit.

Nineteen breaches in the river and canal embankments were reported from the flood area, but engineers believed the worst was over in this district. The river at Sukkur was falling slightly today. Koiri and Hyderabad, however, both towns well below Sukkur, were considered in danger. The Indus was rising rapidly in its lower reaches.

Dreams And Systems Of Socialism Scored

By Pre[redacted]ardeau of France In o Manufacturers a orkmen.

France, July 27.—(AP) — day socialism and the pro of parliaments, which he seem associate in his mind, were rely handled here today by Pre er Tardieu before an audience of anufacturers and workmen.

Observers believed his speech evidently intended to place before the people the government's point of view of recent conflicts with important groups in the chamber of deputies, will have loud echoes through France. The head of the government started out by declaring that France cannot support an annual increase in its budget of somethign like five billion francs (around $200,000,000).

"Our pre-war budget was five billion francs," said the premier. "This year it is 52 billion, and if we add the sinking fund and all local budgets the total asked from the taxpayers is 72 billion.

"Parliaments, which were originally set up to limit the profligacy of the ruling powers, have by evolution become less apt to limit than to increase expenditures."

The premier then made a direct attack on the socialists, saying: "The policy of prosperity which my government announced at the outset of its career cannot be realized by dreams or by systems."

He went on to say that the dreams were those of Karl Marx and the systems were the present-day programs of the socialist party, which took no account of what had happened since the days of Karl Marx. Tardieu referred to bills passed by parliament at the last session, which will affect future budgets. He told the workers, "You are not sufficiently considered as taxpayers and consumers, which are one and the same thing."

He ended by saying that 51 nations succeeded in founding an international labor bureau, and asked "Are we incapable in the bosom of our own family of conceiving and realizing the unity of French labor? That is the problem of tomorrow."

HULL, Mass., July 27—(AP)—State troopers from the Middleboro barracks today arrested 28 men and women, all attired in evening dress, in a gambling raid on three barred and grated rooms on the second floor of the Shore Gardens at Nantasket beach.

Check books on nearly every bank in eastern Massachusetts were found on the tables and a loaded revolver was taken with the gambling equipment.

The raid was made with such efficiency and quiet that 300 guests on the floor below went on dining and dancing unaware of what was taking place above them. Those arrested gave the names of Brockton and Boston residents and all were discharged in $25 bail.

John P. Murphy, who, according to police, was in charge, was held in $100 on charges of maintaining a gambling nuisance.

HEAT WAVE EXTENDED FROM KANSAS TO ATLANTIC COAST

Reports From Various Sections Showed Temperatures Registered 100 Degrees Or Above—Four Persons Died In New York Form Heat—Most Eastern Cities Sweltered In Temperatures of 90 Or More — Unprecedented Droughts Prevail In Arkansas and Virginia.

(By the Associated Press.)

From Kansas to the Atlantic seaboard and from the Great Lakes to Northern Dixie, the citizenry was recovering today from a resurrected week-end heat wave that left in its wake death, drought and discomfort.

Reports to the Associated Press from widely divergent sections showed that temperatures of 100 degrees and above were the rule rather than the exception yesterday.

Hundreds of thousands fled to ocean, lake mountain resorts to hide from the sun. Six deaths were reported.

Leading the nation in the mercury column was Earlington, Ky., with an official reading of 110 degrees. Northern Arkansas, now 64 days without rain, reported unofficial temperatures of the same figure.

Forest fires in Orange county, Va., and near President Hoover's Rapidan camp were an added menace to the heat and drought.

Four persons died in New York, where the mercury reached a peak of 87 degrees. Other eastern cities sweltered in temperatures of 90 or more.

The weather man promised thunderstorms soon to relieve the heat in many mid-western sections where the heat and discomfort are general.

MIDDLE WEST LOOKING FOR BREAK IN HEAT WAVE

CHICAGO, July 27.—(AP)—Middle-westerners scanned the skies today for signs of the thunderstorms that are destined to break the heat wave.

The weather bureau predicted rain tonight or Monday in most of the parched prairie states extending from Kansas to Michigan and with the showers a welcome return to moderate temperatures.

Thermometers hovered in the upper eighties and nineties today, off several points from the record readings of yesterday and due in part to the sporadic rains which fell through the night in the Great Lakes region.

Despairing farmers who had reported crops withering under the relentless sun hailed with joy the forecast precipitation. Meanwhile, the city dwellers, oppressed by a stifling sultriness, crowded beaches and picnic grounds.

The official forecaster promised thunderstorms within the next 36 hours to Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota; the northern stretches of Illinois, Indiana and Missouri; Eastern Iowa, and possibly Kansas and Nebraska. No showers but an extension of the general cool weather was expected to reach the Dakotas.

UNPRECEDENTED DROUGHTS IN ARKANSAS AND VIRGINIA

ATLANTA, July 27.—(AP)—Another bull movement in government mercury was recorded over the south today, perspiringly reminiscent of the record rampage of three weeks ago.

Although temperatures today did not reach the all time highs recently established, unprecedented droughts were prevalent in Arkansas and Virginia. It was the 65th day of the Arkansas Sahara and almost as long in Virginia.

The highest reported temperature of the day, not only in the south but over the entire country, was 110 in Earlington, Kentucky. Little Rock, Ark., had 104 with similar readings elsewhere in the state. Nashville, Tenn., had the same figure with 100 in Memphis and Chattanooga. Birmingham recorded 97. Atlanta was under 95.

The coastal regions fared best, New Orleans had only 90 and with showers at that; St. Petersburg, Fla., also had showers with 93; Jacksonville had 93 without the showers. Columbia, S. C., reported 95 with showers general over the state. North Carolina's reported highest was 94 in Raleigh.

Richmond, Va., sweltered with 97, but that was a three point drop from yesterday and thundershowers were promised tonight.

No deaths or prostrations were reported anywhere below the Mason and Dixon line.

THERMOMETERS WELL OVER 100 IN OKLAHOMA

KANSAS CITY, July 27.— (AP) — Thermometers were reported to have neared the bursting point in Oklahoma today as the southwest sweltered in a prolonged heat wave which carried temperatures considerably in excess of 100 degrees.

Emporia, Kansas, reported 108 degrees and Wichita 101. At Topeka, Kans., the mercury rose to 104; equalling the year's record.

Oklahoma fell in line with 104 degrees at Muskogee, 103.5 at Tulsa and 100.2 at Oklahoma City. Medford, Okla., reported an unofficial reading of 116 degrees. Thermometers in the sun were reported to have burst.

Temperatures of approximately 100 degrees were general in Texas.

An unofficial temperature of 103 degrees was recorded in Kansas City.

REFUGIO, TEX., MENACED BY RUNNING GAS WELL

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, July 27.—(AP)—The town of Refugio, near here, was threatened by fire today by a burning wild gas well within two blocks of the business district. Three homes had been destroyed and unless the fire was controlled soon it was feared flames would break out in another section.

The gasser, which had covered Refugio and surrounding country with a blanket of brown colored oil sand as it defied control, caught fire last night and the blaze was visible here, a distance of 62 miles.

Residents in the immediate vicinity moved from their homes several days ago because of fear of fire and to get away from the ever-widening crater.

The well has a pressure of 2,200 pounds with the gas production estimated from 50,000,000 to 140,000,000 cubic feet daily.

Shortage of water in the town made the fire hazard greater and many oil and gas wells in the immediate vicinity added to the danger.

An attempt to extinguish the blaze with steam and explosives was planned. More than 5,000 feet of casing which had dropped to the bottom of the well after being brought to the surface by gas pressure, again had fallen to the bottom and kept the well from bridging and shutting itself in.

CRITICISED TARIFF RAISING BY THE SPANISH CABINET

MADRID, July 27.—(AP)—Action of the Spanish cabinet in raising the tariff on manufactured products was criticized today by Baldomero Argente De Catillo, former minister of supplies. He said the increased duties would not help the peseta exchange permanently, but would raise the cost of living, with buyers of manufactured goods paying the extra charges.

"The increased tariff will have deplorable results," said Senor Argente. "It may even cause a famine."

LATEST DETAILS OF CHICAGO BABY MIX-UP

CHICAGO, July 27.— (AP) — The Bamberger-Watkins baby mix-up settled today into what would seem a protracted squabble.

One of the infant principals, and possibly the Watkins heir, was christened George Edward Bamberger at the Church of Our Lady of Solace.

Original plans were for an afternoon ceremony at one church but threats from Barratt O'Hara, attorney for the Watkins family, to halt the Catholic baptism by court injunction caused the Bambergers to hold the christening in the morning at another church.

With the name of the child officially entered in the church records Charles Bamberger stated the celebrated baby tangle was settled once and for all.

Simultaneously William Watkins announced the affair was "just starting." He promised a suit against the Bambergers and another suit against the hospital, where the babies were born on the same day five weeks ago, and supposedly delivered into the hands of the wrong parents. Watkins reiterated his belief that the baby freshly baptized George Edward Bamberger is in reality the Watkins' son. Bamberger claims him for a true Bamberger.

There was joy and sorrow in the respective homes. The Bambergers went forward with a christening celebration. Watkins chafed and his wife was reported in a hysterical condition.

STATE TRADE SCHOOL PUPILS MAKE ENVIABLE RECORD

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 27—An enviable record of accomplishment has been achieved by over 100 students of the Willimantic state trade school according to a report of activities submitted by Director Otto R. Nyffeler. Nearly every department has performed outside tasks which have been done with credit and have served to establish a constant demand for the services of the students. Equally high ratings are reported in the regular class room work.

Over a score of painting jobs in the city have been completed by the students under the supervision of Waldo Landry. During the past month alone, four houses on Mountain street have been painted by these students.

The masonry department has just completed the erection of a foundation and three outside chimneys for the home of Judge Lewellyn J. Storrs at Spring Hill. The Storrs house was moved to a new location some time ago to allow the elimination of the sharp curves on Spring Hill in the construction of the new concrete highway. Charles Taylor is instructor in masonry.

The students in the draughting department under supervision of William McArthur have drawn many plans and specifications for bungalows and garages for local people. Included in a number of outside jobs in carpentry is the building of two offices in the rooms occupied by the commercial department at Windham high school. At present a large building in Colchester is being wired and equipped by students of the electrical department.

LEBANON GIRL HAS NARROW ESCAPE; HORSE RUNS AWAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 27—Pinned beneath a heavy wagon which had been overturned in a runaway on a back road in Lebanon about 8 o'clock this morning, Helen, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burdette Doubleday of that town, escaped with a severe gash on the forehead, over the right eye. A series of X-ray photographs taken by Dr. J. A. Girouard in the belief that bones may have been broken, failed to disclose injuries of this nature. The girl, who received treatment in St. Joseph's hospital, was returning from the delivery of a load of milk. For some unaccountable reason the horse, which had been recently purchased by the family, reared and kicked and finally ran up an embankment where the wagon capsized. The girl was extricated by members of the George Witcka family and rushed to this city for treatment. The horse broke loose and wandered about for some time before being captured.

D'Amour drove the machine into an embankment where it turned over and burst into flames. The driver and four male companions escaped with slight bruises. The fire department was called but the machine was destroyed when it arrived. This is alleged to be D'Amour's second offense on a driving drunk charge.

SORDID AFFAIR REVEALED BY DAYVILLE GIRL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 27.—As sordid and revolting a case as has come to the attention of state officers and officials of the court here in a long time was that resulting in the committment to the county jail at Brooklyn on Saturday of Frank Leone, Dayville cobbler with a long police record, and Mitchell and Adelle Piette, respectively father and mother of the greviously wronged daughter, Phyllis, a girl of about 16 years.

The sending of the Piette parents to jail along with Leone, in default of bonds to await trial at the next term of the Windham county superior court having criminal jurisdiction, each in default of bonds of $2,000, followed disclosures that may have come from the aggreived girl.

In any event, representations to officials of the local town court were to the effect and by allegation that the parents of the youthful girl conspired to bring about an arrangement under which, contrary to the girl's wishes, Leone came each night for a period covering nearly two years past to occupy her room with her, the circumstances being such that it is alleged she dared not protest until the situation became utterly unbearable.

Leone is an old-time offender, in more ways than one, during the years that he has been resident in this town. Repeatedly he has been before the town court. He has had his martial, as well as his police court troubles. It was understood in official circles today that the girl will appear as a witness in the superior court against her parents and Leone.

Norwich Truck Hit.

Emily Chamberlain, visiting with relatives here from St. Louis, Mo., was operator of a car that flashed out of Church street, in Brooklyn, yesterday morning to crash into the side of a west-bound light truck belonging to Disco brothers of Norwich and operated by William Disco. Mrs. Chamberlin is believed to have accidentally stepped on the accelerator of her car when seeking the brake with her foot just prior to the accident. Though the truck was turned over the consequences were not really serious, though Thomas Ebbison, riding the truck, was cut in such degree that he was given treatment by Dr. W. A. Tanner of Danielson.

Dayville Youth Steals Car.

This afternoon State Officers George Martin and Elton Nolan of the local barracks were at Westbrook to bring back here a youthful adventurer whose plans went completely wrong. The youth they went after is Francis Rogers, 16, of Dayville.

Last night a Ford coupe owned by Leodore Lacombe of Water street, Danielson, disappeared from where he had been left at Wildwood park. Upon discovery of its having been taken, the state officers were notified and an alarm broadcast.

At 12:30 this morning Sergeant Heinold of the Westbrook barracks reported that he had picked up the car and its driver, young Rogers, who, it appears, had set out for California, after having failed to induce one of his young Dayville friends to join him on the wild adventure. The fact that Rogers was without funds appeared to be a mere incident to his plans to go somewhere far away.

A man who gives his name as William Pellerin was committed to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam today as a bit of human wreckage who apparently had been without food and shelter so long that his eyes were fairly popping out of his head. He was minus considerable clothing that he should have had, the heat wave notwithstanding. He was picked up near Fall Brook, about a mile south of the borough limits, after the strange manner in which he was acting had been reported to state officers.

Somebody robbed the Peggy Diner, about four miles out on the Providence road, during the course of last night. The matter was reported to state officers here today by Zlda Young, an operator of the food supply place. The loss is estimated at about $25, largely in cigars and cigarettes. It is believed that entrance was gained by use of a skeleton key.

On a bet, no less than half the population of this community did not sleep any too well last night, which statement includes the early hours of this morning. Danielson, it may be explained, was bombarded by the worst electrical storm of the season, yet practically no property or other serious damage was reported during today.

An unusually high wind around midnight forecast an upset in the searing weather conditions persisting for the past week. While the weather has been persistently so hot as to be irritating, the storm that came as a prospective incident of relief, was a total loss. It just raised generally Old Ned, and didn't do any good as to reducing temperatures. It was blistering hot again today. Getting back to last night, the storm, or storms, gave restless souls here a thrill. The commotion was such as to frighten timid souls plenty. The lightning was incessant, the crash of thunder almost continuous for more than three hours. The storm was far from being a pleasant experience, yet a repitition of it seemed imminent this afternoon as thunderheads rolled up in the northwest.

No one familiar with conditions can blame the Connecticut company for rerouting its motor coaches on the line south through here to Norwich while highway re-building is underway between Danielson and Wauregan. Much of the route is torn up, clouds of dust envelop any machine trying to negotiate the route, and the whole proposition of traveling over the direct highway route between the two places is just out of the picture for the time being.

All of which accounts for the Connecticut company issuing an announcement, that it is abandoning direct service between Danielson and Wauregan for the time being and will send its motor coaches around through Brooklyn.

The announcement states that: "Effective Tuesday, July 29, and continuing until further notice, because of construction work on the Killingly road between Wauregan and Danielson, busses operated by the Connecticut company between these two points will be routed via the Brooklyn road, and will make no stops between the waiting station at Wauregan and Water street, Danielson."

It may be added that the temporary arrangement will inflict no handican on patrons of the route between the stations mentioned. Schedules will not be disrupted.

Though it was the most severe of the season, reports this afternoon indicated that only about 10 telephone lines were put out of service in the Danielson division by the electrical storm that burst over this community during the early hours of this morning.

Sweet corn! It's on the tables of local people, and home-grown. This first of the season talk about this treat is not intended to be taken too generally. It was a feature of some tables here today at the Sunday feast, and will be much more so a week hence. The corn is coming along wonderfully.

Danielson must be one of the important lines where tourists travel. Without enumerating them, one who has a penchant for watching registrations said this afternoon that he counted cars from 31 different states rolling through Danielson the past week, not to count those from localities outside the nation's borders.

Miss Katherine T. Thayer of Putnam was a Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Witter of North Main street.

Bernard Casey, one of the staff at the local post office, and Daniel O'Connell, touring in Canada for a week past, are expected back in Danielson during the present week.

Cards are coming through to relatives and friends here from Miss Helen Cronin, member of the faculty of Plainfield High school and a resident on Academy street, who is spending a summer in Europe. The cards are postmarked Paris.

After having been a patient for nearly a month past at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, Judge W. Fenner Woodward of the town court of Killingly has returned to his home on Broad street. Judge Woodward's health is not materially improved.

Danielson has a considerable contingent of golf players who like the Woodstock links, and are over there every time opportunity offers, and are deriving much enjoyment from their few hours away from regular duties.

This must be the height of the flying season, for planes were buzzing over Danielson over the week-end at such very frequent periods as to force this conclusion to the front.

John Dalton was a guest of friends at Oakland Beach over the week-end, returning here this evening.

Berry-pickers are hesitating to go out, having learned for the first time in many instances that things are not as they used to be, picking on land without the permission of owners, there of being an occasion for arrest. Yet others continue to flout this regulation and get away with it, at least for the time being.

This afternoon there continued to be patient waiting for some statement from the town school committee of Killingly as to why that group has not advertised contracts for the transportation of pupils for bids. The committee remains silent. The public expectant. It is a very unusual situation.

The present week will witness another exodus of local National guardsmen who still have a summer's tour of duty to make in camp. The coming week-end officers and men of the headquarters detachment and the medical detachment stationed at the state armory here will be off to Camp Devens, and absent from Danielson for two weeks.

PUTNAM

MANY VISIT BOY SCOUT CAMP TO HEAR CONCERT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 27—The visitors to the St. Mary's boy scout camp were entertained by a band concert by the boy scout band today. The band was under the direction of Theron Perkins of Boston who has been visiting the camp during the last week. Mr. Perkins, who is a leading bandmaster of Boston, has been instructing the boys for some time and gave them some rigid training this week. There were about 500 visitors at the camp. At the present time about 110 boys are enrolled at the camp and over half of these are members either of the boy scout band or drum and bugle corps.

The camping period for the boys ends next Sunday after a four-weeks stay at the camp. It was announced today that the camp would stay open for another week for the benefit of the girls of the parish if a large enough number of them would enroll for the period.

Services at the Methodist church were discontinued with the services today until September 7th. The sermon was preached by Rev. John Piers of Willimantic. Mr. Piers has been supplying the pulpit during July and he will also be here on September 7th and 14th. The Rev. F. C. Baker of Norwich, who recently died, was to have preached on these two days and Mr. Piers has kindly offered his services for the two days.

Extensive repairs are being made to all of the school buildings in Putnam this year. The East Putnam school is being completely renovated both inside and out. At the Trade school a new pump is being installed for the return water system. Last year the high school was forced to close down because of excessive cold. This condition was due to the ineffectiveness of the pump which was being used in the heating system. At the high school the auditorium is being entirely redecorated. The ceilings are being painted with a white oil paint and the sidewalls are being done over in a light buff. The gymnasium is also undergoing extensive repairs and the boys' locker and cloak rooms are being cleaned up. The old driveway in front of the school has been torn up and a new driveway been laid. The woodwork on the outside of the high school has all been repainted as has the outside of the other schools in town. Four classrooms in the high school have been repainted in the regular colors of green and white. The Israel Putnam school has been renovated inside and out and most of the classrooms have been repainted. At the high school the athletic field is practically in condition for the football season. This field was re-conditioned by money raised by the high school students and different fraternal organizations in the city by different affairs that they have held during the past two years. The field has been regraded and grass seed has been sown. There has been some new bleachers purchased by the fund and these will be moved out to the field in time for football. If the plans of the committee go right the dedication of the field will take place at the first football game of the season which will be played with Northbridge high school on October 4th. This year more repair work than has ever been done on the schools in the town of Putnam is under way. It is believed that with the completion of the new athletic field and the repainting of the woodwork of the high school Putnam will have one of the prettiest, if not the prettiest, high school campus in Connecticut.

The funeral of Jeremiah Hall, 76, of East Putnam was held from his home yesterday afternoon. Mr. Hall was born in Killingly and has been a resident of Putnam and Killingly all of his life. He is well known in Putnam and vicinity where he has been engaged in the kindling wood business. The funeral was at 2 o'clock with Rev. C. H. Van Natter officiating. The burial was in the East Putnam cemetery. Mr. Hall is survived by a wife.

A tridium in honor of Saint Anne de Beaupre was closed tonight at Saint Mary's church by benediction of the blessed sacrament and veneration of the relic of St. Anne. The closing exercises were held by Rev. U. O. Bellerose. The Society of Saint Anne attended a solemn high mass this morning at 7 o'clock and attended communion in a body. The mass was sung by Rev. Fr. Bellerose assisted by Rev. Fr. Jegou as deacon and Rev. Fr. Boileau as sub-deacon.

The officers of the Putnam police force made their monthly change of beats today. Officer Wallon changed from night to day duty, William Durand changed from day to night duty in the north end of the city. Officer Page who was scheduled to take night duty in the south end is on a vacation until the tenth of August and his place will be taken by Supernumerary Officer John Durand. When Officer Page returns to duty the sergeant will take his vacation.

The visitors at Camp Woodstock were treated to a presentation of the pageant "Saul of Taurus," this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Congdon Memorial chapel. The pageant was under the direction of Rev. Mr. Osborn. There was an audience of about 650. This is the second pageant to be given for the visitors of the camp this year.

REP. L. E. BOUCHER SORROWS FOR DEATH OF COLLEAGUE

Representative Lionel E. Boucher learned with sorrow Saturday, of the sudden death of John A. Tyler of Reep River. These two men were representatives in the house of 1929, Mr. Tyler from Saybrook and Mr. Boucher from Griswold. Their seats were side by side, and while the former had served in previous assemblies, it was the local man's first year. The two became fast friends and Mr. Boucher, one of the youngest members on the floor, received from Mr. Tyler much appreciated suggestions and advice during the session of the house.

Man Lying Beside Track

The engine driver on an early south-bound freight Sunday morning, saw a man lying under a tree beside the track, covered with what appeared to be a carelessly flung coat. This was in the Seven-Mile curve, in the town of Lisbon. At the Norwich station the report was made to the operator who called the Danielson state police barracks. Two officers were dispatched to the place described by the trainman. They found evidence to show where the man had lain, evidently unmindful of the thunder showers that came during the night. The police believe that either some vagrant sought outside sleeping quarters or that a victim of 40-rod moonshine had reached the specified distance.

FRIENDSHIP TREASURE CHEST FOR PHILIPPINES

The feature of the surprise period at the Baptist Sunday school on Sunday was an exercise presenting interesting information about the Philippine Islands as a means by which several members of the Children's World Crusade and their superintendents, Mrs. B. R. Gardner and Mrs. John MacLean, expressed appreciation of the gifts of classes of the Sunday school and the Woman's Mission circle toward furnishing and filling the friendship treasure chest, which is to be sent this week as a token of the friendly feeling of the children of the church toward the children of the Philippines. Those taking part in the exercise, which introduced the audience to the area of the islands and their important products—rice, sugar, cocoanut and hemp— were Dorothy Wilbur, Alberta Scates, Miriam Scates, Lillian Webster and Doris MacLean. Another group including Edwin Hewlitt, Lois Hewlitt and Adelbert Babcock, Jr., represented facts about Baptist work in the islands. "I Love to Tell the Story" was sung in the Visayan dialect and Marjorie MacLean and Marian Wilbur read short stories.

The chest, which is of metal, is 5 by 10 1-2" by 6 1-2," decorated in colors, has brass handles and is fitted with a substantial lock and key. The articles brought by the children include such things as they enjoy and use and which they are sure will bring happiness to their Philippine neighbors and a handsomely bound volume of "The Swiss Family Robinson," by David Wyss, illustrated by Louis Rhead and Frank E. Schoonover, and "The Lone Scout of the Sky—Lindbergh," written by James E. West for the Boy Scouts of America. The chest and its contents were on exhibition. At the close of Sunday school a picture of the group was taken and will be sent in the chest.

The president elected was Mrs. Angela Moreau, vice president, Mrs. Onidas Labarre; secretary, Mrs. Joseph Boucher; assistant secretary, Mrs. F. X. Casavant; treasurer, Mrs. Clornith Ramsey. A vote of thanks was accorded Mrs. Edward Rousseau who retired after three years as president, and Mrs. Alcida St. John, who had served as treasurer for two years.

MR. HUSTON QUITTING

After denials and counter-denials, it is finally announced that Mr. Huston will resign the chairmanship of the republican national committee on Aug. 7. It cannot be siad this was unexpected and it is probably also welcome for it gives promise of coming relief to the party leaders from an irritating and embarrassing situation. In choosing his own time for retiring it is to be suspected that Mr. Huston has severely trespassed upon the patience of his associates on the committee and of President Hoover, for as long ago as early in March it has been pretty well understood that his usefulness as a party manager was over and that the president would be relieved if he resigned. At that time the investigations of the Caraway committee had disclosed Mr. Huston's lobbying activities for Muscle Shoals, along with his admitted speculation for his own profit with funds received for propaganda work. The senate committee made no judgment upon this transaction but the disclosure by official investigation put the republican chairman in bad favor with the leaders, who felt that Mr. Huston should not have assumed the office without making known his political-business relations.

Mr. Huston would have done well had he resigned long ago. That seemed to be plain to everybody but himself. No republican member of congress who is a candidate for re-election this fall was happy in his earlier resolve to stick to his job. Democrats alone would have been grateful had he stayed. He offered to them a wholly admirable traget.

It is now clear that Mr. Huston was ago he allowed the country to infer tha simply bluffing when a little while that he might dare President Hoover and the national committee to put him out. He had heard at that time that sources of campaign contributions would dry up if he remained. He knew then—as much as he knew after his latest talk at the White House—that the controlling influences in the republican party were eager to be rid of him. In his belated announcement of resignation he recognizes facts to which he should have yielded more gracefully long ago.

The resignation will open the way to the election of his successor, which will be preliminary to the waging of what is expected to be a vigorous republican congressional campaign. Mr. Huston's reluctance to surrender the office has placed a handicap upon the party in this respect which it will now be necessary to overcome and make up for the time lost. Such a campaign cannot begin too soon to present the affirmative case for the continuance in both houses of congress of majorities that will uphold the hands of the administration.

MOSES PERSONA NON GRATA

Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire has been given to understand quite pointedly that the west was not the place for him to appear in the capacity of manager of contests by republican candidates for the senate. He has been advised that the conservative east is a better place for him to exercise his remarkable gift for picturesque expression than to attempt to exploit it in the insurgent west where it might do more harm than good to the party which he professes to serve.

It does not occur to the senator that it would be maladroit for him to advocate the success of western candidates whom he has called publicly "sons of the wild jackass." He is not troubled by inconsistencies and is not conscious of any anomaly in advocating the re-election of senators whose position on the London treaty he assailed with his peculiar gift for picturesque expression. Nor does he doubt his ability to convince the voters that his wilful and perverse opposition to the reduction of naval armaments—one of the major issues of the Hoover administration—is quite compatible with fervent affection for that administration and a desire to promote its prestige.

Western republican senators and their respective supporters are opposed to taking unnecessary risks in overtaxing the elasticity of the average voter's intellect. The east understands the New Hampshire senator, they believe, better than does the west where he is not taken too seriously, and they are willing to let him confine his activities to this section, where some sanguine party men say he will not prevent the success in the eastern states of a single republican candidate.

APPLYING MAJOR FRACTIONS

Application of the "major fractions" method promises some possible results of a surprising nature, according to preliminary calculations from the 1930 census figures relating to congressional re-appointment for the states of the Union. It is figured, for example, that in making the new allotments of representatives to congress, with the number of members remaining at 435, California, which has increased its population by 2,264,000 since the re-apportionment of 1911, will be awarded nine more representatives, raising its delegation to twenty. Michigan, with 2,008,000 population gain, and Texas, with 1,314,000 more population, would be respectively entitled to four and three more seats in the house. On the other hand the population gain of 1,991,000 in Illinois will give it no more representatives, while Pennsylvania with a population gain of 2,287,000, actually would lose one of its seats in congress.

On the face of it, this looks like rank injustice, but the census bureau statisticians declare it is nothing of the sort. The re-apportionment, to be fair, must be based not on the population gains or losses of the various states, but on the ratio which the new population totals of the states bears to the population of the entire country.

Such results from the application of the "major fractions" method instead of the "equal proportions method" are not likely to be received with complacency, especially on the part of those states which are in danger of losing seats in the house, or other states whose population gains would seem to entitle them to larger representation. But the "major fracions" method will be used in making the new allocation of representatives, unless the house, on re-convening in December, adopts a different method.

It is all a matter of mathematics in the final application, which, except for possible fractional injustices here and there, is expected to work out full justice for all in the equitable distribution of memberships in the federal house of representatives.

COMMUNISM IN SCHOOLS

From what is learned of the testimony of educators before the congressional committee which is investigating communistic activities it would appear that very few of the New York public schools have been appreciably affected by the propaganda against the United states govenments. This hearing, however, has served to throw much light upon the persistence and ingenuity of the communists in attempting to influence the minds of American school children. The city has 800 public schools, but it is the testimony of these witnesses, who are in a position to know, that they have observed any impress of this propaganda in only three of the schools. One Bronx school has 30 young communists among its 5,000 pupils. They have a still smaller representation in two other schools. It is estimated that the membership of the Young Pioneers of America, which is the name by which the junior communistic organization is known, has a membership of 2,500 in 63 cities of the United States, where the organization is under the direction of adult agitators in apparently close connections with Moscow.

But although its progress has been negligible, this incoming movement has in it the seeds of serious mischief, according to the opinion of these school officials who testified and who included three district superintendents, four high school principals and three directors of school activities. As one of them said: "This thing is dangerous because it is inspired by Soviet Russia, because it is highly organized, has lots of money behind it and is directed by able minds who are wise enough to work upon the emotional side of the students."

It is not a thing to view with complacency when it is realized that there are those among us who are teaching young children to salute the red flag and to refuse to salute the national emblem along with the effort to make them believe that they and their parents have a genuine grievance against the United States government which they are justified in overthrowing by force. This information which the committee is eliciting is just the sort which the country needs to know. The time to cope with communistic activities in the schools is before they assume more serious proportions.

MANAGEMENT COSTS

There must be adequate rewards for the leaders of great industrial enterprises and it would be foolish for government and public opinion to attempt to put arbitrary limits upon their compensation. As a rule the executives who get $100,000 a year earn what they get. The same is true—or, at least may be true—of executives who are paid $1,000,000 a year or more. However, the stockholders of corporations are entitled to know, at least in a general way, what compensation the executives of those organizations receive. Secrecy on the subject invites suspicion, and indeed, tends to breed abuse.

The case of President Grace of the Bethlehem Steel corporation and certain vice presidents and department heads of that great corporation just now is challenging public attention and is raising some interesting questions. Mr. Grace's salary is $12,000 a year but in addition he receives a bonus of from $750,000 to $1,500,000 a year. Millions have been paid by the corporation in bonuses, but its annual reports omit all mention of these sums or of its policy of paying bonuses. The facts about this practice were brought out the other day by Mr. Grace's testimony on the witness stand, but only after strenuous objection by counsel, who objected against "disturbing" publicity in regard to the subject. Envy and jealousy, it was their claim, might be aroused among some of the company's employes and also unfavorable comment by stockholders might be evoked.

Long ago it was said that the laborer is worthy of his hire, but unpleasant chance disclosures of what that hire is can be avoided by great corporations by making known to their stockholders and the investing public the essential facts regarding salaries and bonuses. "Peopleized" corporations should avoid concealment of facts that havxe special significance. Open dealings are enjoined upon them by sound business ethics as well as by intelligent self-interest.

The way of the pedestrian is oftentimes hard—for the motorist to figure out.

Some people whose only rule of conduct is to "get by" will find this won't get them by in the judgment day.

LEAVE IT TO ELINOR

"Leave it to Elinor," was the unwritten slogan of the Bachelor Girls' club, and Elinor Clune had drifted so far into the habit of accommodating others that she scarcely ever found time to accommodate herself, a circumstance which may account for the fact that although she was pretty, stylish and smart, she was the only member of the club who was not either engaged to be married or well along the way toward being a candidate to that enviable state.

"Angel cake, salted almonds, ginger crystals," Elinor made a mental tabulation of these last-minute errands as she swept out of the office building into the clamoring loop crowd and fell into the rhythm of the hurrying homegoers. It was the evening on which the club held its weekly feed and perhaps Elinor walked a little faster than most of the pedestrians, because she had so many things to do. Just as she reached the zenith of her speed, however, she almost stumbled, braced herself suddenly and encountered the cause of her near catastrophe, a very small child, alone, crying at the top of her voice. Instantly Elinor knelt and encompassed the miserable bit of humanity with a protecting arm. Always Elinor had a feeling of responsibility for the unfortunate—a lost puppy, a hungry cat, a broken-winged bird.

"You poor little girl," she crooned. "You are lost. Where is your mother?" But the child only cried harder. Elinor made swift appraisal of the situation. Apparently the immediate necessity was to escape to a more secure location than the center of the sidewalk and so she lifted the squealing infant in her arms and hastily retreated to a small recess in a building which marked the entrance to a shop. Humanity churned onward, Elinor and the child seemed as solitary, as remote, as unnoticed as if they had not existed. Elinor made repeated efforts to sooth the little one. "Baby lose mother? Mother—mother. Where did mother go?" But the word mother brought no light to the child's face. "Father—daddy," persisted Elinor.

Then the child was lost. No doubt some irresponsible maid was the cause. But what to do? The question pealed through Elinor's confused mind with startling insistency. A policeman. Yes, no doubt a policeman was a proper person to turn a lost child to. But now the child had ceased its crying, was having a delightful time, in fact, with the velvet ear on Elinor's small toque. She laughed as she caught sight of her reflection in the window pane and noted the altogether rakish angle her hat had attained.

"You little monkey." She hugged the child.

The officer was large and brusque. "Child lost? Yes, madam, we'll take her," he boomed in an impersonal manner.

"But if you please, sir, I'll go along," cried Elinor, suddenly terrified at the thought of depositing this tiny tot among a squad of brass buttons. An hour later found her sitting in the police station with Nancy, sleeping like peaceful cherub in her arms. The air reeked with stale cigar smoke. A chaos of strange scenes, coarse faces, harsh voices surrounded the pair. Elinor watched, shivered, drew Nancy in a closer embrace and waited.

Suddenly a deep-toned, indignant and impressive voice preceded its owner into the corridor where she sat. "To think of her being dragged into such a place like a deserted waif. If her mother had lived this thing could never have happened." A moment later, sharply defined against an open doorway, Elinor perceived a strikingly handsome young man with an expression of anxiety marking his entire being. He caught sight of the sleeping burden hurdled toward her and then stopped suddenly and regarded his daughter's keeper in a confused mixture of admiration and amazement.

"She's so sweet I couldn't leave her," explained Elinor. It was one of those moments in which the best of words fall pitifully short of meaning.

"Where are the ginger crystals, the salted almonds and the angel cake? A chorus of dismayed feminine voices ripped the air. "Where have you been? We were afraid something had happened to you. It's almost time to go home."

"I forgot about the errands," confessed Elinor, blushing, "and something has happened to me, girls. I've just finished mortgaging my Sunday afternoons to a handsome widower and his adorable young daughter.—Chicago News.

CHILD TRAINING

TURNING THE TABLES

Pauline Herr Thomas

"Oh, Mother. Ruth and I had the best fun skating this afternoon," cried Jeanne, as she bounded into the room, her cheeks glowing.

"I saw you from the window, dear. I'm glad you were so happy," said Mrs. Hansen.

As dinner progressed Mother said casually, "Jeanne, you play with Helen sometimes, don't you?" Helen was the daughter of Mrs. Hansen's very dear friend, and naturally, Mrs. Hansen approved of her for a playmate for Jeanne. "You and Ruth take her on your skating parties sometimes, don't you?" she continued. Mrs. Hansen approved less of Ruth because she had only a passing acquaintance with her mother.

"Please don't ask me to play with Helen, Mother," said Jeanne. "I do not care for her very much, and neither does Ruth. I can't ask Ruth to play with her. She will tell me I am picking her friends for her. Anyway, Ruth and I sit next to each other in school, and I like Ruth better."

"Very well, dear, I'm not asking you to make friends of girls for whom you do not care, but I do suggest that you be rude to no one, and at all times, cordial to everyone. That is a good rule to folow. You understand Mother, I'm sure you do."

"Of course I do, Mother, I'll try to be nice to Helen, really I will."

Sometime later Mrs. Hansen was preparing to entertain friends of whom Helen's mother was one.

"Oh, Mother, what are all the goodies for? Who's coming to luncheon?" asked Jeanne.

"Just friends of Mother's," and Mrs. Hansen began to enumerate.

"Mother, why don't you have Ruth's mother to your luncheons? You have Helen's mother so much."

At this point the guests arrived, precluding a reply.

Daddy had heard Jeanne's outburst, however, and when the guests had gone, he said to Mrs. Hansen, rather heatedly, "I can't understand why you allow Jeanne to dictate to you. Such impertinence! Suggesting whom you shall entertain! I suppose it's the influence of this whipper-snapper friend of hers, Ruth. I declare, I'm going to forbid her to play with her."

"Now, Fred, you know what bitterness that would plant in her heart and what unhappiness she would endure in being unable to explain to Ruth."

"Well, what of it? She needs punishment. Besides, I thought you disapproved of Ruth."

"I disapprove much more of your plan to force Jeanne to utterly and inexplicably disregard her."

"Well, what do you propose to do then?"

"You know how good-naturedly she has complied with my suggestion to be gracious to Helen. Now the tables are turned. She has asked something similar of me. I mean to be as reasonable as she has been."

"And let her dictate to you!"

"No, I shall explain to her, just as she has done to me, that while I cannot find Ruth's mother congenial and while I may not ask my friends to do what I do not care to do myself, nevertheless I intend to be as pleasant and neighborly to her as I can, so that I may learn to know her just a little better—just as Jeanne has done with Helen. You know, Fred, I'm not half so alarmed that she may dictate to me, as that she may outdo me in fair play."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 27—After a dozen years as one of Illinois' two representatives-at-large — and with always increasing election day majorities, touching close to the half million mark his last time at bat in 1928 —Richard Yates has asked himself this question:

"Is running for congress worth while?"

The answer is "YES," in big letters, like that, although he does not put it just that way. He finds it so much worth while, however, that he's out for another hitch, and confidently expecting to get it.

Father's Advice

In his early manhood, Yates' father said to him: "I want you to grow up and serve the republic."

And Yates seems to have taken that admonition very, very seriously. At least he has been served the public one way and another, including nine years as a national guardsman, for a long time.

Back in 1885 he was elected a city attorney, which was the first step toward the goal his father had set for him in saying:

"The ideal public service for an American is in the house of representatives."

The route followed by the Illinois at-larger to the house was through a county judgeship, a federal internal revenue collectorship, the governorship, membership on the state public utilities commission, and finally into the house in 1918.

"Of course, disappointments and disillusionments await us all, and every member of congress has his distresses; but to serve in congress is worth while," says this experienced office holder after all that.

"Governor Dick Oglesby once said to me: 'Every man ought to go to the legislature as a part of his education!'"

Night Work

Yates, summarizing his own and many a colleague's experience in the house, disputes heatedly the notion that house members do a lot of pleasant loafing in Washington.

"I, nevertheless, dare, sink or swim, survive or perish, to assert they are industrious," he said.

To prove his case, Yates went 'round the clock with "the average member" to disclose a 13-hour day—no 8-hour day for congressmen."

"And what does he do at night?" he added. "The answer is that he works more nights than he plays. In office or home, half the members study bills and other printed matter night after night."

Speaker Longworth once described the house as "the greatest leveler I know."

"Some come here with great reputations—and lose them; some come without reputation—and find them," he said. "It does not take the house long to understand the size of each man."

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Discover New Verses of Omar Khayyam

Another book of verses to be read underneath the bough with a loaf of bread and a thermos bottle of—well, lemonade—may be the product of the discovery in a Calcutta bookshop of an early volume of Omar Khayyam's Rubaiyat containing 135 more quatrains than Fitzgerald translated.

Only the volume in the Bodleian Library at Oxford is older than the newly found illustrated manuscript which, according to news from India, bears the date 1505.

"Omar, the Tentmaker, fast in his grave on which the peach petals blow at Nishapur continues to be, despite the gap of 900 years, Persia's best ambassador to English-speaking countries," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"Yet he who sang:

'I sometimes think that never blows so red,

is little known as a poet in his own country. Abu-'l-fat'h Omar, son of Ibrahim the Tentmaker of Nishapur, for such was his name, holds in Persia some modest fame as a mathematician, an ancient wise man, who, about the time William the Conqueror was conquering England, assisted in revising the Persian calendar. But Omar, a poet! We have far better poets than he, the Persians say. The western world will never believe it.

"If Omar Khayyam is a poet without honor in his own country there are certain geographic reasons for the neglect as well as for his acceptance by moderns. Persians were in Omar's day and are to this day dominated by Mohammedan mysticism which Omar, who was as much a doubter and a realist as most twentieth century scientists, flouted with verses. Perhaps it is no accident that Omar, himself a scientist and mathematician, has been found at the side of the modern scientist, throwing doubts and question marks at cherished beliefs as skillfully as laboratory research workers toss test tubes, equations and graphs, at the same targets.

"Religious teachers in Omar's Persia held out promises of a practical and delightful paradise which they did not hesitate to describe minutely. Doubting, Omar wrote:

'Ah, make the most of what we yet may spend,
Before we too into the dust descend.'

"The teachers insisted on obedience to the Koran's order against the use of intoxicating liquor. Omar, living in Persia, the original home of the grape and loving wine, wrote:

'Ah, my beloved, fill the cup that clears
Today of past regret and future fears.'

"Omar Khayyam's verses ran against the tide of opinion in Persia of his day and still run against the tide. He was a heretic; his verses are still heretical. So Persia continues to think that Omar as a poet was a good mathematician.

"Much of the geography, the climate, the flowers, the products, and customs of Persia can be found inlaid in Omar's verses which have become so familiar to English readers. His most famous quatrain:

'A book of verses underneath the bough
A jug of wine, a loaf of bread—and Thou
Beside me singing in the wilderness
Oh, wilderness were paradise enow!'

supplies a thumbnail picture of what passes for a picnic and the last word in holiday enjoyment throughout Moslem North Africa, the Near East and Persia—excepting for the wine which is still forbidden.

"From Tripoli to Cairo to Baghdad to Teheran and Tashkent, 3,500 miles, a bough and the shade it gives are luxuries in a land of eternal sun. Grass is even rarer than trees; no such thing as an American or English lawn exists. So when a holiday comes the people leave the seclusion of their towns, wander down to the bank of a stream where there may be a few trees and there 'star scattered on the grass,' as Omar writes, they rest and gossip.

"Often the greenest spots are the cemeteries. To visit the graves women of the harem are sometimes permitted to go out once a week, an opportunity they seldom pass by, not so much to pay tribute to the dead, as for an outing under the trees. Graveyards are the favorite picnic grounds of the Near East.

"Omar sings of trees, tulips and the hyacinths of the garden; the peach and the pear trees in bloom. The brushes of artists have added some very definite ideas for us about Persian gardens. Yet a traveler to Persia reports that although he searched high and low, he has yet to find a Persian garden. On that dry plateau there is no such thing as a garden in the American or English sense.

"A garden to a Persian is a grove of trees kept alive by irrigation ditches that receive precious water from some creek fed by mountain snows. It may contain a fountain much the worse for wear, with broken tiles scattered about. A mud wall usually runs around the green oasis but, unless it is a town house garden, the wall does not exclude the world. Indeed, in Persia, a garden outside the gates is practically a public park open alike to the traveler, the merchant and the shepherd halting his flock.

"Persia is like a saucer. High mountains rim it. Close to the rim rise the principal cities hugging the mountains because of their independence on the highlands for water. The center is an upland desert; 'the dead heart of Persia.' Crossing Persia requires crossing the desert, so to a parched and sunbeaten traveler any bit of green he comes upon toward the end of his journey seems a vision of paradise, a garden of unparalleled beauty to be raised and exalted in poetry."

YOUR HEALTH

The Care of Children's Teeth

By Elsie Gerlach, D. D. S., Chicago.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

There are a few principles which if followed faithfully will insure your children having a normal set of teeth when they grow up.

The first or baby teeth are formed in the baby's jaw before it is born. Therefore the health of the mother plays an important part in developing these teeth. Careful watching by the physician and full cooperation by the pregnant mother are the first steps in having good teeth. So much depends upon pre-natal care that if anything is overlooked, it will take years to correct, and cause much suffering on the part of the child. Weak baby teeth are the cause of so many dental ills which arise in later life.

After birth, the kind of food the baby receives from then on, will eventually influence its teeth. In clinics we find that the bottle fed babies have weaker teeth.

As the child begins to take solid food, it becomes increasingly necessary to supply the right kinds of food. From these it derives the elements which it needs to build strong teeth and bones. Sunshine and cod-liver oil are essential to activate the lime taken in the food. Without these the lime is not deposited in the bones and the teeth.

About the end of the second year all the baby teeth are in their places in the jaws, and underneath, the next or permanent set is forming. It is important that the dentist should see the child at this time and correct any defect. Entirely too much damage is done if one waits to take the child to the dentist when the first tooth-ache is experienced. Most of the misery could have been avoided had a competent dentist seen the child early enough. To wait until the tooth abscesses means a probable extraction, which usually results in trouble for the permanent tooth growing underneath.

Thorough cleansing around and between every tooth is a nicety which much be learned early in life. Careful home training is reflected in the health and cleanliness of the child's mouth. Parents should set a good example by taking care of their own teeth. Health workers are earnestly striving to attain the goal of perfect teeth for every child. Let us help them achieve success by carrying out in the homes the fundamental rules of good health.

ROLLED OFF THE DECK OF YACHT AND DROWNED

RIVERVIEW BEACH, N. J., July 27—(AP)—William E. Howarth, owner of the Chester, Pa., boiler repair works, rolled off the deck of a yacht in his sleep today and drowned.

Howarth was bound for a fishing trip in the Delaware bay with a party of friends. When they reached a point opposite here, the water became choppy and they dropped anchor. Howarth and B. R. Abrams of Chester, went to sleep on mattresses spread on the deck. A heavy swell that rocked the yacht from side to side awakened Abrams. A second later he heard a splash and the screams of Howarth who had rolled off the deck into the river.

The other members of the party searched vainly for the victim's body for an hour.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Wallace Barnes Company, Bristol

The Wallace Barnes company, Bristol, manufactures springs, screw machine parts, small stampings and spring steel. They also do heat treating of parts sent to them by concerns which do not have proper facilities for that work.

The company was founded in 1857 by Wallace Barnes at the time when the fashion of the day demanded crinolines in what were at the time huge quantities. Foreseeing that the business was founded on a fad, Wallace Barnes shortly went into the manufacture of clock springs. Then it was a natural development to manufacture springs used in harness and each decade since has brought its inventions using spring parts. Telegraph instruments, typewriters, bicycles, automobiles, radio sets and airplanes came from the wizardy of America's inventive genius, each with its requirement of dependable spring parts.

The company has expanded from the small three man establishment of 1857 to a group of manufacturing buildings now which employ normally, twelve hundred and fifty and produce approximately 500 million parts a year. It is Connecticut's only fabricator of high carbon steels.

The company has been in the same control for three generations, the late Carlyle F. Barnes following his father, Wallace Barnes, as president of the companies; Senator F. F. Barnes, the chairman of the board; and Harry Clarke Barnes, the treasurer are grandchildren of Wallace Barnes and sons of Mr. C. F. Barnes.

The officers of the company are: F. F. Barnes, chairman of the board; J. Ernest Andrew, president; D. C. Buffum, vice president; R. W. Cook, vice president; Brown Joyce, vice president; H. C. Barnes, treasurer; J. S. Barnes, secretary; H. B. Reid, director of purchases.

"Just a few words of praise of your medicine. Nothing gave me relief and health as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. I am a practical nurse and was so rundown that I was unable to work. I used to suffer agonies at times and would have to lie down the biggest part of the day. After two bottles of Vegetable Compound I felt better. Now I have used ten bottles and feel fine. THOUGHT LOCAL FISHERMEN WERE RUNNING RUM

While on a fishing expedition recently off Montauk Point, Long Island, a group of prominent Norwich professional and business men were mistaken for rum runners by the coast guard, and their craft was stopped and boarded. In the party were Edwin V. Ross, local insurance man, who organized the expedition, Nelson J. Ayling, judge of probate; Attorney H. H. Pettis, town counsel and deputy judge of the city court; Attorney C. V. James, Dr. James J. Donohue, Dr. A. J. Sinay, Charles W. Taggart, Edward Rich, E. L. Duff, Arthur Crowell and Frank Crowell.

They boarded a specially chartered fishing craft at Groton and spent the entire day at the fishing grounds. Their catch was about 70 sea bass and flounders. On the return trip they were beset with a heavy fog and the skipper, despite his compass, lost his bearings. They had gone quite a distance off their course and one of the members stated that they were told they were heading for the ocean.

Fortunately they came upon a large pleasure yacht and from her owner obtained the proper directions and with dusk falling, the homeward journey was started.

More misfortune visited the local party when it began to thunder. The captain put on full speed ahead in an effort to get back before the storm broke and several on board became seasick from the rough water.

A coast guard cutter was passed and everything seemed to be all right. The fishing boat with the local men had gotten about four miles away from the coast guard boat when it was noticed that the cutter was bearing down on them. Upon orders, the fishing boat was halted and a boat with six coast guardsmen and an officer went over to the fishing boat and boarded her.

The coast guardsmen searched the smack, even to examining the hold.

No liquor was found and the coast guard officer after looking at the captain's credentials, license and papers, left with apologies. It was raining hard at the time the coast guardsmen boarded the craft. The local men took the delay good naturedly and joked with the coast guardsmen while the latter were searching their boat for liquor of which there was none, and had been none on board.

FRED DUERR CHARGED WITH SETTING LOAD OF HAY ON FIRE

Fred Duerr, 30, a farmer, of No. 22 Mediterranean Lane, Norwich Town, was arrested about 8.30 o'clock Sunday evening by Sheriff Lucius A. Fenton of Norwich Town assisted by Officer Swatsburg of the local police, on a charge of maliciously destroying the property of another. He is specifically charged with setting fire to a load of hay owned by Francis McNamara of Bean Hill, Norwich Town, last Thursday night.

A wagon upon which the hay was loaded was saved through the timely discovery of the blaze. The hay was pulled off the wagon before the wagon caught fire and a call was sent to the Yantic fire department for assistance. They responded and stood by in case the house or other buildings caught fire from flying sparks.

Duerr was arrested at his farm and taken to the local police station, where he was booked and locked up under bonds of $2,500. He was later released when surety for his bonds was furnished. He will be presented in the city court this morning.

FLIER FORCED DOWN HERE IS ON WAY HOME

OAK PARK, Ill., July 27—(AP)—Edgar Todd, missing Pueblo, Colo., flier, was located today at the residence of Mrs. Grace Findiesen, widow of his former flying partner. Todd explained that frequent delays had made him lose so much time in the All-American Air derby, in which he was an entrant, that he gave it up and started home.

Todd said he was forced down at Norwich, Conn., and lost much time there. Going on, he said he ran into a storm over Pennsylvania and had to land near McKeesport. By this time, he said, he concluded there was no use continuing, especially in view of clogging of the plane's gas line and structural weaknesses in the ship which threatened further trouble. So he determined to fly back to Colorado to be there for another air race next month.

Todd stopped off at Chicago because of facilities for repairing the ship. It was not until he reached here, he said, that he realized a search for him had been under way.

Mrs. Findiesen's husband, Ray, was killed near Pueblo last March and she returned here to live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Mott.

Todd landed at Municipal airport yesterday and said he would leave for Colorado the end of the week.

Todd left Cincinnati last Tuesday with the start of the derby and met his first trouble when he was forced down at Port Jervis, N. Y. He flew a low wing monoplane and carried no compass, causing derby officials to fear he had lost his way over the treacherous Allegheny Mountain section.

Searchers traveling by plane, automobile and afoot had covered the Pennsylvania section where he was last sighted.

On the first leg of the race Todd mistook the Hudson river for a creek, he claimed, and flew east as far as Norwich, where his gas became low and he was forced to make a landing at the emergency field at the Beebe farm on the road between Norwich and Taftville. As he was unable to replenish his gas supply that night he waited until the following morning when he started out shortly before 7 o'clock for Roosevelt field, where he was to continue the race.

WATER PRESSURE VITAL FOR FIRE PROTECTION

Maintaining an ample amount of water pressure in the fire hydrants spread throughout the streets of Connecticut cities and towns, so that efficient fire protection may be assured at all times is one of the most important duties which devolves upon the water supply utilities of the state. It is a duty which requires as much attention on the part of the water companies as that of assuring the purity, potability and freedom from mineral substance of the water before it is distributed for domestic, commercial and industrial use.

The duty of actually checking the pressure in each fire hydrant at periodic intervals is rested in most Connecticut cities with the municipal fire department, which makes its reports on the pressure in each hydrant and in each section of the community to the water utility. The company upon receiving these reports takes immediate steps to remedy the situation wherever lack of adequate pressure is found.

Two methods are employed by the water supply utilities in maintaining proper pressure for fire fighting. In some cities, where the reservoirs are located at a level considerably above that of the city streets, the force of gravity alone is sufficient to insure ample water force. In other communities, it is necessary for the water company to utilize large pumps, usually electrically operated, to assist the force of gravity in maintaining pressure. In both cases, pressure is usually increased by fire department motor pumps.

SAILOR AND BRIDE IN AUTO WRECK

A sailor and his bride narrowly escaped serious injury early this (Monday) morning when the machine in which they were riding towards Norwich failed to negotiate the curve at Tadpole bridge, just above Jewett City, where road construction is underway, and overturned. They were Chester Nickerson, driver of the car, a sailor attached to the submarine base, and his wife, Sophia, with whom he was recently united in marriage.

The windshield and rear window were smashed in the crash, that being the only damage done to the car. Mrs. Nickerson was cut about the right arm and shoulder by flying glass. Mr. Nickerson, with the assistance of passing motorists, righted the car and drove it to Norwich. The couple stopped at the local police headquarters, where Sergeant John Casey tried to secure a physician for the injured woman but without result. She was administered first aid treatment by Officer Patrick Shahan.

It developed that Nickerson had failed to endorse his operator's license and he was booked on that charge. He will appear in the city court this (Monday) morning.

Mrs. Nickerson had a deep gash on her right shoulder, a superficial wound on the upper part of the arm, a bad cut on her right ring finger, and other cuts.

SAILOR'S AUTO UPSET ON HARLAND ROAD

An automobile driven by S. S. Massey, a sailor stationed at the submarine base, crashed into the state highway fence and overturned Saturday evening on Harland road, Norwich Town, opposite the home of J. P. Huntington, but Massey escaped serious injury. He complained of an injury to his back. The machine was rendered a total wreck.

Shortly after the collision Massey, who has been driving only about two weeks, notified the Imperial garage to tow away the damaged machine and then disappeared from the scene. He is expected to be arrested today by the state police on a charge of reckless driving and will probably be arraigned in city court here Tuesday morning.

The accident was investigated by Sheriff Lucius A. Fenton of Norwich Town, who learned that Massey drove the machine into a bank on the right hand side of the road, and then crashed into the fence on the left hand side of the road.

FLEET OF 100 VESSELS OPERATED BY NEW HAVEN

In conducting its auxiliary freight transportation over the water route between New England ports and New York city, the New Haven railroad's subsidiary, the New England Steamship company, now operates a fleet of nearly 100 steamship which play a larger part than ever before in furnishing freight service to New England industry. Although small in comparison with the general volume of freight carried over the rails, these ships nevertheless carry a huge amount of merchandise to and from New York each day.

Freight carried by the ships of the New Haven are operated on an overnight delivery basis, leaving their ports in late afternoon or early evening and delivering their cargoes in New York on the following morning. Overnight delivery by boat has been made possible from points a considerable distance inland from the port cities both through the operation of boat trains and by the recent introduction of an auxiliary motor truck service. The latter has made possible overnight transportation from points which were formerly a two day freight trip to New York.

The motor trucks, 90 in number, are used both to haul freight to the docks and to the boat trains at inland points. They operate over regular routes, picking up merchandise and speeding it to whichever point of transfer will insure connection with the boats in ample time for loading. In the case of short haul transportation between points on their routes the motor trucks are used both for pick up and delivery, but their principal function is to act as "feeders" for water transportation.

STATE FAIRS TO SPEND $500 PER DAY

Connecticut fairs will spend more for amusements this year than ever before; more than $500 a day for the entire length of the fair season from August 27th to October 15th is the estimated amount to be expended for this item alone. This amount, according to the Association of Connecticut State Fairs, will be largely spent for bands, fireworks, vaudeville acts and other grand stand attractions.

Horse racing is an entertaining feature at several fairs and if the amount expended in the form of prize money for horse races were included in would swell the anticipated expenditures to nearly $50,000 for this year. It is pointed out that the increasing expenditure for amusements is brought about by public demand for a higher class of entertainment.

Connecticut fair officials are trying to avoid the catastrophe which befell the fairs of England where it is believed the entertainment, consisting of some of the highest and much of the lowest form, was directly responsible for the failure of many fairs in that country. Secretary of the Association Leonard H. Healey declared that fairs in this state have always had an educational background and are still keeping this as a main feature in spite of the added amusements.

NEW HAVEN ROAD EARNED NEARLY $7,000,000

The New Haven road earned a net of $6,968,206, equal to $4.44 per common share, during the first six months of 1930, compared with $8,131,331, or $5.13 per common share, earned during the first six months of last year, the road's statement to the interstate commerce commission reveals.

The June net earnings this year were $1,393,292, equal to 89 cents a share, while in June last year the road's net was $1,787,586, equal to $1.13 per share.

At the end of the first six months of this year, the road had a surplus of $4,812,392, over a million below the surplus of $5,948,387 recorded at the end of the first half of 1929.

Both the June gross income and the six months' gross income this year are below last year's figures. The June gross dropped from $11,861,331 to $10,220,080, and the first half gross dropped from $67,386,025 to $60,849,475.

The net railway operating income for June decreased from $2,806,737 to $2,081,204 and the net operating income for the first half dropped from $14,164,936 last year to $11,902,681 in 1930.

The surplus for June, 1930, was $1,036,624, as compared with $1,421,654 for June of last year.

Operating expenses decreased $960,076 for June and $4,493,331 for the six months.

GARDNER LAKE CAMP HAS CAPACITY CROWD

Camp Wakenah, the Boy Scout camp at Gardner lake, was crowded beyond normal capacity Saturday with 100 campers because 27 more scouts than were expected have arrived at the camp.

Advance registration at the scout office had indicated that 25 new scouts would arrive at the camp for the third week and that 36 of those already at the camp would remain over for another week. But when the roll call was made up it was found that there were 27 additional names on the list, making 88 scouts in all. With the regular camp staff, this brought the camp population up to 100.

The majority of the extra scouts were those who had been in camp last week and had such a good time that they prevailed upon their parents to let them go back to the camp for another week.

As a result of the unexpected large number of scouts in camp for the third week the camp facilities were taxed to the limit. As the regular tent houses only accommodate 88 boys and leaders it was necessary to house some of the campers in the two leantos and to set up an extra tent. Special tables had to be made up for the mess hall so that the campers could all eat at the same time.

REV. AND MRS. ROSE LEAVE FOR PHILIPPINES

Having visited for the past few weeks among their relatives and friends in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Hampshire, Rev. and Mrs. Francis H. Rose and their little daughter, Elinor Virginia Rose, left Norwich Town Friday evening, to return to their home at Philippine Islands. They were the guests over the week-end at the home of Mrs. Rose's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Johnson of Lakewood, New Jersey. The Rose family expects to start from New York today (Monday) for San Francisco, Cal., from which place Tuesday, August 5th, they sail on the S. S. President Hayes of the Robert Dollar line. They make only one stop between San Francisco and Manila, the ship calling at Honolulu. By this route the sea voyage takes only 24 days, 18 of which are beyond Honolulu. Rev. and Mrs. Rose return to their work at the Central Philippine college at Iloilo, (of which Rev. Mr. Rose is professor) to continue in teaching and in the sharing in the administration and in the building program at this institution.

While Rev. Mr. Rose was not able to secure all of the funds deemed essential to the efficient conduct of the college at this time, due to the financial depression upon the country, nevertheless he has been able to secure a few rather encouraging contributions. As a result of these efforts and those of others of the committee working under the so-called Judson campaign of the Northern Baptist convention, he is returning with funds for four new buildings. These are as follows: A two story dormitory for high school boys, an eight room recitation building for the high school department, a bungalow for a missionary family, and a two story science building. The last named is the gift of Mrs. J. H. Robles and her daughter, Mrs. Eugene McCarthy of the city of St. Louis, and is the largest single gift which the Central Philippine college has ever received. Joseph H. Robles in whose memory the building is to be, was manufacturer of the Buster Brown shoe, and whose son-in-law, Mr. McCarthy still continues the business, being a member of the firm. This fine building upon its completion will have a bronze tablet suitably inscribed to the memory of Mr. Robles. The gift was also conditioned on the return of Rev. and Mrs. Rose.

During February of 1930, Rev. Mr. Rose was hospitably entertained in Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy's magnificent home. A second interview was held at which time Mrs. McCarthy's mother, Mrs. Robles was also an interested party in this noble project in which Rev. Mr. Rose made such a favorable impression on them. Until this particular time he was a total stranger to all concerned, though the meeting was a pleasant coincidence. The Christian background as presented to these generous donors elicited a real inspiration which prompted the gift for two reasons: The inquiry was made as to whether the Rose family was to return to the Philippines, being assured of this, the thought was expressed that much of the institution of this kind depended upon the type of the people administering its funds. Upon learning that Rev. Mr. Rose was to work in this science building, in a letter to him from a member of this family, mention was made that they felt specially pleased to know that their funds were to go to the construction of a building which was to be both planned and built and then used by one whom they had had an opportunity to know personally. Having such confidence in their impressions of Rev. Mr. Rose, a strong friendship has been cultivated. All of the buildings referred to in the above except the bungalow, are to be of permanent material and should last for many years. Their total valuation almost doubles that of the present campus and buildings.

In addition to the above gifts, several smaller gifts have been secured by Rev. Mr. Rose as follows: A used pipe-organ for the school chapel, from the Baptist church at Yorkville, Illinois; a small endowment memorial for the college library, from the Baptist women of Wisconsin; also other gifts of books for the library. He has likewise been influential in other important gifts that are pending, for the school press and shop.

Rev. Mr. Rose assisted in securing funds for the hospitals at both Capis and Iloilo on the Island of Panay. Upon their arrival, the Rose family will take up the same residence they left when coming to the United States. The house is at present being remodeled, the gift of the Robinwood Baptist church of Chicago. Rev. Mr. Rose has completed two full years of residence in graduate studies at the University of Chicago, in the department of zoology chiefly. He has completed work for the doctor degree, save for three courses of study to be taken later and the thesis and examinations. He leaves for the Islands with a problem in hand which may be developed into the thesis while abroad and presented upon his next return to this country at the expiration of five years. His problem has to do with certain studies regarding the Philippine termites, or so-called white ants which cause such havoc in buildings and furniture in the tropics.

In the fall of 1917 when on a leave of absence to the United States, Mrs. Rose entered Columbia university with her husband, for a special course. She too, will do more or less teaching and administration. They expect to reach home about September 1st. Of interest to their Norwich Town friends is that in the near future another section to Weston Hall is to be built, which will form the center of the building. This building, eventually to have three sections when necessary funds are accumulated, is a memorial to Rev. and Mrs. Rose's little son, Weston Bartlett Rose, who, had he lived, would have been ten years of age in October of this year.

This last trip home for the Rose family has covered a period of two years, as he took one extra year to persue the course of study referred to.

FORMER NORWICH MAN LEGION STATE TREASURER

At the closing session of the annual state convention of the American Legion, Saturday, at Bridgeport, Eugene P. Armstrong, formerly of this city, now of Waterbury, was elected state treasurer. The efforts of Edward L. Newmarker, Rockville banker, and leaders of his campaign for the state commandership of the American Legion to make the four small districts of the state "four district conscious" succeeded when, with virtually the full support of the Tolland, Windham, New London, Litchfield and Middlesex county delegations, Newmarker was elected commander on the first ballot, 169 to 136, defeating Attorney James E. Breslin, of Hartford. He is the first commander from one of the four smaller counties of the state.

The combination of adherents of Breslin of Hartford, Theodore B. Burr, of Fairfield and Rev. Daniel A. Strickland of New Haven was of insufficient strength to block the election of Newmarker, and, as his campaign managers predicted on the eve of elections, he received exactly 169 votes.

Breslin, who made Newmarker's choice unanimous after the result was announced, had virtually the full support of Fairfield county, 39 of the 41 votes, while Newmarker got two from Bridgeport, three others going to Breslin. Burr, Fairfield county candidate, released the county delegation which had indorsed him, and withdrew from the race before the first ballot. Breslin had a substantial block of votes in Hartford county and also of New Haven county, with the exception of Waterbury, Seymour, Westville and half of New Haven.

The victor, Newmarker, had about 45, of the 78 votes in Hartford county. He had 17 of the 53 in New Haven county, two of the 41 in Fairfield county, the entire 25 in Tolland and Windham counties, all 29 votes in New London county, all 26 in Litchfield and 11 out of 15 in Middlesex county.

Other officers were elected without contest as follows: State vice-commanders, Charles D. Perry, Windsor; Arthur L. Baldwin, Milford; Louis F. Merritt, Westport; Harold Bruce, Stafford Springs; Francis De Gange, New London; Samuel Blakeslee, Goshen; Andrew Risner, Middletown; executive committee; Arthur H. Betts, New Britain; Charles E. Lockhart, East Haven; F. E. Adams, Darien; Willis C. Homer, Mansfield; Thomas P. Sears, Taftville; R. J. Lawden, Terryville; Joseph Petrofsky, Cromwell; Mrs. E. F. Hallgreen, historian; Robert Alcorn, judge advocate; Rev. Walter Casey, Hartford chaplain.

Newmarker's running mate, Captain Eugene P. Armstrong of Waterbury, twice state commander and former national vice-commander, was elected state treasurer on the first ballot, a post paying $3,600 annually by reason of the fact that that officer is custodian of the state relief fund of $2,500,000. There were 307 votes cast for treasurer, of which Armstrong received 160; James E. Case of Danbury, 42; Strickland of New Haven, 76; Carl Johnson of Norwich 29.

When the result of the vote for treasurer was announced the three defeated candidates made Armstrong's election unanimous.

The following delegates were elected to represent the state at the national convention in Boston in October: At large, Past Commander William Alexander; Commander Newmarker; Past Treasurer Clarence Scarborough, Treasurer Armstrong, State Adjutant William Murray, Rev. Henry F. Cassidy, Farmington; Edward L. Kelly, Bridgeport; Walter Angel, Waterbury; Charles Malloy, New Milford; Stewart N. Prann, Essex; district delegates, first, Elmer N. Dickinson, Glastonbury; second, Nels Poulzen, Ansonia; third, W. Franklin C. Hurd, Stamford; fourth, Charles Bats; fifth, Joseph Bellefleur, Norwich; sixth, Edward F. O'Connor, Waterbury; seventh, Edward Hyatt, Essex.

MARSTON BEATS TRYON 2 AND 1 TO WIN SHENECOSSETT TITLE FOR FOURTH TIME

NEW LONDON, July 27.—(AP)—Max R. Marston, of Philadelphia, defeated Howard A. Tryon, 33-year-old Elmira, N. Y. golfer, 2 and 1, in the 36-hole final round of the men's invitation golf tournament at the Shenecossett Country club today.

It was Marston's fourth triumph in the annual Shenecossett event and the victory gave him the first leg on the Marston-Shenecossett trophy, which he gave to the club to replace the one he acquired as a permanent possession a year ago.

Tryon was never able to lead the giant Philadelphian, but he caused plenty of trouble over the last nine holes of the match when he won the 13th and 15th with birdies and the 16th with a par to reduce his opponent's lead from five to two holes.

Tryon had a chance to win another hole at the 17th, but he missed a five-foot putt and the match ended as they halved the hole in fives. Marston's eagle three at the seventh gave him a lead of one up in the first nine holes. Marston won the tenth and 11th but lost the next two and they halved all the rest in the morning round. Marston led, one up, as they adjourned for lunch.

Marston had his best nine holes at the start of the afternoon round when he compiled a score of 34, two under par and increased his lead to four up. He became five up with a birdie four at the 12th and then did not win another hole during the rest of the match.

Tryon, faced with the need of winning five out of the last six holes, succeeded in getting three of them and then missed his chance when his short putt at the 17th rimmed the cup and he was forced to take a half.

STRIBLING AND SCOTT IN BATTLE TONIGHT

LONDON, July 27—(AP)—Not only W. L. (Young) Stribling and Phil Scott but open air boxing and the whole sport of pugilism will be on trial so far as Great Britain is concerned when the Georgian and the British champion meet in a ten round bout in Wimbledon stadium tomorrow night.

In the land where it rains on the slightest provocation and sometimes on no provocation at all, open air fights are a gamble and the last one at Wembley, in which Tom Gibbons figured, cost the promoter so much money Tom had to go home without his share.

ROBINS INCREASE LEAD BY WINNING DOUBLEHEADER

BROOKLYN, July 27 — (AP) — The league leading Robins gained a game and a half on the Cubs and two full games over the Giants today by twice defeating the Phillies in a doubleheader. The scores were 10 to 6 and 9 to 6.

Jim Elliott, pitching the first game for the Robins, was knocked out of the box in the ninth but did not surrender the early lead given him by his team. Sweetland was batted hard. Roy Hansen, recruit Phillie southpaw, held the Robins until the sixth inning of the second game when Wright's homer with two on dealt the Quakers a blow from which they could not recover.

Nine home runs featured the afternoon. Klein's two in the first game brought his total for the year to 30. Wright, Lopez and Southern also hit two home runs, while Thompson accounted for one.

BROWNS TAKE BOTH ENDS OF TWIN PROGRAM

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 27.—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns defeated the Boston Red Sox in both ends of a twin bill here today, 10 to 9, and 9 to 6. The games were featured by nine home runs. Webb, Goslin and Kress hit for the circuit in the opener. In the nightcap Goslin and Todt made two home runs each and Webb and Metzler one each.

An eight run rally in the eighth inning gave the Browns the first game. The Red Sox tied the score in their half of the ninth of the second game, but Metzler hit a home run in the Browns' half with two men on.

CARD FOR SHYMA CLUB SHOW NEXT WEEK LOOKS LIKE REAL ATTRACTION

Matchmaker Leo P. Flynn for the Shyma Boxing club completed his card for the show on Aug. 6th, on Saturday, and has a real star card billed. He has three eight-round star bouts, a six rounder and a four round opening bout.

Topping the card is Al Beauregard, New England bantamweight champion, and Lou Piquette of Bridgeport. This will be the second meeting of these two boys, Piquette having beaten Beauregard a year or so ago at Bridgeport. Piquette has a very enviable record, holding wins over Johnny Pena, Joe Ryder, Andy Martin and a number of others.

Another eight round star bout brings together Eddie Moore of Bridgeport and Joe Russo of Westerly. Moore has been going well in the western part of the state and holds wins over Lou Brouillard, Joe Emmons, Irish Jimmy O'Brien, Willie Lewis and a number of others. Russo is well known to local fans as a hard punching fighter.

The third eight rounder is a real headliner, with Rene Peloquin and Young Lavigne swapping punches. This bout looks on paper as good as any of the star attractions, both of the youngsters being real scrappers.

For the six round preliminary Vic Darr returns to the ring against Julio Rossi of Westerly in what should be a real slugging match. Both Rossi and Darr are known for their fighting ability and willingness to swap punches.

For the opener Al Rodman of Goodyear has been matched with Young Rochette of Westerly. Those who have seen Rochette perform in Westerly and those who saw Rodman fight at Danielson know that for four rounds of action this opener will be a hummer.

YANKEES CLOSE ROAD TRIP WITH DEFEAT

DETROIT, Mich., July 27—(AP)—New York closed its western road trip here today by taking a 7 to 3 beating by Detroit, thus making maters even on the series here and establishing a record of 10 winnings and 9 losses for the trip.

Four Yankee hurlers were used but none could stop the Tigers as a total of 13 hits were made off them while the best New York could do off Sorrel was seven.

Detroit was forced to come up from behind for Sorrel wobbled for a brace of walks and three hits to make three runs in the fourth inning. With the aid of two snappy plays he held New York well in check thereafter.

Ruffing had the Tigers puzzled until the sixth inning up to which time they made but four hits. He broke then, however, the first four men to face him getting singles. Pennock was rushed in but was wild. He was derricked in the middle of the seventh for Pipgras who was no better. Carroll pitched the entire eighth.

MARBERRY ALLOWS WHITE SOX THREE HITS AND A RUN

CHICAGO, July 27—(AP)—Fred Marberry permitted the White Sox only three hits today to pitch Washington to a 10 to 1 victory, its only triumph of the four game set.

Dutch Henry, who started for Chicago, was hit hard, especially in the sixth when the Senators scored seven times, and was hampered by poor support. Five misplays were charged to the Sox, all of them figuring in the scoring in some manner. Ed Walsh, Jr., finished in good shape for the losing club. In spite of the intense heat about 17,000 atended.

REDS PULL TRIPLE PLAY TO HALT THE CUBS

CINCINNATI, July 27—(AP)—A triple play in the sixth, the second they have executed against Chicago this season, enabled the Reds to defeat the Cubs, 6 to 5, here today for their fifth straight triumph over the champions.

With the Reds leading 2 to 1, the Cubs came to bat in the sixth, English leading off with a triple. He scored on Cuyler's single. Wilson then doubled to score Cuyler and went to third on a wild pitch. Dan Taylor walked and when Grimm hit to Ford, Wilson started for home and was trapped between third and home. In the meantime Grimm had started for second and was run down between there and first. Taylor tried for third and was nipped on the way, thus ending the Cubs' threat to run up a substantial lead. The Reds came back to score four times in their half of the same frame.

SCHAAF-RISKO BOUT IS HIGH LIGHT OF DULL WEEK

NEW YORK, July 27—(AP)—Ernie Schaaf's encounter with Johnny Risko at Philadelphia tomorrow night marks the high spot of a dull week among the professional fisticuffers.

Schaaf, another Boston contribution to the heavyweight lists, has been coming along fast in the last year but whether he is capable of beating the rough and ready baker's boy from Cleveland is open to serious question. Risko gets no younger as weeks go by but he still is one of the toughest of all the heavyweights to beat. The bout is at 10 rounds.

The chief supporting attraction will be a ten rounder between Babe Hunt, Ponca City, Okla., heavyweight and Ted Sandwina, of Sioux City, Ia., whose biggest victory was a one-round knockout of Knute Hansen, the melancholy Dane.

The only bout of much interest in the metropolitan sector brings together Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Ia., slugger, and Tom Heeney, the New Zealand blacksmith, who has never, it seems, got over that lacing he took from Gene Tunney in the heavyweight champion's farewell to the ring. Griffiths and Heeney top the weekly card at the Queensboro stadium Tuesday night.

VELVETMEN WIN ODD GAME OF SERIES

With the aid of some masterful pitching on the part of Walter Linder and some timely hitting on the part of his teammates the J. B. Martin baseball team proved its superiority on the ball diamond Sunday afternoon when they trounced the Army and Navy team in the odd game of the championship series, by the score of 8 to 3.

Tommy Connors, Providence college star, on the mound for the service men was no puzzle to the Velvetmakers, being touched up for 15 solid hits, six of them going for extra bases.

The Martins started the scoring in the fourth frame when they bunched six hits and a sacrifice to score four runs, enough to win the ball game, but they added four more in the remaining innings for good measure.

Jim Murphy started trouble by doubling to open the big inning. Magnan and Gaudette singled, Murphy scoring. Lemieux flied out to deep right Magnan taking third after the catch. Lindner sacrificed perfectly and Magnan scored. Krauss drove a hard double into left to score Gaudette and counted himself a few minutes later when Jarvis singled to center. Cimmy also singled but Liberty grounded out to end the inning.

In their half of the frame the Army and Navy tallied once on Middy Dugas hit to deep center for the circuit, they added another in the sixth on P. Finn's double and Dugas' single, and in the 8th brought the day's scoring to an end, when Lamory scored Finn, who had doubled with a hard smash into deep center.

The Velvet men played errorless ball in the field, making three double plays to break up promissory rallies. A that the honors were pretty evenly divided, every man with the exception of Linder getting at least one hit with Krauss and Gaudette helping themselves to 3 each. For Army-Navy R. Finn was the big gun getting a single, double and triple out of 4 trips to the plate.

IMPORTANT CITY LEAGUE GAMES THIS WEEK

With the chase in the City league at the half way mark, the Thermos outfit commands a lead of two full games over its closest rivals, the Royals. The Bottlers have won 7 and lost 1 while the Panek tribe has finished first five times in eight starts. The Citizens, by virtue of their unexpected upset at the hands of the Ideals last week, dropped back into third place and the Italians managed to cling to number four berth by splitting with the Smokers and Royals.

The outstanding feature of last week's play was the sudden spurt of Tony Bernard's Ideals. The Servicemen, who for nearly five weeks alternated with the Smoke Shop for the cellar berth, climbed close onto the heels of the Italians by winning two games in as many starts.

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Thermos	7	1	.875
Royals	5	3	.625
Citizens	4	3	.571
Italians	3	4	.429
Ideals	3	5	.375
Smoke Shop	1	7	.125

Big business is in store for the City league followers this week, a number of important games being scheduled. The Thermos club goes to work twice as does the up and coming Ideals. The Bottlers and Ideals are bracketed for Tuesday night and Thursday the Hastedt clan meets the Polish Citizens. The present "sensation" works for the second time of the week Friday night against the Italians.

Tonight the Italian club meets the Polish Citizens. The probable pitchers will be Arico for the Italians and Johnny or Boots Greene for the Cits.

The schedule for the week is as follows:

Monday—Italians vs. Polish Citizens.
Tuesday—Thermos vs. Ideals.
Wednesday—Royals vs. Smoke Shop
Thursday—Thermos vs. Polish Citizens.
Friday—Ideals vs. Italians (Postponed game).

FRANCE RETAINS DAVIS CUP; TILDEN BEATEN

AUTEUIL, France, July 27—(AP)—America's third attempt in as many years to regain the Davis cup from the tennis musketeers of France foundered today upon the granite-like defenses of those veteran French aces, Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra.

Capturing both of the final day's singles matches, France retained the cup she first won in 1927 by the decisive margin of four victories to one.

Leading, two to one, after the first two days of play in the challenge round, France clinched the cup when Borotra conquered George Lott, youthful star from Chicago, 5-7, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2, 8-6. Cochet put the finishing touches on France's third successful defense of the cup by whipping his old rival, Big Bill Tilden, in easy fashion, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1, 7-5.

Tilden recorded America's only victory of the challenge round on Friday when he defeated Borotra in four sets. Lott fell before Cochet in straight sets on the opening day and the crack American team of Wilmer Allison and John Ryn were beaten by Cochet and Jacques Brugnon in four sets yesterday.

An intensely partisan but sporting crowd of 10,000 generous to the losers but wild with delight over the winners, saw the 1930 series come to a close.

FATALLY WOUNDED IN HIS HOME BY BULLET

QUINCY, Mass., July 27.— (AP) — Harold A. Damon was probably fatally wounded at his home here tonight by a bullet which pierced his abdomen. His wife, Alice, 30, was taken to police headquarters in a hysterical condition but no charge was immediately lodged against her.

John Hargather, Rochester, N. Y., patrolman, claims the world record for escape from a straight jacket—four seconds flat.

GIANTS DROP TWO GAMES TO PIRATES

NEW YORK, July 27 — (AP) — The Giants dropped both ends of today's double bill to the Pirates by scores of 10 to 8 and 8 to 4, thus ending their home stand against the west with 8 victories and 8 defeats.

Glenn Spencer, Pirate rookie, held the Giants to 8 hits in the night cap, while the Pirates rapped Donohue and Pruett for twelve. The Pirates scored 7 runs in the first two frames and were never headed. Grantham led the attack with a single, double and homer, while Traynor also poled a homer.

The Pirates early lead in the opening game was too much for the Giants to overcome, their six run rally in the eighth falling two runs short of a tie. Heine Meine, who was the Pirates starting pitcher held the Giants safely until the eighth when he blew and Swetonic was rushed in to save the game, which he proceeded to do.

Al Bool's hitting was the feature of the Pirate's victory. He doubled with the bases full and tripled with one on, being responsible for half of Pittsburgh's runs.

Retirement allowances have been received by 350 teachers retired by the board, Miss Shanley said. Sixteen thousand members have joined the Teachers Retirement association since its establishment in 1917, and on December 31, 1929, there were 8,698 active members, the remainder having withdrawn or retired.

During the calendar year 1929, 33 teachers were retired, of whom seven were from New Haven and not members of the association. The association registered 700 wtihdrawals during the calendar year, and received 1121 new membership applications. Of the members 1526 have voluntarily applied for membership to the association, while 7,883 are subject to the law establishing the system, which requires that teachers entering the service of the public schools of the state after July 1, 1917, shall become a member of the association.

WESTERLY

CRANSTON POLICE OFFICER MARRIED TO MISS E. M. SHEA

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., July 27.—Benjamin Franklin Dunham, police officer, residing at 198 Pawtuxet avenue, Cranston, R. I., was united in marriage on Thursday by Rev. Clayton A. Burdick, D. D., pastor emeritus of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church with Ella Maude Shea, demonstrator, also of Cranston, R. I. The witnesses of the marriage were Edith M. Dowd and John F. Allen.

The well known car of Rhode Island's chief executive, passed through Westerly shortly after 10:00 a. m. Sunday, bound for Fort H. G. Wright, Fishers Island, N. Y. Occupying the auto was Lieut. Gov. James G. Connolly of Pawtucket, R. I., who was en route to witness the maneuvers of the 243rd regiment of the Rhode Island Coast Artillery, which is on a 15-day tour of field duty at the Long Island sound fort. With the lieutenant governor were several members of the governor's staff.

Members of Narragansett lodge, No. 7, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 19, Daughters of Rebekah, assembled on Sunday morning at Odd Fellows' hall on High street to march in a body to the Broad street church where they were specially invited guests. The pastor, Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, took for his sermon theme, "The Liberating Power of a Compelling Purpose." Rev. Schoning's text was from John 4:14, "He must needs go through Samaria."

In Pawcatuck Saturday afternoon, Edward Uminskey, 46, of 600 Norfolk street, Dorchester, Mass., was summoned to appear in the town court of Stonington on August 5, as the result of a collision which occurred shortly before 2 o'clock on Liberty street, at the curve beyond Rathbun's filling station.

The driver of the other machine in the accident was Robert E. Burns, 68, of Central Falls, who was proceeding toward Norwich.

On Saturday morning in Pawcatuck occurred the death of Mrs. Harriet Crandall Knight, widow of Charles B. Knight of Westerly, at her home, 32 Stillman avenue. She was born in the Road district, Stonington, 68 years ago.

Mrs. Knight leaves as survivors two daughters, Mrs. Irene Franklin of Stillman avenue and Mrs. Mary Strange of Ocean Grove, Mass.; four sons, Louis A. Knight, of Pearl River, N. Y., Roy H. Knight of Potter Hill, Charles E. Knight of Stillman avenue and William B. Knight of Rocket street; four sisters, Mrs. Emeline Perrin, Anguilla, Mrs. Martha Munson, Northford, Conn., Mrs. Fannie Crandall, Mystic, and Mrs. C. O. Burdick, Bridgeport; two brothers, Andrew Crandall and Jesse P. Crandall, both of Anguilla, and seven grandchildren.

Sunday morning George Murphy, 122 Fourth street, Boston, was arrested by troopers of the Rhode Island state police barracks in Hope Valley while in a stolen Oldsmobile coach. The car was owned by Dr. Daniel Rankin of 221 Main street, Brockton, and was stolen last night when it was parked on one of the main streets of that city.

"Injun Meetin" as it is known among the descendants of the Narragansett Indians, once occupants of South or Washington county, in Rhode Island will be held in the Old Indian Stone church in Charlestown, R. I., on Sunday, August 10. This is the annual event, when those who have descended from the old Indians of New England gather in southern Rhode Island. Rev. Leroy C. Perry will officiate both as preacher at the service which is to be held at 11 o'clock and as Indian medicine man, giving treatment to sick persons. His Indian name is Chief Yellow Feather.

Among those who are expected to be present are: A. C. A. Perry (Chief Strong Horse), Frank M. Nichols (Chief Gray Eagle), Philip Peckham (Chief Night Hawk), Chief and Mrs. Onsley, Mrs. A. C. A. Perry and Mrs. Clara Peckham. The annual meeting of the national Algonquin council will be held, with smoking of the peace pipe and an Indian marriage ceremony.

New street traffic signal lights of a type and design similar to those in use in Westerly were placed in operation on West Broad street in Pawcatuck on Saturday afternoon. One of the lights is located in front of Stahle's grocery store and the other near the abutment of the railroad bridge, on the south side of the street. They were operated Saturday for the first time and worked perfectly.

A. P. Devereux of Philadelphia, Pa., and family arrived in Westerly the past week and to take up summer residence in the Daniel F. Larkin cottage, Bathing beach, Watch Hill.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES

A Fragment

How sweet is the song of the birds in the morning!
How gracious the scent of the flowers on the steep!
How glorious the beams of the sun in his dawning!
How mighty the roar of the wonderful deep!
The drone of the bees soothes our senses to slumber,
The shade of the trees gives us comfort and calm;
While the breezes of heaven clear our brain of its lumber,
And all Nature is sweet as the tune of a psalm.

But the voice of a baby, the cooing and crowing,
The queer little gestures, the bright eyes that shine
With a radiance wonderful past all our knowing,
Far brighter than jewels adorning a shrine;
The small, chubby hands, how they clasp you so tightly!
The dear little head lies so soft on your breast,
And the two ruby lips that you press oh! so lightly,
How they thrill you with love that is purest and best.

—D. Rlason Smith.

Doing Its Best

I am but a tiny cricket,
Living in a summer thicket;
There I take my rest.
Many songs are gayer, prouder,
Many a voice is sweeter, louder;
But I do my best.

In my song there's no complaining,
Even when the sky is raining;
Birds fly east and west—
Silent hide in leafy cover;
But I chirp till all is over,
Doing my best.

When the leaves are round us flying,
When the birds and bees are hieing,
On their autumn quest,
You will find me in the stubble,
Though the clouds look full of trouble,
Singing still my best.

A Real Friend

I own a grand old Pointer,
Who is homely as dogs go.
He can't compare in beauty
With many breeds we know.

But for brains and blind devotion,
And a loyal, loving heart;
You'd hunt for his superior
Through many a canine mart.

No matter what our mood may be,
He's always standing by
In loving, understanding pose—
Devotion in his eye.

For friends whose loyalty we prize,
In weather foul or fine;
I'll pass the changing bipeds up—
And choose the dog for mine.

—Jeanette Norland.

To a Fur Scarf

The trap jaws clanked and held him fast;
None marked his fright, none heard his cries.
His struggles ceased; he lay at last
With wide uncomprehending eyes
And watched the sky grow dark above
And watched the sunset turn to gray;
And quaked in anguish while he strove
To gnaw the prisoned leg away.
Then dawn came rosy from the East,
But still those steel jaws kept their hold;
And no one watched the prisoned beast
But Fear and Hunger, Thirst and Cold.
Oppressed by pain his dread grew numb.
Fright no more stirred his flagging breath.
He longed in vain to see him come,
The cruel biped bringing death.
Then through the gloom that night Came One
Who set the timid spirit free:
"I know thine anguish, little son—
So once men trapped and tortured me."

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDEAWAKES

It is a good idea to acquire the habit of making a note of things. This will enable Wideawakes to write better letters about the trips they take, and tell the things of interest they saw when away from home. In this way a larger number of letters would be seen in the Wideawake section, letters that all members will read with interest.

It is a good habit to write down things of interest noticed in taking walks, or seen on visits to the fields, forests or ponds. A pair of good eyes should see something new and interesting every day.

It would be a good idea for every member of the circle to keep a diary of every day, not doing this when they felt like it, but every day. No matter how poorly written it may be the first week or so, practice will in the long run help greatly in improving your writing. It will do every member a great deal of good if they keep a daily record.

To jot down things of interest will help your memory, improve your composition and standing as a pupil and be likely to win you several books. If you get into the habit of writing short letters to the circle often, you will in time have little trouble in composing nice ones.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY THE WIDE AWAKES

Geese Flies Kite

Dear Uncle Jed: Not long ago some small boys were flying small paper kites. They were made of newspaper, about as big as your hand, with straw stuck through for sticks.

A flock of tame geese came waddling along, picking up stray grains of corn. One of the boys took a grain and tied his kite string firmly to it. An old gray goose, a little behind the rest, with her neck stuck out as far as possible, made a grab for the corn. She got it, but found she had the kite, too.

Off she started. "Quack! Quack! Quack!" with the kite flying above her head and her wings flapping all the while. It frightened the rest of the geese, and such a quacking and flapping they made.

The boys raced after them and thought it fine to see an old goose flying a kite.

My Rabbit

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about my rabbit. I have a little rabbit. I named him Bunny. I got him last Sunday night from a boy.

One morning I got up at nine o'clock and my little kitten was at the door.

He wanted some milk but I did not let him come in because he might take Bunny so I gave him milk on the porch.

A Beautiful Sunburn

Dear Uncle Jed: The other afternoon my older sister and I went to Ocean Beach for a swim. We found the water nice and warm and so was the sun. We stayed in the water all morning and in the afternoon, after lunch, we took in the different amusements. What a pleasant time we had.

Coming home in the trolley car I felt as though someone was always tickling me with a straw on the back of the neck. I felt warm and tired and as soon as I got home I went to bed.

The next morning I awoke and I felt miserable. I had a beautiful sunburn upon my arms, neck and every other part of my body that the sun could get at. I had to go to the drug store and buy some stuff to put on it. In a few days the sunburn was all right. Have you ever been sunburned, Uncle Jed?

The India Rubber Tree

Dear Uncle Jed: I am the second largest and most magnificent tree in the world; my name is Caoutchous, but I believe you call me India Rubber. Though so tall and grand, I am not too proud to be useful.

Come, listen, while I tell you what wonderful things I make for mankind. In the first place they get my juice by making cuts crosswise in my bark, but I do not complain. Out of these cuts flows a liquid just like cream; this runs into moulds and is then smoked until dry.

My friends, the Indians, make their shoes and bottles of this dried juice and I believe in your country are made cushions and bags; also cloaks to wear when it rains. Indeed, I should, no doubt, stare with surprise could I see all these things, big and little, you use that are made of my juice.

I have heard that yu children each possess a piece of me in your pockets and when you draw the picture of a cat with five legs, you use me to rub out the leg too many.

Dear! Dear! to what strange uses the very grandest of us may come!

Imaginary Visitor

Dear Uncle Jed: Although this story is not exactly proper for this time of year, I am sending it. The name of it is An Imaginary Midnight Caller.

At the time that I speak abut, it was very cold. The wind was blowing furiously and the snow falling fast, and I sat by the window watching it. I sat there until 9 o'clock and then feeling drowsy, I went upstairs and to bed.

It seemed to me that I had not been asleep five minutes before I was awakened by the ray of an electric light. Wondering what the trouble was, I glanced at my clock. It was ten minutes to twelve. While listening to my mother calling my brother I thought "could I have slept nearly three hours," I heard mother say, "It looks like a human form crouched out there by the garage door."

Hearing this I jumped out of bed and into my bathrobe and skipped down the hall and into the bathroom where I could see the garage from the window.

There crouched by the door I could see the human outline. By this time my brother had dressed and was leaving the house. I watched him as he proceeded along the path.

He stood still and looked at the object and then he turned and came back to the house.

Coming up the stairs he said, "It is only a place where the snow has drifted and appeared like a human form."

Our midnight caller was only a heap of snow and it had caused us a disturbed sleep but we did not mind now that we were sure that it was imaginable.

Watching the Elephant.

Dear Uncle Jed: Four weeks ago a circus came to town that was to stay one day.

The morning of the circus I waited in front of my father's store to see the wagons and animals go by. After waiting for a short time a few wagons went by and then came the animals.

There were zebras, ponies, horses, polar bears, monkies, pigs, elephants, lions and tigers. One great big elephant stood on a side street.

This elephant would help push circus wagons and trucks up the hill. After that was done he came back to the same place on the side street and waited for more wagons. A man owning a grocery store gave the elephant muskmelons, cabbages, carrots and lettuce. After, another truck came that was bringing more things for the circus and the elephant did the same to the truck as he had done to the wagons.

I had great fun in watching him.

The Haunted House.

Dear Uncle Jed: One summer day my girl friend and I decided to walk to my aunt's house which was about three miles from home. To get there we had to pass a house in the woods which was believed to be haunted. When we arrived at my aunt's house we were tired and sat down to rest. It was growing late and the black shadows were creeping over the woods when we left my aunt's house.

As we were walking and talking we did not notice that we were nearing the haunted house. All of a sudden we saw a light in the window. Then a bang! bang! and a shout. Help! help! We started to run. My chum said, "Sh, I think I hear footsteps." We both listened and sure enough we could hear footsteps approaching and then a shadow disappeared behind a tree. We gave a scream, took hands and darted down the road. We could still hear the footsteps coming nearer, nearer and nearer. Then a bag was thrown over us.

When I recovered I was surprised to see that I was sitting in a large room with a girl and an older woman sitting near me. This place looked familiar to me. I rubbed my eyes to see if I was awake. Who do you suppose it was? I will tell you. It was my aunt and chum. I had fallen to sleep. It had been only a dream.

My Modern Hero.

Dear Uncle Jed: My modern hero is Rear Admiral Byrd. He is a courageous and self-reliant man. While he was a student at the naval academy in Annapolis an accident happened to his foot so that he could not continue his course. He took up flying instead and made out very good. He and three companions tried to span the Atlantic in their plane, "America," but were not successful when they were forced down at sea. But, however, they were rescued. He did a great many things that made him famous and known throughout the world.

One of his best and latest feats was the Antarctic expedition. He and his willing followers went through all hardships such as the six months of darkness, fighting his way in the big blizzards and storms they had.

Richard E. Byrd, with his two companions in the plane "Floyd Bennett," were the first ones to fly over the north and south poles. There another hardship arose, what if they lost their way, if they had a forced landing how would they be reached. But Richard E. Byrd knew what was ahead of him and fought on courageously. On one occasion they had to drop 200 pounds of food in order to lighten their load and save their gas. For this great expedition without the loss of one life he was given the honorable title "Rear Admiral," which he had always longed to have.

Visits New Haven Relatives.

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write to tell the Wide-Awakes about my visit to New Haven.

The other day we started for New Haven about 10 o'clock. We rode along for a while and saw a few artists painting the scenery upon a hill.

When we entered New Haven, not knowing where we were, we rode down by the railroad tracks. Then we stopped to inquire where we were. The man said that we were a mile out of the way. He directed us and then we got along all right. We saw a large rock upon a hill and I think that was where the man who was insane threw his wife and children to their deaths. Then I went to see some relatives and had a lovely time with my cousin. They we started home about 7 o'clock. That was my first visit to New Haven.

I hope the Wide-Awakes will enjoy this story.

HOT WEATHER HAD DETERRENT EFFECT ON THE BUSINESS WORLD LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, July 27—(AP)—The business outlook was a little befogged during the past week by the solar Turkish bath which has been administered to almost the entire country.

Optimists were inclined to feel some benefit from the experience at least. the merchants felt a quickening of demand for vacation goods, the farmers saw some of their crops wilt, notably corn, but were compensated by improvement in the grain markets.

The seasonal slump in basic industrial lines was accentuated. Steel mill operations usually slow up somewhat in extremely hot weather. The lumber and coal industries also dragged along at close to 50 per cent. of capacity.

Introduction of new models has brought a substantial expansion of activity at a few automobile plants, but the industry as a whole continues to proceed with extreme caution pending more tangible measurements of the probable retail demand. Rather puzzling to motor trade circles was the unexplained announcement of the Ford Motor company, that its two weeks shutdown would be extended to three. When it does resume production, it will be at about 8,000 units a day, as against close to 9,000 when operations were suspended.

Building contracts let during the first 18 days of July, as reported by F. W. Dodge corporation failed to show the improvement indicated in June. A reduction of 42 per cent. from the same period a year ago appeared 31 per cent. from two years ago, and 33½ per cent. from three years ago. Freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended July 12, failed to show as much comeback as normal trends would indicate, following the July 4 holiday week. The total was about 16,000 cars under that of the week preceding the holiday period.

Despite loss of some $30,000,000 in gold to France and Canada, credit remained plentiful at larger centers, and large banks were in the strongest position in years.

NEW YORK, July 27—(AP)—Business recession has proceeded further during the last few weeks, says the Guaranty survey, published today, and to a large extent the continued decline in activity may be attributed to influences that usually cause curtailment in mid-summer. The most reliable indication of improvement in the underlying situation, the survey adds, namely a definite upturn in commodity prices, has not yet appeared, but recent declines in inventories of manufactured goods and advance in stock prices suggest that such an upturn may reasonably be expected in the not distant future.

Establishment of western market facilities for securities of motion picture companies is being sought by the Los Angeles stock exchange, following a survey of activities of its members in these securities. Listing of the amusement stocks on the Los Angeles exchange, it was announced, would in no way interfere with the present eastern markets.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

What Happened to the Wash

When all is said and all is done,
Mischief never can be fun.
—Mother Brown.

It was Monday morning. Monday morning, in the country at least, is washday. Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy were at work down in the cornfield while Mother Brown was doing the washing. Jim Crow, the young Crow that Farmer Brown's Boy had made a pet of, had gone down to the cornfield riding on his master's shoulder. That was his favorite perch.

By and by the washing was finished and hung out to dry. It was a beautiful morning and Mother Brown rejoiced as she hung out the wash, for she knew that it would dry quickly. "I shall be able to get a large part of my ironing done before dinner," said Mother Brown, "and that will be a big help. It is certainly lucky that the sun is out today, for I have a lot of cleaning to do and I want to get the wash out of the way."

Mother Brown went back into the house and she went about her work singing. She didn't once look out as there was nothing in particular to look out for. Had she looked out, this story might never have been. Jim Crow had remained down in the cornfield only a little while. Some imp of mischief prompted him to fly back home. Ordinarily, he would have remained down there in the cornfield. Perhaps it was the fact that just as he left the farmyard on Farmer Brown's Boy shoulder, he had seen Mother Brown come out of the house with a basket of snowy white clothes and it had stirred his curiosity. Anyway, he flew back and perched first on the roof of the barn.

From this point Jim Crow could view the whole of the farmyard. He saw at once the clotheslines with their snowy white burden. He cocked his head on one side and again studied that wash. His eyes twinkled. It was a twinkle of mischief. You see, Jim Crow had discovered those clothespins that held the wash on the lines. He looked over toward the back door. He looked to the kitchen door. He saw nothing of Mother Brown. Then he flew down to one end of one of the lines. He reached out and took hold of the nearest clothespin. It moved! Jim Crow gave a sharp tug. The clothespin came free.

Jim Crow chuckled. He flew away with that clothespin. In a few minutes he was back and pulled the next clothespin. A towel dropped on the ground. Away went Jim Crow with that clothespin. He wasn't gone long. He pulled another clothespin. Another towel dropped. Jim Crow chuckled. This was no end of fun. All the time Jim Crow kept a watchful eye on the back door. He knew he was in mischief. Yes, sir, he knew he was in mischief.

He went down the length of that first line and pulled every clothespin

He worked fast, did Jim Crow. He worked very fast. He went down the length of that first line and pulled every clothespin. All the things that had been hanging on that line were now on the ground. Then he started in on the next line. By the time he had pulled the last clothespin and carried it away, the only things left on the clothesline were the sheets. These were so big that, of course, they were folded over the lines and had not dropped when the clothespins were pulled. When Jim Crow flew away with the last clothespin he didn't return; he flew down to the cornfield and talked to his master while the latter worked.

Perhaps you can guess the dismay of Mother Brown when she went out to bring in the clothes to iron them and discovered all but the sheets on ground. At first she couldn't think what had happened; but when she looked for the clothespins and couldn't find them, she became suspicious. You see, Jim Crow had taken other things. She looked all around for him, but of course he was nowhere to be seen. I am afraid that Mother Brown lost her temper. Could you blame her? You see, she had that big wash to do over again.

TOWN TEAM LOSES TO LEBANON, DEFEATS TEAM AT SALEM

The Colchester Town baseball team played two games Saturday afternoon, losing to the Lebanon Town team in Lebanon 3 to 0 and defeating the Salem Town team on the local diamond 6-4.

In the Lebanon game, Broder pitched his best of the season but lost 3-0 in a seven inning game, allowing only 3 hits to Lebanon. Sol Cohen, the Colchester star catcher played sensational ball, collecting two hits and McDonald hit a neat 3 bagger. Minsk, a former Wesleyan star made some brilliant back-hand catches of fouls at third base. McCall was the heavy hitter for Lebanon and Falbowski and Rathbun featured for the local outfit. The score was 0-0 up to the first part of the seventh inning when Fedus, the Colchester shortstop made a wild throw to home base and started the opposition's three run rally. Colchester got 6 hits while Lebanon made 3. The line-ups:

Rathbun, local 2nd baseman made a sensational backhand catch in the seventh inning which brought the cheers from the spectators. Fedus, the Colchester outfit's star twirler pitched the entire game while Fraser the Salem pitcher was relieved by Carlson in the seventh. McDonald and Rathbun were the heavy hitters for Colchester while Gadbois the Salem first baseman hit a home run. His hit was the longest of the season, a neat drive over left field, to the cemetery fence near the Academy building. This was the third consecutive time this season that the Colchester team has defeated the Salem outfit. Deacon A. A. Baker 95

Deacon Alden A. Baker quietly observed his ninety-fifth birthday Saturday at his home on South Main street. He received many cards and calls from friends and relatives during the day. With him over the week end were his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Bunyan of Colchester, his grandson Alden T. NEW LONDON WEEK END CLEAN-UP DISCLOSES LIQUOR AND GAMBLING

NEW LONDON, July 27.—The police department continued its drive on liquor resorts Saturday afternoon and night and were successful, for two such places revealed liquor, while in a search for liquor at a third resort, booze was not found, but gambling was in progress when the raiders entered. A fourth resort was raided as a disorderly house early this morning.

Late Saturday afternoon, Sergeants John Courtney and John Cavanaugh, Motorcycle Officer George Cockell and Patrolman Arthur Feeley went to the resort, 24 Goshen street, a place long known as a drinking rendezvous. A search of the building revealed 14 cases of beer and a small quantity of whiskey and gin. Louis Vescovi of 65 Pequot avenue, a moulder, was in charge of the resort and he was arrested on two counts of violation of the liquor law, keeping with intent to sell and illegal possession. He will be in the police court Monday, having provided a surety on his bond of $1,000. Vescovi is known as an employe of the resort, but its proprietor's identity is unknown to the police. The resort was raided the last previous time on July 1.

A second raiding squad, Patrolmen Frank Philopena, Dennis Murphy and George Bruhns raided the residence at 19 Tenth street conducted by Frank Davis, 80, a well known mason by occupation. A small quantity of beer and whiskey and an empty alcohol can was found by the searchers. Davis was arrested on two charges of violation of the liquor law and he, also, will be in court tomorrow. The raid upon the resort and the arrest of Davis was the result of the police having received numerous complaints from residents of Tenth street and vicinity that "wild" parties were frequently staged in the house during the early hours of the morning.

The Cafe Garibaldi, 675 Bank street, conducted by Andrew Trioni, was raided late Saturday night but no liquor was found. Instead a gambling game was in progress for several men were engaged at cards and with money on the table, together with a dealer's box. Trioni was arrested on a charge of violation of the gaming law and provided a cash bond for his appearance in the police court Monday. Charles Favoloci, Salle Sonelli and Peter Albano were arrested charged with frequenting. Several other young men who were in the resort when the raiders entered, escaped by a rear door. The raiding force consisting of Patrolmen Louis Pine, Chalos Stone, Lawrence Fardy and Patrick Sheehan seized the cards, money and dealer's box, as evidence that gambling was being promoted at the cafe.

Mrs. Alice Evans, colored, widow of Samuel Robinson, for many years a "boss" among the Negro population, was arrested early today charged with conducting a disorderly house at 54 Blinman street. Fred Scott, 12 High street; William Wildes, 8 Schoolhouse lane, and Jordan Manning, 320 Main street, all colored, were arrested on a charge of frequenting. Mrs. Evans Scott and Manning obtained sureties on their bonds and all will be in court Monday. The police received a complaint at 2:30 o'clock from John Burke, residing at 52 that a free and easy party was in progress at the residence of the Evans woman and that neither the complainant nor member of his family could sleep because of the noise. Patrolmen Louis Pine and George Laboue and Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran went to the house and there was much loud and boisterous talk heard. When the officers entered Mrs. Evans and one of the Negroes were in a room and both were drunk. The other two men were in a drunken stupor, one being on a bed and the other on the floor.

AWAITING COURT MARTIAL BLAIR H. WOLSE ESCAPES

NEW LONDON, July 27—Blair H. Wolse, 23, a sailor stationed at the submarine base, who was awaiting a general court martial for a series of thefts, escaped from the brig at the base Saturday and has not been apprehended, although a cordon of police, marines and chief petty officers was stationed around the section of the city where Wolse was last seen. Wolse, about 9 o'clock, attired only in trousers and undershirt, succeeded in getting out of the brig and running to the river front, leaped overboard and swam to the opposite shore. He was seen running to the river's edge and an alarm was sounded. The New London police were requested to make a search for Wolse and officers were sent to East New London and the tracks of the Central Vermont railroad. Wolse was observed north of Riverside park, but he saw the officers an succeeded in escaping through the park. A message to the submarine base that Wolse had been sighted caused a detachment of marines and chief petty officers to be rushed by automobile to the park. It was surrounded and a search of the grounds made, but Wolse eluded his searchers. Officers who went to the vicinity of Williams street and Mohegan avenue, caught sight of Wolse in the highway near the former Allyn residence, but running to the woodland, he quickly disappeared again and that was the last seen of him. Wolse's automobile was found in front of the residence, 13 Hope street and a chief petty officer was stationed there through the day and night so that the fugitive would be apprehended should he attempt to take possession of the car, although it had been crippled by the police by the removal of parts of the engine. A request of the police throughout the state to be on the lookout for Wolse has been made, for the military authorities are anxious that the sailor be apprehended.

When taken to police headquarters Miss Weske vigorously denied the charge made against her and when a physician was summoned the latter said that Miss Weske was not under the influence. The charge against the young woman was then amended to that of reckless driving. She furnished surety on her bond and will be in court Monday.

JOHN KANEEN SUICIDES RATHER THAN FACE TRIAL

NEW LONDON, July 27.—Despondent and low-spirited because of his pending hearing before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran, scheduled to take place Monday afternoon, John Kaneen, about 62, proprietor of one of the oldest established meat markets in the city, committed suicide early Saturday by inhaling gas in the market, 306 Bank street. That Kaneen's act was planned is evidenced by the unusual method he employed to destroy himself and from the fact that he had made it known to some of his friends that he was considering self-destruction. Within two or three days, Kaneen had informed at least two of his friends that they would not attend his court trial, but that they would attend his funeral. He even went so far as to prepare a concoction of poison, but evidently decided on death by gas asphyxiation instead, for the poison was found in a glass when his lifeless body was found.

One of the friends to whom Kaneen announced his intention to commit suicide was Antone Joseph, a plumber. Believing that Kaneen would carry out his threat, Joseph kept a close watch on the store and Saturday morning about 10 o'clock he went to the market and found it locked. Joseph peered into the building but he did not see Kaneen. A strong odor of gas, however, was noticeable, so Joseph went to the rear of the building and could obtain a partial view of Kaneen's body lying on the floor. The police were notified and when officers arrived at the market entrance was forced. Kaneen was dead, but with the belief that life might exist, an inhalator from Lawrence-Memorial hospital and a pulmotor from the fire department were rushed to the building. After applying these forms of resuscitation an hour and a half, Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman pronounced Kaneen dead.

Kaneen apparently had entered the store several hours before his body was found. He had bored a hole through an iron ash can and then inserted the tubing connected with a gas plate through the opening. Lying face downward and turning on the gas, Kaneen inserted his head and shoulders in the barrel. He had wrapped a small pillow around his neck, so that as much of the deadly fumes as possible would be held in the barrel. Kaneen was arrested 10 days ago when federal and local officers raided the market upon evidence of Henry Russell, of New London. A very small quantity of gin was found in the building.

LEBANON FARMER VICTIMIZED BY CROOKS

A gang of three crooks, all believd to be Italians and who have operated successfully among people of their own nationality in this state of late, paid New London a visit Saturday and found their prey when Vincenzo Rinaldi, owner of a small farm at North Franklin hill, Lebanon, made a chance acquaintance with the crooks. Rinaldi was relieved of his money, about $75 and by the crudest of methods, but which appears to be successful, for earlier in the week the crooks obtained $600 from a Bridgeport man in the same manner.

Rinaldi came to New London about 8 o'clock Saturday and was seeking Sam Sabtanella of Ocean avenue, having been informed that Santanella might be interested in the purchase of the Lebanon farm. Alighting from a trolley car on State street, Rinaldi was directed to Santanella's residence and on Bank street, south of Tilley the farmer observed the two crooks who were loitering. Approaching one of the men, Rinaldi requested further direction to Ocean avenue. The crook who was approached said he was "Sam Rosie," proprietor of a New London barbershop and that he and his friend would gladly assist Rinaldi. Rinaldi was invited to "Rosie's" barbershop, but naturally never reached there, for no such shop exists. Instead, Rinaldi was led to Meridian street, between Church and State streets and there Rinaldi's mission to New London was revealed. Rinaldi suddenly discovered that he had not brought his mortgage deed with him and said that he would have to go to his home and obtain it. The crooks offered to drive Rinaldi to Lebanon and the third crook, who had been nearby, was summoned. Together the four men went to the Rinaldi farm and procured the deed returning to New London shortly before noon. The quartet again went to Meridian street and while engaged in conversation one of the crooks pretended to be ill and requested medicine. The second crook started supposedly to go to a drug store and as he was departing to carry out a part of their scheme, Rinaldi was handed a sum of money, the owner of the money saying that he did so to show Rinaldi that the latter was implicitly trusted. The crook returned within a few minutes and with a box of pills, which he had had in his possession all the time for the medicine incident is a part of the scheme the gang uses to defraud. When the medicine did not relieve the crook who feigned illness, another brand of medicine was sought and Rinaldi was requested to procure it. He returned the money to its owner and as he started for State street, Rinaldi was asked to display the same trust that had been entrusted to him by giving one of the crooks the farmer's money. This Rinaldi foolishly did and as soon as he was out of sight the crooks entered the automobile and speeded away. Naturally when Rinaldi returned to Meridian street the crooks were not there and he sensed that he had been robbed and reported the fact at police headquarters.

Thomas Barnes, 72 Willetts avenue, at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon reported to the police that his residence had been entered by a thief during the afternoon, in the absence of the family. He said that entrance was obtained by means of an open window and that the house was ransacked and a sum of money stolen. An hour later Barnes communicated with police headquarters and said that he had recovered the money and desired to withdraw the complaint.

Sialtsky, Springfield, Mass., and Antonio Shaker, 28 Osgood street, Springfield, were arrested by Motorcycle Officer George Cockell, each posted $15 bail for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Three Other Offenders.

Benjamin Sherman, 867 West Main street, Norwich, was arrested by Patrolman George McCaskey charged with obstructing a fire hydrant and was ordered to present himself in court. John Norris, 76 Washington street, Norwich and Simon K. Soloff, 32 Cliff street, Norwich, were charged with automobile law violations, also. The former is charged with obstructing a driveway and the latter is charged with parking in restricted area on Golden street. They were ordered to appear in court tomorrow. C. H. Anderson, Riverside, Conn., was charged with parking in restricted area on Golden street Saturday night, but he was released and instructed to conform to traffic regulations hereafter.

But one case of intoxication awaits a hearing in the police court Monday. The man arrested on State street this afternoon by Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Red Arrow Auction

Great interest is being manifested by the Red Arrow patrons in the twelfth Red Arrow auction to be held at the Palace theatre on Wednesday night. In order to conform with the new program of change in pictures by the Palace theatre the auction night has been changed to Wednesday. The number of closed bids deposited in the auction blocks in the Red Arrow stores by those who take an active part in the Red Arrow game is larger at this time than in any previous auction. A proof of the increased interest in Red Arrow is the outstanding fact that bidding began much earlier this time than in any former auction.

The Red Arrow merchants are highly gratified by the unabated interest of their patrons in the Red Arrow activity, considering that it has been going on in Norwich for twelve months and that the hot weather has no effect of decreasing its momentum. The fifteen merchants who formed the Red Arrow club in Norwich in July of last year entered into it with the ostensible purpose of gaining the good will and the confidence of the people who are trading in the Red Arrow stores. More than $25,000 of merchandise and cash has been distributed free by the Red Arrow club, by the medium of Red Arrow, among the public patronizing its stores. Now that the series of auctions which have been held every month during the year are to come to a close with the August auction, the Red Arrow merchants feel satisfied of having succeeded in the object which they have set out to accomplish. The members of the club feel confident that they have gained public favor, that they have made a great number of new friends, and that they have established a much closer contact with the numerous patrons of Red Arrow stores.

One hundred and forty articles of valuable merchandise will be sold to the highest bidders at the Wednesday night auction.

Palace Theatre.

Judging from the crowds and the enthusiasm which have been in evidence at the Palace theatre, Norma Shearer's new comedy, "Let Us Be Gay" is proving to be one of the greatest hits that ever came to Norwich. On every side today after its initial showing have been heard delighted remarks. Opinion seems to be pretty well divided as to whether Miss Shearer or that other great star, Marie Dressler, takes first honors.

Large numbers are convinced that the greatest thing about "Let Us Be Gay" is the marvelous way in which Miss Shearer changes from a drab housewife into a ravishing vampire.

Well, "Let Us Be Gay" seems to have captured the town. Those who aren't arguing about the respective merits of Marie Dressler and Norma Shearer [illegible] the part played by Rod La Rocque, or are talking about Hedda Hopper, Sally Eilers, Raymond Hackett and other members of this unusually fine cast.

Miss Shearer gives a brilliant performance as Mrs. Cortland Brown. At the start of the picture, she is plain Kitty Brown, happily married, and the mother of two charming children. The world seems rosy, when all of a sudden she gets a terrific shock. She is abruptly confronted with evidence that her husband has been unfaithful. Of course she is divorced as soon as possible.

But what a change comes over her after this event. She immediately becomes the fascinating Mrs. Courtland-Brown, divorcee and charmer, and it is three years before fate throws her strangely into the past amid a whirl of exciting events. And another big event coming Thursday. William Powell in his latest, "For the Defense." It's marvelous.

Broadway Theatre

A compelling and extremely moving narrative of the effects of prison environment on a young boy is told in "The Big House," which opened Saturday at Warner's Broadway.

George Hill, the director, achieved a masterful touch in playing a searchlight on the devastating aspects of contact with hardened criminals, the frustration of confinement and the pathetic separation of the boy from the girl he loves.

Scenes which will keep the observer sitting up straight in his seat include the breaking in of the prison doors by huge army tanks, the wild revolt of hundreds of convicts in the prison yards, the mad demonstration in the cell house and the dramatic death scene of Wallace Beery.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has a topnotcher in "The Big House" which will undoubtedly be subjected to widespread comment and observation.

Standard Oil to Parade

A mile-long line of vehicles of almost every description is to parade New London streets this morning at 10:30 when the Standard Oil company of New York announces the advent of its new motor fuel, Banner gasoline. The parade is entitled "The History of Transportation" and includes conveyances from the earliest Indian rig to the modern high-powered automobile.

Travel during the last century will be depicted in the parade by covered wagon, stage coach, jaunting carts and all of the forgotten horse-drawn vehicles of fifty years ago. Following these will come a group of the ancient automobiles which were the marvels of 30 years ago. The occupants of all of these old relics will be garbed in the costumes characteristic of the periods they represent.

Clowns and other professional performers are to herald the cavalcade as it passes through the downtown section of New London. The 192nd Field Artillery band and Swahn's band of Norwich, will furnish the music. In addition will be a bugle and drum corps brought from Hartford.

The parade is due to start from Bulkeley place, New London and continue along Huntington street, to State, to Bank, to Truman, to Jay and back to Huntington again. As it passes the Municipal building it will be reviewed by the mayor and a group of city officials.

According to J. C. Platz, New London district manager, the new gasoline announced by the parade is the result of months of laboratory experiment and road tests. Supplies of the new fuel have been coming into the company's plant and have been quietly distributed to the Socony pumps in this territory in anticipation to today's announcement.

GAS MAINS IN STATE TOTAL 2,477 MILES

Distribution of manufactured gas from the manufacturing plants to the customers of Connecticut public utility companies requires at the present time 2,477 miles of gas mains, according to a recent survey conducted by the American Gas association. More than 100 miles of new main was required to extend service to the 4,760 new customers acquired by the utility companies in this state during the past year. Approximately 40 percent of the total length of gas main comprises the long distance transmission line connecting New Haven, with Hartford, Bristol, Plainville, Meriden, Middletown and Cromwell.

The gas distribution network in the average city were it not hidden underground and could it be viewed from an airplane at great height would resemble the appearance of the top of a leafless tree. Considering the gas holder as the trunk of the tree, one would see the larger mains spreading from it and gradually growing smaller in size as they extend toward the limits of the territory served. From each main would extend the smaller pipe branches carrying service into the individual streets and from these would lead still smaller lines into the home and factory.

Probably a few years hence this comparison will not longer hold good. In fact, it already has been altered by the large mains extending not to the limits of the city but into neighboring communities and towns, and even cities at great distances. Transmission of gas over long distances is being increased almost yearly, so that in a comparatively short time each city's gas plant will undoubtedly be serving many smaller communities.

Bass, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Bass, of Thamesville, secured a license to practice optometry in this state as the result of successfully passing the examinations held by the state board of examiners in optometry at Hartford, July 8-10. He was graduated from Norwich Free Academy, class of '23, attended Columbia university and is a graduate of the Massachusetts College of Optometry.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

The variety of native stock now arriving on the farmers market is at its maximum. With the exception of lima beans, the list of summer vegetables is about complete. Celery, peppers, spinach and tomatoes, however, are in light supply. The market was overstocked with beets, carrots, cabbage, beans and squash, and the outlook for a clearing of the glutted situation is not promising. Sweet corn is arriving in ample supply at moderate prices with yellow varieties most in demand. Native potatoes are more plentiful and lower.

The apple market is not in a very firm position. The increase in offerings of native stock, coupled with liberal supplies of the shipped ins of various varieties, caused a weak market generally. Good graded native stock, however, was selling fairly well.

Among the shipped in products, potatoes, onions and peaches were in abundance with lower prices prevailing.

Society Chums, Soon Sisters-in-law, Will See Egypt With New Minister

Marian Jardine (right), and Katherine Lowman (left), chums who will be sisters-in-law when Miss Lowman weds William Jardine, Jr. will see Egypt together with Marian's father, the new minister. Miss Lowman's father is assistant secretary of the treasury.

WASHINGTON, July 27—(AP)—Chums through several social seasons and bridesmaids at many smart weddings, Marian Jardine and Katherine Lowman will go to Egypt together in August.

Miss Lowman, daughter of the assistant secretary of the treasury, is to marry Miss Jardine's brother, William, in the autumn.

But first she will be a guest of the Jardines at the U. S. legation at Cairo, Mr. Jardine, Sr., having recently been appointed as minister there.

Since her debut two years ago Marian Jardine has been one of the most sought-after girls in the capital. She can handle a tea cup or a golf stick with equal ease.

When Allan Hoover, son of the president, gave his impromptu dancing party during the Christmas holidays, he sought the assistance of the lively Marian. The two are old friends.

Marian has a democratic way, perhaps inherited from her onetime cowboy dad, who is now to tread the marble halls of a legation.

She comes breezing down Washington's main thoroughfare, driving her own car, hair blowing in the wind.

As daughter of the new minister to Egypt the former little Kansas girl will meet interesting people from all corners of the world. During his fiancee's absence William Jardine, Jr., will remain in Washington.

TRAY HABIT

A competent housewife has what she calls the "tray habit." She saves time and steps by always accumulating all the utensils she needs for a specific task on a tray which she carries along. All her cleaning rags, furniture polish, dusters, oil for doors and so on, on cleaning days. All her luncheon needs for her hour of rest at noon-time, such as her salad, rolls, tea or coffee, salt, pepper and a book to read. Through habit she has learned to remember everything that she will need before starting on a given task.

FUR, VELVET TO KEEP MILADY SNUG, SMART, SLENDER

PARIS, July 27—(AP)—While the people who wear the styles are bathing in the surf at Deauville and the Lido, the people who make the styles are locked into their workroom perspiring over the autumn collections.

Chiffon and linen are done for this year so far as dressmaker designers are concerned.

Their creative minds revolve about velvets and furs and how to keep silhouettes slender and still keep women warm.

Before society set forth for the seashore, the mountains and the country, it uttered a few famous last words in style form at affairs of the big week or grande semaine of the Paris season.

Most of the last words were set forth in black and white for Paris has never had such a furore of black and white as this year. The vogue is to continue into the winter, many people think.

Ermine has been the fur of the season here but silver fox is going to be just as important next winter, judging from smart women's recent fur investments.

Fox neckpieces are being worn in double and triple pelts. They do duty on collarless afternoon and evening coats as well as taking the place of wraps with summer dresses.

MOTHER REARS 18—STILL WORKS ON FARM

ATLANTA, July 27—(AP)—When all of her children and grandchildren are at home, one of Georgia's champion mothers mixes up 50 pounds of flour to make biscuit for breakfast alone.

Records at the state department of health show this north Georgia mountain woman is the mother of 18 children, including one set of triplets and three sets of twins. One daughter has three sets of twins, another two, and a third one set. The mother is now 57 years old and has 56 living grandchildren, the oldest 15.

The woman told Dr. Joe P. Bowdoin, deputy health commissioner, that she still goes "to the field to work," and says she "has certainly had a hard time."

CAPE'S POPULARITY FLEETING IN PARIS

PARIS, July 27—(AP)—Capes have had their day here, and it was a short one.

Already capes and cape scarves are being discarded for short jackets and straight line boleros. Cape collars are the last reminder of a style that is going out.

Evening wraps in their freshest manifestation also snub cape effects. Some new wraps have collars which develop into panel trains. Others become intricate incrustations that continue to heel-length hemlines.

WHITE STILL RULES EVENING FASHIONS

PARIS, July 27—(AP)—All the colors put together can scarcely equal white evening dresses for number as the midsummer season nears its peak.

Georgette, crepe marocain and materials with dull finish have the ascendancy over white satin for the moment, although dressmakers are prophesying white satin as a tremendous favorite for winter.

FORMER DUCHESS WEARS PRINTED ENSEMBLE

SCHOOL TEACHER ALSO A GAME WARDEN

PITTSBURGH, July 27—(AP)—A school teacher helps with the big job of protecting Pennsylvania's game. She is Isabelle Henderson, recently appointed a state game warden.

Two in her family now have an eye open for those who hunt out of turn. Her sister, Mary Louise, is also a warden.

Isabelle, an ardent outdoor enthusiast, spends much time in the woods along streams near the family's country place in Jefferson county, Pa., and won the appointment by her wide knowledge of birds and game animals.

Just now she is spending a vacation in Argentina, studying its people, their attitude toward missionaries and this country.

OLD SHOES' THUD SOUNDS GOOD TO MODERN BRIDES

WASHINGTON, July 27—(AP)—Wedding superstitions are as strong today as in the time of the covered wagon. Gowns may come from Paris but Washington brides avoid donning their veils before the ceremony just as their grandmothers did.

Though she whirls to the church with a police escort to clear the way and to keep back the curious mob, the daughter of a wealthy man or prominent statesman secretly welcomes the thud of a worn old shoe, omen of good luck, against her car.

Alice Huston, daughter of Claudius Huston, chairman of the republican national committee, was a rare exception to the rule. She went through rehearsal and allowed photographers to take her picture the day before her wedding fully arrayed in bridal finery from veil to slippers.

The old superstition is so strong with most brides that they try the effect of the veil on some girl friends, then slip it on themselves just before the ceremony.

Marjorie Mondell, another recent bride of prominence, clung to the old belief and wore her wedding dress and veil for the first time as she went up the aisle. Cameramen waited until after the ceremony and rehearsal was conducted with the bride in an old dress.

The modern bridal gown is the one notable exception in the unchanging wedding customs. The bride of today often wears a colored wedding gown instead of the traditional white.

WIDE VELVET HATS THIS FALL IF PARIS HAS ITS WAY

PARIS, July 27—(AP)—Brimmed hats of velvet are to be this winter's most fashionable folly it seems.

During the recent mannequin manifestations at the races and smart gatherings velvet hats were the outstanding style change.

There were hats of plum, turquoise and rich dark green.

Big black hats of velvet were not confined to mannequins for some of society's notably well-dressed women were brimmed hats of black velvet with white costumes.

But the favorite hat of velvet is not to have a flat brim apparently. The most admired advance autumn millinery models are those with skilfully shirred wide brims.

Many of these hats are wide at the sides and front and have short backs which show interesting arrangements of shirring.

Brims, whether large or small, are lifted high off the face in front. Frequently brims are mounted several inches above the edge of the crown in bandeau effect.

TEACHER DODGES HEAT—SUMMERS IN LABRADOR

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 27—(AP)—Summer heat and melting humidity are not worries of Edith Tallant, high school teacher here.

Miss Tallant spends her vacations in Labrador where she joins the teaching staff of the General Foundation. This summer she made the 2,000-mile journey in 10 days, by train, boat, airplane and dog sledge.

She goes from one settlement to another, over a stretch of several hundred miles of sea-swept coast, ministering to the sick and teaching the "three R's." The first went to Labrador in 1922.

WEAR VELVET? HERE'S LONDON HINT

LONDON, July 27—(AP)—Shooting sticks have been introduced to London drawing rooms to spare delicate dresses.

A woman prominent in London society recently surprised her hostess and friends by bringing her shooting stick to an exclusive little musical afternoon affair. She planted her stick on the polished parquet floor and firmly sat on it all afternoon.

The explanation was finally given that she wore a velvet dress which would retain only too plainly the imprint of the cane-seated chairs her hostess provided.

Mrs. Stimson Wears Black and White.

WASHINGTON, July 27—(AP)—Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the secretary of state, wore a becoming gown of black and white foulard silk at a white house garden party. The neck and sleeves were finished with pleated white chiffon. A large black transparent hat completed the costume.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers was similarly dressed except that her dress was of chiffon and her hat a white felt.

CAPITAL SOCIETY MATRON CUTS MOTHER GOOSE TOYS

WASHINGTON, July 27—(AP)—Colored card board figures representing Mother Goose characters, made by Mrs. George Oakley Totten, society matron, are delighting Washington children.

The figures are jointed so they can be manipulated by childish fingers into various poses. The interest of all children, including her own seven year old son, in Mother Goose prompted Mrs. Totten to start the venture.

Her next step will be to make the toys of painted tin.

GRANDMA'S SUNSHADE CHIC NOW IN LONDON

LONDON, July 27—(AP)—With the return of women to the feminine frills of a few generations ago, the sunshade has staged a comeback.

At the latest fashionable garden party many were made of cretonne and differed from the beach variety in being as tiny as those in vogue in Victorian days.

Several were made of black lace flounces trimmed with frills to match frocks.

Study Juvenile Courts.

BALTIMORE, July 27—(AP)—A study of the best method of organizing a system of juvenile courts in Maryland is being made by the League of Women Voters. On the basis of the study an act will be recommended to the legislature.

Women Win British Posts.

LONDON, July 27—(AP)—Women won 17 of the 67 vacancies offered in the last civil service examinations for executive posts. Of 786 candidates 326 were women.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Fine steel wool will remove starch or rust from the iron.

Before measuring the molasses dip the measuring utensil into hot water to facilitate the process.

If a small cork is fitted into the spout of the coffee pot, or the tea kettle, it will hasten boiling.

Lemons that have become dry and hard from standing can be restored by covering with boiling water for a few minutes.

Add a teaspoonful of vinegar to the lard that is used for frying, and it will prevent the food from absorbing too much fat.

There are many kinds of dustcloths on the market, but old stockings ripped open probably make the best dustrags. They do not leave the lint.

To keep the range black and clean, wash while still warm with soap and water. If it is very greasy, add a little soda to the water.

A satisfactory glue can be made in an emergency by soaking tapioca in warm water, particularly when the children desire to do some pasting of pictures.

Fowl may be found in the market throughout the year but it is best from March until June. Turkeys are best during the cold winter months.

If the window screens are not made of copper or bronze wire, wipe them carefully with machine oil to prevent rusting. The odor of the oil will keep away mosquitoes and flies.

To open a sealed envelope, wring a cloth out of cold water, lay it smoothly over the flap and run a hot iron over the wet cloth. Re-seal it with the white of an egg.

Never throw water on blazing oil. It will only spread the flames. Earth, flour or sand will extinguish the fire, but if these are not at hand a thick rug or curtain should be thrown on the burning oil.

To clean a gas stove, wash it well with a strong washing powder and allow it to remain for 15 minutes. Then wash off and rinse well with a cloth rinsed out of warm water. Wipe dry and the stove will be well cleaned.

THE REASON

Why should green vegetables be cooked quickly in an uncovered saucepan? To preserve their green color which makes them attractive, hence ore appealing to the appetite.

Why are green vegetables called protective foods? Because they contain vitamins and mineral matter which are essential to growth and health.

Why are beans usually baked with pork? Beans (except soy beans) are low in fat and the addition of salt pork supplies this deficiency.

EASY CUTTING

A new kitchen convenience is a little combination sharpener for both knives and scissors, made of two discs and stone with a guide set in a strong handle. Tools with sharp edges make a tremendous difference in one's enjoyment of work.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Get plenty of sleep—you will need it to help you stand the strain of the hot weather.

In burning a disinfectant in a room, the dish containing the disinfectant should be set into another dish containg water.

If proud flesh appears on a sore, sprinkle it twice daily with dry granulated sugar. This is a simple remedy, but very effective.

The light should always come from the left and slightly to the rear of the chair when one is reading. Never lie down to read as it is straining to the eye.

EXERCISE

The amount of exercise necessary depends largely upon one's occupation. The houseworker gets sufficient muscular activity, whereas the girls in offices doing sedentary work require a certain amount of gymnastic exercise to keep them fit. Walking is excellent for them.

SHADE HAT

CHIFFON FOR COOLNESS

A useful frock for both town and country consists of a skirt of flowered chiffon with a top of beige chiffon. Over this is worn a short coat of flowered chiffon.

NATURAL LINEN TO LEAD

The linen shoe seems to be the new shoe of the summer, appearing pump form, in strap slippers and eyelet oxfords. A nice combination is linen with leather, black linen with patent, white with tan or black and white with white kidskin. A striking white linen strap slipper is trimmed with maize or green calf. Some bootiers are showing the natural linen shoe to head the list.

TRIMS FOR BRICK HOUSE

The practical owner of a brick house who finds the mellowed red of aged brick pleasing, but who wants, nevertheless, to give his house the advantages of paint protection, can have the trim of the house brightened up with a coat of fresh bright green, and the body of the house painted in a brick red toned down to correspond to weathered brick.

Paint gives the brick house the charm of color and relieves the practical man of his anxiety for the adequate protection of his home.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Contrasts occur in vamp, shank or quarter in smart daytime shoes.

Turquoise blue patent leather is used for handbags to complete a costume carried out in this extremely fashionable tone.

Many of the dressy little ballibuntls and other black straw hats affect tiny face veils that turn back up over the brim.

Skirt, jacket and shorts form the summer sports ensemble. These are developed in printed percales and muslins, silks, flannel and in fact any material apropriate for sports.

There are two hemlines of different lengths for evening now, the familiar ones reaching to within an inch or two of the floor, and the new even length launched by Lanvin and Chanel, which measures about 10 inches from the floor, achieving a very short effect in the full skirt.

PINK TOUCH

A black lacy straw hat, cut conservatively with all-around brim, has pink and black grosgrain braiding for banding and finishing in the rear with little streamer ends.

SEQUIN JACKET

For evening wear, the latest little, short, fitted jacket is made of scintillating sequins, in some rich tone such as raspberry or billiard green. It has a cape collar and elbow sleeves and fastens with a single button just above the waistline.

MONOGRAMS OUT ON TIP-TOE

Whether or not you have been about you will now take your initial step into fashion. That is, you may step forth for the first time with an initialed toe, because monogram clips for the opera pump are now a new vogue. They are made of marcasite and add a bright touch to the palm slipper.

NATURAL FLOWERS ARE WORN

Among the several interesting style revivals may be mentioned the return of natural flowers for the day or evening corsage. What a long time it seems since a bunch of violets or anything excepting orchids and gardenias have been added to the sart ensemble! Paris now reports that women are wearing a single real carnation as a boutonniere—also, of course, a natural gardenia. What is even more interesting, they are wearing roses, lilies of the valley and violets. A flower is worn on the shoulder or in the lapel, while for evening they are worn either on the shoulder or to indicate the waistline. One may also add a flower to the edge of the evening wrap.

CRYSTAL BALL NECKLACE

It is one of the new bits of jewelry that looks really "good" instead of trucky as so much of the costume jewelry does. It consists of balls of clear crystal encircled with silver.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Do not use soap to clean white serge. Use a decoction of soapwort roots. This keeps the goods soft.

Pour boiling water over rice before cooking it and use the water for starching muslins and laces.

Chintz or figured muslin bedspreads wear well, require less laundering than plain white spreads, and also aid in carrying out a color scheme.

A lump of orris root placed in the boiler will impart a pleasing odor to the clothes, which will remain after they are ironed.

INVITING SEAT

Do try to have a place outside that invites you to come into the open. It may be a comfortable chair on the porch, a shady nook in an arbor, a swing that moves gently while you shell peas, darn the family stockings or peel potatoes. Such a lure can take you into the open at least two hours daily, which will aid both your health and your disposition.

INTERESTING LETTERS

If you want to rank high as a fascinating correspondent, keep a file of items you clip from papers and magazines that bring this or that friend to mind. So often you think of sending something to a person but lose it before you write.

LEMONADE

Lemonade days are here and it might be well to call to mind that lemons should be warmed before using, then rolled with the hand until soft. This will mean twice as much juice and flavor.

DOOR SPRINGS

It is a small expenditure and a worth while one to see that every door has its spring, when summer comes. Adults are quite as likely to leave screen doors ajar as children.

ON THE DEEP

The feminine sailor will be picturesquely attired in wide trousers of white serge, a sweater of blue and white stripes and a double-breasted coat of navy blue serge.

MIRRORS HELP

Try moving your mirrors around so that each one in your house will reflect a view out in the window or open door. It brings the outdoors into the house amazingly.

FLOWER VASES

Flower vases that have become stained from constant use may be cleaned just as water bottles are. Put potato parings into the vase with water enough to cover the stains and leave them over night. A cleaning pad may be made by cutting a groove around a long stick near one end and tying a bit of cloth securely to it. The cloth should be doubled up so that it makes a round ball-like covering for the end.

STUDIO EFFECTS

The jazzy paper covers of new books make an effective border for a studio room. Paper the border with them, then shellac it.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh, wife of the celebrated aviator, has flown nearly 30,000 miles in the last 12 months.

The smallest women in the British Isles is Miss Mary Hegarty, aged 67, of Tory Island, Ireland. She measures only 32 inches.

Girl Scout membership records in the United States show an increase over a period of the last five years of more than 21,000 girls a year.

Miss Ilah Marian Kibbey, registrar of the Kansas City Art Institute, has executed a series of paintings of prairies from an airplane.

Among the active women in the United States is Mrs. George Waller, 94 years old, of Burlington, Wis. She has been chairman of the public health association of the city for the last 30 years.

CLEANING ACCESSORIES

Artificial flowers, delicate party handkerchiefs and other accessories can be cleaned perfectly by putting into a fruit jar, covering with noninflammable cleaning fluid, putting the top on and shaking well this way and that. Rinse the same way in clean fluid.

WALLPAPER PATTERNS

For the room with dormer windows which contribute to a charming architecture, the proper wall paper to use is something of a problem. The many angles and broken surfaces of such a room make certain patterns impossible and the lowness of the ceiling also makes demands on the design.

Since these rooms are quaint and old-fashioned they are at their best with an old-fashioned patterned paper. The best of these are the all-over floral patterns in a small design. But contrary to what one might think, plain stripes are excellent in a low gabled room. Their straight lines adapt themselves easily to the changing angles of the walls, a break in the vertical effect helps to lift the ceiling. stripe is not unpleasing and the strong

MODERN PIECES MAKE LIVING ROOM TRIM

By ELSIE DREW KENNEDY

In the ideal modern American home, furniture is comfortable and conveniently arranged, and all decorations are selected for their real aesthetic satisfaction rather than for expense or rarity.

Fortunately the Victorian "front-parlor" that was kept sealed in shadowy, artificial grandeur except for the reception of an occasional visitor has nearly melted into legend, and in its place is the true "living room."

A typical example of the perfectly arranged living room group is illustrated here. It is true that the room itself is blessed with some unique architectural details—the mantelless fireplace, for instance, and the decorative, built-in niche for books or pottery.

But the deep wing chair, the convenient table and lamp and the rows of books would present an equally alluring invitation in a less interesting room.

The chair is upholstered in natural-colored linen, hand-blocked with a colorful, intertwining floral design in green, blue, and deep red with touches of yellow, and its "petticoat" is of plain natural-colored linen.

End tables are the inseparable companions of these comfortable chairs and they have become so prevalent that decorators must tax their originality to achieve groups that run no risk of being commonplace.

There is no doubt, however, that this little table of walnut is a novelty. Its simple, well-proportion top and shelves are supported by design, and tapering to graceful slender legs, carved in quaint spool ball feet.

The various little knickknacks were chosen to express the owner's discriminating taste and to indulge his preference for things Oriental.

A glowing, cheery-red Chinese porcelain vase was converted to form the lamp, topped by an autinqued parchment shade. The Orient, too, contributed the tiny turquoise blue porcelain flower bowl and the cloisonne cigaret box, as well as the Japanese prints either side of the book shelves.

The definite patterns and the warm tonality of the prints render them particularly well adapted to the interior. Without hint of the bizarre, they are in perfect harmony with the large, rather modern landscape over the fireplace.

The built-in niche is lined with a deep, rich red, in contrast to cream walls and woodwork. Rows of books, of course, proclaim their own virtues as decoration and the top shelf, by way of variation, holds a turquoise vase.

HOOVER SOCIAL CODE DEPARTS FROM WHITE HOUSE PRECEDENTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, July 27—"President and Mrs. Hoover have written a social code of their own, and have reserved the right of living their own sort of domestic life, even though it breaks away from many precedents of former administrations." That is the answer given me by an intimate friend of the Hoovers who enjoys their hospitality now, as in the days when Mr. Hoover was secretary of commerce.

My question was "Is it true, that except at state affairs, the Hoovers disregard old time white house formality, and live pretty much as they did before Mr. Hoover became president?"

You see, many tales are told hereabouts, of the Sunday night suppers at the white house, where old time friends drop in on "a standing invitation" or are summoned by telephone after the fashion of people of lesser political degree. These Sunday nighters include friends from the political and the newspaper worlds and friends and neighbors from the residential section of the city where the Hoovers own a big house, banked by a big garden, and now leased for a term of four years by Senator Walcott of Connecticut.

There we also hear tales of "the Hoovers have never lunched or dined alone since Mr. Hoover came into the presidency." That too, is vouched for by friends of the executive family.

Mrs. Hoover added largely to the corps of white house servants, and now there are 50 employed at the executive mansion.

Always Provide for Extras

The cooks are instructed to always provide for "extras" the number running from two or three to a score or more, practically every day.

The Hoovers have the habit of asking out of town friends "to stay to lunch," if by chance they call in the forenoon, first, of course having made an appointment through one of the three social secretaries for even the Hoover's require that formality. In fact, in many ways the Hoovers are less informal than were the Coolidges, in others they lay aside formality where President and Mrs. Coolidge would have held it rigid as pertaining to the office of president.

At state affairs, such as receptions and dinners, and formal official luncheons to distinguished visitors, it is said practically the old time customs prevail, but at little dinners, that is abandoned and everybody walks to the dining room hit or miss, as far as official rank goes.

For those little affairs the Hoovers are quite apt to use the smaller family dining room, which leads off of the magnificent state dining room.

My informant tells me that at state dinners the china, silver, knives, forks and spoons selected by Dolly Madison during the administration of James Madison, are much in evidence; that the great combination centerpiece of candalabra and fruit basket, of gold and bronze is used with splendid effect. That was purchased in the administration of James Munroe, and is said to have caused great adverse comment in congress, on the ground of presidential extravagance.

White House Furnishings

Mrs. Hoover has not shown an over fondness for antiques or furniture of historic association, yet we are told that she is very fond of showing to personal friends, the Lincoln bed in the "best" guest chamber, on which now is thrown that famous knitted quilt made by Mrs. Coolidge and in which are knitted the name and date of the administration of Mr. Coolidge with views of the white house and the park in the midst of which it stands, also cleverly depicted in knitting.

There is another bit of white house furnishings that is of general interest to personal friends of the president. That is a desk presented by Queen Victoria, made from wood of the British ship The Resolute, abandoned in the ice fields, after a search for Sir John Franklin in 1852, from which it was rescued by an American whaler. The queen had the desk made and given to the United States as a mark of her appreciation of the service rendered.

The Hour of Departure

To hark back to the informality of small affairs at the white house, it is whispered that the Hoovers have also broken up the custom of centuries in the matter of having the president and the mistress of the white house fix the time of departing guests by rising and saying good night themselves, thus setting the pace for departure.

They tell the story how one evening, the guests waited and waited till near midnight, for Mrs. Hoover to give the customary signal. But it never came. So finally one lady of high degree rose and said she really must "be going." Mrs. Hoover is said to have expressed regret, nodded a good night, then resumed her conversation, and the other guests departed one by one, all feeling guilty of having done a most unusual and unseemly thing in blazing her own trail towards home.

As my informant was one of the women who took "French leave" she could not inform me how the party broke up, and how the last guest made her exit. Whether she left Mrs. Hoover sitting there alone, or whether Mrs. Hoover then took the wheel in her own hands, and honked a warning that it was high time to leave, will probably remain shrouded in mystery.

But that's the story as it runs here.

Presidential "Commands"

As white house invitations, formal or informal are still regarded as "commands," few if any people have the temerity to decline, unless they first go to bed and send for the doctor to come a' running.

The one notable exception, was last week, when the president asked the republican floor leader, Senator Watson of Indiana, to go to the camp at Rapidan, on Saturday afternoon for the week end. Senator Watson replied he "just must go to the base-ball" game to be played that afternoon between two big teams, but he would be glad to run down Sunday—which he did. And so made a new record regarding presidential "commands."

Mrs. Hoover has fully recovered from the effects of her fall three months ago, and last Sunday drove her own big car to Raritan and back, taking with her a party of women friends, among them Representative Edith N. Rogers of Massachusetts.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Runaways

It was the second time in a week that Lucy and Julie had run away. Their mother spent a frantic hour looking for them. She finally discovered them hanging over the pier watching the fishing boats come in.

The first time they ran away she had carefully explained to them the dangers to which they had exposed themselves and the confusion and worry they had caused her. This time it seemed to her that punishment was in order.

She took them by the hand and brought them home.

"You knew you shouldn't run away, didn't you?"

"Yes but we wanted to go down to the fishing pier."

"You have run away. You know that you shouldn't and I am going to punish you so you won't do it again. Lucy, you go to your room and Julie you go to yours. You both will have to stay there until lunch time, then if you promise that you will never run away any more, we won't have to say any more about it.

It was all very solemn. Mother was neither angry nor vindicative. The children knew quite well how naughty they had been. They knew they deserved punishment. They submitted to it in the same spirit in which it was administered.

With well brought-up children, punishment seldom is needed. One of the few occasions when it is necessary is when a child persists in exposing himself to danger. In such instances punishment properly given often acts as a deterrent against repetition.

To be effective it must be severe enough to be genuinely unpleasant, and it must be immediate.

OLD BROOMS CAN SWEEP CLEAN

Brooms can be made to last a long time if given the proper care. The broom should never be left to stand on the straw; instead, it should be hung up when not in use. A screw-eye can be put in the end of the handle or a groove cut around the end and a stout cord tied around the broom handle and the broom hung on a nail. When it becomes one-sided, it can be straightened by soaking the straw in boiling water and then clipping with a pair of real sharp shears. When it is nearly worn out, it can be retained as a cleaner by trimming it to a point. It will be found very handy in cleaning out corners and around heavy furniture.

Performance of an operetta attracted 19,000 persons to the outdoor theatre of the St. Louis municipal opera.

THREE PERSONS HURT IN AUTO COLLISION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, July 27—A Chevrolet sedan, owned by Alphonse Germain, 212 South Third avenue, Taftville, and driven by his son, Willie Germain, 22, same address, was struck by a Paige sedan driven by Irving L. Lewis, 219 West 81st street, New York, and owned by H. J. Kurtz, of 10374 118th street, Richmond Hill, N. Y. about 5:30 p. m. Sunday. The collision occurred at the junction of Tower and Granite streets as the Lewis car was proceeding up Granite and the Germain car was being driven down Granite. The front end of the Germain car was badly damaged. The driver was cut on the head, his father received cuts on his leg and his mother, Mrs. Delia G. Germain, sustained injuries to her chest and a bruised arm.

The Lewis car was damaged but slightly and its occupants uninjured. A young lady, who paused at the scene to observe the damaged auto, fainted and sustained a slight cut on her knee by broken glass.

LOCAL GIRL SCOUTS TO MEET AT MOHEGAN PARK

The Girl Scout day camp, Camp Socajawea, for all registered Girl Scouts of Norwich, held its fourth meeting Friday at Fort Shantok. At a meeting of the directors at the camp it was decided that the camp site would be changed from Fort Shantok to Mohegan park. It was considered advisable to make this change owing to the long, hot walk from the trolley car to Fort Shantok.

The girls will meet Tuesday at the Rockwell street entrance to the park at 9:30. The day's program will begin at 10 o'clock and will include swimming, nature study, games, songs, patrol cooking and all the other papers that help to make a complete camp day. The camp is under the supervision of Miss Katharine Sullivan, who has just completed a Girl Scout training course at Camp Edith Macy, New York. Miss Sullivan is assisted by Mrs. Frank Grieve, Mrs. Frank Rinella, Miss Catherine Dutton and Miss Virginia Freeman. Entire responsibility of the scouts will be assumed when the girls meet at the park entrance.

Art Gallery Pool Haunted.

As the Lyme Art association celebrates the opening of its 29th annual exhibition a strange ghost may haunt the scene. For there is a persistent legend that the path by the pool, just beyond the gallery is haunted.

Those versed in current topics of the Boston-Tea-Party days, say that during the time of tax on tea, Old Lyme dumped all her tea, one morning on the "Village Green" and burned it. Then along came a peddler innocent of the day's performance, offering tea for sale. "You rebel" they cried, administered a severe pummiling, seized his tea and promptly burned it. On his weary way went the unbonneted and disordered peddler. He returned at the dead of night and while passing the brook, the peddler was slain by thieves bent on the plunder of his wares, some beautiful Chinese silks and embroideries. His body was thrown in the culvert. Not long after, the story goes, the ghost of this little bent-over peddler was seen at times, by passersby along the brook. With years the snow ball of evidence accumulated, and another bit of illustrative information is that one inky night the same ghost attempted a game of hide and seek with one of Old Lyme's most distinguished artists.

GREENEVILLE MAN FATALLY HURT BY AUTO ON NORTH MAIN ST.

John R. Tennant, 67, of No. 319 North Main street, died about 11:45 o'clock Sunday evening at the W. W. Backus hospital as the result of shock and injuries received when he was hit by an automobile at the corner of Ninth and North Main streets about 11:30 o'clock Sunday evening. The machine is owned and was driven by Frederick Leroy Glynn of No. 152 Willetts avenue, New London. At the time he was hit Mr. Tennant was crossing the street a short distance from his home located on the east side of North Main street.

Mr. Glynn, in company with a young man and two girls, was driving along North Main street on his way to Jewett City when Tennant is understood to have started to cross the highway and was struck. Tennant was dragged along the highway for a distance of 52 feet, according to measurements taken by the investigating officers. It is alleged that Tennant was in an intoxicated condition.

Tennant was picked up and placed in the machine of Francis Delaney of this city and rushed to the hospital, where he died a minute or two after arrival. Dr. George H. Gildersleeve, acting medical examiner for Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, was notified and investigated. All of the ribs on the right side of Tennant's chest were broken, as were several on the left side, and he also sustained a broken right arm.

Sergeant Matthew Delaney and Officer John Dunion, who investigated the accident, arrested Glynn and took him to the police station, where he was booked on a charge of reckless driving by Sergeant John Casey. This charge was changed to manslaughter by Sergeant Casey when he was notified that Tennant had died. Glynn is held under bonds of $2,500 at police headquarters for his appearance in the city court this (Monday) morning. Tennant is survived by his wife, Jennie S., and four or five children.

BARRED ROCK HENS IN FIRST PLACE

The Barred Rock pen in the Storrs contest, as a group, captured first place for the week with an egg production of 63.7 per cent. The grand total for all pens in the contest was 4,102 eggs. This brings the grand total to date up to 165,046. With the extremely hot weather which we have had during the week a decided decline in production was expected, but the birds laid only 68 eggs less than last week, and 153 eggs more than for the same period last year.

The rewards this week seem to be equally divided between the several breeds although a pen of White Leghorns owned by Alfred J. O'Donovan of Katonah, N. Y., won the week with a lay of 61 eggs. The second best record went to a pen of Barred Rocks owned by R. C. Cobb of Littleton, Mass., with a total of 60 eggs. A pen of Rhode Island Reds owned by Edward N. Larrabee came through with a lay of 58 eggs thus tying with a pen of White Leghorns owned by Geo. B. Ferris of Grand Rapids, Mich., and a pen of the same breed owned by Wm. J. Boyle of North Norwich, N. Y. No less than four pens were tied for fourth honors consisting of three pens of Leghorns and one of White Rocks. The White Rock pen is owned by E. H. Rucker, Ottumwa, Iowa, and the Leghorns by Hollywood Poultry Farm of Woodinville, Wash., Toivonen Leghorn Farm, Girard, Penn., and Peetoocee Poultry Plant, elford, Penn. All three pens came through with a lay of 57 eggs.

There were no changes in the White Rock, Barred Rocks, and White Wyandotte classes. In the Rhode Island Red group we find that the pen owned by Homestead Farm, Newtown, Conn., has jumped into third place. This separates the two pens owned by F. S. Chapin, which held down second and third bases for several weeks. A pen of White Leghorns owned by Tom Barron, Catforth, Eng., appears on the list because of the fact that the pens owned by Hanson's Leghorn Farm and Hollywood Poultry Farm were both tied for third place. Toivonen Leghorn Farm's pen from Girard, Penn., continues to lead all other pens with a total of 2,357 eggs. Its nearest competitor is a pen of Rhode Island Reds owned by Edward H. Larrabee of Peterboro, N. H. The Reds are 160 eggs behind the Pennsylvania pen.

White Wyandottes: The Locusts, West Cornwall, Conn., 1887. Jack Wregnal, Barron, Nr. Preston, Eng., 1702.

White Rocks: E. H. Rucker, Ottumwa, Iowa, 1793. Adam F. Poltl, Hartford, Wis., 1624. Kalerok Farm, Westford, Mass., 1542.

Rhode Island Reds: Edw. N. Larrabee, Petersboro, N. H., 2107. F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2040. Homestead Farms, Newtown, Conn., 1,997. F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 1988.

White Leghons: Tolvonen Leghorn Farm, Girard, Pa. 2267. Steelman Poultry Farms, Lansdale, Pa., 2040. Hanson's Leghorn Farm, Corvallis, Ore., 1989. Hollywood P. Farm, Woodinville, Wash., 1939. Bournedale Farm, Millerton, N. Y., 1960. Tom Barron, Catforth, Preston, England, 1941.

ELECTRICAL FARMS IN CONNECTICUT INCREASE

According to the most recent survey of the National Electric Light association, 4,464 Connecticut farms are now receiving light and power service from the various electrical utilities in this state. This is an increase of 323 farms over the total of one year ago. Since the total number of farms in this state is estimated at 23,240 this leaves a total of 18,776 farms which remain to be electrified, a large field for the expansion of light and power service in rural territory.

Experiments in the utilization of electricity in all types of farming conducted throughout the country during the past five years have revealed that a large percentage of farming operations can be conducted with far greater efficiency by use of electric power than is possible under methods now employed. Education of the farmer in the advantages of electrical equipment and his willingness to adopt these modern methods, however, is essential before service can be finally extended to include rural areas.

The reason for this is that the greatest cost of electric service is the transmission of energy from the power station to the customer. Erection of new lines with the necessary transforming equipment is a costly undertaking and cannot be attempted until the utility company is assured that the new territory will consume a sufficient amount of power to warrant the expenditures involved. For this reason the electric companies have been financing the experiments referred to in order to determine for the farmer the exact advantages, costs, time saving and general efficiency of electrical farm equipment.

LOCAL POLICE WARNED OF BRIDGEPORT SWINDLERS

Police authorities in Norwich, as well as throughout the state, were notified Friday to be on the watch for a clever pair of swindlers who defrauded a young Bridgeport Italian out of $600 Friday morning. One of the men was an Italian about 30 years old. They represented that they had $20,000 in cash between them, were going back to their native lands and were in search for an honest man to accompany them and to see that their money was not stolen. They succeeded in prevailing upon the Bridgeport youth to draw $600, his life savings, out of a bank and go with them, promising to pay him when they reached Europe.

En route to the railroad station one of the men complained of a headache and he turned over a package which he said contained the $20,000 to the youth and asked him to hold it while he went into a drug store to get some aspirin tablets. A few minutes later while the trio was passing another drug store the man again complained that his head was still aching and asked the youth to go into the store and get a package of tablets. The youth gave him the package which was supposed to contain the $20,000 and also an envelope containing his own $600 and went into the store. When he came out the two men had disappeared.

TAFTVILLE WOMAN FINED FOR BREACH OF PEACE

Mrs. Aurora Couture of Merchants avenue, Taftville, was presented in the city court Saturday morning on a charge of breach of peace and upon being found guilty was fined $2 and costs. She is alleged to have struck Mrs. Rose Gauvin, a neighbor, with her fists, July 18, after the two women engaged in a heated argument over a dispute between their two children. Mrs. Couture was arrested by Constable Louis Paquette upon complaint of the other woman.

Foned $5 And Costs

The case of William Buchert, 27, of Norwich, charged with breach of the peace, was tried in the city court Saturday morning. He was fined $5 and costs, paying a total bill of $14.50. Buchert was arrested Friday by Officers Davis and Calkins upon complaint of his wife over alleged marital trouble.

CROWDED OFF HIGHWAY, AUTO CRASHED INTO TELEPHONE POLE

Alleged to have been crowded off the highway, a Cadillac machine owned by George Kramer of Central avenue and driven by Charles Langlois of St. Regis avenue crashed into a telephone pole in front of the Norwich Belt company's plant on North Main street about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Mr. Langlois was injured about the face and scalp and his five-year-old son was shaken up.

Mr. Langlois was driving the machine towards Taftville and when he reached the long sweeping curve near the south end of the tannery building, two other machines forced him off the road. As the car left the cement on the right hand side, the rear end swerved and crashed into the pole. The force of the collision caused one stroke to be sounded on the fire alarm system.

A passing motorist took Mr. Langlois in his machine to the W. W. Backus hospital, where the cuts about his face and scalp were attended by a physician. About 15 stitches were required to close the wounds after which he was discharged.

The machine had its right rear tire and mudguard damaged and a hole gouged out in the top. The accident was investigated by Officers Clifford Crary and Patrick Murphy.

It is claimed by several witnesses to the accident that one of two machines, a Massachusetts car, which was traveling in the opposite direction, towards the city, took more than half of the traveled portion of the highway and forced the Langlois machine off into the gutter. None of the witnesses, however, secured the registration number of the offending machine.

SIX MOTORISTS IN NORWICH COURT TODAY

Six motorists, arrested over the week-end for violations of the motor vehicle laws, will be presented in city court his (Monday) morning. Two of th eviolators were summoned into court on Saturday. They are Adolph Leschensky, 44, of R. F. D. No. 3, charged with driving a machine without a license and Peter Wawrzynowicz, charged with failure to have his license endorsed. Both of these men were summoned by Officer Clifford Crary. Wawrzynowicz was found to have failed to endorse his license. He was stopped by the officer for driving at an alleged fast rate of speed on the West Side section of the city.

Officer Crary also arrested Manuel Santos, 18, of this city, Sunday, for allowing a 13-year old boy to drive his machine. The other three offenders taken into custody on Sunday were Theodore Smith, of the U. S. S. 64, stationed at the sub base, arrested by Officer John O'Neil, and William Burke, 24, of this city, and Kenneth R. Browning, 17, arrested by State Policeman Johnson. All three are charged with violation of the motor vehicle laws.

LABOR LEADERS WOULD BAN SOVIET PRODUCTS FROM U. S.

Matthew Woll, a Vice President of the A. F. of L., Contends That All Soviet Russian Goods Are Produced By Forced Labor—At the Direction of President Hoover the Duties On Russian Matches Have Been Raised 50 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, July 28—(AP)—Demands that Russian products be barred from the United States continued to occupy the attention of treasury officials today as new evidence and petitions reached their desks.

Assistant Secretary Lowman, who last week barred shipments of Russian pulpwood, and has raised the duties on Russian matches by 50 per cent, said no new orders were in immediate prospect. Pulpwood was barred after testimony was given that convicts had helped to load it. A section of the tariff act forbids entry of products made wholly or in part by convict labor.

Lowman said the import duties on soviet matches were increased at the order of President Hoover upon proof the matches were sold by the Russian government in the United States at less than the selling prices prevailing within that country. Such action under the tariff law is technically described as "dumping," and may be met by raising the American tariff by administration action.

Complaints also have been raised regarding manganese and other products from Russia. Matthew Woll, a vice president of the American Federation of Labor, has contended that all exports from that country should be banned as produced by forced labor.

Customs records during recent months indicate Russian shipments to the United States have been relatively small. Outside of the manganese and pulpwood under complaint, furs, platinum and a very small amount of timber have virtually constituted the total. The only manufactured product entering the United States from Russia apparently has been the match shipments against which the increased duty was imposed.

Senator Black, democrat, Alabama, today made public a letter he had received from Secretary Mellon promising to apply the tariff law ban to shipments of lumber if evidence could be produced to show that convict labor had been used in its production.

Thus far, the secretary's letter explained, there had been positive evidence that the shipments were not convict made.

In a letter to Lowman today Woll thanked the assistant secretary for his action in barring shipments of Russian pulpwood and expressed the hope that it would be followed "by similar rulings on other commodities which are produced by convict, forced or indentured labor."

"American labor," he added, "cannot compete with the convict, forced or slave labor of Russia, Europe and the Orient and at the same time maintain the American standards of living. The elimination of or a substantial reduction in the purchasing power of American workers, by any means, will be followed, almost immediately thereafter, by a condition in America which, the soviets hope, will result in the destruction of the American form of government."

CARGOES FROM RUSSIA DENIED ENTRY AT N. Y.

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—Port of New York authorities today refused entry to two freighters loaded with pulpwood from Archangel, in accordance with the embargo placed by the treasury department on such cargoes from Russia.

The barred cargoes are in the Norwegian steamer Christian Bors and the British steamer Grelisle. The vessels lay at anchor off Bedloe Island while their New York agents held a fruitless conference with port authorities. The Amtorg Trading corporation operates the Christian Bors. Amtorg officials refused to make a statement on the port's action, saying it would be taken up with Washington.

DAY OF REST IN LOS ANGELES FOR THE AIR DERBY PILOTS

LOS ANGELES, July 28.—(AP)— A one day, instead of a two rest here has been ordered for the twelve aviators remaining in the All-American air derby, and the fliers now are scheduled to depart on the return trip to Detroit early tomorrow.

The aviators dropped on welcome beds last night, anticipating a rest until Wednesday. They were rudely awakened this morning after receipt of new orders from Detroit, starting and finishing point of the 'round-the-country race. The fliers then hurried to Metropolitan airport to overhaul their tiny mounts.

The planes will line up at 8 a. m., taking off at one minute intervals. Most of them will stop at Las Vegas, Nev., to refuel before racing to Ogden, Utah, first overnight stop.

Supervising officials saw prospects of changes in race leadership in the next hop—to Lincoln, Neb. They pointed out this long stretch will force most of the planes to stop at least twice for fuel, giving those with larger tanks opportunity to gain time.

Chicago is the third and last stop before Detroit, where $50,000 in prize money is posted.

Lee Gehlbach, with a total elapsed time of 26:17:25, had a leadership of more than two hours. J. R. Weddell was next with 28:51:41, with Lowell Bayless, third, with 29:2:59.

BARBARIC TREATMENT OF GIRLS AT STATE SCHOOL

CONCORD, N. H., July 28. —(AP)— Governor Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire tonight offered specific proof of the general charges he levelled against the State industrial school at Manchester several days ago of "barbaric treatment."

In a list of punishments of which Governor Tobey offers proof in his statement, there is included a whipping cure whereby "girls in their teens were given up to 250 lashes of a whip on their naked bodies"; a water cure, which was meted out to young girls by "standing them in a shower and turning a hose on them full force within a few feet of their bodies", and a so-called "dungeon treatment." which provided for the girls to be locked in dark narrow rooms.

CHICAGO MILLIONAIRE FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN CABIN

HIBBING, Minn., July 28.— (AP) — Soren Heiberg, 56, Chicago millionaire, was found dead yesterday in his cabin on an island in Wasson lake, between Coleraine and Big Fork. Word of the death in the remote section of the north woods was brought here today.

Mr. Heiberg had been shot but his friends were unable to say whether it was accidental or whether he had committed suicide. One theory was that he had been shot accidentally while cleaning his gun.

Heiberg was president of the Soren Heiberg Syrup company, which had factories in the United States and Denmark. He spent most of his summers in his home on the island and it was one of the show places of that section.

BODY OF SUICIDE VICTIM TAKEN FROM CONN. RIVER

THOMPSONVILLE, July 28.—(AP)— One man made an unsuccessful attempt to kill himself and the body of another suicide victim was taken from the Connecticut river, here within an hour this afternoon.

George Karalis, 35, was found by his wife in a semi-conscious condition from gas poisoning in his home. Upon being revived he ascribed his suicide attempt to despondency and lack of employment.

A short time later the body of an unidentified man about 60 was found in the Connecticut river, a half mile below Enfield falls. The dead man was clad only in his underclothes. Medical Examiner Ralph B. Thayer issued a certificate of death by suicide.

FIVE MORE DEATHS DUE TO HEAT IN BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, July 28.—(AP)— Five more deaths were laid to the heat today, bringing to 34 the total who have succumbed in the metropolitan area in the last ten days. A prediction that showers would break the record period of heat and drought was made by the weather bureau.

Baltimore's highest temperature was 87 at 2 p. m., a relief from the 99 degree top of yesterday, ocean breezes being the explanation. The government thermometer at Keedysville, near Hagerstown, reached 100 for the eleventh successive day.

Official word was that there is no need for alarm about the city's water supply, but the need for rain became more critical in other sections of the state.

The weather bureau announced that the accumulated deficiency in precipitation for the month now amounted to 47 inches and for the entire year to 52 inches, both were said to have established local records.

WILLIMANTIC NEGRO PASTOR PLEADED SHORTAGE OF FUNDS

MIDDLETOWN, July 28—(AP)—Rev. George B. Williams, 38, pastor of a Negro church at Willimantic, told the city court today, when charged with disregard of a traffic signal and driving without a license, that he had not had money enough to pay for an operator's license. He said the contributions of his parishioners lately had been so meagre that he had had little cash.

Williams made this explanation after pleading guilty to the charges and asking for leniency. It was shown that the clergyman had been driving for some time without a license.

A fine of $2 actual costs was imposed, and after digging down and bringing up a dollar bill and two half-dollars to meet the fine, Williams said that if it had been 15 cents more he could not have paid.

Williams ured to preach at Branford.

WOOD ALCOHOL PARTY FATAL TO PRISONER

DETROIT, July 28—(AP)—One prisoner of the Detroit house of correction is dead, another dying and a third is recovering today as a result of a wood alcohol party in the prison warehouse this morning.

LITTLE PROGRESS IN PEACE NEGOTIATIONS IN INDIA

BOMBAY, India, July 28—(AP)—While diplomatic efforts continued among nationalist leaders today to end the campaign of civil disobedience more than 700 men and women began the severest campaign of picketing yet undertaken here.

Seven hundred congress volunteers alternated all day long in four hour shifts before all shops dealing in foreign cloth, frightening away most of the customers and seriously crippling business.

At the same time the peace mission of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar, which last week visited Mahatma Gandhi in his prison quarters at Poona, finished up a week-end of conferences in the Naini jail with Panditdit Molatil Nehru and Jawarharial Nehru and returned to the Yeroda jail with a letter from the Nehrus to Gandhi.

Political observers of the Gandhi campaign and its more recent peaceful turn today were of the opinion that the Sapru-Jayakar peace negotiations would come to nought. These observers insisted that Jayakar himself was the stumbling block; that the Mahatma Gandhi neither likes nor trusts politically the man whom Sapru chose as his fellow statesman in the present negotiations.

MOONEY AGAIN PETITIONS FOR RELEASE FROM PRISON

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28—(AP)—Thomas J. Mooney today again asked Gov. C. C. Young to free him from the life sentence imposed for the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing here.

The request was made in a pardon petition mailed from here, in which Mooney requested a personal hearing. He also asked the governor to hear John MacDonald, who will appear at a supreme court hearing tomorrow on a pardon application of Warren K. Billings, also serving a life sentence for the bombing.

MacDonald is scheduled to tell the court he falsely identified Mooney and Billings and gave perjured testimony at their trials.

This testimony helped convict them of the bombing which killed ten and injured forty persons.

In his petition Mooney reviewed his case and denied any knowledge or connection with the crime. He asked his application be considered apart from Billings' petition. Mooney's request was sent to the governor by Attorney Frank P. Walsh.

FOUND POLE-SITTER WAS HER LONG LOST BROTHER

ASHLAND, Pa., July 28—(AP)—Now it can't be said that tree-sitting never did anyone any good.

Mrs. Catherine Berhle, of Reading, visiting here today, went to see John Snyder, 18, sitting aloft and found that he was her brother, from whom she had been separated for eight years.

The family was scattered when their mother was burned to death eight years ago. Catherine was adopted into a Reading family and John into an Ashland home.

After the identifications John, who had been up since last Wednesday, abandoned new record aspirations, and alighted to greet his sister.

The distribution of food is now regular and sanitary services are in full operation.

Tomorrow the council of ministers will meet in Rome to consider the situation created by the disaster and to take any steps that may be deemed necessary for the aid of the six provinces hit by the quake.

CHARLESTOWN PRISON TRUSTEES PLOTTED ESCAPE

BOSTON, July 28—(AP)—Authorities at the state prison at Charlestown today revealed the discovery of an attempt by four trusties to escape last Saturday afternoon, during the recreation period at the institution.

According to the story released by Warden James L. Hogsett, the four men were the only ones known to have been in the wing at the time. During that period several prisoners entered the chapel, and after considerable difficulty removed from its hinges a padlocked door which they evidently believed led to a comparatively easy means of escape through the west wing. The door, however, was a false one and behind it was nothing but a solid wall.

HEAVY DAMAGE WROUGHT IN ADRIANOPLE BY TORNADO

ADRIANOPLE, Turkey, July 28.—(AP)—This ancient capital of the Ottoman empire and treasure store of Moslem architecture tonight was a mass of fallen minarets, domes and roofs, blown over by a tornado that killed 20 persons and injured hundreds yesterday.

Four-fifths of the houses in the city, which has a population of about 60,000, were destroyed. The tornado spared the roofs of big government buildings but literally blew out the windows and doors. Official documents were whirled about through the streets like a snowstorm.

After the tornado hailstones the size of walnuts poured down. Crops in the surrounding country were ruined and trees were uprooted.

Nine minarets, picturesque Moslem towers giving a distinctive quality to the "sky-line" of Adrianople, were hurled to the ground. So were the tops of four minarets rising from the famous mosque of the Sultan Selim, one of the great treasures of Moslem architecture.

The tornado struck suddenly. After a hot and oppressive day, the wind rose in the evening and then with a terrific roar the tornado swooped down on the city. Twenty-two minutes later the hail poured down.

A freak accident occurred in the crash of one of the minarets. The stones fell upon a carriage, killing the two horses but not touching the occupants.

DIVER LOCATED WATERY GRAVE OF THE PINTHIS

SCITUATE, Mass., July 28—(AP)—The watery grave of the oil tanker Pinthis, which sank off here June 10 after a collision with the steamship Fairfax, in which 49 lives were lost, was found today about 400 yards north northwest of No. 4 gas buoy.

The ill-fated craft, a search for which had been conducted since Saturday in the interest of a New London, Conn., insurance company, was lying on its portside—the side that was struck by the Fairfax during a heavy fog. It was lying on a sandy bottom and had not exploded, according to Hubert Grove, diver employed by the insurance company.

The speed indicator on the tanker was set at half speed, Grove said. All the windows were broken. The foremast was split and the ship was in about 96 feet of water.

Two ghastly figures met his gaze, Grove said, as he was lowered to the Pinthis. He believed them to be the bodies of two of the crew which had no chance of escape. One of the bodies clothed in a white shirt and dungarees, was in an upright position tangled in a life line. The second body, clad in a dark suit, was lying on the floor of the porthouse.

FLOODS IN INDIA HAVE DEVASTATED WIDE AREA

KARACHI, India, July 28.—(AP) — The swollen waters of the great Indus river and its tributaries tonight drove to safety here and in Sukkur fifteen thousand refugees from the flooded upper Sind region.

Leaving behind devastated homes, the refugees poured by railroad and highway into the two cities. The flood waters were washing almost up to the embankment of the railway, their principal means of escape.

Shikarpur, a city of nearly 50,000 inhabitants, was in grave danger of being submerged.

Large forces of police were sent there and to other points in the danger zone to supervise strengthening the river and canal embankments along the Indus. Last night a canal was cut to relieve the flood pressure on the embankments of the Indus in the hope of saving Shikarpur.

Liberal Govt. Faces Defeat In Canada

[illegible]ONTO, Ont., July 28—(AP)—The [illegible] government of Premier Mac[illegible]ie King faced defeat tonight in [illegible]y returns tabulated in the Domin[illegible] election. The conservatives held 103 of the first 164 seats decided, a lead of 49 over the liberals, and party leaders feared this margin could not be overcome in later returns.

Two cabinet members were defeated and another was dangerously close to losing out as steady gains by the conservatives threatened to swing the power of government.

W. F. Kay, minister without portfolio, was defeated in Brome-Missisquoi, and A. A. Crerer, minister of railways, was vanquished in a three-cornered fight in Brandon.

The conservatives swept through the maritime provinces, their regular stronghold, and broke into the Quebec liberal block by capturing eight seats.

The re-election of R. B. Bennett, conservative leader and bitter opponent of the prime minister, was conceded in Calgary West.
ceded in Calgary west.

These losses, together with the defeat of the two ministers and further encroachments by the conservatives in the maritimes, gave their opponents a substantial lead.

Five cabinet members were returned to office, the early returns disclosed.

OPPONENT LEADS PRIME MINISTER MACKENZIE KING

STATE WIDE PRIMARY IN OKLAHOMA TODAY

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 28—(AP)—From the stump and through the microphone office seekers voiced today their final appeals to voters who at tomorrow's state wide primary begin selection of the men and women they desire to handle the reins of government in January.

Topheavy lists of candidates gave assurance of many contests on the democratic side in Oklahoma's initial runoff primary August 12. Nine candidates sought the party's nomination for governor, considered tantamount to election, and ten others made up a feverish race for the democratic senatorial nomination to oppose Senator W. D. Pine, whose nomination on the republican slate was seen as certain.

Election eve estimates were that close to 250,000 democrats would visit the polls. A much lighter republican vote is expected.

Speculation was rife among observers as to the way the wind would blow for picturesque W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, "people's candidate" for governor on the democratic slate. Murray has styled himself the "poor man's friend," promising, if elected, to inaugurate a "pay as you go" plan of state government and to inscribe a "welcome" on the gubernatorial door mat.

Murray, constitutional author and always a dominant figure in Oklahoma's chaotic 23 years of state politics, is back from an ill-fated attempt to establish an American colony on a 50,000 acre tract in Bolivia.

COOLING BREEZE BREAKS HEAT WAVE IN MIDDLE WEST

CHICAGO, July 28—(AP)—A cooling northwest breeze swept soothingly over the fevered middle west today, bringing temperatures down from the record heights that had caused a score of deaths, prostrations and crop damage in the last few days.

Illinois, which had 16 heat deaths over the week-end—ten of them in Chicago and its environs—continued warm, but found comfort in a promise of relief tonight. On the other hand, Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Iowa were breathing with less effort as the mercury dropped from yesterday's heights to the 80's and low 90's.

Des Moines, where the thermometer reached 106 Sunday, had only 80 today; while Omaha, prostrated under 108 degrees temperature yesterday, was comfortable today at 81; at Lincoln, Nebr., the thermometer declined from 108 to 75; at Sioux Falls, from 105 to 84 and at Sioux City, Iowa, from 104 to 77. Showers, cloudy skies and shifting winds brought similar experiences elsewhere.

BARBERS IN NEW YORK CITY DEMAND SHORTER WORK-DAY

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—New Yorkers may be forced into a tonsorial endurance contest by the ultimatum of 8,000 Broadway barbers.

These talkative fellows were telling their customers today that unless their working hours are adjusted satisfactorily by tomorrow night they will not lay razors to chin or shears to hair henceforth.

It isn't the wages, they said, but they have demanded shorter working hours on Saturdays and holidays and a vacation on Christmas, New Year's and Labor day.

BRITISH DIRIGIBLE IN FLIGHT FROM ENGLAND TO CANADA

The R-100 Started Air Voyage At 9.45 P. M., E. S. T.—The Dirigible Is 709 Feet Long and 133 Feet Wide—Has Cruising Radius of Between 4,000 and 6,000 Miles—There Are 44 Persons Aboard—Airship Carries 2,000 Pounds of Food and 500 Gallons of Water—Is Equipped With Long Wave Wireless Transmission and Long and Short Wave Reception.

CARDINGTON, England, July 29. (Tuesday)—(AP)—Britain's great new air liner R-100, making the first trans-Atlantic flight by British dirigible in eleven years, soared away from her mooring mast here at 3:45 a. m., Tuesday (9:45 p. m. E. S. T.), bound for Canada.

The start was without a hitch. The powerful Rolls-Royce engines began running soon after 3 a. m., and as the starting moment approached roared deafeningly.

Then with loud cheers from a crowd that for hours had stood about watching the preparations, the mooring ropes were cast off and the airship rose rapidly and set out for Liverpool.

From there she will fly north toward the Hebrides Islands, west of Scotland, avoiding a low pressure area north of Ireland. A cold, strong wind was blowing.

According to schedule, the R-100 should reach St. Hubert field, Montreal, early Friday morning.

As the big airship cast loose from her mooring mast, a cold, strong wind was blowing.

Everything went smoothly, however, and the R-100 soared rapidly and headed off for Liverpool and the Irish sea.

The actual route to be taken, it was said, would depend on the commander's discretion immediately before and during the actual flight. It was believed the conditions forecast indicated the northerly course would be followed—perhaps the Great Circle course—by way of the north of Ireland to a point south of Cape Farewell, Greenland, across Labrador and along the St. Lawrence river to the Saint Hubert air station at Montreal, approximately 3,385 miles.

England's most famous airship commander, Major G. H. Scott, was aboard but not in command. That responsibility will be devolve upon Squadron Leader R. S Booth, who has under him a crew of four officers and 32 men. Lieutenant Commander Sir C. Dennistoun Burney, director of the firm which constructed the R-101 is making the trip, as is also an admiralty observer, a meteorological officer and one or two others. The whole company, including crew, comprises 44 persons.

The 2,000 pounds of food carried will be divided into three days' ordinary rations and one day's reserve rations, with an added day's supply for an emergency. In the latter classification the surprisingly un-British item of chewing gum is listed.

There are 500 gallons of drinking and washing water on board. Meals will be served in the dining room, cooked in an emergency galley adjoining.

The airship is equipped for long wave wireless transmission, and long and short wave reception. The call signal is "F G A A V." The wave lengths were not disclosed because it was feared that wireless enthusiasts, principally amateurs, might attempt communication and interfere with weather and other routine messages.

A number of special experiments are to be made during the flight, the most remarkable of which will be an attempt to ascertain whether the upper air over the Atlantic ocean contains traces of vegetable organisms, living spores and other matter. This will be done by exposing special type glass dishes outside of the control car, the dishes to be treated with a substance upon which the organisms would be caught and colonized.

The R-100, which with the R-101, is the largest airship in the world, is 709 feet long and 133 feet wide. The R-101 is 724 feet long and slightly slimmer.

The R-100 was originally designed for the London-Egypt-India trade and is so constructed that its cruising radius should range between 4,000 and 6,000 miles. It can carry ten tons of freight in addition to 50 passengers.

It incorporates a design which seeks to diminish air resistance by including the passenger accommodation within the envelope. The volume of the gas-bags is 5,150,000 cubic feet, giving the ship a gross lift of 156 tons.

The last trip of a British dirigible across the Atlantic to the North American continent was in 1919, when the R-34 crossed the Atlantic ocean from Scotland to Mineola, N. Y., a distance of 3,200 miles, in 108 hours. She carried a crew of 31, including a stowaway. The return journey of about 3,000 miles was made in 79 hours.

The R-34 was the first craft of its kind to cross the Atlantic ocean. The R-34 had a cubic capacity of 1,960,000 feet, a length of 640 feet and gross lifting tonnage 59 and a half. The R-34 was wrecked in 1921 by a windstorm at Hamden which almost cut her in two.

Since the voyage of the R-34 to the United States, two other dirigibles have made the crossing, the ZR-3, now the Los Angeles, which was built in Germany and was flown to the United States by Dr. Hugo Eckener as part of the German war reparations to the United States, and the Graf Zeppelin, which has made several trips to America and one voyage around the world.

Elaborate preparations for communication by wireless with the R-100 have been made, both in Great Britain and in Canada, not only will there be direct communications with the airship and its bases but a constant exchange of information with the ship when in flight.

Direct communication will be maintained by St. Hubert field near Montreal and Cardington, England, the ship's home base. After passing mid-ocean, the airship will be in direct communication with the Canadian station at Louisburg, N. S.

Weather forecasts will be collected in Toronto and sent to the airship by the most direct method.

FOREIGNERS FLEE BEFORE COMMUNIST ARMIES IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, July 28.—(AP) —American, British and Japanese gunboats today gave refuge to foreigners who fled from Changsha as 10,000 communists overran the Hunan province capital, looting and burning.

Three American missionaries were among the few foreigners who remained within the walled city with 500,000 Chinese. The others hastily boarded the foreign warships in the Siang river.

Warned by renewed red activities in northern and eastern Hunan, foreign governments had dispatched warcraft to protect their nationals.

The nationalist government's garrison, weakened by transfer of troops to the Honan and Shantung provinces war fronts, was overpowered by the reds who swept over the city walls and poured through the gates.

Spawn of civil war which has wracked the province recently, the reds despoiled the city which a few weeks ago was captured by Kwangsi province rebels, who in turn were chased southward by nationalist armies.

In the adjoining province of Kiangsi, the important city of Nanchang was reported to have yielded to a communist army after a siege of many weeks. Three thousand refugees were said to have reached Kiukiang, Yangtse river port.

SLAYERS OF DETROIT RADIO ANNOUNCER ARE KNOWN

DETROIT, July 28—(AP)—The statement of Police Commissioner Thomas C. Wilcox that the slayers of Radio Announcer Gerald E. Buckley are known to the police, formed today's major development in Detroit's newest crusade against outlawry.

Commissioner Wilcox's cryptic remark that his officers knew the gunmen who early last Wednesday shot down the radio enemy of the underworld aroused considerable speculation. The commissioner added that the slayers weren ot yet under arrest and that he had nothing more to say.

Earlier in the day Commissioner Wilcox said his officers had made a "large number" of secret arrests but that these suspects would not be revealed unless some evidence could be found against them.

The police already are holding five men captured in a Grosse Pointe house yesterday while detectives and ballistic experts are trying to link them to the Bulkley slaying.

TO CAMPAIGN FOR RUN-OFF IN TEX. DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY

DALLAS, Tex., July 28—(AP)—Texas democrats today looked at the 65,441 lead Mrs. Miriam A. ("Ma") Ferguson, former governor and wife of a two-term governor, had run up over Ross S. Sterling wealthy Houston publisher, in last Saturday's primary and began forming alignments for the campaign leading to the run-off primary Saturday, Aug. 23, when the democratic nominee for governor will be chosen.

Thomas B. Love, Dallas lawyer and state senator, the first of the nine defeated candidates for the gubernatorial nomination to declare himself, announced he would support Sterling. Frank Putnam of Houston, "wet" candidate, said he would support Mrs. Ferguson, since Ferguson was "wet" although Mrs. Ferguson is a "dry." Dr. C. E. Walker stated Mrs. Ferguson would get his support as the "champion of the plain people."

Gov. Dan Moody, who defeated Mrs. Ferguson four years ago but who declined to run for a third term after Sterling announced, came out with a statement of support for Sterling.

READY TO REPORT ON SLAYING OF LINGLE

CHICAGO, July 28—(AP)—Investigators of the murder of Jake Lingle were ready tonight to "report progress" to the July grand jury.

While the jurors listened today to the last of a number of witnesses summoned to tell of alleged racketeering among other newspaper reporters and of the assassination of Lingle, the prosecutors in conference agreed to report the status of the murder inquiry to the grand jury if requested.

State's Attorney John A. Swanson announced after the conference that the jurors would be asked to express their wish. He said he would offer no objection if the jury desired to hear Charles F. Rathbun, Tribune attorney and chief of the Lingle murder investigators; James McShane, his assistant, and Patrick Roche, chief of the state's attorney's investigators.

TWO DIVORCES GRANTED AT SHORT COURT SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 28—A 15-minute special short calendar session of the Windham county superior court was held here this forenoon with Judge Edward M. Yeomans of Andover on the bench.

Two uncontested divorce cases were taken up, decrees being granted in each. In that of Bertha Duchesneau Shea vs. Martin F. Shea of this city, a case continued from one month ago for lack of complete evidence, an additional witness, L. A. Girouard of this city, was called upon to testify by Attorney Harry E. Gaucher for the plaintiff. Mr. Girouard testified that he had known the plaintiff and her mother, Mrs. Louise Duchesneau of 973 Main street, for some years and that for the past six years the plaintiff had lived with her mother and apart from the defendant. The court then granted the decree on the grounds of desertion. The custody of a child was also awarded to the mother.

In the divorce action of Lena Carmel of Brooklyn vs. William B. Carmel, now of parts unknown, Judge Yeomans granted a decree to the plaintiff on the grounds of desertion and allowed her to resume her maiden name of Lena Bonneau.

Three other cases were heard during the session. In the case of A. Macdonald, Jr., administrator et al vs. Howard R. Bullard et al, acceptance of return of sale by a committee in foreclosure proceedings with a supplemental judgment confirming the sale, ratifying the deed and distribution of proceeds, was accepted by the court. Mortgages held by the defendant, Helen F. Torrey, executrix, were ordered paid from the proceeds and the balance held for the defendant. Attorney Macdonald appeared for the administrator, Attorney M. S. Geissler of Putnam for the executrix and Attorney Telley E. Babcock of Norwich for Clara Bullard, connected with the case, which is of Putnam interest.

The application for discharge of the receiver and cancellation of his bond, in the case of N. Stuart Campbell et al vs. The National Rhea company of Putnam, was granted by the court. In the case of Anthony Wallow of Plainfield, an appeal from action by Highway Commissioner Macdonald in the matter of land used for highway purposes, a notice requested by Attorney E. S. Darbie, was granted by the court. Court was adjourned without date.

SELECTMEN SIGN CONTRACT FOR AUDIT OF TOWN BOOKS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 28—The signatures of the selectmen were affixed today to a contract with Walter A. Musgrave of Hartford and Danielson, certified public accountant, for an audit and examination of all town books and vouchers. Mr. Musgrave posted a bond of $10,000 with First Selectman William A. Buck and said that he would assign five or six accountants including himself, to the work which must be completed by November 15, according to the terms of the contract.

Today's action was the grand final to a "filibuster" that for nearly three months halted the efforts of a special citizens' committee to have such a contract signed. The auditor is to receive $2,000 in 30 days and a similar amount 30 days thereafter, the balance to be paid 10 days after the completed report of the accountant has been filed. The "signing of the contract" meeting was attended by First Selectman Buck, Second Selectman Jeremiah Healy and Third Selectman C. Arthur Kenney and Dr. George E. Wilcox and Henry A. Bugbee representing the citizens' committee which also included Attorney William A. Arnold, who was out of town today.

WESTERLY

CAPT. KENT'S FISHING BOAT WRECKED ON CATUMB REEF

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 28—Capt. John N. Kent, formerly of Newport, R. I., owner and skipper of the 40-foot power fishing boat Wood and Mack, lost his home when his boat drove hard and fast on Catumb reef about one and three-eighths miles southwest of Watch Hill light about 4:29 a. m. Monday. A bad hole was stove in the bow damaging the craft to such an extent that it was abandoned by the four men aboard. Later they were picked up by another fishing boat.

Capt. George W. Streeter and crew put off from the Watch Hill Coast Guard station about 5 a. m. Monday when the predicament of the fishing boat became known. On reaching the sunken boat, visible at low tide from Watch Hill point with its single mast and bowsprit, Capt. Streeter learned that the boat had put out from Stonington harbor for the fishing grounds early that morning. A blinker light, which has been seventh-eighths of a mile off Nepatree Point becoming loose had not been replaced by the government boat in charge of this service, but another blinker light, in range of the Napatree light had been placed on Catumb reef about two and a half miles from Stonington to act as a warning for Long Island sound steamers, and the light was reported by the pilot as being mistaken for the light off the Watch Hill bathing beach point, and as the boat was held on the course the pilot wondered at the length of time it took to reach the light in the early morning hours, when the boat crashed on the rocks almost without warning.

A second trip was made to the Wood and Mack by Capt. Streeter in the large Watch Hill coast guard boat and the crew assisted in stripping the fishing boat of all its loose equipment which was loaded on the fishing boat Edna L., Capt. Edward Diving of Stonington, and brought into Stonington harbor. This was not done until a representative of the Merritt, Scott, Chapman Wrecking Co. of New London, had visited the fishing boat fast on the reef on which it drove at low tide and found it would cost more to salvage the boat than it was worth.

The fishing boat was some twenty years old and represented a loss outside of salvaged material of some $1,500 and not covered by insurance. Capt. Kent had made his home for a number of years at Newport where he owned property which he later disposed of and made his boat his home, and runt out of Stonington to the fishing grounds for several seasons past. The boat was built at Friendship, Me., in 1910, with 13 foot beam and 6 foot draft and equipped with a 50 horsepower engine.

Robert Kamm, airplane pilot who has flown from the Atlantic Airport, Charlestown, R. I., was before Judge Oliver H. Williams in a special session of third district court on Monday afternoon charged with assault and battery. A plea of not guilty was entered and he was released in the sum of $1,000 bail for his appearance in the regular session of third district court on Friday, August 8th.

This is a train which many late passengers from Boston take to reach the beaches of Westerly and vicinity and also the one which Watch Hill cottagers take their departure for homes in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

FUNERAL.

James Birbeck.

At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon was held the funeral of James Birbeck, aged 64 years and former Westerly resident whose death occurred on Thursday, services being held from his late home on the Old Mystic road in North Stonington. They were conducted by Rev. Inor S. Partington, pastor of the North Stonington Congregational church.

Interment was at the Wheeler cemetery in North Stonington, where the committal service was also conducted by Rev. Mr. Partington. The bearers were Thomas, James and Frederick Birkbeck, James J. Doyle, Jr., and John and Raymond Schmitz.

R. J. Rooney, of 199 Canal street, aged 75 years, with barber shop in the Narragansett block on Main street, was before the Rhode Island State Barber Commission in Providence on Monday morning, having been summoned before that body for a hearing on charges of maintaining an unsanitary barber shop at 62 Main street in that town.

Mr. Rooney contended and submitted an affadavit that both the floors of his barber shop and the faces of his customers were sprayed with a more or less powerful solution of bicolorate of mercury and was certain there could not be many lurking germs.

He disagreed with members of the commission when they insisted that he must comply with the health laws by furnishing a clean towel for each customer. "I don't believe there is anything sanitary in putting a hot or cold towel on a man's face after shaving him," Mr. Rooney said. "It's liable to cause neuritis in the neck, or give a man a cold."

Joseph M. Caputti, secretary of the commission, retorted that while he had been a barber for 45 years and conducted a shop of his own for 36 years, he never knew of a man to suffer an attack of neuritis or a cold because of the application of a wet towel. "By this time every man in the state who goes to a barber shop should have neuritis," he said.

The commission deferred action, pending Rooney's compliance with the law, after Mr. Rooney said that he would make any adjustment in his shop which the commission demanded.

Clark street property owners appeared on Monday afternoon before the regular meeting of the highway commission relative to proposed plans for the widening and rebuilding of that street extending from Beach street at Peleg Clark hill, so-called to a point on the Pawcatuck river nearly opposite the William Clark mills of the American Thread company. While no positive or immediate action was taken there seemed to be a spirit on the part of some of the property owners not to part with their land for street widening unless they were re-imbursed.

DANIELSON

DECIDE STRANGE ANIMAL IS A REAL 'POSSUM

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 28—On the authority of County Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield, the strange animal that has been about Danielson for a fortnight and that has been the subject of so much publicity, is an opossum, considerable of a stranger to these parts, but to be found hereabouts, nevertheless, as previously testified by Henry Pray of Ballouville.

The subject is revived, for the little beast again has made an appearance, this time on Hawkins street. A small boy saw him up a tree, calmly surveying the youngster on the ground. A telephone call brought a state officer and Warden Daniels, who happened to be in town. With all the craftiness with which an opossum is accredited of possessing, he declined to be interviewed, and set forth for the topmost branches of the big maple in which he was discovered.

Getting him down or getting a shot at him was out of the question without going to much more trouble than it would be worth, so the opossum is still at large.

The animal is reported as being entirely harmless and nothing for anyone to worry about. Opossums are rare in eastern Connecticut, but Mr Daniels says he knows that there are at least several in this section.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Sarah Snow

This afternoon, upon the arrival of the body from New York, where funeral services were held, a short service for Mrs. Sarah Snow, 55, wife of Harry Snow, formerly of Danielson, was conducted by Rev. William Swainson of the Dayville Congregational church. Mrs. Snow died last Friday. The bearers were W. Dyke Cogswell, Charles Franklin, Fred Miller and Frank Spalding. A. F. Wood had charge of the arrangements. There was a wealth of beautiful boral pieces.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Snow is survived by her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Street of Dayville, by one brother, Oswald Street, of Danielson, and the following sisters: Mrs. Mary Joslin and Miss Maude Steet, Dayville; Mrs. Emily Whittemore, New York; Mrs. Ann Gross, Providence.

The following arrangement has been made for union services under the auspices of the Danielson Federation of Churches for Sunday evening services during the month of August: August 3, at the Westfield Congregational church, with Rev. C. J. Armstrong preaching; August 10, Methodist Episcopal church, with Rev. Mr. Armstrong preaching; August 17, Baptist church, with Rev. Albert Abbott preaching; August 24, Westfield Congregational church, with Rev. Mr Abbott preaching; August 31, Methodist Episcopal church, with Rev. Harding W. Gaylord preaching.

Berry-pickers Escape

Moosup berry pickers that invaded land purchased some time since by A. A. Tillinghast from Saad Brothers of Moosup were fortunate enough to escape prosecution in the town court on a legal technicality. The land in question is near South Killingly and the Moosup people ordered into court by a state officer.

It now develops that these people had permission from Saad Brothers to go picking berries where they were arrested, and it further develops that while Mr. Tillinghast purchased the land from Saad Brothers sometime since, and paid for it, he is not as yet the owner of record, no deed having been passed. Under the circumstances the Saad Brothers still hold title to the property and are the owners of record, so their permission given to the people in question to go berrying was valid.

County Game Warden Thomas Daniels and Deputy Warden George Laird of Putnam were engaged today in making a distribution of pheasants in territory in this and other sections of Windham county. The releases they made totaled 180 birds supplied by the state.

Quintet Miller, general secretary of the Connecticut Council of Religious Education, Hartford. The pastor, Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, will preach on Sunday, August 31.

This morning the funeral of Mrs. Katherine Kearney, 68, wife of James Kearney, was held from the home in Pomfret Landing with funeral services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at 9 o'clock. The officers of the solemn high mass of requiem were Rev. Ignatius Kost, the pastor Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Baldwin, M. S. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. The bearer were Hugh Kearney, John Lannon, Augustus Dick, Lawrence McCormack, Thomas McCormack, and Frank Noon. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. Kearney, a native of Ireland, had been a resident in Pomfret about 15 years. In addition to her husband she leaves two sons, Morley and James, and a daughter, Margaret.

He was taken there today by State Officer George Martin after an appearance before Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis in the town court. Rogers was apprehended driving the stolen car through Westbrook early Sunday morning.

PUTNAM

MISS BLANCHE LARIVEE BRIDE OF FRANCIS CARRON

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 28—Miss Blanche Larivee and Francis Carron, both of this city were married this morning at 7 o'clock at St. Mary's church by Rev. U. O. Bellerose. The nuptial mass was also sung by Father Bellerose. The couple were attended by Arthur Larivee, a brother of the bride, and Albert Champagne, the groom's brother-in-law. The bride wore a peach-colored georgette dress and silver slippers. She carried a bridal bouquet of pink roses and baby breath. For traveling she wore a tan ensemble. A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the groom on Main street. Miss Larivee has been employed at the Bloom company. Mr. Carron has accepted a position in New York and after a motor trip through the New England states the couple will make their home there. The bride formerly came from Canada and her parents are still living there. Her parents and a number of relatives were here from Canada for the wedding.

The work of laying the curbing on Mill street is practically finished. The curb will be of cement.

A novel debate was held last night at the Baptist church on Church street on the question, "Can the Prohibition Law be Enforced." Rev. E. C. Prettyman of New Haven, secretary of the Connecticut Temperance and Anti-saloon league took the negative side of the debate and William Pardee of Orange, Conn., took the affirmative. The debate was very interesting and held the interest of the audience from start to finish. The scene of the debate was supposed to be in the prosecuting attorney's office and Mr. Prettyman was the attorney. Mr. Pardee played the part of a citizen who wanted to know why the prohibition law was not being enforced. The attorney claimed that this was impossible because the people of the country would not cooperate and because of the big graft in the enforcement squads. Mr. Pardee came back with arguments showing that it could and told how. It was the opinion of the audience that Mr. Pardee was right and that he had proven it to the satisfaction of everyone. During the debate the latest arguments for and against the question were brought forward.

Arthur C. Kieth, A. D. McIntyre, Mrs. Archibald MacDonald, Jr. and Mrs. J. Dyer Potter, who have been in Bridgeport attending the state convention of the American Legion, returned to Putnam yesterday. Rev. James English, of Manchester, N. H., who was until recently pastor of the Second Congregational church of this city, delivered a sermon in one of the Hartford churches Sunday. In another church in Hartford, Rev. William English of Chicago was preaching at the same time. There were a few people who went to Hartford to hear Rev. James English give his sermon and they report that the sermon was very good and was enjoyed by all of the congregation. The English brothers and their families have been spending their vacations at the Welles summer home in Saybrook.

By the defeat of St. Joseph's, the Z. P. R. K. are practically assured of the pennant in the Southern New England league. The Silk Sox are practically out of the running now as they were defeated by the Slater team yesterday by the score of 8 to 7 in a ten inning game. It seemed yesterday that Putnam was off to a sure win when they scored six runs off the Webster hurlers in the first frame but the only other run that they could score was a home run in the sixth by Hayden Franklin, the Putnam pitcher. The team from Webster tied the score in the eighth inning at seven all and then scored two runs in their half of the tenth. There were two Putnam men on bases when Weiss flied out to Forand for the final out of the game.

A MAKE-BELIEVE DIVER INTERRUPTS BALL GAME

A new sort of endurance test, Sunday afternoon, at Ashland bathing beach, interrupted the interest that should have been given undividedly to the ball game being played on the park diamond. Out upon the top diving board of the swimming float stepped a fair fairy, not fat and some under forty. Her green bathing suit, some said it was blue, was of the pocket-book O. P. variety. Some kid, who should be instructed about such breaks, shouted: "Oh! look at the big dive!" One looked, then another, until the ball game was forgotten, everybody looked, and looked and then some more. Visions of the big 30-foot plunge were soon to be realized, but they were not. The umpire shouted, "three strikes," "four balls," "foul," batter" out, but the fair Venus just teetered; then, when all eyes were bugged out like hat racks, that girl just climbed down the ladder and jumped off the float only a foot above the water.

LAWYER BURNHAM'S CANE HELPED WARM WHITING SHOP

A one-time native of Jewett City, who has not visited his home town for many years, was a caller in the borough Monday. Among other men who have long since passed on, he inquired about Henry H. Burnham and Edwin W. Whiting, who have been dead for years. "Forty-five years ago," he recalled, "Ed. Whiting kept a little store where the Brioux block now stands. Mr. Burnham, an attorney of note, lived here, maintaining a law office in the one-time Bulletin building on Main street in Norwich. Every morning it was Henry's custom to stop into Mr. Whiting's store and read The Bulletin before taking the nine o'clock train for Norwich. Just as regularly, every morning, Mr. Whiting cleaned out his stove, placing the ashes in a tin pail in the corner near the wood box. Mr. Burnham always carried a cane, the valued gift of some revered ancestor. While reading the store-keeper's Bulletin, he always set his cane up in the pail of ashes. One morning, Uncle Edwin loaded the pail with live hickory coals, which he carefully covered with dead ashes. The legal visitor arrived as usual, stuck his cane up in the ashes pail, and sat down to peruse the morning paper. Some few drifted in to await developments. Before long, Henry, declaring that he smelled smoke, glanced over toward the stove. There stood his cane, turning like a bonfire torch. Mr. Burnham's stock expression, to be used only in cases of extreme necessity, was 'God zounds'. He said that, and then certain other things. Mr. W. declared there was no charge, adding that he believed as how steady lodgers should help some in keeping the place warm. A coolness between the learned lawyer and the storekeeper is said to have lasted for years."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Farmer Brown's Boy Is Called Home

The fun that doth to anger lead
Becomes a sorry thing indeed.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy and Farmer Brown himself were at work in the cornfield. Jim Crow was sitting on a fence-post. He was watching them work and to hear him talking Crow-talk, you might have thought that he was bossing the job. By and by the sound of a horn reached them. It came from the house. It was a signal. It was the signal Mother Brown always uses when she wants Farmer Brown or Farmer Brown's Boy to come up to the house

"Run along up and see what your mother wants," said Farmer Brown.

Farmer Brown's Boy put his hoe against the fence and started up the Long Lane on his way up to the house. Jim Crow flew over and alighted on Farmer Brown's Boy's shoulders. So presently they reached the barnyard. Jim Crow flew around back of the barn. Farmer Brown's Boy was very much surprised when he opened the door and caught a glimpse of Mother Brown's face. He knew at once that something had disturbed her very much indeed. He couldn't remember when he had seen his mother look quite so provoked.

"Where's that Crow!" snapped Mother Brown.

"I don't know," replied Farmer Brown's Boy. "He rode up from the cornfield on my shoulder; so he is somewhere around."

"Look at that wash!" commanded Mother Brown.

Farmer Brown's Boy looked at the clothes-basket once more piled high with snowy linen. "Well," said he, "what of it?"

"This is the second time these clothes have been washed this morning," declared Mother Brown, "and all on account of that pesky bird of yours."

You should have seen the look on Farmer Brown's Boy's face. He blinked, quite as if he didn't understand what his mother was saying. "What has my Crow got to do with your washing?" he demanded.

"Everything!" retorted his mother. "This washing has been out on the lines once and when my back was turned that Crow pulled every clothespin and dropped the wet clothes on the ground. What is more, he stole the clothespins and that is why I've called you. I can't hang clothes out without clothespins and I have only half a dozen left."

Jim Crow was sitting on a fence post

"But how do you know it was the Crow? Did you see him?" Farmer Brown's Boy asked.

"No, I didn't see him!" snapped Mother Brown. "But no one else would have taken those clothespins."

"But," protested Farmer Brown's Boy, "he went down with me to the cornfield this morning and he came back with me; so how could he have pulled your clothespins?"

"That bird has a perfectly good pair of wings," replied Mother Brown. "Probably he flew up there and then flew back down to the cornfield without your knowing it. You can depend upon it, that pesky bird is responsible. I have stood for a lot of his mischief, but this is too much. Now, you go look for those clothespins."

Farmer Brown's Boy didn't know what to say. He wanted to laugh. Yes, sir, he actually wanted to laugh. He was sorry for his mother and he was sorry that she had all that extra work to do; but the funny side of it struck him and he wanted to laugh. He didn't quite dare do it, however, in the presence of his mother. He knew well enough that she would be ready to laugh herself by and by, but he also knew that she didn't feel like laughing then. So he went out to look for Jim Crow. He had an idea that if he could find Jim Crow he would find the clothespins.

HEBRON

Homer Hills, while stowing hay, Wednesday, in Wilbur N. Hill's barn, cut his right hand badly when the high hay fork came back from lifting the hay on the mow. Mrs. Winthrop S. Porter, his sister, drove Mr. Hill to Dr. Cyrus E. Pendilton, at Colchester, who dressed the cut. The hand is healing slowly.

Eleven members of the Young Women's club and 17 guests, including Boy Scout members, Troop 82, hiked over H. Clinton Porter's land to Buster Cummings' log cabin and held a dog roast. At the roll call, members and visitors told good, true dog stories. The leader was Mary B. Cummings. The afternoon was made pleasant for the members of the club by boys of Scout Troop 82, who cut sticks for the frankforts to roast and built the fire, cut wood for fire, and took charge of the fire, and helped in anyway and anywhere needed. Cake and soda water were served. The next meeting will be held August 7, at Lake Terramugus, Marlborough and club families will be invited. The refreshments committee is Mrs. Ruby Gibson, Mrs. Ethel Hilding, Miss Clara Ellis and Mrs. Annie Smith. The members will meet at 2 o'clock. (D. S. T.).

The Hebron - Gilead - Colchester singers held a rehearsal of Gaul's "Holy City" in the parish room of the Congregational church, Hebron, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The conductor was George Curtis Munson, of Hartford, with Mrs. William O. Seyms, of Colchester, accompanist. These singers are to form a part of the chorus of 400 or more voices, which are to give their work sometime in the fall at the Bushnell Memorial celebration, Hartford, with orchestral and organ accompaniment.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

There can be no question now that so far as Norwich is concerned, Norma Shearer and Marie Dressler have scored their greatest triumphs in "Let Us Be Gay," the romantic comedy which has been playing at the Palace theater since Sunday and attracting great crowds. Both the plot and the cast of this film are so good that it is difficult to find words to talk about them.

This is the story of "Let Us Be Gay." Kitty Brown is the wife of Cortland Brown. She is happy, has two children and a good social position. Then slander and scandal strike at her with their loathsome talons. She finds strong ground for believing that her husband has been unfaithful to her, and, as a result, there is a divorce.

WILLIAM POWELL

For three years she travels. She turns into Mrs. Cortland Brown, charming divorce, whose face and figure and ravishing manner captivate everyone who comes into contact with her. Her ex-husband, of course, knows nothing about this change that has come over her.

In the meantime the husband has become enamored of a girl whose grand mother happens to be a friend of Kitty's. The mother does not know Kitty is the divorced wife of Brown, so she calls upon Kitty to come and vamp the man and take him away from her granddaughter. How the plot works out provides one of the most screamingly funny entertainments that it has ever been Norwich's good fortune to see.

Beginning Thursday the Palace will present William Powell and the famous slinky-eyed vamp, Kay Francis, in the powerful new love drama, "For the Defense."

Broadway Theatre

Grim prison rioting; men herded like beast in a house of hate, young prisoners educated in crime by hardened offenders; a sensational jailbreak quelled by army tanks and dynamite. These are among the sensational elements of "The Big House," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of prison life, which closes a four-day engagement at Warner's Broadway today.

Chester Morris, of "Alibi," "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," and other hits; Wallace Beery, of "Old Ironsides" and "The Sea Hawk," and Robert Montgomery, who won honors in "So This Is College" and "The Divorcee," play the three principal male roles as cellmates in the prison, Beery playing Butch, gangster; Morris, Morgan, forger and crook, who finds regeneration in the riot and through love, and Montgomery, Kent, a youth sent to prison as the result of an auto accident, and who, herded with the older convicts, eventually becomes worse than they.

A $7,000,000 span at Vicksburg, Miss., is the only one to bring the Mississippi south of Memphis.

ELECTION IN CANADA

The election contest waged in Canada on Monday, in which the liberal government under Premier W. L. Mackenzie King was seeking a continuation of the long period in which it has been in power contains much of interest to this side of the border.

The liberals are standing for a system of duties against American imports as a means of retaliation in those commodity classes which are adversely affected by our new tariff on these articles when exported from Canada into the United States. This means that if the United States puts new taxes upon Canadian butter, eggs and meat, Canada will levy taxes of similar volume upon American butter, eggs and meat. And in addition the American export trade into Canada would be hit by Premier King's preferance plan for British manufactured goods over those of manufactured goods of other nations.

On the other hand the Canadian conservative party regards the imperial preference plan as futile and quotes Mr. Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer in the British cabinet, to that effect. Mr. Snowden considers that British trade with the dominions has reached the saturation point, and says that supporters of the preference plan fail to see that there is no possibility of any considerable increase within a reasonable time. But the conservatives have another weapon of offense against United States manufacturers for they are arguing for a much higher protective system against all Canadian imports, thus striking at the United States beyond the measure of the countervailing duties set up by the Mackenzie King administration.

Our export trade will fare better if the liberals are returned to power in spite of the countervailing duties and a possible imperial preference. These are lesser evils for us than the tariff barrier which the conservatives propose to erect.

RAILROADS AND MOTORS

Because the operation of motor vehicles in conjunction with steam or electric service is recognized as of increasing growth and importance, questions are being circulated among the railroad officials of the country that are intended to draw out information bearing upon the relations that should exist between steam and electric lines on the one hand and motor bus and motor truck lines on the other. The object of the inquiry is to furnish the interstate commerce commission, as well as the railroads, with a basis for judicious regulation when the railroads turn to motorized service as an adjunct to their other transportation activities.

The commission has set August 15 as the date by which it expects to have the replies to its questions in hand, and railroad executives have shown their appreciation of the need of adequate information on the subject by the responses they are making.

Operation of busses by railroads antedates motor truck operation by these agencies. Recently the interstate commerce commission has been called upon to pass upon two or three important applications for the privilege of operating railroad-owned busses and trucks in the heart of New York city. A new type of service competition is developing among the carriers, and the commission wishes to devise regulations for such services before they assume unmanageable proportions.

The problem of adjusting the services of motor busses and motor trucks to the needs of steam and electric carriers is as fascinating as it is important and complex. The interstate commerce commission is wise in attacking it in earnest and in seeking to build up a system of regulation gradually and experimentally.

ITALY AND TRAGEDY

The magnitude of the Italian earthquake disaster is revealed in increasing volume as further details are received, but Italy is proceeding to care for the thousands of earthquake victims with an outward display of serenity unusual under such circumstances. It is not that the Italian people are by nature more composed in facing wholesale tragedy than other populations. In fact the contrary might be said to be true, but the explanation may be that the imminence of one kind of peril through the centuries has created a spirit of resignation towards it. That is an observation applicable to many lands and many nationalities.

The life of parts of Italy has been one long historic record of seismic and volcanic disturbances. Especially is this true south of Rome. Pompeii and Herculaneum, buried in volcanic ashes and lava in A. D. 79 are familiar examples. Vesuvius, Etna and Stromboli are ever-present threats, which boil and bubble intermittently, while recollection is still fresh of the great Messina earthquake of 1908, when 100,000 people were killed, as many more injured, and the homes of one million people wiped out. Another serious earthquake in the central area of Italy in 1915 brought death to 30,000.

Nevertheless the zones where grave peril has been shown to exist continue to be occupied and developed much as before after each of nature's rampages. The country's density of population doubtless contributes to this condition, but psychologists would probably hold congestion lesser influence than that familiarity with hazards has become a fixture in the consciousness of survivors.

TREE-SITTING FOLLY

Every once in a while it seems there is an outbreak of some new folly, which at the present time has taken the form of tree-sitting and has gripped those of juvenile age especially. One cannot meditate on this latest crazy outbreak without being carried back in thought to the middle ages when craze after craze swept over Europe in the most astonishing way, such as that which led to the Children's Crusade, as mad an enterprise as was ever undertaken. Without radios, telephones, telegraph, railroads or newspapers, country after country was swept by these crazes as by a contagion, though it might have been thought that no country would have known what was going on even immediately across its own frontiers.

It is something to our credit that though we have facilities of communication not dreamed of even a hundred years ago, our crazes rarely have such a sweep as they had in the old days, but are largely sporadic. But in the present case it is the circulation of the news of the tree sitting craze that has spread the contagion while at the same time it carries condemnation and ridicule of the folly.

For folly it is and nothing more. There is nothing worth while to be gained by it, no excellence to be proved, no victory to be won that amounts to anything. One wonders, as is so often the case, what the parents of these children are thinking of. They too seem to be stricken with the madness. The question is not so much whether the children will be harmed as to what heights or depths silliness can reach. For the good of would-be participants it is full time to put a stop to a folly of which it is hard to understand why it should ever have begun.

A MILLIONAIRE HOBO

James Eads How, who died last week at Staunton, Va., was given the contradictory title of "the millionaire hobo," a sobriquet that could hardly be considered without a smile. It was a funny idea that the heir to a large estate, the grandson of the builder of the Eads bridge at St. Louis and the Eads jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi, the possessor of a degree of doctor of medicine, a student at Harvard and at Oxford, should have refused to live in a rich home, and should have made over all his income to an association of hoboes. It was equally funny that his wife, who thought she could "reform" him, sued for divorce after he had tried to "reform" her by making her into a hobo.

But in truth there was nothing humorous about James Eads How and his ideas. He and his philosophy did not coincide along money lines with the notions that govern the majority of us. He did not believe in enjoying inherited wealth—money which he had not earned; so as fast as it came to him he gave it away. Asked to justify his mode of life he answered: "Read the Sermon on the Mount." By many he was thought crazy.

He was a hobo but he was not a tramp for he insisted that there is a distinction. The tramp is a wanderer who won't work. The hobo works while he wanders, and it was the lot of this class that How tried to lighten by establishing cheap lodging houses. He earned his way like other hoboes, peeling potatoes, washing dishes or doing such other chores as fell in his way. There was nothing fastidious about James Eads How.

He lived his life according to his conscience, and doubtless got as much out of living in his own way as he would if he had joined a score of exclusive clubs, played golf, studied the markets, and spent his winters in the luxury of some sunny clime.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The Samoan commission, appointed by the president and of which Senator Bingham is chairman, plans to leave for its tour of inspection of the islands about the first of September. It had been expected the commission would sail in July or August, but the extra session of the senate prevented.

The purpose is to get first hand information of the conditions and needs of the Samoan islands, report to the president, and later bring the matter before congress. Mr. Bingham is chairman of territories and insular affairs and moreover is entirely familiar with the people and activities of the people of the islands and of the Far East. Probably no senator has the personal experience in dealing with such matters, as has Mr. Bingham so the senate appointed him chairman of the committee, and the president selected him as chairman of the commission to make the trip of investigation, and to head the committee which will report its findings and make a recommendation to the president of the course of action to be followed.

On the committee with Mr. Bingham are three other senators, and several members of the house. The commission is entirely non-partisan in its make up, and will be back to the United States in time for the opening of the regular session of congress, December 1st.

With the official weather bureau record of four successive days when the mercury ranged from 100 to 106 in the shade out at the observatory on Georgetown Heights and at least ten degrees higher in the down town section of Washington, Washington folk and the senate still carried on, although reports show many prostrations by heat, of the women workers in the various government departments.

Heads of departments tell how overcrowded were the emergency rooms in those great buildings where the sun poured down with an intensity rare even in that humid and hot city.

Notwithstanding the terrific heat, the senate managed to maintain a quorum until the London treaty was ratified.

Probably no situation in the past exactly paired off with it. Many a time extraordinary means have been resorted to to maintain a quorum but never had the weather taken a part in it as was the case this time.

Once, during the Wilson administration, when something concerning the shippings interests, the merchant marine or something of that sort was before the senate and violent opposition developed, all night session had been resorted to, till the senators were worn to a frazzle, and one night took French leave, almost in a body. Quorum calls every few minutes made the sergeant at arms earn his salt, in early morning hours.

Cots had been put up, for there were many all night sessions, and party and faction leaders stood by till ready to drop. Senators, not responsible for legislation, took the bits in their teeth and skipped home, leaving messages at hotel offices or with their own household: "Under no circumstances am I to be called or disturbed by anyone." As a result night clerks at hotels held fast to the "do not disturb" orders, and members of families glibly replied: "The senator is not at home."

Then the late Senator Brandagee of Connecticut had an inspiration. The sergeant at arm was instructed to "arrest all absentees" and set about his job. Then Senator Brandagee recalled that at least a dozen absent senators lived in one of the big down town hotels, and that the only woman member of the press gallery also lived there. Even though a senator was not to be called to the phone, the woman writer would answer. And she did.

Mr. Brandagee called her at 3 in the morning: "Go wake up Senators Page and Dillingham of Vermont, Overman of North Carolina, Clark of Arkansas," and he added the full list of those living at the hotel. "Tell them they must get up and come a'-running to make a quorum. Don't take no for an answer," he commanded, "tell them taxies are on the way to get them. You beat it! There isn't a moment to be lost."

A moment later, in bath robe and slippers the only woman of the gallery might have been seen furtively "beating it" through the half darkened corridors of the big hotel, trying to evade night watchmen, as she knocked on the doors of rooms where senators were calmly sleeping, only to hear growling voices demand: "What's the matter? Let me alone"; only to see disheveled heads cautiously peek out of half opened doors; only to have bitter and indignant reproach fired at her. And never in all the world will she tell to what specific section of the world to come, some of those sleepy and care-worn senators assigned her, and suggested that instead of making that fearsome journey along, the senate go along too.

But the plan worked; taxies hummed at the hotel entrance and enough grumbling, sleepy, protesting senators responded to make up the quorum and the situation was saved.

The next day that press gallery woman strutted 'round quite chesty over having served as an emergency squad of one, for the senators who had consigned her to worse than oblivion the night before now patted her on the back and pinned a feather in her cap.

Just as there is a gleam of hope that the senate may be relieved, through possible failure of re-election, from listening to the daily tirades and continuous harangues of Senator Tom Heflin, who prides himself on being "an Alabama Hill-Billy" up pops another would-be-senator of the "Proud-to-be-a hill-billy" man down in Louisiana, who is trying to win the seat of Senator Ransdell, a candidate for re-election and who has long filled the seat with wisdom ability and dignity. The new aspirant is Gov. Long, who recently gained much publicity from the way he received formal official calls from a German naval commander, and a few days later, from a hotel general of the United States army.

Each official called by previous appointment, to pay respects to the governor of the state, as is the custom of visiting officials. The governor received the German commander, when dressed only in pajamas and bedroom slippers; when the general paid his visit the governor met him in his sleeping room, clad only in underwear. If elected to the senate, what he might wear, or fail to wear, becomes a matter of painful conjecture.

Statistics recently published show that it cost $4,000,000 more to attempt to enforce the prohibition laws in 1929 than in the year previous. Washington "repeal" folks are making the most of the added statements, that the Volstead act and the 18th amendment last year caused a total loss of national revenue amounting to $959,872,870. And the prohibition folk counter with "Well, what of it." We shall hear a lot about it when the regular session convenes in December, and congress begins to talk all over again, on controversial topics.

Henry S. Graves, former chief forester of the United States and now dean of the Yale Forestry school, is urging a new public land policy be adopted by which abuse of public grazing lands may be abolished. He brings in the matter of erosin, and evidently advocates a sort of forest conservation applied to public lands.

A DEEP, DARK SECRET

Joan, seated on the top step of the porch, looked up from the letter which she had been reading so avidly and fixed Mr. James Westcott with a puzzled stare.

"Uncle Jim," she demanded, "what secrets are you and Phil carrying around on your consciences?"

Mr. Westcott looked his surprise over the top of his newspaper.

"He adds a postscript to his letter," Joan amplified, "to say, 'Tell Mr. Westcott I'll never tell.' Now what does that mean?"

"You amaze me, Joan," her Uncle Jim told her exaggeratedly, "to intimate that I should tell you something that Phil won't! Far be it from me to break up such a love affair."

"As if you could," smiled Joan.

Uncle Jim was a great old tease, but nevertheless Joan wondered what it was all about.

"All right, Smarty," he said as he retired behind his paper, "you'll be sorry."

But before it was over they were both sorry.

Joan was pensive during luncheon, and when Uncle Jim tried to cheer her up, perhaps a bit too gravely, she feigned touchiness.

"What's the matter with you two?" Mrs. Westcott wanted to know. And before Joan had a chance to open her mouth Mr. Westcott explained that Phil had done something he was ashamed of and then very foolishly let Joan know just enough to arouse her suspicions."

"Well, what has he done?" Mrs. Westcott asked, and Joan smiled, thinking her Uncle Jim was caught.

But he only said, "He doesn't want me to tell, of course."

Phil's daily letter arrived that morning on schedule, but Joan, avoiding the porch where her Uncle Jim sat, took it to her room. It was just another precious letter with no hint of a secret.

At luncheon that day, when Mr. Westcott asked Joan if Phil had confessed, she had to force a smile with her "No, are you going to?"

Her Aunt Ruth was watching her quizzically and it made her feel uncomfortable.

At dinner Mr. Westcott's contribution to her growing unrest was to ask if there wasn't a former sweetheart of Phil's living in Chicago.

Her nerves were a bit jangled next morning from loss of sleep, which state of affairs was augmented considerably by Mr. James Westcott remarking that here was another week-end and no Phil in sight.

And then the postman failed to bring a letter!

Joan shed a few tears while she made her bed, but, looking into the mirror, she called herself a silly fool. It was disheartening, though. No mail delivery on Saturday afternoons, so one couldn't tell until Monday what had happened to delay that letter. And there were such delightful things to do with one's week-ends in Chicago. Oh, why had she come way down here to spend her summer vacation?

And then at luncheon Mr. Westcott proceeded to precipitate a crisis. He said: "Think, Joan. Have you ever written or said anything to Phil that he might tell? Might make fun of?"

That was too much. Of course she had; foolish, endearing, secret things that sweethearts say to each other, but which one must never, never tell. What had Phil told Uncle Jim? Oh, the shame of it all.

Joan's face was flaming and her heart was pounding. Her chair fell over with a crash and away she flew to throw herself across her bed and bury her face and sob.

Uncle Jim followed her and tried to stroke her hair, but she shrugged him angrily away. Then he sat down on the edge of the bed and held her hand tight, and said, "Listen; silly child, I'm going to tell you all about it. Do you remember two weeks ago when I went on that three-day fishing trip? And you gave me a letter to mail? Well, I forgot to mail it until I started back home. So I wrote Phil a note on the back of the envelope. Told him the letter was written on time; that it was all my fault; but not to tell on me. Do you see now?"

Joan felt immensely foolish and twice that happy. She put her arms around Mr. Westcott's neck and with her tear-stained cheek next to his she whispered in his ear, "Uncle Jim, you're the meanest man in the world."—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 28—What appeared as one of the neatest bits of practical politics among house members at the close of the session, from which the vast majority of them turned to seek re-election, was contributed by Louis Ludlow, of the seventh Indiana (Indianapolis) district.

He had 25 or more years of Washington press gallery experience to form the foundation of his poltical career. And Ludlow has not been wasting the experience thus gained.

As a new minority member, and not a very talkative one on the floor, he has managed to have a considerable hand in legislation, particularly when it came to getting things done for the home town.

Like dozens, perhaps all of his house colleagues, Ludlow saw extraordinary political possibilities in the extensive program of veteran relief legislation which played so important a part in the session just ended.

Like so many of them, also, he thought it desirable to have a sort of report on the share he had had in shaping those bills incorporated in official proceedings so it was mailable under his frank.

The mails are going to be flooded with such matter from now to election time.

But of all the dozens or perhaps hundreds of such excerpts from the Congressional Record which have gone out to voters in congressional districts, or are destined to be mailed, Ludlow's is in a class by itself.

For it alone contains a blank form application to be filled out by any war veteran beneficiary of new legislation in his district. Every such veteran in the seventh Indiana district is invited to fill it out, and mail it to Representative Ludlow.

"I will deliver it to the director of the Veterans Bureau with an expression of my interest and my hope that he will take whatever steps are necessary for early adjudication," is the assurance Ludlow sent along to every World war buddy of the seventh Indiana.

Ludlow is perfectly frank about it. He made his accompanying exposition of new veteran legislation very brief and understandable, and added that he was "by unanimous consent of the house, using the instrumentalities of the Congressional Record to assist the sick and disabled veterans of my congressional district."

Dozens of his house colleagues, when they note what a practical and effective way the Indiana member had evolved for doing just that, probably will kick themselves for having failed to think of it before the Record for the session was closed against them.

YOUR HEALTH

The Physical Basis Of Mental Health

By J. Mace Andress, Ph. D., Newtonville, Mass.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Among the Greeks and Romans physical fitness was a national ideal, and their tacit assumption that a good physical body was the foundation of an efficient mind has the support of modern science. So let us note the direct connection between physical and mental well-being.

Bodily energy is required for three distinct tasks (1) heating the body; (2) muscular and vital processes; (3) mental activity. Scientists tell us that the normal body generates about 3400 foot pounds of energy from the digestion of food and from the oxygen extracted from the air. About 2840 pounds are used each day simply to maintain the heat of the body. This means that only 560 foot pounds remain in reserve for carrying on muscular, vital, and mental processes of daily living—a definitely limited supply.

Now part of this needed reserve may be lacking. The malnourished child, for example, may not be eating food enough to provide much more heat than is necessary to keep the body warm and the vital organs at work. Consequently, there is little energy left for other things. This means a feeling of fatigue, lack of interest, and failure. Then there is the child who gets enough to eat but is suffering from eye strain and spends so much energy in seeing that he lacks enough for satisfactory and happy thinking. Again, many children do not get enough sleep and rest, and so do not build up much or any of the needed surplus above body requirements. Such children are incapable of good mental effort. The energy is not there.

Other children may build up part of all of the reserve but are allowed to engage in active play and go to the movies until they use it all up, and so are bankrupt when occasions for mental activities arrive.

Mental health means that one must have a fair share of the 560 foot pounds of energy to draw on if he is to prosecute his tasks successfully and with a feeling of physical well-being and enthusiasm. And nature provides enough if proper food and adequate sleep are the rule; if proper personal hygiene and healthy play, but not an excess of it, are practiced; if the necessary reserve is not dissipated by excesses of physical effort.

Increasingly we are coming to understand that a surplus of physical energy is necessary for successful living—and success is the foundation of mental health.

Stories That Recall Others

Speaking Out of Turn

Aunt Sally, age ninety-four, was preparing for bed when the sound of men's voices in a front room startled her. "It must be burglars," she whispered, and she quickly dressed.

Entering the living room, she failed to find any intruders. A quick glance toward a cabinet in one corner caused her to remark: "Aw, it's only the radio!"

Only Two Quarts

Billy, age seven, had been very ill. The doctor had been called. Evidently the cause of the illness had been too many cherries. A large cherry tree, full of ripe cherries, had been too tempting in spite of mother's frequent words of caution.

The doctor, who was a great friend of Billy's, said jokingly:

"How many cherries do you think you ate, Billy?"

"O, I don't know," groaned Billy.

"Well, about how many?" asked the doctor.

"Well," said Billy hesitatingly, "I think that I ate about enough for two pies—about two quarts, I guess."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

R. Wallace & Sons Mfg. Co. Wallingford, Connecticut

Ninety-four years ago, or to be exact, on June 2, 1835 a very important branch of the silverware business, which has helped to make America the commercial leader of the world, was born in a little factory which had originally been constructed as a mill in Cheshire. Robert Wallace, father of this mammoth part of the industry, then only 20 years of age, fashioned the first nickel metal spoon to be made in America.

It was in 1833 that young Wallace really started this manufacture of spoons but then he made only pewter or Britannia spoons. Then in 1835 a customer showed the young man a spoon made of a very durable metal, new to both of them. Wallace immediately sought out the chemist who brought a bar of this metal from Germany, induced him to sell it and immediately had it rolled in one of the mills in Waterbury and set about hammering out the first nickel metal spoons. As it neither corrodes nor rusts, nickel metal makes an ideal base for plated ware, now the greatest factor in the silver industry.

R. Wallace and Sons in Wallingford ranks with the very best in the manufacture of the finest Sterling holloware dresser silver and flatware and also hotel and plated flatware and holloware.

The present officers are: F. A. Wallace, president; C. D. Morris, vice president, assistant treasurer, and general manager; W. L. Glenn, 2d vice president; C. W. Leavenworth, treasurer; Herbert Foster, secretary; Roland G. Hall, assistant superintendent.

WILLIMANTIC PASTOR PAYS AUTO LAW FINE

Rev. George B. Williams, 38, pastor of a Negro church at Willimantic told the city court at Middletown, Monday, when charged with disregard of a traffic signal and driving without a license that he had not had money enough to pay for an operator's license. He said the contributions of his parishioners lately had been so meager that he had had little cash.

Williams made this explanation after pleading guilty to the charges and asking for lenience. It was shown that the clergyman had been driving for some time without a license.

A fine of $2 actual costs was imposed, and after digging down and bringing up a dollar bill and two half dollars to meet the fine, Williams said that if it had been 15 cents more he could not have paid.

COLCHESTER BOY BADLY HURT IN ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

COLCHESTER, July 28.—Joseph Rutka, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Rutka, of Colchester, is reported in a serious condition at the Hartford hospital as the result of a bad automobile accident on the Colchester-Norwich road about 5.30 o'clock this afternoon. The accident happened a short distance east of the J. J. Sullivan farmhouse about 100 feet west of the Colchester-Lebanon town line. Rutka was driving his father's new Ford truck, loaded with ice, toward Bozrahville to make his daily ice deliveries. With his in the truck was Mortimer Krupnic, son of Mrs. Krupnic, of Lebanon avenue, this place.

It is understood that Rutka's truck was traveling at about 35 miles an hour, behind another machine, when suddenly the car in front turned to the left to pass a horse and wagon. Rutka did not see the other driver make a signal to turn and he, at the same time, attempted to pass the other machine. In so doing he is thought to have lost control of the truck, which ran head-on into a telephone pole, breaking it squarely in two and smashing seven lengths of state highway railing. The truck landed on its side with one of the large 4x4 railing timbeds rammed clear through the hood by the side of the engine, and up to the back of the seat. Cakes of ice were strewn in all directions. Krupnic crawled from the wreckage with difficulty and pulled Rutka out from where he was wedged under the steering wheel.

Constable Jerome J. Sullivan, whose home is only a few hundred feet from the scene, was quickly on the spot and carried the Rutka boy to the Rutka home on North Main street, here. Dr. Edward J. Howland was called and finding hi min a serious condition, he was at once taken to the Hartford hospital. Krupnic sustained bad cuts on the face and legs but otherwise was thought to be unhurt. The Ford truck wa ssaid to be practically a total loss. The radiator wass mashed, wheels, fenders and front axle badly twisted and the engine was also badly damaged. The horse and wagon and the other car were not hit by the Rutka machine according to a statement made by Rutka.

MANSLAUGHTER CASE CONTINUED TO AWAIT CORONER'S FINDING

On recommendation of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy, trial of the case of Frederick Leroy Glynn of No. 152 Willetta avenue, New London, charged with causing the death of John R. Tennant, 52, of No. 519 North Main street, was continued until August 11th, when the case was called in the city court Monday morning. Mr. Glynn was the driver of a machine which struck and fataly injured Mr. Tennant on North Main street, late Sunday night. The accident occurred at the corner of Ninth and North Main streets, and Mr. Tennant died a minute or two after he arrived at the W. W. Backus hospital, to which he was rushed in a passing machine. Mr. Glynn is at liberty under bonds of $2,500, furnished by his father. The case was continued to await the finding of Coroner Edward G. McKay, who is investigating the fatality.

Charged with driving without licenses, William Burke of 328 West Main street, Adolph Leschensky of this city, and Theodore Smith of the submarine base were each fined $25 and costs. Burke was summoned by State Police Officer Johnson of the Groton barracks Sunday afternoon at East Great Plain, when he was found to be driving a car with a Rhode Island license, issued in 1929, in his possession. He was trying out a car that he had repaired for a friend at the time.

Leschensky said he thought that a registration was all that was needed to operate a car, and had never applied for a license, it was brought out in court. Officer Clifford Crary summoned him into court Sunday afternoon in the West Side section. Ignorance of the motor vehicle law in this state was given by Smith as the reason for his driving without a license. When arrested by Officer John O'Neil, Sunday, he was found to have in his possession a Maine license and was driving a New York registered machine.

A continuance of six months was granted in the case of Kenneth R. Browning, 17, of East Great Plain, on a charge of reckless driving. The accused was summoned into court Sunday evening on complaint of Harry Ford, who charged the youth with driving his machine on West Main street on July 2, at a reckless rate of speed. It is said that Browning almost crashed into a truck owned by Mr. Ford and parked in front of Ricker's drug store at the time. Browning testified that he was not driving more than 25 miles an hour.

Chester Nickerson, a sailor attached to the submarine base, and Peter Wawrzynowicz, 18, of this city, were presented on a charge of failing to have their operator's licenses endorsed. Each was fined $3.

Nickerson was the driver of a machine which overturned at Tadpole bridge, near Jewett City, early Monday morning, resulting in injuries to his wife, who was attended at local police headquarters. It was found that Nickerson failed to endorse his license.

Wawrzynowicz was summoned into court Saturday afternoon by Officer Clifford Crary, when he discovered that the accused had not endorsed his license after he had stopped him for driving at an alleged fast rate of speed in the West Side section.

NORWICH TOWN GIRL MISSING FROM HOME

Mrs. William F. Ladd of the Old Canterbury Turnpike, Norwich Town, has appealed to the press in an effort to locate her daughter, Miss Isabel Webster, 17, who has been missing from home since June 24, last. The motive for her leaving is alleged to be over her intended marriage to Oscar Eccleston, 37, of North Stonington. Mrs Ladd was opposed to the marriage because Mr. Eccleston is 20 years older than her daughter.

Miss Webster left her home at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of June 24 and has not been seen since either by members of her family or state police from the Groton barracks, who are making an investigation together with Humane Agent Frederick W. Wyant of Norwich Town. However, nine days after her disappearance she sent her mother a letter, postmarked New London, the contents of which had to do with Mr. Eccleston.

State Police Officer Arthur Whitemarsh, who has been assigned to the case, and Humane Agent Wyant, it is said, have learned that the girl has periodically mailed letters from the New London post office to her friends in this city and elsewhere. According to the police she has written that she would rather be where she is, as she is happy, than at home, and that she would marry the man of her own choice in spite of opposition.

It is the opinion of the police that Miss Webster is located in the vicinity of New London, where she is probably employed by some family as a domestic, the same sort of work that she did before leaving home. The police have been on the watch for her at the New London post office, but have not been able to intercept her. The theory is advanced that her letters are mailed by some one else. The letters have been mailed late at night.

That she is working under an assumed name at her place of employment is the belief of the police.

When Miss Webster left her home she was wearing an ensemble, color not definitely known, a small close fitting blue hat, black shoes and black stockings. She had with her only one week's wages. She left her savings intact in the bank. None of her clothing, other than what she was wearing, was taken.

She is described as being 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 165 pounds and has dark brown hair and brown eyes.

CONNECTICUT LAGS IN STATE HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT

Connecticut lagged far behind her sister states in the improvement of state highways during the state year of 1929, ranking forty-fourth of the forty-eight states in the mileage of state highways improved during the twelve-month period, statistics collected by the bureau of public roads reveal.

During the year Connecticut improved and resurfaced only 158 miles of the state highway system, 155 miles comprising new surfacing and three miles representing earth roads graded and drained. Only four states—Nevada, Maine, Delaware and Rhode Island—reported smaller mileages of improvements.

Included in the improvements made by Connecticut on the state highway system during the year were: One mile of gravel; 85 miles of waterbound macadam; 31 miles of bituminous macadam by penetration; three miles of bituminous concrete; and 35 miles of Portland cement concrete.

During the 1929 year, the forty-eight states of the country improved a total of 35,522 miles of state highways. They expended $910,485,291 on this work.

HONOR COURT WEDNESDAY AT CAMP WAKENAH

Camp Wakenah, the New London Boy Scout camp at Gardner Lake to which the Norwich scouts are going this year, is overflowing this week with over 100 scouts in camp. The capacity of the camp is placed at 88 scouts, so that provision for 12 additional scouts had to be made. A new pyramid tent was erected and the lean-tos were made available for old campers.

Sunday over two hundred parents and friends from Norwich and New London inspected the camp. Among the guests was Harold D. Larrabee, president of the Eastern Connecticut council, who gave the camp a thorough inspection. Mr. Larrabee was accompanied by Mrs. Larrabee. Norwich scouts and cubs in camp who were visited Sunday by their parents and friends were Edward and Frank Jordan, Jordan and David James, Francis Aubrey, Charles and Lawrence Deauville, Nicholas Tarrant, Russell Yerrington, Lewis Sussman, George Lichenstein, Herman Liebermar, Harold Williams, Frank Caskey, John Waters, Albert Eyberse and Lloyd Cochran. Scouts and cubs who have returned to the city after a one or two weeks stay in camp are: Walter D. Goring, Huntington Worth, Peter Christopher, George Peter, Raymond Hotchkiss, William Powell, Franklin Powell, Cyril Tourtellotte, and Clifford Barrows.

Probably the most popular activity of camp is that of swimming. Under the guidance of Hubert W. Ryan, Red Cross life saver, the scouts are divided into three groups: "sinkers," beginners and swimmers and within a few days "sinkers" are taught to swim, beginners improve sufficiently to be promoted to swimmers, and swimmers start on the Junior Red Life saving work.

This year a new diving tower had been added. Saturday Scout Executive John Sellman with the aid of older scouts constructed a new diving board. Saturday the local headquarters received three water balls, a gift from the Cranston Co., which have already become popular for water "soccer."

Next to swimming in matter of popularity is the evening campfire. Here the scouts and cubs have an opportunity to dramatize their ideas and to tell stories. According to Scout Executive Sellman almost all the campfire activities are creations of the boys themselves, and although sometimes crude, they never fail to amuse, and sometimes possess striking originality.

There are many other activities of interest to the campers: test passing in all phases of campcraft and scoutcraft: Tenderfoot, second class, first class, and merit badge work. Twenty-five different merit badge subjects are offered to the older scouts in camp. Handicraft always is of interest. This year the scouts are making bead rings, paper knives, brooms, signalling towers, and daggers. Archery especially is attracting a great deal of interest from the campers. The range set up in the grove is in use all the time. Some half dozen older scouts are working on the merit badge in rifle and hardly a day goes by but some rifle practice is permitted on the rifle range.

With four canoes in camp, eight row boats, one sail boat, and one motor boat, every scout gets an opportunity to go boating on the lake and every evening after mess, half the camp spends an hour on the lake. Sunday was a splendid day for sailing and the sail boat was much in demand. The motor boat, also the property of the Norwich Council has been of service several times being used once by the resident camp doctor who was called to another camp to examine a fracture.

During the first week in camp, the scouts gained 95 pounds in weight. This week a gain of 200 pounds is expected, an average of two pounds per boy. Immediately on entering the camp, the resident doctor gives every scout and cub an examination. The boy is weighed and at the end of camp the boy is again examined and weighed.

The first court of honor of the season will be held at Camp Wakenah Wednesday evening. Emblems for 15 scouts will be approved and badges will be awarded. This year the scouts are working for CW letters for their gym shirts. Upon the completion of ten requirements, the camper is entitled to his first C. W. Upon the completion of 12 more additional requirements, the camper receives a higher CW letter with a white background; upon the completion of the 12 additional requirements, the highest CW is awarded. Thus far no camper has secured the second CW, though many are working every spare moment of the day to meet the requirements. The requirements are so devised that in all three ranks, a camper may elect many things of his own free will to do.

Volley ball, soccer, flag raising, and baseball are very popular with the scouts and hardly a day goes by but what all of these sports are engaged in by some. Thursday scouts from Wakenah expect to play the team from Camp Lincoln.

Each Wednesday in camp is called a field day and scouts and cubs try out for bronze, silver and gold medals, in running, jumping, swimming, staff throwing, string burning, fire by friction building, tent pitching, etc. At the close of camp a final big field day will be held where all winners of previous weeks will be invited back to camp to compete for the finals.

DENISON SOCIETY TO ORGANIZE NEXT MONTH

The George and Ann Borodell Denison society, incorporated under the laws of the state, will organize Saturday, August 16th, at 3 p. m., d. s. t., at a meeting and luncheon at Pequotsepos Manor, the old Denison homestead, at Mystic. Eight hundred invitations were sent to descendants of the Denison family, and 250 replies have been received. Indications are that the attendance will be between 500 and 800 persons. The purpose of the meeting will be to complete the organization and elect officers. At some future time the old Denison homestead will be transferred to the society. The house and surroundings will be adequately endowed so there will be no expense to the society for maintenance and upkeep. In other words the Denison society will be an organization possessing a sufficiently endowed home. The history of the Denison family is an interesting one.

William Denison, born in England about 1586, was the first of the family to come to America. He had been liberally educated and was well seated in Stratford, then called Stortford, but hearing of the then famous transplantation to New England, he recalled his son Daniel from Cambridge and together with this son, his wife and two younger sons, Edward and George, came to this country, bringing with them a goodly estate and settled at Roxbury, Mass. With him also came John Eliot who seems to have been a tutor in his family. William Denison died in Roxbury in 1653, seven years after the death of his wife.

William Denison's youngest son, George, who came with his father to America, was twice married. First in 1640 to Bridget Thompson, daughter of John Thompson, gentleman, of Preston, England, whose widow Alice had come to America. They had two children, Sarah, born in 1641, married Thomas Stanton, Jr.; Hannah, born in 1643, twice-married, first to Nathaniel Chesebro, and second to Joseph Saxton.

The wife, Bridget, having died in 1643, George Denison returned to England, served under Cromwell, won distinction at the battle of Marston Moor. He was wounded at Naseby and was nursed at the house of John Borodell by his daughter Ann, whom he married and returned to Roxbury, where he lived until 1651, when he came with his family to New London.

He finally settled in Stonington, in 1654, having been granted a large tract of land in the Pequotsepos valley. Here they built a log cabin, but in 1663, they raised a permanent house which Captain George speaks of in his will as his "new mansion house." His grandson, George, who married Lucy Gallup, built the present house in 1717, but a few feet east of the older house. The children of George and Ann Borodell Denison were as follows:

John, born 1646, married Phoebe Lay; Ann, born 1649, married Gersham Palmer; Borodell, born 1651, married Samuel Stanton; George, born 1653, married Mercy Gorham; William, born 1655, married Sarah Stanton; Margaret, born 1657, married James Brown, Jr.; Mercy, born 1658, died 1671.

Captain George Denison died in Hartford, October 23, 1694, while there on some special business, aged 76 years. His wife died September 26, 1712, aged 87 years.

EAST LYME PROPERTY HOLDERS FILE APPEAL

Eleven residents of East Lyme, aggrieved by an order of the state highway commissioner, John A. Macdonald, relative to the re-establishment of the boundary lines on the Boston Post road in the town of East Lyme, have taken an appeal to the superior court. The superior court is asked to declare the relocation of the boundary lines null and void and grant such further judgment or decree as the court may upon the facts and law find the petitioners are entitled to.

The appellants are Alonzo Batting, Charles H. Champion, Michael Zahradink, Leonard Dunn and Emily Dunn, Alexander Milasky, Frederick W. Martin, James B. Huntley, Fred H. Smith, Earl M. Smith and Alfred H. Smith. All allege that they are property owners in the town of East Lyme and their lands border on the Boston Post road.

The complaints recite that no condemnation proceedings have been instituted to take the property from the petitioners nor has any agreement been made to compensate the petitioners for their property sought to be taken from them.

The allegations state that Section 49 of Chapter 263 of the public acts of 1926 in so far as it attempts to authorize this proceeding without condemnation or agreement of the petitioners violates Article XIV, Section 1 of the amendments to the constitution of the United States as it deprives the petitioners of their property without due process of law.

It is further alleged that Section 49, Chapter 263 of the public acts of 1925 in so far as it purports to authorize this proceeding without condemnation or agreement of the petitioners is an attempt to grant a power to the state highway commissioner which is in violation of Section XI of Article I of the constitution of Connecticut.

FOUR CONN. CITIES IN THE 100,000 CLASS

Connecticut continues to retain four of the cities in the country with a population of 100,000 or more but all four of these communities have lower rankings than they had in 1920, a study of the 1930 census figures collected by the census bureau reveals.

This year there are 93 cities in the nation listed as being in the 100,000 class, and included in this group of leaders in population are Hartford, New Haven, Bridgeport and Waterbury. Ten other New England cities are also listed in this classification, but all of the fourteen rank lower than they did in 1920.

Hartford led the four Connecticut cities in percentage increase of population, reporting a 1930 population greater than the 1920 population by 18.7 per cent. Waterbury came second with an increase of 10.2 per cent, Bridgeport third with an increase of 2.5 per cent and New Haven fourth with an increase of only 0.07 per cent.

According to the 1930 figures, Hartford is the forty-seventh largest city in the country, New Haven, forty-eighth, Bridgeport the fifty-fourth and Waterbury, the ninety-first.

Waterbury showed the greatest decline in ranking with the rest of the cities of the country during the past decade, slipping from the seventy-ninth largest city in 1920 to the ninety-first in 1930, a drop of 12 points. Bridgeport fell ten points, from forty-fourth in 1920 to fifty-fourth, and New Haven dropped nine points, falling from thirty-ninth to forty-eighth in 1930. Hartford slipped only one point, ranking forty-sixth in 1920 and forty-seventh this year in size.

N. Y. Mother Finds A Real Weight Builder at Last

If you are tired of being bony, scrawny and weak, read how Mrs. Henry A. Thaler of Richmond Hill, N. Y., and her daughter gained weight and improved their figures:

"The writer of this letter and my daughter, Viola, have been using McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Extract Tablets for seven weeks, and in that time I have gained 4 pounds and am more full of 'pep' than ever. Viola has gained 3 pounds and she is beginning to get wonderful color in her face."

The reason is that McCoy's are genuine cod liver oil extract tablets. That is the same as saying that like the Norwegian cod liver oil from which they are made, McCoy's are hundreds of times richer in flesh and strength producing vitamins than even milk, eggs, butter or cream.

So take advantage of Lee & Osgod's offer of the safe, pleasant, easy, inexpensive way to gain the weight and energy you need. McCoy's must give any man, woman or child the increased weight desired or money refunded. Just ask for McCoy's—60 tablets 60 cents.

NOSE PICKING?

MAYBE IT'S WORMS

DON'T be misled into thinking this is "just a habit". Often it is not a habit at all, but is due to worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Among other symptoms are: grinding the teeth, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present. Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. POLISH BOYS WIN 2ND GAME BEATING "Y" JUNIORS

The P. N. A. C. won their second straight game in the Junior league Monday evening, defeating the Y. M. C. A. 6 to 2. The "Y", however, gave the Polish club quite a fight, holding them down until the fourth, when a four-run rally broke up the game.

Watters twirled for the P. N. A. C. and turned in a good game. He allowed but five hits and kept them well scattered. W. Senaki and Rusillo did the pitching for the Y. M. C. A., the former giving away to Rusillo in the fourth. They allowed eight hits between, six off Senaski and two off the other "Y" hurler.

The Polish club scored in the first, tallying once on singles by Koslowaki and Watters. In the second, the Y. M. C. A. tied up the game without a hit. Watters walked three men in a row in this frame and when Koslowski's throw to third hit Stephano, the latter came home with a run.

The two teams battled on even terms until the fourth, when the Polish club made their bid for the game, singles by Golembeski, Koslowaki, and Watters. A walk to Gromko accounting for four runs. The "Y" added another run in the fifth on a walk and a single by Butkiewicz.

Watters, the P. N. A. C. pitcher, also shone at the bat, gathering four singles out of four times at bat.

Tonight's Game

Tonight, the Elks meet the I. Y. M. C. in the junior circuit. The Elks, after their defeat at the hands of the Duwells last week, are out to win tonight's game and while they are favored to do it, you never can tell about baseball and the Italian club may spring an upset and win. The Italians have been playing some pretty good ball in the league but have had some tough breaks to date. Given their share of the luck, they are going to win some ball games and they may start tonight. LaVarge and Dugas will probably work for the Elks, while Burelle and Angelone looks like the I. Y. M. C. battery.

The game starts at 6:30 p. m.

OWLS BLANK BOXMAKERS IN MONTVILLE DUSTY LOOP

The league-leading Robert Gair Owls of the Montville Industrial Twilight league tucked another game under their belt Monday evening when they defeated the Robertson Paperbox Co. by a score of 7 to 0, at the Gair diamond at Uncasville. Both hurlers pitched great ball, Rice for the Boxmakers getting ten strikeouts and Shahan for the Owls rolling up nine strikeouts and allowing but one safe hit. Shahan also led the Owls in hitting with his teammate, Hanson. Costello made the lone Robertson hit.

LYONS WINS OWN GAME WITH DOUBLE IN NINTH

ST. LOUIS, July 28—(AP)—Under a broiling sun which sent the mercury to 107 degrees officially, Ted Lyons and the Chicago White Sox defeated the Browns in the ninth inning here today, 6 to 5.

A run behind when the Sox went to bat in the final frame, Cissell singled and scored on Tate's double. Lyons then won his own ball game by sending Tate across the plate with his two base hit.

Goslin hit his 22nd home run of the season, his fourth in two days. Score:

TERRY'S HITTING GIVES GIANTS WIN OVER PHILLIES

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—Bill Terry went on a hitting rampage today to give the Giants the 5 to 4 decision over the Phillies. He drove out four hits, two of which were home runs, and sent in the winning run in the ninth with a sacrifice fly.

The offensive tactics of the Giants' first baseman gave Jim Chaplin the shade in the pitchers' duel with Earl Collard. Terry has now hit safely in 15 straight games, getting 28 hits in 60 times at bat for an average of .467.

Don Hurst was the big gun of the Phillies attack, driving in three runs, with three hits, one of which was a home run. The defeat shoved Philadelphia, which has lost eight straight games, a little deeper into the National league cellar. Score:

THURSTON HOLDS BRAVES TO TWO SCATTERED HITS

BOSTON, July 28—(AP)—Holliston Thurston, veteran right hand pitcher of the league leading Brooklyn Robins, turned in his second consecutive shut out today, holding the Boston Braves to two hits as the Robins won 2 to 0. Less than a week ago Thurston held the Cardinals to three hits and no runs.

Only three Braves reached first today and two of them were stranded there while the third went out by the double play route. Cantwell and Pinch Hitter Clark connected with the two blows off Thurston while Maranville was given a base on balls.

Johnny Frederick led the Robins' attack with a double and two singles. His double coupled with a similar hit by Wally Gilbert scored Brooklyn's first run in the fourth, while one of the singles led off the rally that counted for the other run in the sixth.

FAST BOUTS AT DANIELSON TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 28—There'll be more campaigning by amateur boxers up at the North street area Tuesday evening, when a card of eight bouts will be presented for the entertainment of the fans, who have been coming out in such numbers for these outdoor summer shows and enjoying them immensely.

The card for Tuesday night is probably the best and most promising that has been arranged by Promoter Louis Peloquin.

Some of the boys who have figured in other recent bouts here again will be seen in action, they having emerged as winners in their other starts and are now matched against stronger opposition.

Kid Brouillard of Danielson, and of the famous Brouillard family, will go into his third bout against Kid Tibe of Worcester. Brouillard in his first two starts achieved smart, snappy victories over his opponents. Another Danielson battler, in the 112 pound class is Willie Thibeault. This time he takes on John Scott of Worcester, reputed to be capable and a comer.

Kid Tourney of Webster, who recently beat Thibeault here, will be up against Patsy Long of Worcester.

Young Socuy of Warwick, R. I., is coming here to battle Ray Landry of Danielson, and this go should be a sweet one. They are 126-pounders.

Other bouts for Tuesday will be between Battling Goulet, Putnam, and Young Plasse of Webster, at 126 pounds; between Enselm Bernier, Danielson and Kid Baggermost, also in the 126 pound class; Kid Prouff of Webster and Young Russe of Warwick this in the 135 pound class.

Russell Martin, 156 pound Webster boy who has performed so successfully in his last two bouts here, winning decisively both times, will have Anthony Bajger of Moosup to beat this time, and this should be a slashing go.

FOXX'S HOMER AND SINGLE BY COCKRANE WIN FOR A'S

PHILADELPHIA, July 28—(AP)—Jmmy Foxx's twenty-ninth home run in the ninth plus Mickey Cochrane's single in the twelfth gave the Athletics 6 to 5 extra inning decision over the Yankees today.

Foxx's homer found Cramer on base and overcame a two-run lead held by the Yanks, sending the game into extra innings. Ruffing relieved Sherid in the eleventh with the bases loaded and none out but managed to get out of the hole. He was not so fortunate, however, in the twelfth. Earnshaw led off with a triple. Bishop and Cramer were purposely passed but Cochrane came through with a single that decided the game.

Walberg started on the mound for the Athletics but was relieved by Earnshaw in the ninth. Seven of the Yanks hits and four of the runs were made off Walberg while Earnshaw was touched for the other run and two hits in the ninth. Score:

CUBS PICK UP HALF GAME BY BEATING REDS TWICE

CHICAGO, July 28—(AP)—The National league champion Cubs picked up a half game on the leading Brooklyn Robins today, by winning both games of a double header from Cincinnati, 3 to 2, and 5 to 3.

The twin victories broke the Cincinnati jinx which has done plenty to keep the Cubs out of the National league leadership. Charlie Root outpitched Bennie Frey in the first game, giving seven hits and fanning 12 men. Gabby Hartnett aided the cause with a home run in the fourth.

Guy Bush pitched the Cubs to victory in the second game, giving the Reds eight hits. Jakie May started for Cincinnati but was knocked from the rubber in the third when Chicago scored four times. Harry Heilmann got a homer for the Reds in the second inning. More than 35,000 turned out for the Cub homecoming.

INDIANS RALLY IN NINTH TO BEAT TIGERS

CLEVELAND. O., July 28—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians pulled a sensational ninth inning rally to beat out the Detroit Tigers in the series opener here today, 7 to 6.

STRIBLING KNOCKS OUT SCOTT AFTER FOUR MINUTES OF FIGHTING

WIMBLEDOM STADIUM, LONDON, England, July 28.— (AP) —Whatever hopes England had for a world heavyweight champion were blasted tonight by the sledging fists of William L. (Young) Stribling, pride of Georgia.

The Macon youngster knocked out Phil Scott, gangling British titleholder in two rounds and did it so thoroughly that as far as England is concerned the career of their champion is closed.

A record crowd of 35,000 saw Stribling belt Falling Phil to the floor four times in the first round and polish him off in the second with a slashing left hook to the ribs. Stribling completely outclassed the Briton in the ten round engagement that was billed for the "championship of the old world" and as a crowning anti-climax to England's pugilistic hopes, stout old Joe Beckett clambered through the ropes after the knockout and challenged the winner to battle with a bet of 500 pounds sterling on the side.

Scott at least had the satisfaction of not being counted out on his back. The American's final smash, tearing with terrific force and loose defense, caught him full in the ribs with terrific force and sent the Englishman twisting to the canvas. He quickly raised himself to one knee but there was an agonized expression on his face as he took the full count of ten.

At nine Scott made a supreme effort, as if to rise, and Stribling, who had fought with tigerish ferocity, had a right hand punch ready and waiting for him. Scott waved his arms in a frantic, hopeless gesture of defense and slipped back on his haunches. He never did get to his feet.

There was no cry of foul to mar the knockout. Stribling left the ring unscarred and cheers greeted his struggle in the passage up the jammed aisle to the dressing room while boos almost as loud followed Scott, who had failed Britain and himself in his last chance for glory. By tonight's affair Scott's ring career is considered closed in this country, while Stribling is regarded as the logical opponent for a world title battle with Max Schmeling.

Stribling's ringcraft, and his strong, tanned left arm which pounded Scott's white torso unmercifully from the first clang of the bell, gave the Georgian the victory. The American rained blows on his victim and never gave Scott a chance to box. Scott landed occasionally with his long left to Stribling's chest and face but his blows were mostly taps without sting.

The Macon flier wasted no time with Scott in the opening round. They had hardly come together before the Georgian ripped his buckshot right into Scott's head and followed with a volley of left hooks to the face. Sticking almost entirely to a short, smashing left hook, Stribling bounced the tall, puzzled Englishman to the floor for counts of five, seven and nine. Each time it was harder for Phil to get to his feet. A right hand poke to the head laid Scott low for the fourth time but the bell ending the first round stopped the count. The second round was only a minute old when Stribling's searing left hand brought the one-sided struggle to a decisive close.

After the fight Stribling said this was the first time in 290 bouts that he had been hit first and still won. Scott's first cuff, a left hand to the face, scraped Stribling's nose and drew a fleck of blood.

"Pa" Stribling, his father-manager, left the technicalities to his son and confined himself to claiming the world's heavyweight title for the family.

The real feature of the evening's entertainment was not the fight itself but the impromptu volunteer scraps among the spectators. For some reason or other battles broke out here and there through the big stadium as the crowds gathered and the preliminaries were staged. These free-for-alls were as hard to control as a prairie fire. Suppressed in one spot they promptly broke out in another.

The issues at stake were not always clear but in general the private quarrels had something to do with whether derby hats were obstructing the view and whether customers in standing sections were taking up too much space. The gate crashers also contributed to the entertainment, making raids into the big ringside arena where the usual rows of fat men reclined at ease in folding deck chairs.

As a crowning touch to the gate crashing art, when darkness fell ladders were placed against the stand fr omthe outside and hundreds scaled to the ridge of the roof while masses of cockneys inside broke down the railings and invaded the higher priced sections.

The 1931 open championship will be played at Carnoustie, Forfarshire, a Scotch golfing center from which many great golfers have gone to fame in the game. The open probably will begin June 15.

Announcement of the choice of venues for the two championships was made today by the Royal and Ancient Golf club, governing body of British golf.

CARNERA TO HAVE HEARING ON FRIDAY

WASHINGTON, July 28.—(AP)— At the request of Primo Carnera, Italian pugilist, the labor department board of review postponed until Friday a hearing which was granted him in stay of an order requiring him to leave the country as an alien inadmissible for permanent residence.

Carnera was said to have ring engagements in Cleveland which made it impossible for him to come to Washington.

The boxer entered the country originally as a temporary visitor. When his six months time expired, he was refused an extension and notified that he would have to leave.

A reconsideration was sought. The immigration service granted it with the result that the further hearing is now scheduled at which he may present evidence which he considers would justify the government in extending his stay.

Hillcrest Jrs. Win

On Sunday, the Hillcrest Juniors beat the Record Breakers, 7 to 5, in a 14-inning battle, featuring Chick, the Hillcrest third basemen, who hit a home run, a two-bagger and a single and the fielding of Thibeault for the losers, who made 8 assists without a miss. The lineup for the winners: Boenig, c; Lavasseur, p; Jigg, 1b; Fontaine, 2b; Chick, 3b; LaBarre, ss; Couture, lf; Doone, cf; Horosko, rf. This team issues a challenge to any team averaging 14 years of age in Norwich.

CITIZENS BEAT ITALIANS IN CITY LOOP

Minus a regular pitcher, the Italian club appeared in the City league game at the campus last night and took a 9 to 2 pasting from the Polish Citizens. Alex Arico, a first baseman by trade, filled the bill and although he was still on his feet at the end of the game he saw some real rough duty in the seven innings of play. A barrage of base hits, seven of which were of the extra base variety, had Alec wabbling for four innings, but as previously mentioned he survived.

The Cits clouted his offerings for 13 safties and nine runs in the opening four innings and then took time out, going hitless in the remaining three frames. In the meanwhile Boots Greene held the Italians well in check, giving but five safe hits. Three of the bingles, two of which were very scratchy, came in the opening inning and accounted for one of the losers two runs. The second and final Italian tally was scored in the fourth.

With the exception of Boots and Pete Finn, each of the Citizens collected at least one clout, Cimmy, Tony West and Lloyd Jarvis connecting three times. Cimmy hit doubles on his first two trips to the plate and on his third appearance lifted one over the centerfield fence for the circuit.

In addition to his work on the offense Cimmy turned in a nice game afield, handling six chances without a slip. The score:

Important Game Tonight

Big business at the campus tonight. The best team in the league Bill Hastedt's Thermos Bottlers, and the present league "sensation," Tony Bernard's Ideals, are billed for what should be one of the best games of the week. After being bounced about regularly for five full weeks, the service station men suddenly came to life last week and bumped off two teams, creating the biggest upset of the current season by spilling the Polish Citizens. The other win was at the expense of the Smoke Shop.

As a result of their two wins and the defeat of the Italians by the Citizens last night the Ideals are now in a tie for fourth place in the league standing.

Tony Bernard claims that his pets are not through yet and that before the end of the week they will be still higher in the world. He feels confident that the Bottlers will go the same route that the Citizens went.

The appearance of the Thermos club this evening will be its first since Eccleston, star backstopper, fractured his leg. Eccy went onto the sick list last Wednesday through an accident, sustained while playing with the Riverview nine against the Sub Base. A number of the fans have made the crack that the Bottlers will not go so good with the husky backstopper out of play. There is some speculation as to whom Hastedt will use behind the bat for the remainder of the season, the concensus of opinion favoring Joe Hamil, who has worked at first to date.

Mike Nickerson will in all probability do the Thermos hurling while Bernard's ace, Bob Shaw, will work for the Ideals.

LOCAL BOYS LOSE DECISIONS AT WESTERLY

Last night at the St. Michael's benefit show at Westerly two local boys, Johnny "Shiek" Leonard and Young Sharkey, lost two hard-fought bouts, Leonard losing a hairline verdict to Jimmy Rossi in six rounds while Young Sharkey was beaten by Young Sposato, the Westerly battler.

The local boys performed well especially the Shiek who fought more like the old days when he was state champion. All during the bout with Rossi Leonard appeared very aggressive but Rossi was much stronger and had a slight edge in the terrific slugging. Young Sharkey and Sposato fought a furious four rounds with Sposato finishing the bout in a whirlwind of action which carried the verdict for him.

In the main go Big Boy Burlap pounded out an eight round decision over Elzear Riuox of Canada in a toe to toe slugging match. Burlap was staggered in the fourth and fifth rounds but the big Negro came back in the sixth and pounded Rioux dizzy and only the bell saved the Canadian from going down. From then on it was Burlap's fight.

Joe Russo of Westerly won a six round verdict over Tommy Quigley of Boston.

Kid DeBartolo of Westerly stopped Larry McManus of West Warrick in the fourth round, Referee McCarthy stopping the bout when McManus suffered a badly cut eye

Publicly Issues Challenge

Sports Editor: After much pleading and teasing with Mgr. Buck Phaneuf of the Taftville Shyma club, he persistently refusing to give me a game, I take this measure of publicly challenging his team to a game for fun, money or marbles.

If Mr. Phaneuf has a bad case of cold feet I suppose I will not hear from him on this matter, but I wish to state here and now that my team positively can give the Shymas a lesson on how baseball should be played.

OVER 200 AIR LICENSES ISSUED IN CONNECTICUT

Two hundred and twelve licenses have been issued by the state department of aeronautics in the first six months of 1930, according to the figures made public in the department's semi-annual statistical report. In this period 120 airplanes were registered within the state. From January to July, 206 physical exams were given by the flight surgeon. The fees received by the department for the work during the first half of the year total $6,544.50.

The pilot list includes 43 transports, 18 commercial pilots, 21 limited commercials, 56 privates, 65 students, eight parachute licenses and one special. The inspection work of the department has averaged two complete checks on state licensed ships during the past six months.

There have been 19 aviation accidents in the state since January. Of the 12 crashes resulting in serious property damage to ships there were three fatal accidents, in which five were killed. One fatal crash, killing a Colonial air mail pilot, was laid to inattention and violation of field rules, according to the department's statement. The second, in which Milton Moore, owner of the Interstate and a student were burned to death, was caused by defective equipment, and the third, the crash of the lost endurance flyers in Hebron was caused by weather conditions.

There were four license suspensions and one plane condemned as unairworthy. The ship registrations show 93 regularly licensed planes, 13 transfers, four experimental licenses, and two manufacturers' permits covering seven ships.

SWEDISH FREIGHTER, AFIRE AT SEA, ABANDONED BY CREW

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 28—(AP)—The Swedish freighter Kronprinz Gustaf Adolf, 2,255 tons, bound from Danzig to Santos with a cargo of coal, has been abandoned because of fire in the cargo off Victoria, Brazil.

A message from Capt. Moercy to the ship's agent here today said he had decided to abandon ship yesterday morning. The Lamport and Holt liner Vandyck, bound from New York to Rio De Janeiro, picked up the officers and crew, numbering 36.

The freighter put into the harbor of Recife on July 22 with fire in the hold, but later attempted to continue the journey.

Victoria is 275 miles northeast of Rio De Janeiro.

STOCK MARKET WAS IRREGULAR, WITH PRICES CLOSING ABOUT A POINT HIGHER

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—Flurries of buying and selling made the course of stock prices irregular today, although the list, on the average, closed nearly a point higher.

A few shares reached new highs for the recovery, but failed to hold those figures. The chief evidence of group strength was in the utilities, where the day's best advances occurred. On the other hand, weakness of Warner Brothers Pictures, Trans-America, Safeway Stores and Eastman Kodak had an unsettling effect and operations for the advance met with increasing resistance.

Commodities were heavy. Wheat slumped 1 3-4 to 2 5-8 cents and cotton slumped 1 3-4 to 2 5- cents and cotton met realizing and liquidation and finished 80 cents to $1 a bale off.

The move in the utilities, which rallied 2 to 4 points and generally retained their gains, was ascribed to covering.

Warner Brothers slumped 5 points to a new low for the year, accompanied by reports that the $4 dividend was in danger. One of the officers of the company denied bearish rumors as to its financial position. The directors meet on August 6 to act on the dividend.

Safeway Stores also went into new low ground, closing nearly 7 points net lower. Trans-America, under bear pressure, dropped more than 2 points. Eastman Kodak lost 4 1-2 net. U. S. Steel, American Can, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric, American Smelting, General Motors and DuPont, were carried through their previous highs for the movement, but the rally was quickly followed by offerings. Steel, whose quarterly report is coming late tomorrow, sagged more than a point below the Saturday close.

Copper stocks continued to reflect the more active consumer buying of red metal. Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting and Calumet, Arizona, were firm and moderately active.

General Electric and Westinghouse Electric made extreme gains of about 3 and 3 points, respectively. The former yielded all but 5-8 of its rise, while the latter finished with a net gain of nearly 2 points.

Foreign exchanges, active and firm, were featured by an upturn in sterling to $4.87, and by an advance in the German mark to a new 1930 high. Withdrawals of gold amounted to $4,000,000, all destined for Canada.

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—Common stockholders of Insull Utility Investments, Inc., of record August 30, will be given rights to purchase additional common at $50 a share in the ratio of one additional share for each 5 held. Holders of first and second preferred of record the same date will receive rights to buy one additional share of common at $50 for each 11 shares held. The offering will involve 600,000 shares of common.

The monthly business review of the federal reserve agent at New York, reports that sales of department stores in the district dropped five per cent in June from the same period a year ago. It was the sharpest decline in any month this year, except March, when sales were affected by the lateness of Easter. Sales for the first half of 1930 increased one per cent over the first six months of 1929.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—The curb market began the new week with an irregular upturn led by one of the sharpest advances in the utilities in weeks. Trading continued in small volume and predominantly professional, sales aggregating 405,600 shares.

The advance in the utilities had the ear marks of short covering, and appeared to be largely in sympathy with a retreat of the bears in that group on the big board. Such issues as American Super Power, United Light A and U. S. Electric Power gained a point or so. Electric Bond and Share was an active feature, rising 3 1-4 to a new high for the movement at 8 1-2, but closing at 88 1-4. American and Foreign Power warrants rose 3, and American Gas and Electric, 4.

Some of the investment company issues were active and firm. Prudential, in which Boston interests are prominent, rose 1-2 point in greater activity than has been in this issue in some time.

Ulen and company was a firm feature in the industrials and specialties, rising 3 points to a new high for the movement at 24. Deere and Gleaner combine rose 3, and Columbia Pictures more than 3, oils were sluggish.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 28—(AP)—High grade railroad and utility bonds again demonstrated their sensitiveness to even a nominal inquiry today, advancing in a quiet session.

Despite the lightness of the trading—sales fell below $6,000,000—decided progress was made by certain bonds in both the domestic and foreign sections.

American Telephone debenture 5s of 1965, were bouyant, climbing to a new high at 106 1-2, and were joined in the advance by Illinois Bell Telephone 5s, New England Telephone 5s, Postal Telegraph 5s, International Telephone 5s, and Western Union issues.

While the movement of railroad bonds was tinged by some easiness, a majority maintained a firm stand and some issues appreciated to the best figures of the year.

Weakness and strength were shown by stock privilege issues. The reaction in Warner Brothers stock was reflected in the movement of the six per cent convertible bond. In a fairly large turnover, the issue fell off nearly 3 points. Atchison 4 1-2s made the best showing among carrier convertibles, gaining more than a point, while bonds in this group of the Baltimore and Ohio, Rock Island, and St. Paul sold off fractionally.

Trading in foreign bonds was light. The government bonds rose from 1 1-2 to nearly 4 points. Railway issues were less active but strong, with the assented 4 1-2 of 1957 and assented 4 of 1931 gaining fractionally to reach their best figures of the year. Standard governments held firm in light trading. Belgian 6 1-2s reached a new high.

Treasury issues were irregular in dull trading.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 28—(AP)—The largest receipts of wheat so far this season in Chicago and the greatest ever in Omaha, did much today to pull down the values of all cereals.

The price breaking effect was intensified by the circumstances that the United States wheat visible supply today increased much more than expected, being augmented 14,593,000 bushels for the last week. This amount greatly exceeded the enlargement either for the week previous or a year ago.

Wheat prices closed unsteady at virtually the day's bottom level, 1 5-8a3c a bushel below Saturday's finish. Corn closed 1 1-2a2 5-8c down, oats 1-2a1c off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7c.

Provisions closed somewhat firmer, helped by the fact that the arrivals of hogs at western points were fewer than was the case a week ago or at this time last year.

AMSTON

Mrs. Joseph Jacobowitz and infant son have returned to their home in New York after visiting Mrs. Ira Turshen and family for several weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gross and son, of New York are at the Turshen home for a week's visit.

Belden E. Bailey, of South Norwalk, assistant district manager for the Standard Oil Co. spent Friday night with his brother, C. F. Bailey.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Ams and children of Bridgeport, are here for the remainder of the summer. They are living in the beautiful new home on the hill, which was built during the past year by the late Chas. M. Ams but due to his death in May and that of his wife on June 21, they were never able to enjoy the mansion.

Mrs. Chas. Schmidt has returned after spending several weeks in New York looking after her brother's business, while he was having a vacation on the farm.

Callers From Norwich

First Selectman and Mrs. Bailey were greatly pleased to receive a call last Sunday from the nonagenarian brothers, Chauncey W., 97, and Samuel Johnson, 94, who were accompanied from Norwich by their children. The elder Mr. Johnson lived for many years across the street from the former home of Mrs. Bailey in Nyack, N. Y., and on visits to relatives now occupying her old home, she had the pleasure of his acquaintance, with that of his daughter, Mrs. F. Stearns Edick and the late Judge Edick.

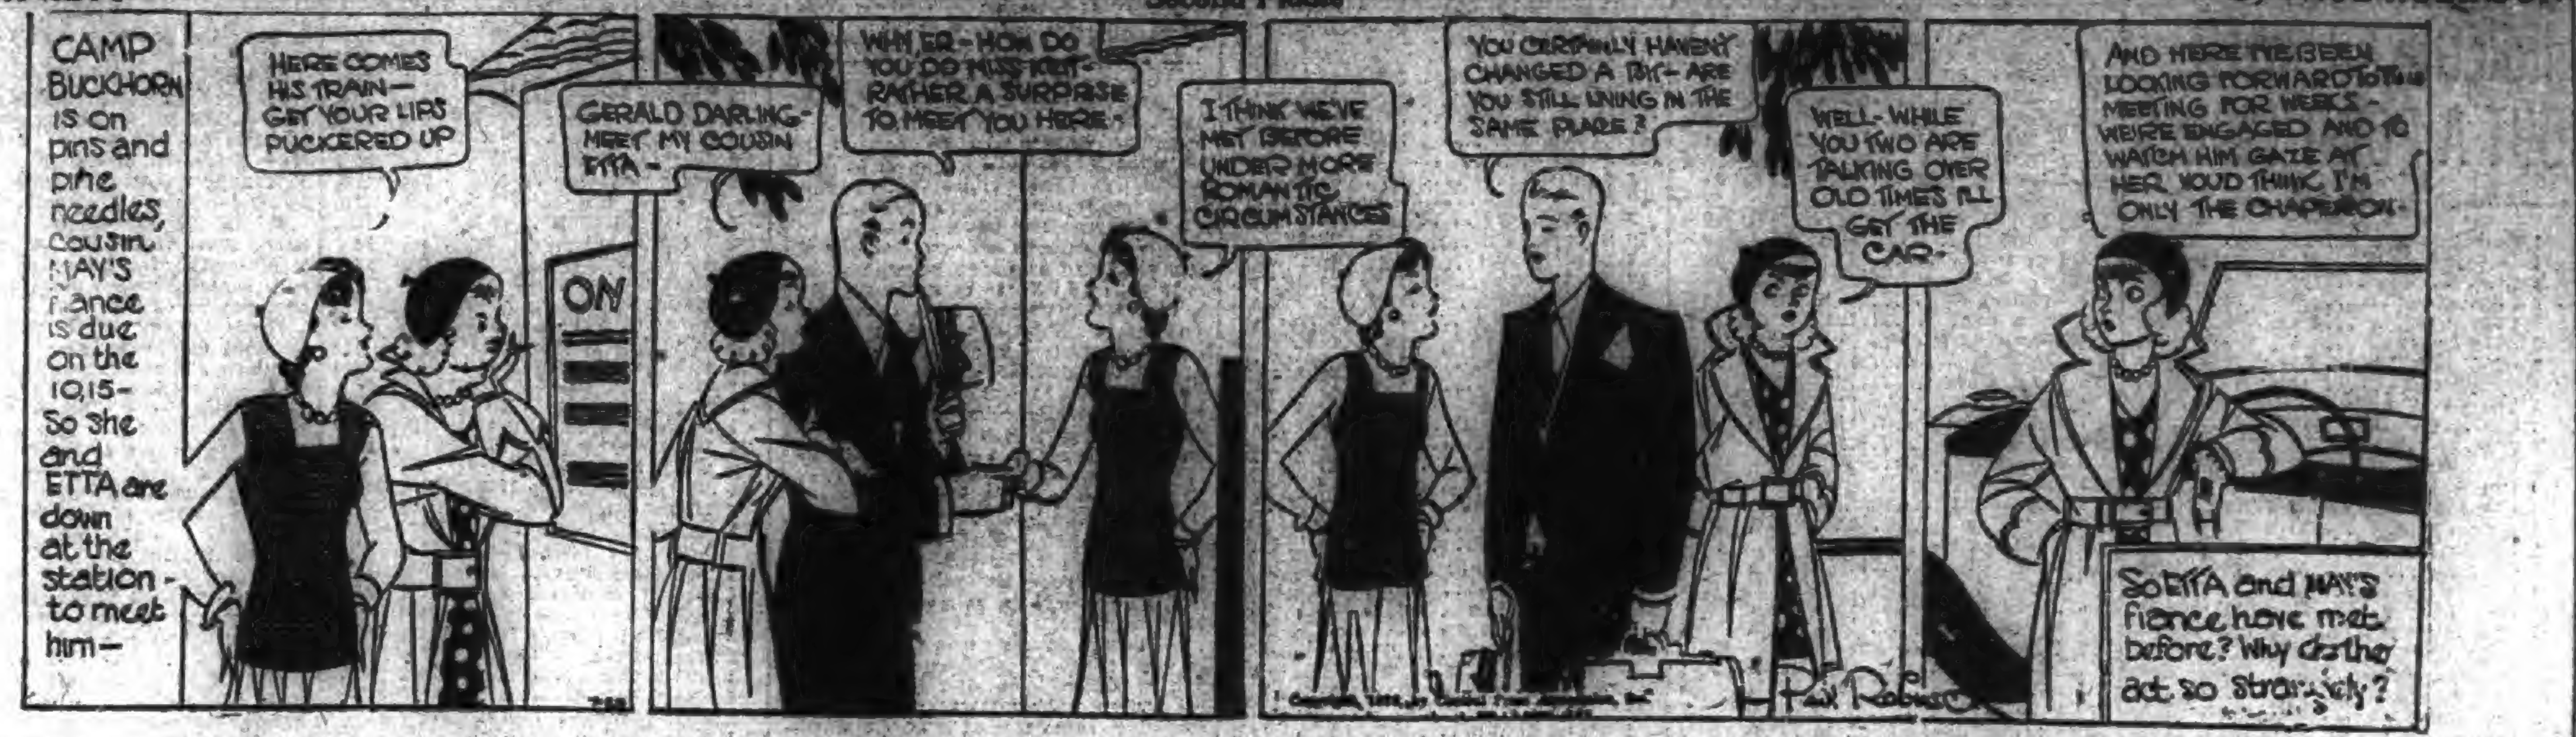
ETTA KETT

Second Fiddle

—By PAUL ROBINSON



CAMP BUCKHORN is on pins and pine needles, cousin MAY'S fiance is due on the 10,15— So she and ETTA are down at the station—to meet him—
HERE COMES HIS TRAIN— GET YOUR LIPS PUCKERED UP ON
GERALD DARLING— MEET MY COUSIN ETTA—
WHY ER—HOW DO YOU DO MISS KETT— RATHER A SURPRISE TO MEET YOU HERE—
I THINK WE'VE MET BEFORE UNDER MORE ROMANTIC CIRCUMSTANCES
YOU CERTAINLY HAVEN'T CHANGED A BIT—ARE YOU STILL LIVING IN THE SAME PLACE?
WELL—WHILE YOU TWO ARE TALKING OVER OLD TIMES I'LL GET THE CAR—
AND HERE I'VE BEEN LOOKING FORWARD TO THIS MEETING FOR WEEKS— WE'RE ENGAGED AND TO WATCH HIM GAZE AT HER, YOU'D THINK I'M ONLY THE CHAPERON—
So ETTA and MAY'S fiance have met before? Why do they act so strangely?

POETRY

To a Sparrow

Because you have no fear to mingle
Wings with those of greater part
So like me, with song I single
Your sweet impudence of heart.

And when prouder feathers go where
Summer holds her leafy show,
You still come to us from nowhere
Like gray leaves across the snow.

In back ways where odd and end go
To your meals you drop down sure,
Knowing every broken window
Of the hospitable poor.

There is no bird half so harmless,
None so sweetly rude as you,
None so common and so charmless
None of virtues nude as you.

But for all your faults I love you,
For you linger with us still,
Though the wintry winds reprove you
And the snow is on the hill.

—Francis Ledwidge.

Crimson Clover

The clover's abloom,
With bees on a spree,
And calling of birds across the wide fields;
Yet there is no room
For me in your heart,
Which flippantly yields
Its grace and its sweetness
To others—all others but me.

But clover's abloom,
Why need I repine?
I drink to you, dearest,
In crimson-stained wine,
And waft you a kiss on the clover perfume.

—Thomas Emmet Moore.

PERMITS GRANTED FOR TWO NEW DWELLING HOUSES IN NORWICH

Two new houses are to be erected in the city within the next month according to building permits granted during the past week by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft. One of the houses is to be erected on Avery street by Vincent Grzymkowski and the other by Robert Goldstein at 99 Maple street. Both houses are to be of frame construction, one a six room house and the other a seven room.

There were seven permits granted during the month but with the exception of the two houses mentioned they were for garages and alterations to present buildings. The total permits issued for the first four weeks in July now is 28 with several applications which will be granted within the next few days bringing the total to 30 or more.

Considerable progress has been made on local buildings under the process of construction during the past week. The Norton Memorial gym at the Academy is almost completed with the exception of some of the interior finishing touches. Contractor William S. Spencer has been working steadily on this project in order to have it ready for the opening of school in September.

Contractor Sweeney who is building a new house at the corner of Elmwood avenue and Broadway for Harry Diachyshyn has the work well along and is now engaged on the interior. Mr. Sweeney is also making good progress on the brick building for Pappas Brothers at Montville and has the exterior work practically completed with the exception of hanging the doors and putting in some of the plate glass windows.

The building permits granted during the past week were as follows:

To Herman Sears to erect a two-car frame garage, 18x25 feet, on West Main street. The garage will have a concrete foundation and will be finished in novelty siding and composition shingles. One end of the building is to be left open for a shed. The estimated cost is $400.

To Frank Gillis to erect a one-car frame garage 10x20 feet at 10 Watercress avenue. The estimated cost is $35.

To Angelo Massello to alter the present brick garage by removing the present front and installing a new one with plate glass windows. The building when completed will be used as a furniture repair shop. The estimated cost is $150.

To Vincent Grzymkowski to erect a two-story frame house at 16 Avery street for himself. The house will be 26x30 feet and will have seven rooms and bath. The foundation will be of stone and the superstructure will be of fir and cypress. The exterior finish will be in clapboards and composition shingles. The interior will be finished in hardwood floors and trim, and hard finish plaster. The estimated cost is $4,500.

To Robert Goldstein to erect a frame house at 99 Maple street. The house will be approximately 26x28 feet and will have six rooms and bath. The foundation will be of cement with a frame superstructure. The interior will be finished in hardwood and hard finish plaster while the exterior will be in clapboards and composition shingles. The estimated cost is $2,000.

To Robert Goldstein to erect a frame one-car garage, 10x20 feet, in the rear of the new house that he is to build at 99 Maple street. The estimated cost is $100.

To Bronislaw Smigiel to erect a frame one-car garage, 12x18 feet, in the rear of 72 Dunham street. The estimated cost is $100.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were six sales of real estate as compared to 14 sales for the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $27,474 and $92,725.

In New London during the past week the sales of real estate numbered six, a decrease of one sale from the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans were $32,580 and $65,300.

NEW LONDON

The Connecticut College for Women will have practically a new heating plant when work of rebuilding the present one is completed.

The foundations have been completed for new walls, two boilers and the 125 foot chimney and work is now progressing on the construction of new outside walls which are to be of tapestry brick and hollow tile construction. The heating plant building is 68 by 44 feet and, besides the boilers used in heating the college, contains a pump room, cold storage room, engineer's room, toilet and shower room and tool room.

The big gable roof over the Bishop building in Water street has been razed during the past two weeks for the Connecticut Power company which plans to tear all of the building down except one story north of the driveway under the middle. This part is to be covered with a new roof and used as a store house.

Building Permits

Frank Sentell, frame garage, 36 Beckwith street, $300.

M. F. Dwyer, frame garage, 12 Rogers street, $450.

Conn. Power Co., alterations, Water street, $3,000.

Total number of permits issued for the week, 7; estimated cost of buildings, $4,850.

CANDLES ARE HANDY IN AN EMERGENCY

In this season of thunderstorms one precaution should not be overlooked. Every well-ordered home should have an ample supply of candles somewhere within convenient reach. This in spite of the fact that electrical home equipment has been developed to an almost completely fool-proof degree. The trouble is that it has not yet reached the "storm-proof" degree, although the danger from storms interrupting electric service has been reduced to a surprisingly low minimum.

Nevertheless, and in spite of this almost 100 per cent security, it is wise to have a convenient supply of candles around. Many householders have them constantly in sight and utilize them for their decorative as well as their utilitarian value. Prices have been reduced to such a degree that even the so-called exclusive shops sell candles in direct competition with the 5 and 10-cent stores and make no secret of the fact. This applies particularly to the so-called decorative candles.

Because of their low price even the ornately decorated candle can be used for emergency illumination without entailing any impressive replacement cost. Now that they can be purchased in dozen lots for not much more than the cost of a quart of ice cream, there seems to be no good reason why every home should not be well supplied with candles whether they be simple or ornate in shape and design.

MODERN HARDWARE CAN BE DISTINCTIVE

Not the least interesting development recently in home furnishings and appliances has been the advance made in building hardware. In former days—and not so long ago at that—hardware was merely hardware, with little else to be said of it. Some was quite majestic in its shiny excellence, but one piece of it was much like any other, while the cheaper brands were so obviously cheap that one never could pass it off as anything else.

Today all this has changed. Hardware is produced along "period" lines and to fit virtually any type of architecture. More than that, even types which follow general architectural or period designs are made quite distinctive. In this way two home owners whose houses are almost identical in architectural lines may be equipped with hinges, latches and the like which are in no sense exact duplicates. The surface treatment of the metal parts may be finished in any of several ways, they may be polished or given a dull finish, may carry an etched design of virtually any character, or be cl polished finish, and yet be in perfect taste.

This is due to the fact that manufacturers are coming to recognize more and more the artistic possibilities in building materials which only a few years ago were given little or no consideration in house design save in the case of the very wealthy alone. There is no excuse these days for any home being without distinctive hardware, and that goes for the $5,000 as well as the $25,000 home.

SHUTTERS MUST BE USED MODERATELY

Like everything else used in home construction and for decorative purposes, the wooden shutter can be employed to advantage or else overdone. One frequently sees an otherwise attractive little home whose appearance is marred by the presence of shutters which are entirely unsuitable. Houses which call for a neat though simple shutter are found to sport eccentric affairs which either are caused to sag drunkenly or else embellished with designs which would look much more appropriate in a nursery.

Shutters have their proper place, just as any other element entering into home construction, but there is a right one and many inappropriate ones, and the home owner's task is to determine which is the right one and which are the wrong ones. Building supply houses usually carry a large variety in stock, from which one should be able to make a perfectly satisfactory choice. The same supply houses have color charts to show what color combinations are suitable with certain color backgrounds, thus enabling owners to achieve an effect which arouses favorable attention rather than one which appears glaringly unsuitable.

CLIMBING ROSES REQUIRE PRUNING

Carefully pruned climbing roses may do much to improve the appearance of a home, but a climbing rose which is permitted to go its own way without treatment from the pruning shears can and frequently does defeat its own purpose. There are many who do not know that branches bearing blossoms this year should be pruned immediately after the blossoming season is over, while there are fully as many who do not seem to realize that roses can be trained to do virtually anything one wants them to do. They may be trained to follow a diagonal course across the walls of a house, for example, or they may be trained to grow straight up or spread to either side.

It should be the aim of everyone, however, to have their climbing roses 100 per cent healthy and to do this one should prune judiciously. Midsummer is about the best time of year for this. The work should be done while this year's new branches are getting their growth. Cutting off old branches means more nourishment for the new and a better balanced mass of blooms next year. One can find many handy and inexpensive little manuals, prepared by recognized experts, which tell exactly what to do and how and when to do it.

HOME BUYERS NOW QUALITY INFORMED

Perhaps the reason for the popular acceptance of modern equipments is that the American home buyers have been made "quality wise" by consistent advertising of material manufacturers and special newspaper sections given over to informing the man in the street as to what constitutes quality and informing him of the pitfalls that await the uniformed in buying homes.

The past few years have seen a consistent improvement in home building methods and, it is stated on good authority, that today's home buyer gets a lot more for his money than in former years. Taking the monel metal sink for example; here is a sink that cannot rust, is positively stain-proof and cannot be chipped. It is hard to dent because it is wood framed and has a certain elasticity, which also reduces dish breakage.

Its neutral silvery color permits it to harmonize easily with the rest of the kitchen furniture, whatever the color scheme. To clean its surface and keep it gleaming, a quick wiping with a piece of cloth does the trick. Because of the ease with which the metal is fabricated, local sheet metal workers may build the sink to fit odd corners in the kitchen, or, the sink may be built into the kitchen cabinet thus conserving space.

NEW HOME OF ARTHUR J. BRAILSFORD, JR.

The above is a photograph of the new home of Arthur J Brailsford Jr., at the Circle B ranch at East Great Plain built by Homer J. Monty. The house is of the story and a half type with hip roof. The exterior is attractively finished in clapboards with composition shingles on the roof. The interior is finished in hardwood and hard finish plaster. There is a barn in the rear of the house where Mr. Brailsford's riding horses are quartered.

PRODUCE ALL-METAL KITCHEN CABINET

Like all home appliances which gain widespread popularity, the kitchen cabinet now is coming in for "style treatment." That is, now that such cabinets are all the thing, and no well-ordered kitchen seems complete without one, the manufacturers are catering to the esthetic tastes of the average housewife by developing styles and unusually attractive decorative designs.

The latest development in the kitchen cabinet field is the all-metal cabinet, much after the fashion of steel office furnishings and arranged in about the same order. When installed they appear much the same as the home-honored wood cabinets which first gained popularity when the complete kitchen cabinet came into favor a number of years ago. With the development of individual compartments, produced in varying sizes to accommodate the needs of the individual kitchen whatever its wall spaces might be, the old-style cabinet was obliged to undergo modification. The one-piece cabinet now is much larger than the old one and is designed chiefly for new homes in which the kitchen has been planned definitely to provide space for some particular type of cabinet.

In older homes this is not always possible and here the individual cabinet comes in handy, whether it is of wood or of metal, because groupings may be arranged which will fit virtually any space. As the writer sees it, the choice between wood and metal cabinets is purely optional, for one seems fully as desirable as the other. Where wood cabinets are manufactured by reputable firms they serve every purpose to the greatest possible degree. Their angles are perfect, the construction is fundamentally sound and they are built to endure. The same is true of the metal cabinets as well and the whole thing boils down to the question of personal preference.

POTTERY LENDS A FINISHING TOUCH

If one could turn back the pages of history a few years one of the most outstanding changes to be noted in comparing homes of former years with those of the present would be in the uses of foundation planting. We always have had shrubbery with us, but it was not used nearly as much as a definite architectural detail as it is today. Evergreens for all-year decoration as well as perennials for augmenting the evergreens in summer now are the rule rather than the exception, and a trip through virtually any residential section will disclose few houses where permanent foundation plantings do not form a definite part of the decorative plan.

This arrangement is capable of improvement, or embellishment, and nothing adds that effective additional touch more than a well-selected piece of pottery. A wide earthen jar, whether ornamented or plain, does much to set off the effectiveness of foliage and summer blooms. Used to flank an entrance porch they lend a deft touch when a proper selection has been made, while in addition they serve as convenient holders for clusters of garden flowers.

Like all things of this nature they can be overdone. One sees homes which are literally bestrewn with pottery, to such a degree that the entire purpose has been defeated. It is much the same as with those interesting little gnomes one sees peeping out from foliage, or the figure of a dog or black cat staked into the ground. Such things call for moderation, and when used in moderation they do much to render a home distinctive.

OILCLOTH ENJOYS RETURN TO FAVOR

Time works some interesting changes, and one of these has been the return of the so-called humble oilcloth to household favor. It has graduated as an article intended solely for the kitchen, just as the linoleum has been found useful in other rooms besides the kitchen. Used in dining alcoves, on verandas and in the children's room, oilcloth may be made extremely useful as well as ornamental. Some have used it as material for paneled screens, while others have gone so far as to use it as a substitute for wallpaper. The fact that it is washable and unusually durable has had much to do with its return to popularity, especially since manufacturers have seen the value of producing it in artistic and attractive designs.

HOLLOW TILE IS USEFUL MATERIAL

Hollow building tile a comparatively recent entry into the home construction material field is the possessor of many advantages for the small home builder. As it is generally known, hollow building tile is a hard burned clay product, made in various sizes, having one or more voids running longitudinally through it, to provide a mortar key.

It is much used for foundation work as it is strong, fire-proof and quickly laid. Its cellular construction, originally designed to eliminate unnecessary weight, has excellent insulating qualities.

STICKING DOORS

There are few things more annoying than doors that stick. When planning your new home specify doors that are guaranteed against warping, swelling or shrinking.

USE FOR WALLS

Walls of children's rooms will serve a double purpose if enlivened with a frieze depicting scenes from Mother Goose and other nursery favorites.

STORAGE TYPE WATER HEATER BEST FOR HOME

The ability to turn a faucet at any hour of the day and night and get all the hot water necessary is one of the greatest comforts of present-day American life. How to get hot water in the summer months when the house heating plant is not in operation is a problem that confronts many home-owners. Hot water is needed for the family wash, for cleaning and cooking, for shaving, and for a soothing bath. An abundant supply of hot water available at all times shortens the housewife's work in the kitchen by hours in a week, by days in a year, and by years in a lifetime.

The demand today is not merely for a coil in the house heating plant which will supply hot water when the heating plant is in operation, but for a dependable all-the-year-around supply of hot water. Various types of water heaters are available. Some burn coal, some use oil, but most of them utilize gas as a fuel. A few types of electric water heaters are on the market.

There are three general kinds of gas water heaters. The cheapest is the "side-arm" type which is so called because the water is heated in a copper coil placed at the side of a galvanized iron tank. While the original purchase price for this type of heater is small, it is relatively inefficient in operation because the uninsulated tank allows the water to cool off very quickly. Furthermore, as the hot water is drawn off, the cold water comes in and cools off the rest of the water and the tank.

Another obvious disadvantage of this type of heater is the fact that it is necessary to light it every time hot water is needed. When the heater is in the basement this is often a serious inconvenience.

The two other kinds of gas water heaters are the storage heater and the instantaneous heater. The storage heater is the type most popular with the average housewife. It is economical, yet very convenient. Once this type of heater is installed, the home-owner need no longer worry about his supply of hot water. When the water in the storage tank falls below a certain temperature (whatever temperature the home-owner desires—usually about 150 degrees) the burner is automatically lighted from a pilot which burns continuously. Thus, there is always a tank full of hot water.

The best heaters are well insulated with thick blankets of mineral felt, rock wool, asbestos, hair or cork. The insulation is between the outer jacket of steel and the inner tank of rust-proof metal.

Instantaneous gas heaters have no storage tank. At a turn of a faucet anywhere in the house, a powerful flame is lighted in the burner and water is constant. But, if the demand per coils. Hot water pours from the faucet almost instantly.

This type of heater may be used efficiently in a home, apartment, school, or hospital where the demand for hot wateris constant. But, if the demand for hot water is intermittent, such as is usually the case in the average home, this type of heater would prove expensive in operating cost.

71-YEARS-OLD DOUGLAS FIR LOG TO BE USED AGAIN

A section of a hand-hewn Douglas fir timber, 10x10 inches, which had been removed from a pioneer Oregon hotel during reconstruction was found to be sound and excellently preserved after 71 years of service.

The timber had been used as a sill and one side of it had been in contact with the ground.

The remainder of the sill from which the section was cut was left in place and is considered capable of giving many more years of satisfactory service.

CLOSET CABINET PROVES TO BE A HANDY ADJUNCT

The old-time closet is undergoing a striking transformation. Once it was a dark cavern, with two or three rows of hooks and little more. Due to the tendency to search for things upon the many hooks with lighted matches such closets caused many destructive residential fires. To eliminate this danger the practice of installing electric lights in closets was introduced, permanent rods were installed to allow for a more orderly arrangement of clothing on hangers and in other ways the closet was made more useful.

Now the closet cabinet appears to be finding a permanent place in home plans. These are affairs in which virtually any article of wearing apparel—shoes, light dresses, shirts, delicate articles of underwear and even hats—may be stored, either from day to day, or from season to season. To have one of them built to order would entail a material expense, but this is not necessary as manufacturers of home furnishing units are producing them in many sizes and combinations to provide one for virtually any type of closet, much after the fashion of sectional bookcases. There are large and deep ones for unusually roomy closets and others which are shallow to fit into smaller closets. They also are made to meet particular needs—that is, more space for shoes and less for other articles or vice versa.

One of the most interesting things about these little closet cabinets is their convenience in children's rooms, for here they can be used both for clothing and to provide overnight storage for the multitude of small toys the average youngster of today requires. Many people install them in the room itself rather than in a closet, for they may be made sufficiently ornamental to be a distinct addition to the furnishing of a room. Moreover, they can be purchased unpainted, then finished to conform with the general decorative plan of a room.

For the storage of shoes, light clothing and dresses they are exceptionally practical, particularly in the care of shoes. Once ones spare shoes were subject to all manner of shunting around, but with convenient trays provided for them this outrageous treatment has been eliminated. Virtually any home furnishing store or building supply house carries a stock of them, or can get them at short notice to meet individual specifications.

FINISH HARMONY

When the hall opens into the living-room both floors should be finished in the same way. This creates an effect of spaciousness, however small the room.

BRICK FOR INTERIORS

Builders are rapidly coming to the conclusion that the advantages of building with face brick are not confined to its structural superiority or to the external beauty it imparts. Face brick is now being employed quite as effectively for distinctive interior effects. The superior textures and colors available in face brick make it particularly appropriate for sun porches, dens, mantels, etc.

INCREASE IN CORN CROP SAVES FARMERS MILLIONS

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—An increase in last year's corn crop was worth nearly $2,000,000 to Mississippi farmers.

This amount, says J. C. Holton, commissioner of agriculture, represents a saving on commercial feedstuffs purchased this year.

The decrease was 48,265 tons, which, valued at $40 a ton, represented a net saving of $1,930,600.

The larger corn crop was not effected at the expense of the cotton crop, Holton said. The state last year produced one of the biggest cotton crops in its history.

Advise Level Cornfield.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers who expect to use the cornstalk shaver and side-delivery rake in the corn borer area are advised by the department of agriculture that the last cultivation should be in the direction of planting to minimize ridges.

Iowa 4-H Clubs Increasing.

ROUGHAGE IS ESSENTIAL IN REDUCING DIETS

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Is Ideal Roughage

If you are following a reducing diet, it is doubly important that you take a regular amount of roughage into the system daily. Most reducing diets do not contain a sufficient amount of roughage. The result is constipation—thief of both health and beauty.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is recommended by many doctors and dietitians because it contains the bulk necessary to insure proper elimination.

Also, because it contains the iron needed to help prevent anemia—another danger in reducing diets.

ALL-BRAN is not fattening. Its bulk sweeps the system clean of poisonous wastes—helping to promote glorious health and beauty.

A popular way to eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is soaked in fruit juice. Try it! It is delicious with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over cereals, salads and soups. It adds flavor to cooked foods and is equally effective. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It is served in restaurants, hotels and dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

NEW AIRCRAFT COMPANY TO HOLD ORGANIZATION MEETING WEDNESDAY

The preliminary routine work of organization of Triumvirate Super-Safety Aircraft, Inc., is to be concluded at a meeting of the corporation to be held Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the directors' room of the Uncas-Merchants National bank. The corporation is organized to produce the super-safety airship which is the invention of John F. Cooley.

Speaking Monday of his interest in aviation and the scientific study which furnished a background for his invention of the super-safety airship, Mr Cooley said: "I was always of inventive turn of mind. Since early childhood flight held a strong fascination for me. Later I believed I could make a device that would enable me to fly through the air and I made plans to this end. My interest grew steadily and my belief in myself as having the ability to succeed increased so that at a period between three and four years before Langley's time I was deep in experimentation and study which resulted finally in the conception of a type of airship which was the first tandem plane set up and which showed very satisfying qualities. Thereafter I patented this device in the year 1898.

"By this time my interest in aviation had become an obsession and I made it my life theme. I have invented and patented some 18 devices, all directly or indirectly contributing to the advancement of my main objective. I had acquired considerable experience and a fair technical education; also I had taken up the study of ultimate philosophy, which together with a natural taste for inductive and deductive reasoning, resulted in the evolution of a new movement of mathematical character whose many manifestations are all of practical benefit to humanity in every branch of the arts and sciences. This was patented in every patent office of importance in the world, whose examinations proved it to be the first previous to 1903 and as its operations start at zero it must be the last.

"There follow several patents, engines, air compressors, machine tools, etc., based upon this principle and in the year 1910 I filed a U. S. patent application upon an improved type of airship having superior lateral balance. The patent was issued in 1914. My present ship is a type combining the longitudinal balance of my first with the lateral balance of my last, with certain new features of importance that mark it as near to perfection in intrinsic safety as could be wished.

"As I have never before published anything relating to the movement case, I wish to say that it plainly illustrates what is now called the theory of relativity and graphically describes the same. It also opens up a great field of practical use and understanding of the great fundamental laws of nature, the motions of the energy foci, that creates an entity, the cause of attraction and repulsion, the movements and relationship of the electron in forming the atom, reducing theory to knowledge.

"An immediate practical result of this movement discovery is the production of an internal combustion engine adapted to airplane use and of remarkable economic and mechanical advantages. This is the property of the Triumvirate Super-Safety Aircraft, Inc."

CHIEF EGGER SERIOUSLY HURT AT POTTER HILL FIRE

WESTERLY, July 28—While the haymow of the barn of Ernest Thorpe, at Potter Hill, Fire Chief George E. Egger failed to see a scuttle-hole and fell through it to the floor below a distance of 20 feet, on Monday. He was picked up bleeding profusely about the nose and mouth. A call was sent for the ambulance of the Westerly hospital and he was taken to the hospital, where he was attended by Dr. Michael H. Scanlon.

Dr. Scanlon reported that Chief Egger was suffering from a blood clot on the brain and an attack similar to one which he had a year or so ago. There was also a possible hemorrhage of the stomach as a result of the fall. His condition is reported as serious and is on the danger list.

Chief Egger had responded to a call from Potter hill for a bonfire at the Thorpe home and was investigating the interior of the barn to see if any sparks had blown into the hay.

The fire department had just returned from extinguishing a blaze in a shed at 10 Canal street in the rear of the Crandall block, when the Potter hill call came in.

CHILDREN TO HOLD "HORRIBLE" PARADE TONIGHT

At 7 o'clock this evening the children of the Greenville play center will hold a "horrible" parade in which 75 have already signified their entrance. The procession of masqueraders will start at the junction of Second street and Central avenue and will march north to the car barn and from there down North Main street to the playground where they will disband.

The instructors of this industrious playground, Albin Keeley, Anna Carroll and Anna Connelly, have been planning for this popular event for weeks and have promised it will compare favorably in interest and amusement with similar activities held by the play centers in previous years.

To provide an incentive for originality on the part of the competitors two prizes have been secured by William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the recreation commission, consisting of a tennis racquet and a flashlight, which are to be awarded immediately after the return of the marchers to the grounds.

The judges for this competitive event are Earl E. Brigham, superintendent of playgrounds, and the Misses Madden and Grablefrky of the Lake street play center.

MANY HUNDREDS WITNESS PLAYGROUND GAMES

The daily attendance at the city play grounds is 1,200 children, as compared with 1,100 for 1929, according to figures issued Monday morning by the superintendent, Earl E. Brigham. The two baseball leagues which are also under the supervision of the commission are also attracting many hundreds of people.

It is estimated that 1,500 fans attend the contests between the City league teams at the Academy campus each night, an increase of approximately 300 over 1929. An additional 300 persons see the games each night between the junior teams. The attendance at these games remains about the same as last year.

OTTO LINDBERGH HELD IN GAMBLING RAID

Otto Lindbergh, who claims to be an uncle of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was under arrest at Saybrook Monday, charged with operating a gambling resort.

Ten state policemen in plain clothes raided Castle Inn, one of the most elaborate places to dine and dance on Connecticut's north shore, Saturday night, arrested seven men, including Lindbergh, and confiscated two roulette wheels and other gambling paraphernalia.

The police were unchallenged as they walked through the first floor, mounted two stairways and entered the roulette rooms on an upper floor.

Lindbergh and two operators of the wheels, William McIver of New York city and Philip J. Sullivan of 41 Stears street, Bristol, were held in $400 bail each for a hearing in town court Tuesday night.

Four others, Fred Duffy, of 193 Colony road, Meriden; George Thompson, 18 Eastwood road, Torrington; Russell H. Northam, 209 North Whitney street, Hartford, and Joseph Cosulich of Old Saybrook, were held under $50 bonds on charges of frequenting a gambling resort.

Lindbergh bought Castle Inn, built at a cost of $250,000, as the summer home of a New Yorker, six years ago. It was crowded with diners when the police entered, but so quietly did the latter work the patrons were unaware of the raid. Mr. Lindbergh is well known in Norwich.

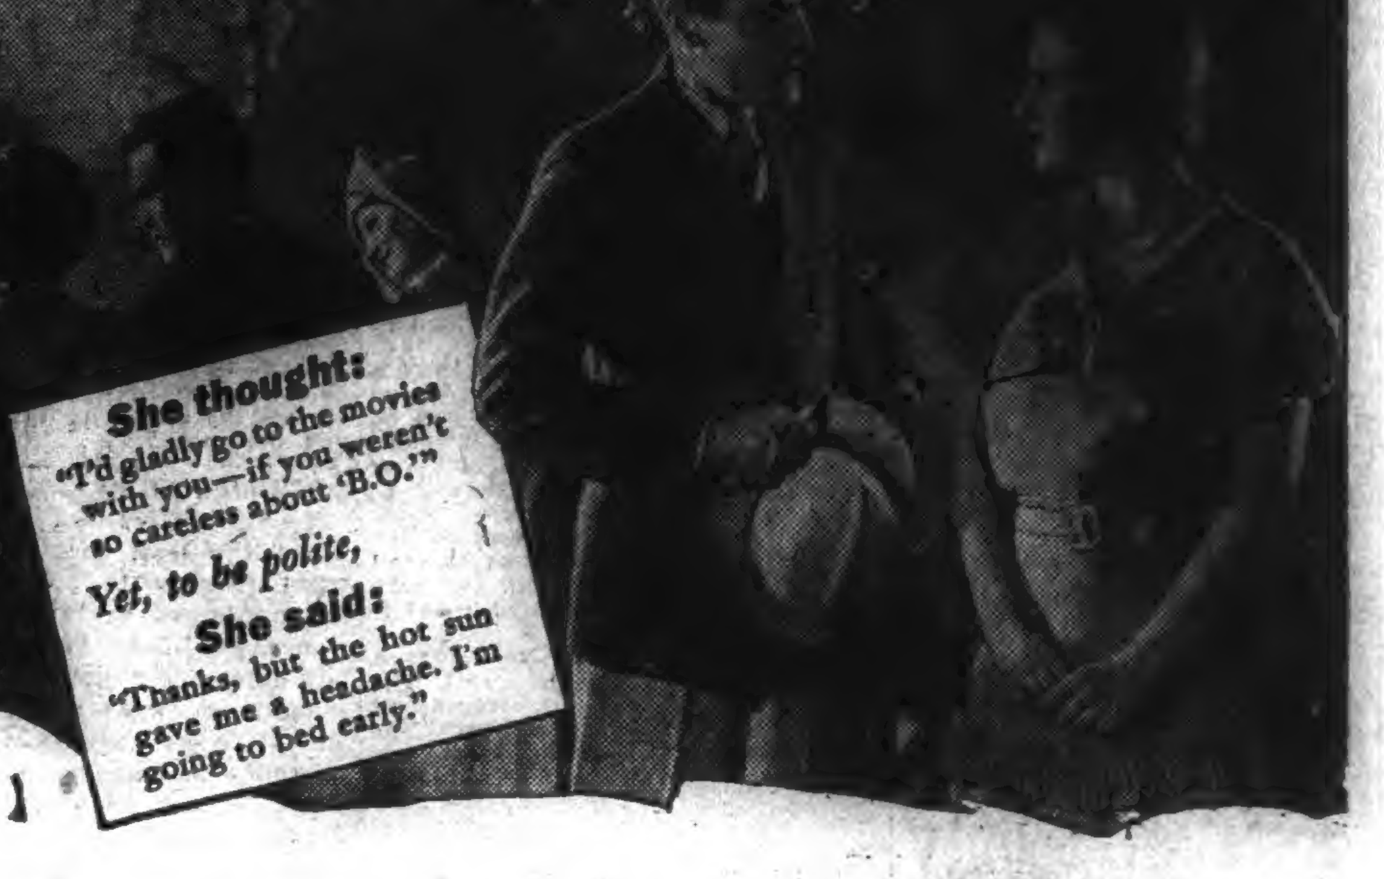
WILLARD FRANCIS DAVIS DROWNED AT DETROIT

According to a telephone call received Monday afternoon by Undertaker C. A. Gager from Harry M. Davis of Hempstead, L. I., Willard Francis Davis, 45, son of the late Thomas and Alice Story Davis, formerly of Norwich, was drowned in Detroit, Mich., on Monday. Details of the drowning are lacking. The body is to be brought to Norwich for burial in Poquetanuck cemetery.

Many towering elms and oaks in Stamford were damaged in the electrical storm of last Thursday.



She thought:
"I'd gladly go to the movies with you—if you weren't so careless about 'B.O.'"
Yet, to be polite,
She said:
"Thanks, but the hot sun gave me a headache. I'm going to bed early."

Another lonesome vacation

...was 'B.O.' to blame?
(Body Odor)

PEOPLE had been friendly enough at first—invited him to go on picnics, walks and rides. But not any more! Even his own invitations were politely turned down now. That's what always happened—every year. He couldn't understand it.

Then, returning to the city on a crowded train, he overheard something. His own name and then—"B.O." And all at once—he knew! Realized why others left him out of things, kept away from him. For "B.O." is the polite term for a condition people dislike even to mention—body odor... Now he has adopted a simple safeguard against this fault that kept him unpopular. Next year won't see another vacation ruined by "B.O."

"B. O." weather—beware!

Hot sultry days like these make us perspire more freely—increase the danger of "B.O." We quickly become used to this ever-present odor, seldom notice it in ourselves—only in others.

Because it is so easy to offend and not know it, take this simple precaution. Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy. Then you're safe. For Lifebuoy, even in hardest water, gives an abundance of rich, creamy, antiseptic lather that penetrates pores—removes all odor—leaves you gloriously clean and fresh. Its pleasant, extra-clean scent—that vanishes as you rinse—tells you Lifebuoy purifies.

What are your chances of baking success?

Greater ... with Calumet ... because it acts twice!

MAKE THIS TEST—See for yourself how Calumet Baking Powder acts twice to make your baking better. Put two level teaspoons of Calumet into a glass, add two teaspoons of water, stir rapidly five times and remove the spoon. The tiny, fine bubbles will rise slowly, half filling the glass. This is Calumet's first action—the action that takes place in your mixing bowl.

After the mixture has entirely stopped rising, stand the glass in a pan of hot water on the stove. In a moment, a second rising will start and continue until the mixture rises to the top of the glass. This is Calumet's second action—the action that takes place in your oven. Make this test today. See Calumet's Double-Action which protects your baking from failure.

WHEN you bake with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder, you can feel sure that your cakes and quick breads will be perfect every time.

For Calumet acts twice, not once. Its first action—in the mixing bowl—starts the leavening. Its second action—in the oven—lifts the batter high and light—even though you may not be able to regulate your oven temperature accurately. Bake a Calumet cake or some quick bread and see why Calumet has become the most popular baking powder in the world.

Only One Level Teaspoon of Calumet to a Cup of Sifted Flour!

That's the usual Calumet proportion. Be sure to follow it even though you may have been using nearly twice as much with other baking powders. You'll be delighted with this economy! And more than delighted with the results Calumet gives you. Perfect texture! Perfect flavor!

All baking powders are required by law to be made of pure, wholesome ingredients. But not all are alike in their action. Not all will give you equally fine results in your baking. Calumet is scientifically made of exactly the right ingredients, in exactly the right proportions to produce perfect leavening action—Double-Action. Get a can of Calumet from your grocer today. British Dirigible Is Constantly In Communication With Ships and Has Picked Up Frequent Weather Reports—Is Finding the Weather Over the Ocean Fine and Cold—Should Arrive Over Canada Late Thursday Night Or Early Friday.

LONDON, July 30—(Wednesday)—(AP)—The dirigible R-100 reported her position at midnight, Greenwich Meridian time, (7:00 p. m. E. S. T.) to the air ministry as approximately 579 miles west of Ireland.

BRITISH DIRIGIBLE R-100 WELL ON WAY TO CANADA

LONDON, July 29—(AP)—Great Britain's R-100, the biggest dirigible flying in the world's skies today, tonight was well out over the Atlantic ocean on her way to Montreal, Canada.

Since leaving her mooring mast at Cardington at 3:45 a. m. the pride of Britain's dirigibles had described an arc over northern Ireland. Quitting the English coast at Liverpool, she passed over the Isle of Man and through the Mull of Kintyre, the narrow channel separating Ulster and Scotland.

Thence flying over Rathlin Island, she circled above Malin Head, Ulster, and headed southwesterly along the general line of the ship lane from Glasgow to Quebec. At 4:18 p. m., the Valentia wireless station, Ireland, received a radio giving her position as 205 miles west of Malin Head.

On board the big airship, her messages said, passengers and crew had settled down to the normal routine of airship life, which they will pursue, barring accidents, until they arrive late Thursday or early Friday at Hubert airport, Montreal.

Periodic broadcasts from her well-equipped wireless sets to the air ministry kept Great Britain informed of the first day's progress. She was constantly in communication with ships and picked up frequent weather reports.

As she headed toward the open sea, the winds facing her unexpectedly shifted, and from having been favorable when she started, became adverse. This change produced a deviation in her intended course. Instead of heading north from the Irish sea to the Hebrides, the airship cut much closer to northern Ulster.

Meteorological data picked up from passing ships proved of great value in determining her course. In general her route remains that of the great circle across the Atlantic. Squadron Leader R. S. Booth, her commander, will probably keep to his preferred course, heading to a point south of Cape Farewell, Greenland, then crossing Labrador and following the St. Lawrence river to Montreal.

However, the choice has been left entirely to his discretion and will depend upon weather conditions.

Apart from adverse winds, the R-100 met fair weather. A few rainy patches, with squalls blowing from Argyle, greeted her while passing out from the Irish sea, but once over the ocean, the weather was fine and cold.

NARCOTIC AGENTS MADE 20 ARRESTS OVER WEEK-END

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—Descending on huge narcotic rings in three widely separated cities, agents of the newly reorganized narcotics division of the treasury made 20 arrests over the week-end and captured persons who they said were the leaders of five narcotic smuggling gangs.

The raiders seized large quantities of morphine and heroin and believed they had broken up smuggling operations that brought millions of dollars worth of narcotics into this country each year from Turkey. The leader of one gang, it was announced, was arrested in his office in the Woolworth building in New York as he was preparing a quantity of morphine for shipment to San Francisco.

Announcement of the raids, which started Saturday and ended last night, was made today by Harry J. Anslinger, acting director of the narcotic division. He said agents had arrested the ring leaders of five gangs and had captured all the principals in the narcotic smuggling schemes along the Atlantic coast.

Frankie Fields, who, Anslinger said, was a wholesale narcotic dealer "who supplies Wilmington, Delaware," was arrested in New York. Fields was an independent dealer not affiliated with any of the gangs, the narcotic bureau official said.

All of the narcotic smugglers were arraigned before United States commissioners and held under heavy bond on charges of violating the narcotic laws.

MACDONALD DEFENDS TREATY PROPOSALS WITH EGYPT

LONDON, July 29—(AP)—Strenuous defense of Egyptian treaty proposals and of the labor government's attitude toward Egypt today was made by Premier MacDonald in the house of commons.

The prime minister was attacked by Winston Churchill, who demanded to known if it was not "providential" that British troops had not been withdrawn before the recent troubles started.

"To talk about British troops being necessary in Cairo in order to maintain law and order in Egypt has been proved to be mere fiction," declared Mr. MacDonald. He added that this proof never was more clear than in the recent event, since owing to the manner in which disturbances had been handled by British warships, ordered to Egypt, had found it possible to leave at once.

The premier said there was an Egyptian agreement in existence by which the British government stood.

"There is one outstanding point upon which we also stand," he declared. "As soon as Egypt is prepared to come to an agreement with us upon its lines, we are ready to effect it."

CHICAGO HEARING ON COMMUNISTS ADJOURNED

CHICAGO, July 29—(AP)—Congressional inquiry into communistic activities in the Chicago area was adjourned today after numerous witnesses had testified the "red menace" was of no serious consequence in this metropolis.

The adjournment took place suddenly when Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, chairman of the committee, dismissed Arthur Fisher, a Chicago attorney, in the midst of his testimony and announced no further evidence would be heard.

Fisher, head of the Chicago Civil Liberties committee, had engaged in an argument with Rep. John E. Nelson of Maine, who objected to Fisher's attacks on the police.

After a heated argument Nelson walked out of the hearing with the assertion, "I'm not going to listen to any more of this man's attack on the Chicago police."

The witness condemned the methods of the Chicago police department in dealing with communists. Rep. Nelson demanded that Fisher confine himself to answering questions and became exasperated when the witness continued making critical statements.

Chairman Fish said the committee would return to Washington and declare a recess.

Conference On Dry Enforcement Today

Administrators Are to Meet In Washington to Settle Details of Policy.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—(AP)—The knotty problems of prohibition enforcement will be heaped on a conference table tomorrow and analyzed and discussed by the men directly responsible for their solution.

At the call of Amos W. W. Woodcock, director of prohibition, the 12 regional administrators in charge of enforcement in the field, will gather here to settle details of policy.

President Hoover late today went over the program of the session with Woodcock, Attorney General Mitchell and Assistant Attorney General G. Aaron Youngquist. The three were called to the white house by Mr. Hoover and spent more than an hour in consultation.

Tomorrow's meeting will be the first gathering of the directing heads of prohibition enforcement since the administration of the dry laws was transferred from the treasury to the justice department.

At the outset, Woodcock plans an informal talk to his aides, outlining enforcement policy as thus far formulated and presenting the major problems now confronting him.

A thorough discussion is to follow, in which the 12 administrators, all experienced in prohibition enforcement, will present their views.

Woodcock will confer with Attorney Mitchell at noon and late in the day he plans to issue a statement summarizing the progress of the conference and telling in particular what was included in his own address.

The conference will continue on Thursday. At the same time the 12 permit administrators of the treasury's division of industrial alcohol, will hold a similar meeting with James M. Doran, chief of the division.

The men who will attend tomorrow's conference are: Jonathan S. Lewis, Boston; Andrew McCampbell, New York city; John Pennington, Philadelphia; R. Q. Merrick, Richmond, Va.; Robert F. Tuttle, New Orleans; W. N. Woodruff, Cincinnati; J. F. J. Herbert, Chicago; M. L. Harney, St. Paul; George H. Wark, Kansas City; John F. Vivian, Denver; William G. Walker, San Francisco, and Carl Jackson, Seattle.

The question of obtaining a maximum of co-operation from local authorities in enforcing the anti-liquor statutes is expected to make a prominent place in tomorrow's discussion.

Attorney General Mitchell holds that an enforcement of maximum efficiency "can come only through the united efforts of the state and federal governments." He believed the power and duty of enforcement rests concurrently upon both.

14 OF CREW WENT DOWN WITH DREDGE IN LAKE ERIE

ERIE, Pa., July 29—(AP)—The sand dredge George J. Whelan and 14 members of its crew lay in Lake Erie off Dunkirk, N. Y., last night. Six survivors and the body of another of the crew were here as federal authorities prepared for investigation of the accident that sank the craft in approximately 190 feet of water.

Early this morning, the steamer Amasa Stone came into port here with the survivors and the first definite word of the wreck. In the black night, the Whelan plunged over and floated bottom up for half an hour with several of the crew clinging to it. The vessel sank and only six men were left to be picked up later by the Stone.

The one body recovered was that of Thomas Pierce, of Sandusky, O., found by a coast guard cutter out of Buffalo late today. Among the other victims was the captain of the Whelan, T. J. Wagge, Cleveland, and a woman, Mrs. Charles Godfrey, of Cleveland, a cook on the vessel.

British Parliament Ratifies Naval Treaty

King George Will Give Royal Assent to the Bill Before the End of the Week.

LONDON, July 29.—(AP)—The British parliament in effect ratified the London naval treaty today when a bill designed to support its terms passed through all its stages in the house of lords.

Today's progress of the measure left nothing more to be done so far as Great Britain is concerned until the final implements of ratification are exchanged formally between the signatories to the treaty excepting for King George to give the royal assent to the bill, which he will do before the end of the week.

The measure was purely technical in its form, containing the necessary legislation to cancel Britain's commitments under the Washington treaty, where such cancellation was required to give effect to the new treaty.

The house of lords passed the bill today without taking a vote and with the minimum of debate. As before, popular interest in the whole proceedings remained precisely nil.

There never had been any doubt that parliament would take whatever steps were necessary, the treaty adherents declared, to ratify their action and the British public remained throughout wholly unconcerned with the nature of those technicalities.

FEVERISH DAY IN BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS

LONDON, July 29—(AP)—The house of commons passed a feverish afternoon and evening today in an attempt to deal with all outstanding measures before the end of the week when the session closes. One of the most important matters under discussion was October Indian round table conference.

The house fo lords debated Indian affairs at great length on a motion by Lord Burnham regarding the position of the Simon report in the forthcoming conference. No concrete result followed the debate.

In addition to discussing Indian affairs the house of commons dealt with the usual variety of questions on domestic matters and also debated a foreign office vote which led into lengthy discussion on Egypt.

The house of lords debated Indian naval treaty bill, the finance bill and the government's Scottish housing bill. Both the London naval treaty and the British budget have now passed though all their parliamentary stages. The lords also engaged in a debate on the future of Malta as an airbase.

A DECISIVE VICTORY FOR CONSERVATIVES IN CANADA

OTTAWA, July 29—(AP)—A smashing, dominion-wide victory at yesterday's polls has returned the conservative party to power in Canada for the first time since the world war, and has placed R. B. Bennett, 60-year-old Calgary bachelor and political veteran, at the helm of state as premier-elect.

Tonight, with three house of commons seats still in doubt out of 245, the conservatives had won 137 seats, the liberals 85, the united farmers ten, the liberal progressives and the laborites three apiece, and the progressives and the independents two each.

Even if the opposition were to win all the contests still undetermined, the conservative government, replacing the nine year regime of the liberals and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, is sure of out-and-out control of the dominion parliament.

HOOVER TO CONTINUE APPOINTING COMMISSIONS

WASHINGTON, July 29—(AP)—President Hoover paused today in announcing the creation of a new fact-finding commission to defend the practice and promise that he would name other such groups.

His new commission was set up to determine a more stable basis for unemployment relief. It will be composed of representatives of labor, industries, research organizations and the government and will revise existing methods of collecting unemployment statistics and "establish the method of co-operation between government departments and business."

The president presented statistics to show that the 17 commissions he had set up in as many months fell below the average named by the various chief executives since President Roosevelt took over the post.

The fire seemed to burn with renewed vigor and great clouds of black smoke indicated the flames were being fed by a heavier flow of oil.

TELLS OF FALSE TESTIMONY OF SAN FRANCISCO BOMBING

John MacDonald Declared In Supreme Court That He Gave False Testimony At the Mooney-Billings Trial At the Instance of Charles Fickert, Then District Attorney—Said That Fickert Told Him That If He Would Stand By the Identification of Billings and Mooney He Would Get the Biggest Slice of the $17,500 Reward.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—(AP)—John MacDonald, 58-year-old Baltimore waiter, today told the California supreme court he lied in 1916 when he testified Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings were to blame for the bomb explosion which killed ten and wounded 40 participants in a preparedness parade here.

MacDonald was brought from Baltimore by persons interested in freeing Mooney and Billings, serving life terms in San Quentin and Folsom prisons for the bombing. Billings had previously been convicted of a felony.

Under California law a person twice convicted cannot petition the governor for a pardon without a recommendation from the state supreme court. Such a recommendation recently was denied Billings. As a result Governor C. C. Young announced he would pardon neither Billings nor Mooney, saying evidence before the court and before the advisory pardon board indicated both were guilty.

Then came MacDonald.

Bent and gray, and walking with a cane, the little waiter whose testimony played such an important part in the trials came out of the east "to ease his conscience" and sat before a tribunal unprecedented in California. Never before had the state supreme court sat unofficially to hear evidence in a felony case.

MacDonald surrounded by the justices and lawyers, the latter representing Mooney and Billings as well as himself. Among them was Frank P. Walsh, eminent eastern criminal lawyer who has fought for Mooney's freedom continually since his conviction.

MacDonald looked at these judges and lawyers and at 40 newspapermen and several police officers and admitted he had lied four times. This he did when Justice Preston of the court asked him if he hadn't told five different stories at five different times about the case. MacDonald answered he had.

"How is the court to know which one to believe?" Justice Preston asked.

"Only by your own judgment," replied MacDonald.

The witness recently made an affidavit in which he said he was "prompted" by authorities here to identify Mooney and Billings as the men who placed the bomb at Market and Steuart streets in July, 1916.

Using this affidavit as the basis of questioning, the court asked MacDonald if he gave false testimony at the time of the bombing. He said he did and that he was "induced" to do so by Charles Fickert, then district attorney, who was one of the lawyers attending the hearing today.

"A whole pack of lies was packed into my head," MacDonald said, referring to his "inducement" by Fickert. Both Fickert and Captain Charles Goff of the police department then a sergeant in charge of the investigation, have denied they prompted MacDonald. They said he appeared voluntarily and identified Mooney and Billings.

Speaking of the explosion, MacDonald said he heard the blast but thought it was a signal for the start of the parade. He said he first heard of the disaster from the keeper of a restaurant where he had stopped for a glass of buttermilk.

Walter Johnson, proprietor, advised him to see the police when he told him of seeing the man with the suitcase.

"I told him I did not want to get mixed up in it," said MacDonald.

The questioning then disclosed a policeman also advised MacDonald to tell police. The result was the second day after the bombing he went to the hall of justice.

MacDonald said his first contact with Mooney and Billings was two or three days later. Captain Charles Goff, he said, brought him a book containing pictures of Billings and Mooney.

"Goff told me these were the men," MacDonald said, "but I told him they didn't look like the men to me."

Judge Preston attempted to learn when MacDonald had changed his mind and decided to identify Mooney and Billings as the men he had seen carrying the suitcase. MacDonald said he talked with Fickert eight or ten times before he went before the grand jury where he made the positive identification.

"What did you do before the grand jury?" questioned Preston.

"I did what I was told," was the answer.

"You swore as God was your judge that the men you had seen were Mooney and Billings?" asked Preston.

MacDonald's affirmative answer was barely heard.

"And you swore this at the time God was judging you to be a liar?" asked the judge.

MacDonald wept quietly and did not reply.

The $17,500 reward for the bombers was discussed.

"Fickert told me if I would stand by the identification of Billings and Mooney I would get the biggest slice of the reward," MacDonald said.

Chief Justice William H. Waste presided at the hearing which was held off bench, because informal. Justice John W. Preston initiated the questioning. After the justices finished lawyers interested were permitted to ask questions.

Both Mooney and Billings had asked to be present but their attendance was not held necessary. Mrs. Mary Mooney, aged mother of Thomas Mooney, however, was admitted and was an interested spectator, hardly removing her eyes from MacDonald.

A close guard was maintained at the state building by federal and city officials to prevent any possible violence.

FIVE KILLED DURING RELIGIOUS CELEBRATION

MADRID, July 29.—(AP)—Five persons were reported to have been killed and 20 wounded today at Santiago De Castaneda in a free-for-all fight that broke out during celebration of a religious holiday.

Many were arrested by police sent from other towns. Order was restored in the evening.

COLCHESTER

CLARK Z. OTIS DIES AT HIS BINGHAMTON HOME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

COLCHESTER, July 29—Clark Z. Otis, 80, a native of Colchester, dean of New York state druggists, and for the past 56 years a prominent druggist in Binghamton, N. Y., died at his home in Binghamton at 1:15 o'clock this (Tuesday) afternoon. He had been active in the conduct of his business up to a few weeks ago, when he was stricken with an attack of acute indigestion, after which his condition grew steadily worse.

Mr. Otis was born in Colchester in 1850, attended the local public schools and was graduated from Bacon academy here under Deacon Alden A. Baker, the only instructor in the institution at that time.

In 1873 he went to Binghamton and entered the drug business with his brother, Frank, also a native of Colchester. In 1884 Mr. Otis was appointed by Governor Grover Cleveland of New York one of the first members of the board of pharmacy and has continued his active association with that board for nearly 50 years.

In 1886 he was elected president of the New York State Pharmaceutical association and, at a recent golden jubilee observance of that body, held at Saratoga Springs, he was a guest of honor, being one of the five living past presidents and the oldest member of the organization.

In recognition of his long service in the state organization, he was selected as one of the five New York state representatives to attend the convention of the U. S. Pharmacopeia held last May in Washington, D. C. Recognition came to Mr. Otis early in his career when he was proprietor of Binghamton's first large Court street drug store. He was active in stamping out the dope evil, at that time regulated by few state or national laws.

Remedies offered to the public were found to contain habit-forming drugs and it was through the efforts of Mr. Otis that a great deal of the early corrective legislation was brought about. He won a reputation for strict observance of the ethics of his profession and was a recognized authority on all matters pertaining to the retail drug trade. Up to a few weeks ago he was active in conduct of his business and always enjoyed the confidence of leaders in the medical profession, both in his home city and throughout the state.

He watched Binghamton develop from the day of the cedar-block pavements, the horsecars and the farmers' rigs which used to tie up at the hitching posts in front of his store, to its present metropolitan aspect and was as well posted on local and state affairs as he was on matters pertaining to his profession. He was a former Binghamton police commissioner, former treasurer of the Binghamton state hospital and held various public offices during his long and useful life. For the past 58 years he had been an active and loyal member of Binghamton lodge, Knights of Pythias.

He was a direct descendant of James Otis, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Albert T. Van Cleve, of Colchester.

POETRY

Pan-Pipes

Pan—did you say he was dead, that he'd gone, and for good—
Gone with the Dryads and all of the shy forest faces?
Who was it then plucked your sleeve as you came through the wood,
What of the whisper that waits in the oddest of places?

Pan of the garden, the fold,
Pan of the birds and the beast
Kindly, he lives as of old,
He isn't dead in the least!

Yes, you may find him today (how the reeds twitter on,
Tuneful, as once when he followed young
Bacchus's leopards)!
Stiffer he may be, perhaps, since our moonlight has shone
Centuries long on his goat-horns— old
Pan of the shepherds!

Brown are his tatters, his tan
Roughened from tillage and toil,
Pagan [illegible] homely, but Pan—
Pan of [illegible] sap and the soil!

Find him, in fact, in the Park when the first crocus cowers:
Cockney he is when it suits him, I know that he knocks his
Crook at my window at times o'er six-
penn'orth of flowers,
Gives me his blessing anew with my fresh window-boxes!

Piping the leaf on the larch,
Piping the nymphs (in the Row),
Piping a magic of March,
Just as he did long ago!

—Patrick Chalmers.

At the Symphony

The 'cellos, setting forth apart,
Grumbled and sang, and so the day,
From the low beaches of my heart,
Turned in tranquility away.

And over weariness and doubt
Rose up the horns like bellied sails,
Like canvas of the soul flung out
To rising and orchestral gales;

Passed on and left irresolute
The ebony, the silver throat
Low over clarinet and flute
Hung heaven upon a single note.

—Robert Nathan.

TANTRUMS?
MAYBE IT'S WORMS

THEY are much more common than most mothers think, and may change the best natured, most obedient youngster into a cross and nervous child.

Look also for the following symptoms: grinding the teeth, picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

DANIELSON

HEADQUARTERS TROOP LEAVES FOR CAMP ON SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 29.— A special train carrying members of the famed 102d infantry from cities in the central part of the state will make a stop here Saturday morning at 10:40, to take aboard members of the Headquarters troops of the 43d division stationed at the local armory. The 102d infantry is of special interest to people hereabouts, because it was in that battle-torn regiment that a number of Danielson young men served overseas during the World war, when it was a part of the historic Yankee division. Saturday's special train, carrying hundreds of troops, will have one car for the use of the local soldiers and will also stop here long enough to pick up a baggage car.

Registering their loyalty to and interest in him, agents of a life insurance company, for which Henry P. Dubuc of Mechanic street is a detached assistant manager, have scored a success in writing new business to mark Mr. Dubuc's sixth anniversary in his present position. They agreed to turn in new policies to the number of letters making up his name, and have done this. To qualify, 2500 points were necessary, and the agents bettered this by reaching the 2600 mark.

Next Wednesday, August 6, Dr. Ingraham and her assistants in charge of Well Child work of the state department of health will come here to hold a clinic, at the high school building, from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. It is especially desired to have in attendance children who are to enter school for the first time in September, and for these there will be no charge for the examinations that will be made. Local workers are making a special effort to have a very large attendance of children at this clinic.

Myron Witter, owner and publisher of the Brawley (California) Daily News, Mrs. Witter and two of their daughters are visiting with Mr. Witter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David A. Witter of Furnace street. They arrived last evening after a pleasant and interesting trip from the coast via the Panama canal, traveling on the S. S. Virginia. Myron Witter began his newspaper work here upwards of 25 years ago. Today, he is an outstanding figure in the Imperial valley of California and as a member of the last California legislature handled the Boulder Dam legislation. In all probability he will again represent his district in the coming session of the legislature and likely will be unopposed for re-nomination. Mr. Witter is a republican.

An interesting fact in connection with Mr. Witter's newspaper publishing business is that in addition to his daily paper, which is of widespread influence, he also publishes a weekly, printed in Spanish, that has its circulation among Mexicans both in the United States and in Mexico in territory near Brawley.

Two bids for the proposed bond issues of the borough of Danielson were received prior to the hour set for opening them at noon today. Both bids are from Boston financial houses, it is understood, though no detailed information was available relative to the subject this afternoon. It was stated that the bids will be placed before the warden and court of burgesses for approval before any final action is taken. The issue is for $50,000. Attorney Harry E. Back, member of the court of burgesses, former warden and who has done much of the preparatory work relative to issuing the bonds, could not be reached this afternoon for specific information pertaining to the bids that have been received.

William Pellerin, who was found in a state of semi-starvation and removed to the Day Kimball hospital the past week end, remains at the institution. He is gradually being built up in health and strength. It appears that Pellerin has been living alone in a shack near Fall brook, about a mile below the southerly limits of the borough. When working he was employed as a factory hand. It was said today that he likely will ultimately recover from his present condition.

After Thursday that era of calculation and final accounting that comes each year in the office of the selectmen of Killingly will be underway, and in due course of time a statement will be issued as to how the town has fared financially during the past twelve months, for the coming Thursday marks the end of another fiscal year.

Until the close of business Thursday, however, there is no means of saying down to the last dollar just what the final balance sheet will show. It is possible, however, to say even at this time that Killingly has come through the fiscal year without extraordinary expenses and that the annual report will be a very good and highly encouraging one. That is now assured. Day by day throughout the year there has been a well directed and sustained effort to keep costs down as low as possible. The results of this rigid attention to curbing expense is practically certain to be reflected in the annual reports. A reduction in the indebtedness of the town may be anticipated with the greatest confidence.

Raymond H. Dubuc, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Dubuc of Mechanic street, is numbered among the large group of boys in St. Mary's Boy Scout camp in Woodstock. He will return here the coming week end.

Steady progress has been made this week in excavating for the foundations for the American Telephone and Telegraph repeater station that is to be erected on the West Side. Use of a steam shovel is hurrying along the work. Laying of the foundations will be underway within a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Bailey of Saskatchewan, in the Canadian northwest, and their daughter are visiting with relatives here. Mr. Bailey was a resident of Danielson during his earlier years.

As to having any band concerts on Davis park this season, the prospect simmers down to the possibility that the Killingly high school band may be gracious enough to make one or more appearance there after the opening of school in September.

Charles Scofield, proof-reader for years past on a Boston daily newspaper, is spending a vacation of two weeks in Danielson with his sister, Mrs. Hattie Bailey, of School street. For many years Mr. Scofield was a resident here.

Busses of the Connecticut company this morning began traveling between Danielson and Wauregan via Brooklyn. The route is 2.8 miles longer than the direct one between Danielson and Wauregan, but because no stops are made between the two places under this temporary arrangement schedules are easily being maintained.

This week, possibly by Thursday, concreting work will begin on the state highway job underway between Wauregan and Danielson. The concrete work will start near the Wauregan schoolhouse and proceed northward. The mixer is on hand, ready to go into action.

From out of this territory early this evening went numbers of young people, admirers of Rudy Vallee, who was making a personal appearance with his dance band at Rhodes-on-the Pawtuxet, near Providence.

Several Danielson boys, who are at the Tri-County "Y" camp at Camp Woodstock, will return home Wednesday, when the large number of boys there will break camp for the season. The girls' camp opens Friday of this week and will continue until August 15.

JEWETT CITY

MRS. I. S. BENJAMIN SUCCEEDS MRS. HISCOX AS CHORISTER

Mrs. Irene Stewart Benjamin is to succeed Mrs. Everett H. Hiscox as chorister of the Congregational church choir, the latter retiring from the position last Sunday. Mrs. Benjamin has been a member of the choir and the organist for several years. Mrs. Hiscox became a member of the choir when she was eighteen years old, and sang in the chorus choir under Dwight D. Tracy's and E. F. Burleson's training. She succeeded Mrs. Lucy Young Sweet as organist, serving until F. S. Leonard became the organist. For several years she was a member of a quartet which followed the chorus choir. When it became necessary to organize another young people's choir, she succeeded Mr. Burleson as choir leader. In sixty years the choir leaders in this church have been "the Bromleys," Charles Edward Prior, Dwight D. Tracy, Edward F. Burleson, Theodore A. Robinson and Mrs. Hiscox. Mrs. Hiscox has always received the heartiest support and appreciates that fact, hoping that the same encouragement will be given Mrs. Benjamin, who is fitted by musical ability and choir experience to assume the duties of chorister.

KENNETH CARPENTER STRUCK BY A TRUCK

Kenneth Carpenter, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Carpenter, is a patient at Westerly hospital. With his parents he is at Misquamicut for several weeks. Monday, he went with his father and uncle to Charlestown beach on a crabbing expedition. In some manner, he was struck by a truck, causing a concussion of the brain. There were two bad lacerations on his head and neck also. At the hospital he recovered consciousness but for a few days, how serious his condition is cannot be determined. The lad is a very lovable boy and his friends here hope to hear encouraging reports from him soon.

BOY'S INGENUITY SHOWN IN GETTING DOBSON FOR BAIT

If one should look into the door of one of the through postal cars when the mail trains stop at New London, he would see, at this season, cans of helgramite (dobson) going to the Maine and New Hampshire fishing camps to be used for black bass bait. They are shipped in moss from points in Pennsylvania, and are not infrequently worth $10 per hundred. Boys Tuesday afternoon were turning stones in the first big eel weir below the railroad bridge, dobson hunting. Local bass fishermen were buying the bait Thursday, two for 5 cents. One boy had an ordinary window screen which, after he had taken his post on the down-stream side of the stone to be turned, the current held against his legs. After tipping up three, or four stones, the boy lifted up the screen and picked off the dobson where they had caught the wire.

A great deal of interest is being shown by the people of Putnam in the inquest which is being held today before Judge Louis Rieutord of the first district court into the death of Mrs. Rosanna Gadoury of Webster, who was killed on May 30 on the road from Webster to Quinebaug. Mrs. Gadoury was well known in this city as was Miss Alice Gadoury the driver of the car. NEW TARIFF MAY REVIVE POTTERY

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio—(AP)—A stimulus to the nation's pottery industry is expected by Ohio potters to result from the Hawley-Smoot tariff law.

James M. Duffy, president of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, believes increased duties provided in the measure will reduce the amount of ware from such producers as Japan, Germany, Czechoslovakia, France and even Great Britain.

Benefits to American industry, he said, probably will not be realized before September 1.

Before enactment of the law, he said, importers laid in large stocks of foreign ware, and some time will be required to dispose of it.

Under the new tariff old ad valorem rates of 45 per cent on plain and 50 per cent on decorated earthenware, and 60 and 70 per cent on decorated and undecorated chinaware, are retained, with an additional new tariff of 10 cents a dozen pieces.

During the past year most American ceramic plants have operated on part-time basis.

This region, center of the pottery industry of the United States, recently has seen several consolidations, including the formation of a $25,000,000 combine in 1929.

MONTANA FARMS LEAD IN USING ELECTRICITY

BILLINGS, Mont.—(AP)—Montana is leading the nation in applying electric power to farm uses.

A NAVY BY TREATY

Orders have gone forth from the secretary of the navy for the preparation of a building programme that will bring the navy up to the treaty limit in the prescribed time, which calls for a considerable extension of the authorized schedule. When congress meets for its short session in December, it is presumed that this navy programme will be included in the navy department's report to the legislators, and as this short session will be principally occupied with the budget, along with pressure to reduce expenses, it is the financial angle that will probably bulk largely in the consideration that will be given to the navy proposals.

There have been estimates that from $800,000,000 to $900,000,000 would have to be spent if the United States begins a five-year building programme to bring the navy up to the 1936 treaty strength. These figures were what furnished basis for the arguments of some opponents of the London treaty on the ground of the tremendous financial strain which it would place on this country. The probability would appear to be that recommendations will be held down to a necessity level, having in mind immediate defense needs and the likelihood that the first American move under the new treaty will be watched by other nations with considerable interest.

Senatorial advocates of the treaty were willing to rest their case on an assumption that the country will proceed immediately to build the maximum allowable in each class. In considering a combined cruiser and airplane carrier, the navy department already has presented a variation of the programme and perhaps introduced an element that will complicate discussion. By concentrating at the outset upon filling out the cruiser allotment, building the new airplane carrier and bringing the submarine complement up to the allowance, it is probable that the department will obtain authorization of a considerably augmented schedule. Timidity in the face of concessions made to complete the treaty negotiations would be out of keeping with the traditions of American commerce and the country's feeling that, if it is to sustain its necessary foreign trade, it must make itself felt in a way intelligible to the sea commerce interests of the world.

"MA" FERGUSON COMES BACK

In the swing of Texas politics the Ferguson family doesn't propose to be counted out. Ten men were running in the gubernatorial primaries against the former Governor Miriam A. Ferguson who appears to lead her nearest opponent by 50,000 votes, which, however, is not enough to give her a majority and a runoff primary fight is to follow between her and Ross F. Sterling. Governor Dan Moody will support anybody who will beat Mrs. Ferguson, while an illuminating sidelight is furnished by the vote for Love, the candidate with Hoover affiliations. He was a bad fourth, which would indicate that Texas is not wavering from its place in the democratic ranks.

"Ma" Ferguson is back on the battle line again in a factional contest that has been waging since her governor husband, James E. Ferguson, was impeached on charges brought by the K. K. K. "Jim" Ferguson couldn't run himself in 1924, but his wife ran and was elected. The first bill she signed was one to nullify the impeachment of her husband, but the impression prevailed that he was the real governor still, although she held the name of the office, and there was resentment over the fredom with which the pardoning power had been exercised. When Dan Moody ran against her at the next election, "Ma" Ferguson was defeated. Then the Moody crowd promptly nullified the nullifying law as to the Ferguson impeachment. This year "Jim" couldn't run because the courts forbade him, so his wife had to go on the battle line again. She is not certain to be the democratic candidate in the runoff, but her chances are considered good. Texas is punishing the Moody faction for riding roughshod over opponents and using every technicality to shut them out of opportunities. The state has a bucking tendency that has to be looked out for by the democrats, but generally speaking she is pretty dependable for the party.

LIVING TO 156

The claim of Zaro Agha, the aged Turk, who gives his age as 156 years, is challenged by an insurance actuary, who not only doubts but declares such an age is impossible for a human being. The insurance man points to figures and statistics in support of his contention.

It is recalled that at one time insurance men were disposed to deny the authenticity of all centenarians, and the last of them did not yield that point of view until confronted with the unquestionable instance of Sir Moses Montefiore in England.

When the arguments against this visitor from Turkey having reached the age of 156 years are made, the claim is advanced that experts now say that no one has yet been able to fully authenticate any asserted case of a human being's living beyond 106 years. They can point to a number of specific cases where persons alleged to be older than that were proved either to have added to the count deliberately or to have lost track and have made honest errors on the long side. The actuaries summon statistics to their support against the probability of living to 156. According to the American experience table of mortality among the insured more persons die in each year above ninety than survive. At that rate the chance that any person reaching a hundred would live another year is less than fifty per cent, and to live on for fifty-six more years is so small as to be negligible.

At the rate indicated, it would be safe to bet all the money in the world against a cent with a centenarian that he would not live to 156 and still be taking a mean advantage of the man who put up the cent. But perhaps American statistics do not apply in Turkey or maybe after a hundred and ten or so youth returns. There are so many big "ifs" that the chance of living to 156 at this stage of the world is too small to be detected with a microscope.

EMPLOYE STOCK OWNERSHIP

Following the collapse in the securities market last fall, which found many employes owning stock in the companies by which they were employed, an investigation was begun by the national industrial conference board to determine whether any considerable part of these workers lost part of their investments and to learn whether the policy of employe ownership maintains its popularity with corporation managements and employes notwithstanding the developments during the period of strain. The report of the board's conclusions is at once illuminating and gratifying.

Stock subscription plans stood the market ordeal surprisingly well. The board examined 150 plans in its survey and found that three plans were being modified because of lessons learned in the crash, while four had been discontinued, but not as a result of market developments. In fact, it appears that there is increasing favor and popularity for stock ownership policies arranged for employes. They have demonstrated that they will yield the benefits expected of them. It is found also that there was very little general selling of stock by investors of this class, while the belief prevalent in some circles that employers and managers had grown skeptical of the economic or moral advantages of the policy is declared to be false. On the contrary, it is the conclusion of the investigating board that owners of stock who are employes of the company issuing the stock are as a class more efficient and more keenly interested in the prosperity of the enterprise than are their fellow workers, as a class.

The policy of extending to workers the opportunity of owning stock in the companies which employ them has passed beyond the experimental stage, and there is good reason to believe that the return of normally prosperous business conditions will be followed by extension of this policy.

PARCEL POST TO CUBA

Cigar importers have long been able to exercise such an influence that they have prevented any parcel post between the United States and Cuba, intending thereby to prevent direct dealing between Cuban producers and American buyers. But their fight now seems to have been lost through the signing by Postmaster General Brown and Senator Jose A. Montalvo, Cuban director of posts, of a new parcel post convention. Because of the controversy there has been no parcel post service between America and Cuba since March 1, 1928. Now that the service is restored the Cuban representative expresses his gratitude for the restoration of the right to export freely to the United States the only mailable product which Cuba has.

When the matter of parcel post arrangements between Cuba and the United States came up in March, 1928, this country refused to make any convention that would permit the sending to this country by parcel post of cigars "in packages containing less than 3,000." This meant that the commercial importers were virtually guaranteed a monopoly, since few if any individuals would order cigars in 3,000 lots. That point has been yielded under the new convention. An American customer may order 100 cigars or 50 cigars to be sent to him from Cuba; they will naturally be subject to duty charges, but direct commerce will not be interefered with.

The conclusion seems to be that the cigar importers have been able to exercise so strong a "pull" in Washington that they have been able for several years to interrupt the entire parcel post convenience, as far as Cuba was concerned. The change indicates that there are times when lobbying influence is not all-powerful in the national capital.

Another reason there are not more careful drivers is that many don't care to be so classified.

ART FOR ART'S SAKE

To look at Bill one would never think he had a broken heart. In the first place he wasn't the type, and in the second one couldn't imagine any girl doing the dastardly deed. For Bill was so tall and so good-looking in a tanned outdoor way that to a casual observer it seemed that in an affair involving hearts he was much more likely to be the breaker than the breakee.

Such, however, was not the case. Bill met Marcia at the only studio tea he had ever attended in his twenty-eight years. He would not have gone at all, having a stronger leaning toward business than art and no taste whatever for tea, if he hadn't happened to run across an old college friend who did enjoy such things and who prevailed against Bill's better judgment. Afterward, of course, he was glad, because scarcely had he entered the big, smoke-filled, noisy studio than his gaze fell on Marcia. After that his friend's efforts to get him there were as nothing beside those he had to use to get him away.

For Marcia was slim and smart and possessed a pair of dark eyes whose potency may be judged by Bill's subsequent actions. When his friend had justified his existence by introducing them, Bill sat beside her on a low, cushioned couch and they talked. And presently she asked that question which is really inevitable at a studio tea.

"Do you paint, Mr. Clark?"

"Why no," admitted Bill. "I guess I'm here under false pretenses. I sell bonds."

And from that moment this acquaintance which had seemed to promise so much, at least to Bill, semed to suffer a blight. For Marcia did paint. Yes, indeed. She did very modernistic canvases, broad beams of light, headlines bodies, bodiless heads, detached wings; just the sort of thing that Bill, in common with most other people, thought perfectly ghastly.

The first time he called on her (she had conceded him that rather hesitantly) she ushered him into her workroom and showed him her latest creation, a little thing she had named "Light" for no apparent reason. Bill stood quite horrified for perhaps a minute and then said, "My stars!" Even after he had explained that he meant this as a tribute Marcia remained doubtful and quite cool. She did not snub him completely, because even if he were perfectly benighted on the subject of art—in Marcia's estimation—still he was nice to look at, and he had, she learned before long, a wonderful taste in places to go to dance, and a really sweet habit of sending orchids, and a something about him that made her hitherto dependable heart accelerate alarmingly.

Of course, Bill being unaware of all this, thought that she just put up with him because she had a sweet disposition. So when he did propose and was quite definitely rejected in favor of a career, he acquired the broken heart previously referred to.

It helped his heart, he discovered, to be with Marcia anyway, and as she didn't seem to mind they still saw each other frequently in a perfectly friendly way. And so Bill heard of it when she decided to enter "Light" in a certain exhibition. To win a prize in this showing was a very great honor and incidentally carried a monetary reward.

Bill didn't go, although Marcia told him where the gallery was. He couldn't bear it. The thought of viewing a picture of Marcia's surrounded by hundreds of similar works of art made him slightly ill. He did invite her to dinner that evening though, and at 7 o'clock presented himself at her studio door. Already his heart felt improved at the mere thought of spending an evening with her. When he knocked there was no response, and when he repeated it a very muffled voice bade him enter. He did hastily, to behold the usually self-possessed, always poised Marcia face downward on the divan, weeping bitterly.

"Darling," exclaimed Bill, dropping hat and orchids and immediately transferring Marcia's face to his shoulder, which was a much more satisfactory place to weep. "What is it? Can I do anything?"

Marcia looked up at him through wet lashes.

"Maybe you can, Bill, dear," she told him, "that is if you still—well, if you haven't changed your—"

"You mean you'll marry me," Bill cried, incredulously. "Sweetheart."

After an interval very enjoyably spent, he had the grace to remember the exhibition, and suddenly the reason for Marcia's change of heart occurred to him.

"Did they pass up your picture dear? Was that what gave me the inside track on this career business?"

"No," answered Marcia, "I got first prize." And she began to cry again.

"But I don't understand. If—"

"That's just it," wailed Marcia, snuggling even closer. "First prize, $1,000, lots of honor and the old fools had my picture hung upside down."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 29—The notion that the vice president of the United States, except for his duties as presiding officer of the senate, is a sort of official idler in government life does not seem to hold good so far as Charles Curtis of Kansas is concerned.

You'll find him every day at his office in the senate office building or strolling over to the senate cafe for a cup of coffee before 8 a. m.

No preceding vice president within the Bystander's memory showed such signs of industry. An investigation developed that Mr. Curtis just had to turn to his mail and other routine office business at that time of day if he ever was going to get a chance at it.

From noon on, when congress is in session, the vice president of course is tied to the senate's whim as to when it will shut up shop for the day. He has no voice in the matter.

And despite the fact that he has no patronage to dispense and of necessity plays a rather passive role in senate party leadership matters, the vice president gets an average of 100 or so letters a day.

At least that is what Vice President Curtis gets as compared to the 200 to 300 a day he used to find on his desk when he was Senator Curtis.

That would be all right, and a leisurely 9 or 10 o'clock arrival at the capitol would be admissable except for one other thing.

President Hoover does not keep open house for visitors at the other end of the capitol as President Coolidge used to do. And since the Hoover-Curtis ticket came into office, the Curtis end of it has had a lot of official greetings to extend.

Delegations galore pour into Washington demanding some sort of recognition. Many of them want to see Curtis and others are passed along down Pennsylvania avenue to him by the white house secretariat.

So Mr. Curtis, always having had a liking for rather early hours, turns out of his hotel suite downtown before the average government clerk is even thinking of getting up every morning.

Before 9 a. m. his desk is sufficiently clear to permit the visiting firemen, et cetera, to start paying their respects.

"Which part of your Washington service has been most enjoyable?" the Bystander asked Mr. Curtis. "House, senate service or the vice presidency?"

"I have enjoyed it all," he answered.

YOUR HEALTH

Hot Weather Hints

By George Cheever Shattuck, M. D. Boston, Massachusetts.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute, Washington, D. C.)

What can we do to be comfortable? Wear light clothing, of course, walk on the shady side of the street, and avoid over-eating, hurry and worry. "Cooling drinks" are delicious but the cooler they are the hotter they make one feel. On the other hand, a cup of tea starts the perspiration but one soon feels cooler.

As to food, there is a common belief that meat should be avoided in hot weather. It is more reasonable to eat lightly of the starches and sugars, and above all of the greasy foods, but to partake freely of meat or fish, fresh vegetables, and fruits.

For persons who are not overweight nutrition of the body should be maintained in hot weather as at other times. A long spell of heat tends to make one thin, a sign that abundance of nutriment is needed. But to digest and to assimilate the food required by the body may be difficult in hot weather for the digestion, like the other functions, becomes sluggish. The antidote is exercise,—reasonable in amount and suited to the physique of the individual. Exercise stimulates digestion and, at the same time, aids the elimination of waste products which, when retained, produce "that tired feeling."

In the day-time by keeping busy one can forget the heat but how about the night? The mattress is soft and sticky, the feather pillow envelops the head like a turban and there is no comfort in any position. What can be done? The draft from an electric fan turned upon a perspiring back is likely to cause lumbago and a chilled abdomen may respond with diarrhea. Therefore, use the fan with care and cover the abdomen in any case with a corner of the sheet. What is needed for comfort is a smooth, flat, hard bed which allows the air to circulate about the limbs and a firm pillow into which the head cannot sink. These requirements are quickly and easily satisfied by putting the mattress on the floor and using a hair pillow or a rolled up bath towel in its stead. The floor, moreover, is the coolest place in the room.

One more thought: Could not we in American cities make better use of our roofs? On hot nights in India the native sleeps on the roof as a matter of course. He does not have to consider rain, it is true, but an awning or tent-fly, will look after that. Let us try the roof garden and the cot bed or hammock. Let us have also a few deck chairs and some boxes of plants. Then even in the scorching city we shall enjoy the relative coolness of the evening and shall find refreshing sleep.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Farmer Brown's Boy Finds the Clothespins

The one who does a thing forbidden
Is wisest when he keeps well hidden.
—Jim Crow.

Farmer Brown's Boy looked first all about the house outside. Then all around the yard and finally out in the barn. But Jim Crow was not to be found. "The black rascal!" muttered Farmer Brown's Boy. "He knows well enough that in stealing those clothespins he was getting in mischief. Now, he's keeping out of sight. I suppose he has hidden those clothespins in his treasure house. I guess it's a good thing I know where that treasure house is."

Now, what Farmer Brown's Boy called Jim Crow's "treasure house" was merely Jim Crow's hiding place for various things that he might pick up from time to time. Jim Crow, like most other Crows, had a fondness for picking up and hiding all sorts of small articles, especially such as were shiny. These things he hid up in a corner of the haymow. He was always very secretive when hiding things. He would watch to see that no one was looking. He never took anything there openly. Farmer Brown's Boy had discovered Jim Crow's house quite by accident. He didn't let Jim Crow know that he had discovered it. When some small object that was wanted proved to be missing, Farmer Brown's Boy would visit that treasure house when Jim Crow was not about. Usually, he found the missing article. So now, Farmer Brown's Boy had no doubt at all that he would find the missing clothespins in that treasure house.

"Caw!" replied Jim Crow, and Farmer Brown's Boy was just as wise as before

"I'll have those clothespins for you inside of five minutes," he promised Mother Brown, and at once went up in the haymow to Jim Crow's treasure house. There he found just one clothespin and that an old one that had been there some time. "Well, what do you know about this!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy. "If that black rascal really did take those clothespins, he must have put them in a new hiding place, and I haven't the remotest idea where such a place may be."

Farmer Brown's Boy went out into the yard and whistled a peculiar call. It was one he always used to call Jim Crow. A moment later Jim Crow appeared on the ridgepole of the barn. Then he flew down to the shoulder of Farmer Brown's Boy.

"So you were out behind the barn, were you?" said Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Caw!" replied Jim Crow, which might have meant anything.

"What have you done with those clothespins?" demanded Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Caw!" replied Jim Crow, and Farmer Brown's Boy was just as wise as before.

"You ought to be shut up for punishment," said Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Caw!" said Jim Crow, and it sounded as if he chuckled at the same time.

"I suppose I've got to trick you to find that new hiding place," said Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Caw!" said Jim Crow, quite as if he approved.

So Farmer Brown's Boy went into the house and got one of the few remaining clothespins. It was a nice new one. He pinned one of the sheets with it and then went back into the house, leaving Jim Crow outside. Then he peeped out the kitchen window. Jim Crow sat on a clothespost. It was plain to see that the black scamp was watching the house closely. Presently he flew over to the clothesline, pulled out the clothespin and away he went around behind the barn. Farmer Brown's Boy lost no time. He raced across to the barn and through the barn to where he could peek through a little window. He was just in time to see Jim Crow fly away from the top of a straw stack out in the barnyard. Farmer Brown's Boy grinned. He got a short ladder and climbed up to the top of the straw stack. There in a hollow in the straw were all of Mother Brown's clothespins.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Plesippus, Three-Toed, of Idaho.

Bones of Plesippus, the very great grandfather of Gallant Fox, marvel of American race tracks, have been discovered in Idaho where scientists have identified among skeletal remains the missing link of the horse family.

Plesippus bore slight resemblance to the winner of the 1930 Kentucky Derby. He was a prehistoric horse about the size of a collie dog and had three toes on each foot. While crossing a swamp Plesippus got bogged in the mire and perished. The deposits that close over his carcass preserved the fossil bones for more than a million years.

But the modern horse's link with the past can be observed without visiting a museum.

"There are certain apparently useless structures connected with the legs of a horse," wrote Major General William H. Carter in 'Horses of the World,' prepared for the National Geographic society, "which give rise to many theories concerning his probable evolution from an animal of different type. There is on the inner surface of each fore leg of the horse, above the knee, and on the inner surface of each hind leg, below the hock joint, a callous, elongated piece of skin known as 'chestnut,' which has long been a subject of investigation, based upon the idea that it represents the former existence of an appendage which has disappeared in the process of evolution.

"There is also a bony, wartlike structure, at the back of the fetlock or pastern joint, quite pronounced in some animals, which serves no useful purpose to the horse in his present form.

"Practically all writers on the history of the horse who have given serious study to the subject incline to the belief that the wild horse of the steppes of Asia has the most legitimate claim as the source from which the domesticated horse was derived.

"Scientists all agree that in prehistoric ages certain types of horses ranged over parts of Asia and of North America and South America, and that while the wild horses of Asia appear to have descended from the original stock, all such animals had disappeared from North and South America before any modern Europeans landed here.

"Research efforts have been highly successful in establishing in the minds of scientists the multiple-toed skeleton remains of an ancient animal as the progenitor of the horse which, during all recorded history has been distinguished by a single toe encased in a wall of horn or hoof, the form best adapted to carrying heavy weight at speed over rough ground.

"The use of horse chariots prevailed in Egypt as far back as the history of that country has been made known through monuments and ancient inscriptions.

"Among the bas-reliefs and pictures of Assyrian, Persian, Nubian, Greek, Roman, Byzantine, and other horses of the ancients, the types are limited and bear slight resemblance to the modern breeds of horses as developed within the past two centuries.

"The horse, as depicted in the fifth century B. C., in the frieze of the Parthenon and numerous bas-reliefs of that period, bears much resemblance to the wild horse of Asia in size, the shape of the head and neck, and the peculiar short, upstanding mane. The size is readily estimated in comparison with that of the riders, whose legs hang down below the bodies of the horses.

"The first modern horses to land on this continent were brought by Cortez, and participated in the conquest of Mexico. Ferdinand de Soto brought horses to Florida and used them on his long march to the Mississippi. After his death and burial in the Father of Waters, as that river was long known, his followers crossed over. The horses then taken to the region now known as Texas and abandoned there, together with those coming in from Mexico, were the progenitors of the bands of wild horses that gradually spread over the prairies and become known as mustangs.

"Had the country over which they roamed remained unoccupied by the American frontiersman and settler, the mustangs would eventually have vied in numbers with the buffalo, which roamed the prairies from Texas to Canada.

"Very early in the history of New England a considerable trade was built up in the sale of horses in the West Indies. There followed a demand for mules, and many small animals of that breed were shipped from New England. It was not, however, until after the Revolution that the raising of mules assumed large proportions.

"In 1786 the king of Spain presented to General Washington a jack and jennet of the Andalusian breed, and later he received a Maltese jack from the Marquis de Lafayette. The jack, known as Royal Gift, presented by the king of Spain was unusually large, but by crossing the Maltese jack on the Andalusian jennet, Washington became the possessor of a famous sire, which he named Compound."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Wallingford Company, Inc. Wallingford.

The Wallingford company, Inc., located in Wallingford, and closely associated with R. Wallace & Sons Mfg. Co., was first organized as the Valentine Linsley Silver Co. in 1898. Three employes, working on silver plated novelties in a barn on Sylvan avenue, constituted the working force.

In 1898 the company was incorporated and moved to a small building near its present location where a general line of silver plated hollow ware was soon produced. At this time the Wallace interests obtained control and took over the selling activities. Business flourished; the old wooden building was enlarged; in 1912 a brick factory was constructed and in 1917 this, too, was made larger—the floor space then totaling 50,000 square feet. Two hundred skilled craftsmen are daily engaged in producing smart, modern, high quality silver plated hollow ware and pewter. Although the greater portion of the Wallingford company's business is domestic, large and numerous shipments are made to many foreign lands, the most important being South America, the Philippines, Hawaii and China.

Wallingford Company Silverplate may be easily identified by the Wallace name stamped upon the bottom. Wallace Trophies, known and sold the world over, constitute the leading product of which the Wallingford company is justly proud.

The present officers are: C. W. Leavenworth, president; C. D. Morris secretary and treasurer; Berk Church, Jr., manager.

RUSSIA TO REFURBISH FAMOUS "RED" SQUARE

Russia is to refurbish her famous "Red square" in Moscow. Already the work of turning the temporary wooden mausoleum of Lenin into a permanent resting place of stone is under way behind a high wooden fence. The ancient cobble stones are to be removed and replaced by smooth flag stones. Permanent reviewing stands are to be erected.

"Much of the drama of Russia's grandeur and tragedy has unfolded in the beautiful open space in Moscow that has come to be called Red square," says the bulletin. "Formerly it was the scene of public executions, hangings, and floggings when the Tsars ruled from Moscow; of imperial proclamations and glittering martial parades Later it saw bloody revolution; and now the surrounding structures echo the tramp of soldiers of the Red army and the footfalls of soviet workers.

"Along one side of the square extends the sixty-five foot wall of the Kremlin pierced by the Spasskoya or Redeemer gate over which rises a great clock tower, 205 feet high. This beautiful tower was built the year before Columbus discovered America. Across from the Kremlin wall are the substantial stone buildings of the trading rows with their arcaded sidewalks.

"At one end of the rectangular space is the twin-towered building of the historical museum, and opposite rises the glittering, bewildering mass of bulbous towers and domes of St. Basil's cathedral, fantastic as the cardboard stage castle of some eastern extravaganza.

"Lenin's wooden tomb hugs the towering Kremlin wall and seems dwarfed by the sheer stone expanse rising behind it. Until the body was removed to the Kremlin to permit rebuilding the mausoleum, the low, simple wooden structure that housed the glass-enclosed body was the world shrine of communism. Sentries stood on guard and a double line of visitors waited to enter and look upon the face of the dead leader.

"Into Red square, from the adjoining place of the revolution, a constant stream pours during daylight hours. There are women in felt boots; clerks in leather jackets; officials, reasonably well dressed, with brief cases under their arms; laborers in dirty sheepskin coats; slippered girls trudging through mud and dirt, carrying babies and bundles or dragging hand carts behind them.

"Along the trading row almost any day stands a long queue of women waiting for the opportunity to buy cloth or overshoes or other merchandise of which there is a limited supply. Many of the women carry babies, for such a burden gives them a preferred place in line. Because of this babies are borrowed or rented by would-be purchasers who have no small children of their own.

"Venders cluster around the gates leading to and from Red square, selling all manner of articles and making sections of the square into virtual outdoor department stores. There are the long Russian cigarettes with a short section of tobacco and a lengthy mouthpiece of hollow cardboard; indifferent apples and oranges; dried sunflower seeds; candies exposed to the dust; and cheeses cut to order.

"Women and boys are hawking feminine underwear and gaudy garters. Nearby are displays of colored lithographs, books, shoes, stockings, toys and shoestrings.

"At night, in good weather, Red square becomes an open air forum. Small fry soviet speakers gather little knots of listeners about them to explain details of the soviet plan of the moment; or the square is filled with a sea of humanity while the government leaders expound the doctrines of the revolution through great blaring loud speakers."

HUNDREDS VIEW HORRIBLE PARADE GIVEN BY GREENEVILLE CHILDREN

Over 150 children took part in the parade, which started at 7:30 o'clock. Many of the costumes seen in the parade were made by the children. The parade started on Central avenue, at Second street. The line of march was up Central avenue to the Connecticut company carbarn and then down North Main street to the play center where the procession disbanded. Two pages carrying the play center banner headed the procession and were followed by a small girl, costumed in red, white and blue, who carried an American flag.

BENEDICT ARNOLD'S GRAVE SUBJECT OF NEW BOOKLET

Of interest to literary Norwich and to all readers of history is the fact that William Abbatt, of Tarrytown, N. Y. has notified local acquaintances that he has really come upon some authentic data fixing the location of the grave of Benedict Arnold. After ten years of searching in England for Arnold's burial-place, Mr. Abbatt received a valuable clipping pertinent to the matter which had been found by Francis Gilman, of Lowthorpe, Norwich, among the papers of his father, the later William C. Gilman.

As Arnold's birthplace was Norwich and his young manhood was spent as a drug clerk at Norwich Town, there will be general interest in what Mr. Abbatt writes to friends here and in which he says:

Over ten years ago I began searching for the burial-place in England of Benedict Arnold. For a long time nothing rewarded my efforts. The brief newspaper notice of his death, which every historian has seen, proved absolutely useless, as did a very promising clue in New Haven, Conn.

At last, about three years ago, chiefly through my efforts, a lady of the family made the discovery of the burial-place of both Arnold and his wife—in a heretofore unknown church, and I am just advised that a booklet, with a hitherto unknown portrait, will soon be published, in a small edition.

So remarkable an item will doubtless interest you, a hundred and thirty years after his death. I shall have a small number of copies for my use.

10 YEARS' COMPENSATION FOR TOBACCO WORKER

This was as the result of injuries that he sustained when he was thrown from the tailboard of the truck. The question of a settlement has been in debate for two years and the award was made by Compensation Commissioner Albert J. Bailey of Norwich who went to Rockville for the special purpose of conducting the investigation. There was no appearance in opposition and the judgment ran against the tobacco grower and the Maryland Casualty Insurance company of Baltimore, Md.

ASKS CO-OPERATION IN "SAVE-A-LIFE CAMPAIGN"

Governor John H. Trumbull Tuesday issued a statement asking the people of this state to co-operate in a New England-wide "save-a-life campaign." The state was officially represented at a meeting Tuesday in Boston of the chief executives and motor vehicle commissioners of the New England states.

Lieutenant-Governor Ernest E. Rogers and Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel were designated to present the Connecticut plans for participation to the governors and other officials. Definite arrangements for the conduct of the general campaign were expected to be decided upon at this meeting.

Governor Trumbull's statement calls attention to the appalling loss from motor vehicle accidents, the work that has been done to prevent this loss, the care and work still necessary to eliminate accidents, and the part everyone should play, both in the campaign and at all times, to make the highways safe. His statement follows:

The loss of life, the suffering from injuries and the damage to property caused by motor vehicle accidents is appalling. In general these distressing incidents are avoidable, and to that extent they can be and must be prevented. In an extraordinary effort to attain this end, Connecticut, in conjunction with the other New England states, is about to enter upon a definite "Save-a-Life" campaign.

For many years this state, through its various official agencies, has emphasized safety work in this connection. Its policy in highway construction has included safety engineering to eliminate dangerous physical conditions, its policy in administering the laws governing the operation of motor vehicles has stressed the education of the public in automotive requirements and usage, and its policy of traffic control and police enforcement has been framed to meet the increasing complexities of the situation. In all of these matters progressive legislation has been enacted as occasion required.

There has also been a most gratifying co-operation, in safeguarding life and property, upon the part of the press, chambers of commerce, automobile and civic clubs, local committees, schools and colleges, public utility companies and other large business corporations—all of which has developed new standards of responsibility and is prophetic of permanent advance in accident prevention.

Concerted action by all of these effective agencies, both public and private, combined with a like sincere effort on the part of every individual motor vehicle owner and operator in the state is bound to result in a betterment of the existing serious condition, not only at this particular time, when the attention of all New England is being directed toward remedying it, but will be of permanent value in making traffic participants habitually careful in the future.

Therefore, I urge that the coming month of August be observed as a special "Save-a-Life" period and I hereby request all public officials and officers and all organizations and citizens to unite in demonstrating the great possibilities for good in such a movement; that all motor vehicle owners and operators in addition to exercising caution and consideration in their public contacts, make sure that the mechanical equipment of their cars is in a suitable condition for highway use; that all participants in traffic, including pedestrians, bicyclists and drivers of animals, exercise ceaseless care to the end that Connecticut highways may become safe and that their utility for pleasure and business purposes be made fully available to all users of them, with detriment to none.

NORWICH CIVIL ENGINEERS ATTEND ANNUAL OUTING

About a dozen civil engineers of Norwich were among 300 members of the Connecticut Society of Civil Engineers who attended the annual summer outing of the society held Tuesday at Fort H. G. Wright, Fisher's Island, N. Y., headquarters for the harbor defenses of Long Island Sound.

Among those attending from Norwich were Benjamin H. Palmer, Jr., and George D. Phillips from the office of Chandler and Palmer; Walter M. Jones, M. J. Coscoran and J. A. Caberry of the state highway department office, and several members of the right of way Norwich division office of the state highway department. Benjamin H. Palmer, Jr., was a member of the transportation committee.

The engineers assembled at New London Tuesday morning and embarked on a government boat for Forts Michie and Wright. They first visited Fort Michie where the big coast artillery guns and searchlights were inspected, after which they went to Fort Wright and had luncheon. After the luncheon there was an inspection of the guns and other equipment at Fort Wright, following which golf, tennis and swimming were enjoyed.

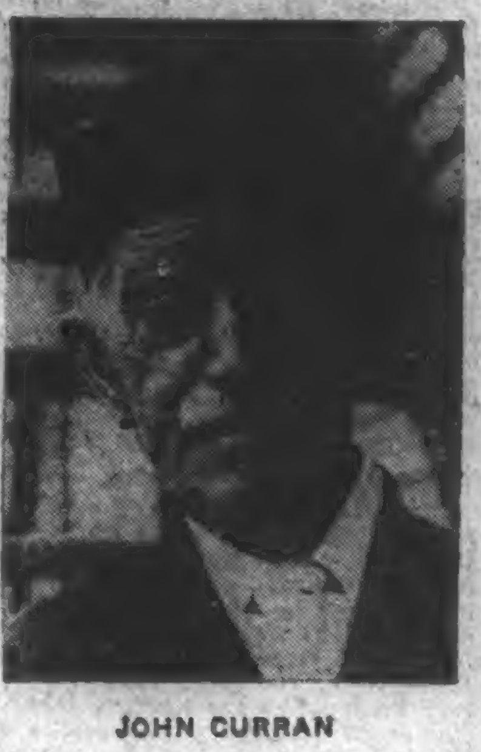
JOHN CURRAN, CIVIL WAR VETERAN, IS DEAD

John Curran, 90, Civil war veteran, died Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Miss Alice Curran, in Occum, following an illness of a month. He was born in County Kerry, Ireland, in 1840, the son of the late William and Mary Fitzgerald Curran and came to this country with his parents at the age of about nine years.

Mr. Curran saw service in both the cavalry and navy during the Civil war and at the time of his death bore a scar on the top of his head caused by the slash of a sabre. When the Second Massachusetts Infantry was being formed in Chicopee early in 1861, he enlisted, but he and several others were turned back when it was found that the company had more men than were needed.

Mr. Curran returned to his work for a while and his next chance came when recruiting officers from New York arrived at Chicopee to enlist men for the Fifth New York cavalry. He enlisted in Company D, June 27, 1861, and went to New York city, then to Staten Island and on to Annapolis where the regiment was drilled until it was ready to take the field.

The regiment was sent to the Shenandoah valley where it was quartered about nine miles outside Stroudburg. Mr. Curran went through a thrilling experience when his company and one other were thrown out on the skirmish line during General Banks' retreat before General Jackson's raid up the valley. The two companies were almost surrounded and badly cut up by enemy cavalry. The captain of the company was captured with a number of his men, but Mr. Curran escaped with his horse, reaching the Potomac river and got across to the other bank. He fell in with a party of the Fourth New York cavalry and went on to Martinsburg where he learned that it was intended to make an artillery company out of what was left of the two cavalry companies.



JOHN CURRAN

Going to Philadelphia he joined the navy and saw three years of service along the Mississippi river, mostly on the gunboat Lafayette, one of the finest vessels of the Union fleet. They ran the batteries at Vicksburg, did service on the Red river in the Banks campaign, along the Yazoo and the Atchafalaya and other tributaries. He was captain's orderly and gunner's mate on the gunboat, which carried four nine-inch guns broadside, two 11-inch guns at the bow and two big Parrott rifles at the stern. He voted for Lincoln at Baton Rouge in 1864 and was honorably discharged from the navy on the Mississippi, June 27, 1864.

Mr. Curran returned to New York by way of New Orleans, reaching New York, July 2, 1864. He resided in Holyoke and Manchester before coming to Taftville 57 years ago. He operated the first slasher machine in the Ponemah mills.

Surviving Mr. Curran are two daughters, Mrs. David W. O'Brien of Taftville and Miss Alice Curran of Occum with whom he resided for several years. He also leaves four grandchildren, David, William, Lillian and Lena O'Brien, all of Taftville. The news of his death was learned with deep sorrow by his numerous friends.

NORWICH MISSIONARY TELLS OF CHINESE BATTLE

Edward H. Smith of this city, missionary of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions in Ingtai, Foochow, China, writes an interesting incident of a Chinese battle.

"After the battle had waged hot for some time, I asked a Chinese student if they were signalling. 'Oh, no,' he said, 'those are their fans.' Actual fact. Every soldier is armed with a nice big fan, and also a big rain umbrella hat fastened on his back.

"Yesterday morning we were giving the seniors examinations for Union Normal school," Mr. Smith continues, "and I had just said 'thirty minutes more,' when pop went a rifle and a volley from Pagoda Hill followed. One boy jumped through the window to bar and lock the compound gate. For two days and two nights constant fighting has kept up across the Ingtai river, a branch of the Min, but neither side dares force passage.

"While I was just writing a bullet struck the piazza pillar a few feet from me. No one knows how long the struggle will continue. In fact, the identity of the fighting forces is not assured yet," Mr. Smith says. "We don't know who they are, whom they represent or what it is all about. The magistrate fled a week ago.

Describing a visit to the office of the magistrate, Mr. Smith says: "As I went through that deserted, dirty, and wretched place I was impressed how typical it was of the old outworn past of which it is a part—a home of injustice, cruelty, greed, deceit and vice. It is utterly impossible to adequately describe it so that an American could visualize this home of the district magistrate, this hall of justice—black with smoke and draped with the cobwebs of centuries.

"Doors had been torn from their sockets and partitions had been torn down. Floors were ripped up. The only living occupants we saw were respectively a dejected looking ass and a skinny yellow cat! And this is the seat of government for 500,000 people. It is little wonder the officers and men of the passing armies are determined to occupy our mission school buildings and churches. Here cleanliness and sunshine, white walls and flowers are the rule. Such is the touch of the Gospel of Christ on the lives of orientals as well as occidentals."

IDEALS GIVE THERMOS CLUB SETBACK BY HANDING THEM A 5 TO 4 TROUNCING

Tony Bernard's Ideals, for five weeks the doormat of the City league, established themselves as the "miracle team" of the loop last night by virtue of their 5 to 4 win over the Thermos Bottlers. It was their third win in as many starts, one of the previous two victories coming last Wednesday at the expense of the runner-up Polish Citizens. Prior to embarking on their present spree the Ideals had lost five and won but one game.

Last night's game was probably one of the wildest of the season and was witnessed by nearly 2,000 fans, a record crowd for 1930. From start to finish the outcome of the affair was in doubt and when Hank Morin called the game at the end of the sixth, the Bottlers raised a loud and noisy rumpus, claiming that if it went the regulation seven frames they would have overtaken the Bernard pets. The game came to a close under the most unsatisfactory of conditions, nearly half the crowd swarming onto the field just before Hank ended it.

After the Bottlers had taken their licks in the sixth a flock of thunder caps made their appearance in the east and the field was cast into a state of semi-darkness. The spectators, believing the game over, swarmed from their seats in the bleachers onto the field. Morin made a desperate effort to have the field cleared so that the seventh and final frame might be played but there was no moving of the crowd. While the Ideals argued that it was too dark to play and the Bottlers insisted that the final inning should be played the clouds came closer and closer and the crowd on the field grew thicker and thicker. After nearly ten minutes of debating Hack called the game.

As previously mentioned, it was a wild affair. The Bottlers went to pieces in the opening stanza, allowing the Ideals to count four runs on three hits, an error and a base on balls. In the next inning the winners counted their fifth and final tally.

Hastedt's pets tallied three times in the late second and drew to one run of the service station outfit in the sixth. Their final run was the result of Nickerson's single, Hull's grounder (Shaw to Gley), and Normandin's clean swipe into centerfield.

Although the losing pitcher, Mike Nickerson, allowed but four bingles, three less than Bob Shaw, the winner, Bob kept his bingles fairly well scattered while three of Mike's came in that bad first inning. Shaw struck out five, hit two, and walked two, while Nickerson ticketed two and whiffed a pair.

The feature of the game was a sensational catch by Lemieux, Ideal left fielder, in the fifth at a time when the Bottlers were in a position to break through. With one away and men on first and second, the youthful brother of the two Thermos Lemieuxs gathered in Hamil's line drive after a long run and with a perfect peg to second he doubled off Carlie Krauss, who had run clear home on what appeared to be a sure safety.

Bill Hastedt, pilot of the Thermos outfit, announced after the game that he would enter a protest with the league board of managers. His grounds for the protest, it is understood, are that the seventh inning could have been played had Morin desired.

As a result of last night's game the Thermos' lead in the chase was cut to one game and the Ideals climbed to within a single game of the runner-up Royals and Polish Citizens, who are tied for second place in the league race. The score:

Tonight's Game

With the City league race tight once again as a result of the Thermos Bottlers' defeat at the hands of the Ideals last night the Royals tonight get an opportunity to move even closer to the leaders when they meet the Smoke Shop. By defeating the Smokers, Panek's clan will move to within a single game of the Bottlers. A defeat, however, will send the Royals down into a tie for third place with the league's "miracle team," the Ideals, and the Citizens will have undisputed possession of the runner-up berth.

Now that the chase has tightened up once again it is expected that tonight's game will draw out another record breaking crowd.

Realizing that his "big moment" is at hand, Mike Panek, Royal pilot, will without doubt use his ace, Tommy Simcox, in the box. Either Magnan or Butsy Weisgraber will work from the Smoke Shop hill.

Griffiths-Heeney Bout Tonight.

NEW YORK, July 29.—(AP)—A heavy rainstorm early tonight forced postponement of the Queensboro stadium's boxing show, scheduled for tonight, until tomorrow night. Gerald (Tuffy) Griffiths, Sioux City, Ia., meets Tom Heeney in the feature bout.

Tonight, at Sayles field, Baltic, Coady's All Stars will play the Baltic Sacs in the final game of the series. Each team have won two games. Allard and McGraw will be the battery for the All Stars and for the Sacs, Alex, Passmore and Prevencher.

GIANTS SLUG OUT EASY VICTORY OVER PHILLIES

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—The Giants slugged their way to a second victory over Philadelphia today to make a sweep of the two game series and inflict a ninth successive defeat on the Phillies. The score was 11 to 5.

Carl Hubbell lasted the entire distance for the Giants although he was hit freely at times. O'Doul led the Phillie attack with a homer and two singles while Renza also touched Hubbel for a homer.

Mel Ott started the Giant attack with his 18th home run of the year in the second inning and Roettger hit another a few moments later. New York drove Ray Benge from the mound in the third, scoring four runs for a 7-1 lead. Bill Terry singled in the second inning to carry his hitting streak through 16 straight games.

BRAVES POUND VANCE TO TAKE 10-INNING BATTLE

BOSTON, July 29—(AP)—For six innings today, Dazzy Vance's speed had the Braves helpless, but the charm failed to last and they came from behind and drove the Dazzler from the mound in the eighth, scoring two runs to tie the score, and finally beat Brooklyn in the tenth inning, 4 to 3. Ray Phelps was the losing pitcher as singles by Richbourg, Maranville and Sisler drove in the winning run with one out.

Brooklyn piled up a 3-0 lead in the first six frames. Boston scored once in the seventh then tied it up in the eighth as George Sisler doubled after Richbourg had hit a two bagger and Maranville had walked. The veteran first sacker tried to win the game by stealing home in the same inning but was called out on a close play.

Wee Willie Sherdel pitched the distance for Boston and held the league leaders to eight hits, three by Babe Herman.

INDIANS POUND TIGER PITCHERS FOR VICTORY

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 29—(AP)—Detroit ran up a four run lead in the first two innings today but could not hold it in the face of a savage Cleveland batting attack and lost its second game in a row here, 14 to 7.

Four bases on balls plus three hits off Guy Cantrell in the second inning produced seven runs. Averill made his tenth home run of the season and a double in that inning. In the next inning the Indians combined four hits and two walks off Charley Sullivan for five more runs. Eddie Morgan, Indian first baseman, got two doubles and three singles in five times up.

WHIPPET RACES TO BE HELD HERE ON SATURDAY

Something different in the way of a sporting novelty is to be held at the fairgrounds on Saturday afternoon. It will be the staging of a number of dog races sponsored by Anthony J. Bernard in conjunction with a Hartford man. There will be at least 40 of these Whippet dogs, the fastest canine known, in the races during the afternoon.

Whippet racing started in England and then the sport was taken up in America where it flourished extensively in Florida during the winter season. The sport did not come north until a year ago where it immediately attracted large crowds. To those who have never seen a whippet race Saturday's events will be worth seeing and the crowd will marvel at the speed that these lean and sleek dogs can make.

ARMOUR AND DIEGEL IN CANADIAN PLAYOFF TODAY

ANCASTER, Ont., July 29.—(AP)—Tommy Armour of Detroit and Leo Diegel, pro at the Agua Caliente club, play 36 holes of golf over the Hamilton Country club course tomorrow to decide which shall wear the Canadian open crown for the next year.

Armour and Diegel tied for the lead at 277 at the end of the 72-hole competition Saturday. The playoff will be medal, or stroke, play.

Diegel ruled the favorite to win the title for the second straight year and the fifth time since 1924. He played consistent golf through all four rounds of the championship proper last week while Armour needed an amazing 64 on his fourth round, two strokes under the course record and six under par, to tie for the lead.

Carr Stops O'Brien.

NEW HAVEN, July 29.—(AP)—Eddie Carr Negro, of Watertown, 165, scored a technical knockout over Billy O'Brien of Derby, 164, in the final round of the feature bout on tonight's amateur boxing card at Savin Rock. O'Brien had gained a decision over Carr in a previous fight.

Montville Team Challenges

The Montville Independents would like a game with any of the teams in the Norwich City league to be played the coming Friday evening at the Gair diamond at Uncasville. The Indies have the pick of the Montville Twilight league.

I don't know whether you baseball fans and others know it or not, but there is a baseball strategist displaying his wares in the City league and he will bear watching. He's Tony Bernard, and he's just as smooth as the oil he dispenses. Here's Tony who has been trailing the City league ever since it started and all of a sudden his team starts to climb, mowing down some of the strongest opposition in the loop. Now people are wondering how he does it.

Up to a few nights ago nobody paid much attention to Tony as a director of baseball affairs but today he has the entire turnout of the faithful with him. Not only that, but his team is playing ball for him and hard ball at that and the strange part of it is that he's not paying a player a cent of money to play, either, which is more than a lot of managers of teams in the league can say. There's perfect harmony on the club which is one thing that will win ball games.

Last night in the game against the Thermos club the fans showed so much partisanship that they stopped the ball game for him thereby giving him a victory. Out of a crowd of 1,400 or 1,500, there was perhaps a hundred or so who would have liked to see the Thermos win, but it's a good gamble that the rest were with Tony's club. When it got so dark that there was danger of someone geting hurt in the game the crowd as one person marched on to the field and took possession and they would not get off. There was only one thing to do, call the game on account of darkness for it would have been impossible to continue the game after the 15 minute time limit was up.

What has endeared Tony to the fans? There's just one answer, it's his abounding good nature and his sense of fair-play and sportsmanship. Tony's never crabby either with his players, the fans or the umpires. If a break goes against him he just grins and hopes for beter luck next time. Another thing that has got the crowd with him and that is his absolute fearlessness of Hank Morin. "Thundering" Hank tried to pull a few fast ones on Tony the other night and Tony was just two steps ahead of Hank and almost kidded the chest protector off this stern and austere arbiter. Anybody that can ride Hank to a fare-thee-well is strong with the crowd.

WHITE SOX SCORE HEAVILY IN FIFTH TO BEAT BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, July 29—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox, scoring four times in the fifth inning on four hits and a sacrifice defeated the Browns today, 6-2, and made a clean sweep of the two game series.

Although hit for 11 safeties, the same number the Sox made, Al Thomas scattered his blows throughout the game.

The long distance clouting was done by Jolley, who hit a homer and Goslin and Ryan, who contributed triples.

PIRATES WIN FROM CARDS IN NINTH INNING

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 29—(AP)—After a series of one run rallies in the late innings that finally sent the St. Louis Cards out in front in the ninth, the Pittsburgh Pirates came from behind in their half of the final frame today to win the series opener when Lyold Waner singled Suhr and Bool across. The score was 6 to 5.

In the third inning, Paul Waner hit for the circuit with brother Lloyd on base. The two Waners accounted for five of the Pirates 12 hits, batted in four runs and scored three of them.

POWERMEN TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM TEXTILERS

The Eastern Conn. Power Co. defeated the Textilers of the Montville Industrial Twilight league Tuesday evening at the Gair diamond at Uncasville by a score of 2 to 1, which took an extra inning to decide the issue. It was a fast, close tilt up to the eighth when Ski of the Textilers came up with one out and hit the ball for a three-bagger and in trying to score on the long drive to left field by Tisky, Killeen of the Powermen uncorked a wonderful throw and nailed him at the plate, completing a double play.

Hallisey started the fireworks for the Powermen by getting a clean single. He was erased, however, when Tucker singled and the right fielder retired Hallisey at second. Nortosky, lead off man for the Powermen, broke up the game with a neat single over second, scoring Tucker with the second and winning run. Both hurlers were in fine form, Pete Morokey allowing only three hits and striking out eight men and Ski fanning seven and allowing six.

REDS NOSE OUT CUBS TO HOLD THEM IN SECOND

CHICAGO, July 29—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs retained the same standing today, dropping a hotly contested game to the Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 3, while the Braves wrested a ten inning game from Brooklyn by the same score.

Hack Wilson's thirty-third home run in the sixth inning brought the score up to 4 and 2, but an eighth inning rally fell short, when Cuyler scored on Danny Taylor's single, after Wilson had walked and Grimm sacrificed. Rixey went the route for the visitors; Blake and Malone hurled for the Cubs.

GEHRIG BEATS ATHLETICS ALMOST BY HIMSELF

PHILADELPHIA, July 29—(AP)—Lou Gehrig, played a slugging solo with his big bat today and led the New York Yankees to a 12 to 3 victory over the Athletics that evened the two game series.

Gehrig poled two home runs to bring his season's total to 31 and connected for a double and a triple. Each of his homers, the first off Quinn in the fourth inning and the second off Mahaffey in the seventh, came with Babe Ruth on base. Altogether Gehrig figured in the scoring of seven runs. Harry Rice also hit a homer.

SMALL CROWD SEES FAST AMATEURS AT DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 29.—Despite threatening weather the card of amateur bouts was run off at the North street arena tonight. Most of them were good and there was only one questionable fight.

Kid Brouillard, of Danielson, lost a decision in three rounds to Danny Roy, of Worcester. Brouillard weighed 100 and Roy 101½.

Patsy Long, 111, of Worcester, took the decision over Willie Thibeault, 109, of Danielson, in three rounds.

Kid Tourney, of Webster, 112 pounds, who has been a consistent winner here gained a decision over Johnny Mack, 114, of Worcester, in three rounds.

Ray Landry, Danielson, 125 pounds, was awarded a technical knockout over Mickey McCann, 129, of Artic, R. I., in the second round. McCann was forced to quit after receiving a bad cut over the right eye.

Young Pleasy, 128, of Webster, won a decision over the rough and tumble Battling Goulet, 125½, of Putnam, in three rounds.

In the bout between Billy Grand, 139, of Worcester, and Al Levesque, 140 of Arctic, R. I., it appeared that Grant elected to take a dive early in the first round which was the only soft spot in the entire card.

Kid Frisco, of Webster, won a decision over Anthony Badger, 126, of Moosup, in three rounds.

The threatening weather kept the attendance down to a considerable extent but those who came got a lot of action for their money.

STRIBLING SEEMS TO BE HEADED FOR THE BIG BOUTS

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—Young Bill Stribling, for years the "King of the Canebreaks" is headed back to the main highways of fistiana under a head of steam that whistles menacingly for Victorio Campolo, Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion at the moment.

The satisfying news that the Macon aviator had crumpled Phil Scott, the gangling Briton, in two short rounds without a cry of foul in London, was hardly off the wire before the finest opportunity of Willie's long and bumpy career was shaping up in New York. Young Stribling has muffed golden chances in the past but this time the warning lights along the path to the heavyweight crown seem all to have turned green for him.

Frank Bruen, general manager at Madison Square Garden, wants to pit him against Victorio Campolo, the Manana Mauler of the Argentine, in one of the big ball parks here this September. Once past Campolo, a feat that should be ordinary for the youngster who knocked out Otto von Porat and Scott in six minutes of fighting, Stribling can have the leading role in the third annual battle of the balmy breezes at Miami this winter, perhaps with Jack Sharkey again his opponent. The third match promised him is against Schmeling in a title tilt for which the German already has signed with Madison Square Garden for the summer of 1931. "Pa" Stribling discussed the situation with Bruen over the trans-Atlantic phone from London last night.

The possibility of Stribling again tackling Sharkey seems remote, however, for rather knowing information at the Garden indicates that the Boston Sailorman, who outpointed Willie in the first struggle at Miami two years ago, has about decided that he will retire unless given a return engagement with Schmeling. Sharkey already has set a price of $100,000 on his services for a Campolo match this fall.

The critics who have long argued that Stribling needed only to add aggressiveness and ferocity to his otherwise complete equipment to become a heavyweight champion can see no dangers for the Macon youngster in a Campolo foray. The Argentine, a big, gawky fellow, was unimpressive in two matches with Johnny Risko and should be no harder to topple than was Von Porat, the Norwegian giant.

PLAINFIELD EVENS SERIES WITH MOOSUP TEAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PLAINFIELD, July 29.—Plainfield evened its series with Moosup at four games each and pulled the league-leaders down to within two games by defeating them here tonight by the score of 2 to 1 in an Eastern Connecticut Twilight league game.

Moosup tallied a run in the first when Stevens was safe on an error, Dysart advanced him with an infield out and short singles by Frechette and Allard brought him around. Plainfield overcame this margin and won out in the fourth on doubles by Dissinger and Pechie, the latter's steal of third and Beausoleil's wild throw over the base in attempting to catch him.

Plainfield plays at Sterling Wednesday night in a league encounter.

ELKS AND ITALIANS PLAY TIE GAME

The Elks and the I. Y. M. C. battled to a four inning tie in the Junior league, Tuesday evening, darkness interrupting the game while the fifth inning was in progress. The Elks were leading at the time 4 to 2, but as the Italian Club had not yet been at bat, the game reverted to the fourth inning at which time the score was 2 to 2.

The Italians furnished the Elks some unlooked-for opposition. Fuller, the Elks premier twirler, was not in quite his usual form. Although he allowed but two hits, he was rather wild, walking four men, and hitting one. This wildness coupled with some loose playing by the Elks enabled the I. Y. M. C. to do most of their scoring, rather than any great amount of hitting.

Wilk, pitched good ball for the Italian club, experiencing only one bad inning, the third, when the Elks bunched four hits for their two runs.

The Elks were the first to score, counting twice in the third. Houghton fanned as a starter, but Fuller singled to center. Ulewicz shot a double to left sending Fuller to third. Hamill came through with a single through the infield scoring both Fuller and Ulewicz. Carter singled to center for the fourth consecutive hit of the inning and Hamill went to second. Guillotte hit to short, and Hamill was caught at third. Bamber walked, but Dugas ended the inning with a fly to Connell.

The Italians came back strong in their half of the same frame and tied up the game. With two away, Connell got a life when Hamill booted his grounder. Wilk walked. Fern shot a grounder to Hamill and when the latter mussed up the play the bases were full. Wonnacott hit a tricky little fly toward third base. Fuller picked up the ball and threw wild over first base, Connell and Wilk scoring, and Fern going to third. Burelle put an end to the rally, however, by fanning.

In the fifth, the Elks added two more runs which did not count, however, due to the game reverting to the previous inning. In this frame, Ulewicz was safe on an error and Carter brought him home with a triple to right, and scored himself when the throw from the outfield went wild over third base. With two out in the Italian's half of the fifth and after Wilk had tripled to centerfield, Umpire Tombari called the game on account of darkness.

Tonight's Game

Tonight's game in the Junior league will be betwen the Duwells and the Y. M. C. A. The Duwells with a win over the Elks to their credit are out to keep their winning streak going. The "Y", however, may spring one of those surprises that makes baseball so interesting, and upset the Duwells. The games in the Junior circuit have been improving right along and tonight's contest should be no exception. Probable batteries are Stephanik or Pisso and Kos for the Duwells and Seneski or Rusillo and Stephano for the Y. M. C. A.

Sterling Defeats H. N. S., 8-7

Sunday, at Ashland park, Jewett City, the Sterling team evened the series with the H. N. S., by winning 8-7, due to a homer by McCarthy with one man on. However, this defeat cannot be charged to this particular hit, as infield errors earlier in the game proved to be the undoing of Vachon. As the Holy Name beat Sterling last week in an 11-inning game, the deciding game of the series will be played at Jewett City, Sunday, August 10th. This coming Sunday, at Fisk Rubber grounds, the H. N. S. meet the Taftville Shymas, a game between the real rivals of this section.

A Challenge

The Red-devils challenge any junior team in the league, especially the Elks, any time next week. Answer through this paper.

WESTERLY

NJURIES PROVE FATAL TO FIRE CHIEF EGGER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, July 29—Fire Chief George E. Egger and chief of the board of engineers of the Westerly district since his election at the annual fire district meeting on Dec. 6, 1919, died at 8:00 a. m. Tuesday at the Westerly hospital. He had been a patient in a serious condition since his accidental fall about 8:30 p. m. Monday from the hay loft in the large barn of Earnest A. Thorp at Potter Hill, located back of the post office, where the Ahrens-Fox motor pumper of the Westerly fire district had been called for a supposed fire. Burning leaves from a bon fire falling about the premises gave the appearance of a fire and caused some apprehension that the hay in the loft recently put in had been set on fire. Mrs. Alice E. Thorp, mother of the owner, and Senator Howard E. Thorp, in a somewhat nervous condition from the visit of the firemen and possible danger to a number of homes close by assured Fire Chief Egger and Second Assistant Columbus Pasetti that it was not necessary to drive the motor pumper on to the grounds and it was stationed in front of the post office.

Descending from the hayloft Earnest Thorp assured Chief Egger of his conviction that there was no fire in the barn and Chief Egger replied that he was feeling weell and despite the warning of the owner climbed the two ladders at the rear of the interior of the barn to the top of the hay. In the poor light Chief Egger failed to see the opening in the floor by which hay was thrown down to the horses and slipping through the hole in the haymow fell a distance of 21 feet to the cement of the barn floor at the rear of a large box stall in which stood a heavy draft horse which did not become excited when the fire chief sprawled at his feet and remained quiet. Striking on his feet Chief Egger was thrown backward and his head came in violent contact with the cement floor. Arthur Clark and Theofil Duda, neighbors, hearing the thud rushed to the rear of the barn where the fire chief lay unconscious with blood gushing from his nose and mouth. The ambulance was called and a quick trip made to the hospital with Chief Egger rousing himself but once to complain of the injury to his head.

At the hospital Chief Egger was attended by Drs. Michael H. Scanlon and L. H. Johnson, and at first he was thought to have an embolism and hemorrhage of the stomach due to injuries sustained in the fall. An x-ray showed a hemorrhage at the front of the brain and two broken ribs. His wife was called to the hospital and a sister and nephew were also present. Chief Egger's last moments at the hospital were devoted to the direction of his men in the fighting of an imaginary fire and was the close of a period of over thirty-five years as a volunteer and executive in the fighting of Westerly fires. The interest taken by him in fighting fires and visits to other fire fighting organizations made him widely known among the firefighters of New England. He was a charter member of the Cyclone Engine Co., No. 2, organized in Feb. 16, 1895. He worked through the various offices of that company and finally became foreman. Upon the death of Chief Samuel G. Cottrell, March 3, 1919, he succeeded him as chief. He was elected chief at the annual meeting of the fire district held Aug. 2, 1928 for a term of two years, so that there yet remain a year and a month of his present term of office. A clause will probably be inserted in the call for the annual fire district meeting to be held on Wednesday, Aug. 27th, to elect chief engineer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Chief Egger. Under the present rules and regulations of the fire district charter, Sec. 3 reads: "In case of the absence of the chief engineer, the engineer next in rank, who shall be present, shall execute the duties of that office, with full power." The present board consists of Robert Bonner, first assistant engineer; George A. McKenzie, second assistant engineer and Columbus Pasetti, third assistant engineer.

Chief Egger was voted a third assistant engineer at the annual meeting of the fire district held in Dec., 1910, succeeding William H. Greene; and second assistant engineer on Dec. 4, 1918.

Chief Egger was the first fire chief to sign the roll of the New England Fire Chiefs' association in Boston. He was a life member of the Rhode Island State Firemen's league, the Rhode Island Fire Chiefs' club and an honorary member of the Richmond and Charlestown fire departments. He took great interest in the planning and construction of the new central fire station on Union street which was constructed to replace the old wooden engine house destroyed by fire, and served on the building committee.

George Edward Egger was the son of the late Gene and Margaret Egger, being born in Mystic, Oct. 6, 1871. He came to Westerly when a boy and at the age of 16 years started to learn his trade as a machinist. He was employed for many years at the press works of the C. B. Cottrell Sons company. About three years ago he was stricken ill after battling floods in Westerly for many hours, when the pumpers of the Westerly fire department were thrown into service to relieve cellars of water. He did not return to his trade after that time, but continued active in the fire department.

He was married in September, 1895, to Julia Olive Davis of this town, who survives him, by Rev. William C. Deland, pastor of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church. They have resided for many years at 9 Narragansett avenue. He is also survived by a sister, Mrs. Nellie T. Rose of Pawcatuck, and nieces and nephews.

The committee in charge of the funeral, which will probably request that business places be closed, consists of Engineer Robert Bonner, Dr. Edwin R. Lewis and Samuel Sharpe.

Etta M. Gorton of Charlestown, R. I. became surety on Monday afternoon for $1000 for the court appearance of Air Pilot Robert Kamm at the regular Friday morning session of third district court, August 8th. After a thorough investigation of complaints, Sheriff Frederick T. Mitchell on Monday placed Pilot Kamm under arrest for a violent assault upon Humbert S. Cortellease, also of Charlestown, when as the result of the encounter the latter was reported as badly beaten up.

MONTVILLE

ROBERTSON CO. EMPLOYES TO HAVE 6TH BIG OUTING

The following program has been issued: Robertson Paper Box Co. Inc., sixth annual outing, Riverside beach, Mago Point, Saturday, August 2. The committee has chosen Riverside beach, located on the Niantic river, because of the excellent facilities this location affords for the annual outing. We are to have unrestricted use of an excellent sandy beach, with private bathhouses and floats. It is an ideal bathing beach, provided with canopies and with shade trees along the beach. We have also been given the use of a large athletic field, especially well adapted for our annual baseball game and other field sports.

The committee has been very fortunate in procuring Cluster Inn for the midday dinner. This inn is very attractively decorated, and we will have exclusive use of the inn and surrounding grounds for parking cars.

Headquarters will be established near the bathing beach and athletic field. A large sign with the company's name will designate the headquarters building, where there are rest rooms and refreshments. There will be dancing at headquarters in the afternoon. This outing is for the benefit of the employes and their wives and children. This does not include brothers, sisters or friends.

Transportation arrangements are in charge of Andrew Rosenlund. All should be ready to leave the plant at 8:30.

The day's activities will include:

The standing of teams in annual clash: 1925 won by Board Mill; 1926 by Box Factory; 1927 by Board Mill; 1928 by Board Mill; 1929 by Box Factory.

Due to the excellent showing of the Box Factory team in the Industrial league, it is felt that the Board Mill team should be strengthened with championship material. Hence, Samuel Horowitz, former big league twirler, will appear on the mound for the Board Mill in an attempt to maintain their lead. This should be a wow of a pitching duel.

The following field events will be in charge of a committee, Andrew Rosenlund, Fred Johnson and Archie Fisher, under the supervision of a Y. M. C. A. director: 11:30—Sack race, men and women; 11:45—Three-legged race, men and women; 12:00—Preliminary bout, One-Round Taylor vs. Cyclone Rosenlund; 12:30—Main bout, Kid Fisher vs. Gunboat Congdon (to settle grudge); 1:00—Dinner.

Sluggish Systems Frequent Cause of General Bad Health

Noted Authorities Advise Cleansing System with New Laxative

Many so-called "little things" may easily lead to more serious consequencies. Headache, coated tongue, billiousness, bad breath and a general tired feeling, any one of them may be signs of a seriously clogged-up system. And today people are discovering that one of the best possible measures they can take to insure good health is to avoid constipation by using Feen-a-mint the modern chewing gum laxative.

Feen-a-mint is especially famous and popular because it works on an entirely new principle—that of uniform internal distribution.

Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage, it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store.—Adv.

AVERAGE LOSS WAS ABOUT POINT AND A HALF IN STOCK PRICES YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, July 29.—(AP)—Stocks were heavy in quiet trading today. Weakness of the railroad and merchandising shares spread to other sections of the list, with the assistance of short selling, but a closing rally reduced the extreme declines by a fraction to a couple of points and final prices ruled one to five lower. The average loss was about a point and a half.

Selling of Safeway Stores, Gillette, First National Stores and other stocks was offset partially by the firmness of U. S. Steel, General Motors and American Can, but as the trading moved along it became apparent that some of the news was being construed bearishly.

Traders on the short side saw prospects of tariff retaliation in the conservative victory in Canada. Others professed to be disturbed by the possibility of commercial controversies with the soviet. The market turned more decisively downward, however, on the appearance of further unfavorable railroad earnings reports, notably that of Union Pacific, whose June operating income was off 46 per cent in comparison with a year ago. Union Pacific dropped 8 points, while Southern Railway slumped 7 to a net low. There were extreme losses of two to five points in Rock Island, Louisville and Nashville, Rock Island, Atlantic Coast Line, St. Louis-San Fracisco, Norfolk and Western, Chesapeake and Ohio, New York Central, Southern Pacific, St. Louis and Southwestern and New Haven.

There was some encouragement in the statement by the U. S. Steel corporation, which, in addition to announcing second quarter earnings equal to $2.02 a share, reported an expectation that the operations would improve during the remainder of this quarter and that volume would pick up in the last three months of the year.

A few more unfavorable earnings statements came to light, among them National Cash Register's, which had been discounted in recent liquidation of the stock.

A few strong spots appeared. General Motors was well supported professionally and rose 1-2 net. Eastman Kodak, Childs, Cluett Peabody, DuPont, Standard Gas and Electric, Transue and Williams, and Western Union closed one to three higher.

Sterling cables reached new high ground since early this year, rising to within less than a cent of the gold export point. The day's gold movements balanced each other, $1,000,000 going to Canada and $1,000,000 arriving from Uruguay.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 29.—(AP) —For the first time in a long while, corn in Chicago today brought more money per bushel than wheat. It is rare that any delivery of corn commands a premium over a similar delivery of wheat, but July corn closed today at 86 3-8a, whereas July wheat finished at 86c to 86 1-8c.

Depressed by big supplies, wheat values today fell below any price level this season or for 16 years back, with corn advancing on account of drought news until checked toward the last by reports of scattered rains.

A nervous finish was witnessed both in wheat and corn, with wheat 1 3-8a 1 7-8c a bushel lower than 24 hours previous. Corn closed at 3-8a 3-8c net gain, oats unchanged to 1-4c off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 25c.

Provisions reflected upturns in the value of hogs.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 29.—(AP)—Bullish demonstrations in some of the utility stocks lifted the curb market list irregularly higher during most of today's trading, but reactionary tendencies gained ground late in the day, and gains and losses about balanced at the close. Business continued at a low ebb, the day's sales totaling 453,100 shares.

American Gas and Electric was a strong feature, rising 4 points to 140 in a large turnover for this moderately active issue. The year's high is 157. The upturn was accompanied by unconfirmable rumors of a merger with Commonwealth and Southern. United Light A was also given a whirl, rising more than 2, but losing about half its rise later. Standard Power and Light gained about 2, influenced by revival of the old rumors of a merger with American Water Works. Utility and Industrial, another Byllesby issue, was firm.

Electric Bond and Share, however, failed to make headway, and closed about a point lower. American and Foreign warrants also lost a point. Natural gas stocks moved rather narrowly.

In the industrials, International Cigar Machinery jumped 9 points, and Aluminum company 4, but the trend was largely downward. In the aviation group, Aviation corporation lost about 4 and Western Air, 2. Columbia Pictures sagged more than a point. Save for Coaden, which rose 2, oils were largely sluggish. Mines were helped a little by better copper sales, notably Newmont and Roan Antelope.

Investment company issues were largely under pressure, although United Founders held up well.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

SEEK TO BREED NEW RACES OF HONEYBEES

The United States department of agriculture is attempting to develop a new race of honeybees superior to any now serving the beekeeper.

Specialists in the government bee laboratory near Washington, D. C., are testing and attempting to improve various methods for the artificial insemination of queen bees devised within the past few years in this country and abroad. Once such technique is made more practicable they will assemble specimens of the more important races of honeybees and will make innumerable crosses in an effort to combine the desirable characteristics of all of them into one or two new races, just as the livestock breeder seeks in his breeding operations to improve his animals.

The bee breeders hope their work will go even further than this by producing new types with the desirable traits developed to a greater degree than in any races now known.

First, beekeepers would like bees with considerably larger honey stomachs so they can carry nectar on each trip. They hope for a bee with a larger thorax and a greater wing expanse so it can fly under more adverse conditions and carry heavier loads. For northern climates a bee that can fly in cooler weather is sought. A longer tongue capable of sucking nectar from the depths of long-tubed flowers would be welcome. A race that would breed rapidly but not swarm excessively and would be immune to contagious diseases is another hope of the breeders. And last but not least, a gentle, sociable honeybee with a good disposition is more to the hearts of the men who work with bees.

"The honeybee has been longer in man's service than most domestic animals," James I. Hambleton, head of the government bee laboratory, says, "but the bee can not be classed as a domestic animal. It leaves for the woods on the slightest provocation and is just as well satisfied there as ever. We believe we can really domesticate the honeybee and can make bee breeding as profitable to the beekeeper as careful breeding now is for the livestock man."

UNSEASONED CRATES CAUSE EGGS TO MOLD

A new and peculiar mold which develops on eggshells during shipment and in cold storage has caused heavy losses to handlers of cold-storage eggs. Recent investigations by bacteriologists of the United States department of agriculture indicate that unseasoned wood in the shipping cases probably is responsible for the trouble.

Spot mold or pin mold, as this has been termed by the department investigators, first appears on the outside of the eggshell, and although it does not impair the quality of the egg when confined to the outside, it renders the egg unsightly and reduces its market value. However, the mold penetrates the shell after a time and spreads over the inside surface, becoming very noticeable when the egg is candled. Such eggs have a decided moldy flavor.

Most egg cases are made of seasoned wood, but in wet weather or during a rush period improperly seasoned wood may be used. The unseasoned wood contains about 80 per cent more moisture than the well-seasoned wood. This moisture, according to Dr. L. H. James and T. L. Swenson, the investigators, favors germination and early development of the molds before eggs reach the storage houses. Eggs nearest the case partition molded more than others in the same case, they found. These results indicate that development of the mold on eggs in cold storage is dependent on previous conditions favoring its germination.

By eliminating unseasoned egg crates, one of the causes of such losses may be eliminated.

JULY OUTLOOK FOR POULTRY AND EGGS

The outlook for producers of poultry and eggs is not as discouraging as the market decline and reports of increasing hatching last spring indicated, but material improvement in egg prices other than the seasonal rise this fall are not expected until after first of next year. Little improvement in the market for poultry is expected during the remainder of this year according to the midsummer outlook report just issued by the bureau of agricultural economics, United States department of agriculture.

Receipt of dressed poultry at terminal markets has been very heavy this season, the report says, and while the excess over last year's holdings in cold storage has been reduced each succeeding month, stocks of frozen poultry are still considerably heavier than usual. Storage of stocks of eggs are unusually heavy and the demand for both poultry and eggs is generally unfavorable.

Farmers are decreasing the number of laying hens at present more rapidly than last year at this time. The big increase in the number of chicks hatched early this season has not materialized in a corresponding increase in number of chickens on farms. This indicates that farmers are reducing their flocks. A moderate reduction in number of layers is justified, but extreme reduction appears unnecessary.

SHOW ACCURACY OF TB TEST

In four Wisconsin counties where the cattle were tuberculin tested three years ago and all reactors removed, a recent retest of 187,678 cattle disclosed only 189 reactors. This proportion of only about 1 in 1 000 evoked highly favorable comment by cattle owners, according to a report received by the United States department of agriculture from James S. Healy, the federal inspector in charge of cooperative tuberculosis-eradication work in the state.

WATERING A GARDEN.

Artificial watering, if properly applied, will prove a decided advantage to the garden during dry periods, but may prove an injury if not properly done. The United States department of agriculture says frequent light sprinkling of the garden is injurious. The proper method is to soak the soil thoroughly about once each week, preferably during the evening, and then loosen the surface by cultivation as soon as the soil is dry enough to work. No more water should be applied until absolutely necessary; then another soaking should be given. On a small scale water may be applied with a sprinkling can, or a garden hose. Perhaps the best method is to open slight furrows alongside the rows of plants and allow the water to flow gently along the furrows. After the water has all soaked into the soil the wet earth in the furrows should be covered with dry soil to prevent baking.

BANK RESOURCES SHOW GAIN IN THIS STATE

Total resources of Connecticut state banks and trust companies increased $17,802,281 to $440,091,607 in the past year, of which $7,347,465 was gained between March 27 and June 30, according to tabulations of the Connecticut banking department. Commercial deposits of the 100 banks reporting in accordance with the call by Bank Commissioner Lester E. ENDURANCE PLANE HAS ENTERED ITS TENTH DAY

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., July 29.—(AP)—The "Red" endurance plane, manned by Louis Reichers and Robert Black, ticked off its 217 hour in the air at 6:34 (EST) tonight and roared into its tenth day, after riding out a severe electrical storm late in the afternoon.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 29.—(AP)—Trading in railroad bonds assumed large proportions today, and a mixed trend in this group was characteristic of the whole listed market.

While best grade rails and utilities were steady, sharp changes occurred among secondary issues, with the movement in several measured in points instead of fractions. There was heavy trading in convertible obligations of several carriers and in common with the rest of the stock privilege group they turned downward in sympathy with weakness of shares.

French 7 1-2s climbed to a record high price to set the pace for the foreign dollar bonds which displayed group strength. Expanded dealings in United States Governments, however, were at moderate fractional concessions coincidental with the firming of time money rates.

The market had little competition from new offerings today. General Gas and Electric Corporation is planning short term financing amounting to $50,000,000 through the sale of 4 1-2 and 5 per cent serial gold notes due 1931-1935. Proceeds will be used for extensions and additions to the properties of subsidiaries and affiliated companies and acquisition of additional investments, it was announced.

The best grade rails showed marked resistance to the pressure against carriers, which apparently was partially influenced by the continued reports of decreases in earnings. Market leaders remained practically stationary, with changes of small consequence. Wide fluctuations in less active bonds included Chicago and Alton issues, up about 6 points; Northern Pacific 4s, up 2 1-8; Soo Line 6s, up 3 5-8; International Great Northern 6s and New Hampshire debenture 4s, up about 1 1-2 points each. Seaboard, and Florida East Coast bonds dropped 3 and 2 points.

Few stocks privilege issues escaped the reactionary trend which set in the afternoon, and American Telephone 4 1-2s, and Atchison 4 1-2s dropped a point or more and St. Paul Adjustment 5s sold off 2 points. Baltimore and Ohio 4 1-2s, Rock Island 4 1-2s, and International Telephone 4 1-2s lost about 1-2 point each. Moving contrary to the general trend was American I. G. Chemical 5 1-2s up more than one point.

In the quiet trading in utilities, American Telephone debenture 5s advanced 1-2 point to a new top. Brooklyn Gas 5s of 1945 touched the year's best price. Third Avenue Adjustment 5s, a New York Traction issue, were strong, rising 3 points.

French 7 1-2s were the most active issue of the foreign group, and rose 5-8 to reach 125 3-8, the best figure of the year. Belgium 6 1-2s sold at a new high and other leading European governments held firm. Royal Dutch 4s with warrants were the subject of special inquiry and reached a new 1930 high. Mexican issues which have profited from a strong demand the past two days sagged.

There is a young and pretty school teacher who is very popular among her pupils and visits with their parents in a social way. The other day she was on a street car when a man entered the car and sat down across the aisle. The young teacher immediately leaned forward and said: "How do you do, Mr. Smith." The man turned to look at her and greatly to her confusion, she found that he was a total stranger.

"I beg your pardon," she apologized, "but I thought you were the father of one of my children."—Humorist.

TWO RAIDS IN NEW LONDON RESULT IN A REVENGEFUL SEVERE ASSAULT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 29—The police this afternoon conducted two liquor raids and in both were successful. At least in one instance it is revealed that animosity and enmity is involved in the arrest of Patrick Sullivan, employed by Leonard C. Bruce, 518 Bank street, and a recognized rendezvous for the distribution of liquor. As a result of the raids Sullivan is under arrest charged with violation of the liquor law and Bruce is also under arrest charged with breach of the peace, because he is alleged to have attacked and severely beaten Alexander Blodden, the hotel tailor, for Bruce contends that Blodden was, in a way, responsible for the raid upon his place and the arrest of Sullivan. This may or may not be true, but the fact remains that a woman, was largely responsible for the raid upon Bruce's establishment, even if the latter does not realise it.

This afternoon State Police Officers Peter Busch and John Smith arrested Catherine Powers formerly proprietress of a speakeasy on Linden street, who moved to Groton to conduct her liquor business when she realized that her residence was the object of watchfulness of the police. When the state police obtained information that the Powers woman had transferred operations to Groton, the department decided today to put her out of business. When Officers Busch and Smith went to the residence of the Powers woman and she was arrested she talked freely. What she said caused Busch and Smith to come to New London and they laid their information before Desk Sergeant William Babcock, who immediately saw to it that there was a search warrant at hand for Bruce's resort. With Sergeant John Courtney and Patrolman George Abruhns, the state police went to Bruce's place of business, also his source of supply. Gaining entrance a search revealed 91 pints of gin, a five-gallon container which held about two and one-half gallons of rye whiskey; four quarts of King George Scotch whiskey, eight quarts of gin, two gallons of alcohol, seven quarts of Old Smugger Scotch whiskey. These were all seized and Sullivan was arrested on two charges of violation of the liquor law, keeping with intent to sell and illegal possession. A short time after Sullivan was released from custody upon furnishing a surety on his bond for his appearance in the police court tomorrow. Bruce, imbued with the idea that Blodden was responsible for his store house being raided, and in this Bruce may have been partially, but only partially correct, the latter went to the hotel and seeking Blodden administered a severe beating to the tailor for the elite. Blodden, smarting under the punishment received made complaint to the police and Bruce was arrested by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman George Bruhns, the Bruce's agent is presented in the police court tomorrow, so also will be Bruce on the charge of assault. The raid upon Bruce's resort and the subsequent attack upon Blodden may result in an utter change in the distribution of liquor, which has been handled successfully for many years among the select gathering who desire privacy in drinking rather than entering speakeasies. Neither Bruce nor Blodden is a native of New London, but both came to New London and located when they realized that by their own intiative they could obtain a renumerative livelihood by little or no manual labor and to date they have succeeded enormously.

The other raid by the local police was at the restaurant, 19 Winthrop street, corner of Harrison street, long known to be a booze resort and conducted by Sophie Apanaschik. The raiders, Sergeant John Courtney, Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell and Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Arthur Feeley, possessed of a search warrant, went to the restaurant and there found 11 quarts of alcohol and a single pint of liquor. This was seized and will be used against the proprietress as evidence when she is given a hearing in court tomorrow.

Norwich Driver Wanted.

William R. Denison, 41 Happy street, Norwich, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan charged with violation of the city's traffic regulations in parking overtime. The driver was released, however, with a warning to observe the regulations in the future.

Three drunks await presentation in court tomorrow. One man was arrested on the municipal pier by Patrolman Louis Tooker and the other two were arrested on North Bank street by Patrolman Henry Hick.

PECULIAR POISONING CASE OF BEACH EMPLOYE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 29—Joseph Small, of Pittsfield, Mass., employed at Ocean Beach, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital suffering from the peculiar form of poisoning known as gas gangrene and his case is being watched with interest by the staff at the hospital. Small suffered a slight cut by his hand coming in contact with a meat hook last Saturday and several hours afterwards the hand began to swell rapidly. A physician was summoned and Small was taken to the hospital, where the injured member was opened and a drain inserted. This form of poisoning is commonly fatal and it is not uncommon for a patient to suffer the loss of a part of or the entire arm within 48 hours after the poisoning appears.

Zaradnik-Bolack.

Michael Zaradnik, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Zaradnik, Niantic, and Miss Vera Bolack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanko Bolack, of Stratford, were married Saturday in St. John's Greek Catholic church at Stratford by Rev. O. Charnok. George Antoniak, Niantic, was best man and Miss Helen Bolack attended the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Morris have returned home after having been entertained by Mr. and Mrs. George Denault, of Willimantic.

THAT PINT IN CAR POCKET EXPENSIVE FOR NORTHRUP

Jerry Northrup, of 34 Bolles avenue, was presented on continuance in the police court this morning charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law, in driving while under the influence of liquor. He pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs. He paid. Northrup was driving on Howard street on the morning of July 23rd and the course taken by the auto as observed by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolman Louis Pine was so irregular that the officers gave chase to Northrup. In passing through Howard street the Northrup auto narrowly escaped hitting a traffic beacon and when it was overtaken on Pequot avenue, Northrup was found intoxicated and was arrested. A pint of liquor was also found in one of the pockets of the car.

COLORED PEEPING TOM GETS FINE AND 30 DAYS

Phelan Goree, Negro, residing at 20 Brewer street and employed as a dining car waiter, was charged with breach of the peace. Although he pleaded not guilty, the testimony brought out was of such a convincing nature that Judge Daniel M. Cronin imposed a fine of $50 and costs and sentenced the Negro to jail for 30 days.

The police received a telephone call at 1 o'clock this morning from George A. Schofield, Mountain avenue, that a man was prowling about his yard and Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran and Patrolmen George Laboue and Louis Pine were sent to the house. When the officers arrived there they were informed that the prowler, a Negro, was a "Peeping Tom," for he had not only peered into windows of Schofield's home, but had done the same thing in at least three other houses. The officers made a search of yards, and while doing so, Laboue observed Goree but a short distance away. The officer questioned Goree and his statements did not satisfy the officer that the former was relating the truth as to his mission in that vicinity at that hour of the night for Goree said that he had taken a long walk upon arriving in New London about 8 o'clock and was about to go to his home when intercepted by the officer. In court several witnesses identified Goree as the man that had entered the yards of their home and peered into lighted windows.

Aaron Stein, 467 Edgwood street, Hartford, was charged with driving without a license and was fined $15 and costs.

Virginia P. Eddy, charged with violation of the city's traffic laws, failed to present herself in court and her bond of $2 was forfeited.

Husband Complainant.

Mrs. Lillian Blount, colored, was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. Her case was continued to August 31. Mrs. Blount, who has been arrested several times within a few months was arrested by Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty last night upon complaint of the woman's husband. And a man also charged with intoxication, was given suspension of judgment. He was arrested last night.

James Romano, public driver, was in Waterford town court yesterday afternoon charged with driving while under the influence of liquor. His case was continued another week at the request of counsel for the accused taxicab driver.

A CELL FOR PERRY AFTER MANY ESCAPES

Arthur Perry, of 39 Hamilton street, who has been arrested many times on various charges, but who always manages to escape paying a fine or serving a sentence in jail, was arrested this afternoon by Motorcycle Officers George Cockell and Clarence Martin charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law, in driving an automobile while his license is under suspension. In default of bail to assure his appearance in the police court tomorrow, Perry, who gave his occupation as a chauffeur, was committed to a cell to await the convening of court. Perry's license was suspended several months ago, but the officers detected him driving a car today on Mohegan avenue, in face of the fact that his license was suspended in the police court for committing perjury in attempting to obtain a license. He has also been arrested for non-support, violation of the motor vehicle law and manslaughter, for several years ago the car he was driving on Broad street struck and fatally injured Shirley Sinclair, a child of seven.

Nunes Girl Located.

Clara Nunes, 17, residing with her mother at 326 Crystal avenue and employed at the plant of the Sheffield Dentifrice company, who was reported to the police Saturday by Mrs. Nunes as missing, the mother stating that her daughter had been absent from home since the day before, has been located by the police. It has developed that the girl has not only been in the city continuously, but that she also has been at her employment daily, although not living at home. The girl said that Friday she engaged in an altercation with her mother and was ordered from the house. Clara did so and went to the home of a friend.

Stanley April, of 175 Coggshall street, New Bedford, Mass., was found loitering on Water street last night by Patrolman Dennis Murphy. On being questioned it was learned that the boy was a runaway. He was arrested and locked up. This afternoon the mother of the youth said that she would come here and take charge of her son.

Samuel Katz, 27 Terry street, reported to the police last night that his Oldsmobile had been stolen from its parking place on Jefferson avenue. Several hours later the auto was found abandoned off Colman street. It was taken to the police garage and today Katz took charge of his property.

Arrested Deserter.

George Costa, of Fair Haven, was arrested on Water street last night by Patrolman Dennis Murphy as a deserter from the United States army. Costa was locked up and today was taken to Fort Wright, Fishers Island, for court martial.

Mrs. Thomas H. Kelly, Cranston, R. I., today requested the police to assist her in finding her son, Joseph Kelly, 16, who has been missing from home several days. The youth is described as being 16, about five feet in height and weighs about 120 pounds.

FISHERS ISLAND SLOOP DAMAGED IN GASOLINE FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 29.— A fire that threatened to prove extremely serious occurred this afternoon when the contents of a gasoline tank aboard the small sloop owned by Capt. Richard Brigham, of Fishers Island, ignited in a strange manner. The sloop was moored at the DuMont service station, a part of the municipal pier. After the tank had been filled with gasoline and following the sloop having arrived but a few minutes from an eight-mile run from the island, the supply pipe was taken from the tank for the purpose of being left on the pier. As the line was lifted from the tank several drops of liquid fell upon an open exhaust pipe and that being intensely hot from the run just ended, the gasoline caught fire. The few drops of burning liquid were sufficient to communicate to the tank, which had not been closed, with the result that the 25 gallons of fuel there also ignited and in an instant the cabin of the boat was a mass of flames. On the sudden appearance of the flames Capt. Brigham leaped overboard and the DuMont attendant jumped to the pier, running then to the approach to the New London line pier where an alarm was sent in from Box 231. Chief Thomas Shipman and five pieces of apparatus responded. On their arrival the entire interior of the boat was found in flames. A line of chemicals was stretched to the burning boat and in 10 minutes the fire had been extinguished. Although the interior of the boat was damaged, the loss sustained by the owner, it is believed, will not exceed $250.

Palace Theatre.

All the power of love, drama, danger and suspense is packed into one dynamic film and exploded in a shattering climax in the program which the Palace will present Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

"For the Defense" is the title of the picture to be shown at this popular Warner Brothers' playhouse. William Powell, suave, immaculately dressed, a gentleman from tip to toe, plays the lead. Opposite him is the famous screen vampire, slinky-eyed Kay Francis. Scott Kolk, William B. Davidson and a host of other stars complete the line-up.

"For the Defense" is the story of a miraculously successful criminal lawyer. Powell, as the lawyer, plays the part with magnificence. He is in love with Kay Francis, the actress, but he tells her he is not the "marrying sort." She, on the other hand, is the "marrying sort" and she wants very much to become his wife. So this is how she goes about it:

She starts to run around with Scott Kolk, a society idler, hoping to stir Powell to jealousy that way. She and Scott go to a roadhouse, but on the way back, Scott's car strikes and kills a pedestrian. Fate has strange ways of revealing the truth. In rapid succession one disaster follows another in this case, until Powell, who is defending Kolk, finds the law's grim hands at his own throat.

Today for the last times the Palace presents the beautiful Norma Shearer and the uproarious Marie Dressler, along with Rod La Rocque and other stars in the charming stage comedy, "Let Us Be Gay."

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Very little improvement on the morning's market. Most native produce continued very liberal and beets, beans, carrots, cabbage and squash were moving slowly. Sweet corn is coming in quite freely and quality generally good. There is a good demand for the yellow varieties and prices were holding steady. Native cucumbers are liberal and cheap. Offerings of native tomatoes are coming slow with very few fancys seen. Potato market was weak.

Native apples rae in ample supply with Astrachans leading in offerings. Good graded stock was in good demand but inferior quality was slow to move. Black and huckleberries moderate both in offerings and demand. Shipped in peaches liberal.

Eggs and butter were firm. No change in the weak poultry market.

FOURTH ANNUAL REGATTA AT GARDNER LAKE TODAY

The fourth annual regatta for boys camping at Gardner lake, one of the outstanding features of the camping season, will be held at Camp Terrehegan, the Y. M. C. A. camp today (Wednesday). At least six camps will participate in the many events, including Camp Wakenah, the Boy Scout camp at the lake. The other camps expected to take part are Massapeack, Moween, Cadaho and Lincoln.

The events will be divided into classes with the official weight classification for Connecticut being used. The official weighing took place at Camp Terrehegan Tuesday. The program will consist of one standard boat race, one standard canoe race, one swim, one novelty canoe race in each class and a hand paddling race for crews of six boys. The boats for competition will be furnished by Camp Terrehegan. One entry will be permitted in each class event by each camp.

Ribbon prizes will be awarded to winner of first, second and third places. A silver mounted shield will be awarded to the camp winning the highest number of points.

The novelty races will be different in each class. In the cadet class the novelty will be a crab race; in the junior class a kangaroo race; in the prep class a tandem canoe on gunwales, and in the intermediate race a tandem hurry-scurry race.

The annual regatta attracted more than 500 visitors to the camp last year and preparations are being made by A. B. Dawson, director of Camp Terrehegan, to accommodate an even larger crowd this year.

He has pillows and mattress upon the platform to sleep on during the nights. His brothers bring his meals up to him by means of a ladder. Young Brennan passes the time away by reading books and playing cards. Quite a number of people have paid visits to the boy who is up in a tree on his farm near the milk shed. Asked if he felt any bad effects from being up in the tree, he stated that he did not. The mother of the boy is against the boy's crazy idea and refused to send up meals, but young Brennan's chums saw to it that he had food which they obtained from their own household.

FRANK LAND RECAPTURED AFTER ESCAPE FROM NEW JERSEY PRISON

Frank Land, 36, who broke out of the Norwich jail in 1917, and Wethersfield state prison in 1926, made a break for liberty Tuesday from the New Jersey state prison at Trenton but was recaptured. He was one of two prisoners facing long terms, who attempted to gain their liberty at daybreak Tuesday from the New Jersey prison.

The attempt was thwarted by guards, but only after one of the men had broken his way through to the roof and was about to drop over the wall.

Land, who is serving a ten year term for assault and attempted robbery, had gained the roof of a wing when spotlights detected him. He retraced his route and in dropping 30 feet broke his leg. The other prisoner, Benjamin Nerenberg, 23, serving a life term sentence for murder, had broken an entrance to his cell when Land was detected. He gave up his effort to escape.

When arrested at Paterson, N. J., June 28, 1928, Land was a fugitive from the state prison at Wethersfield. He had been shot by a storekeeper in that city while attempting a getaway following a holdup. Land was in a critical condition in a Paterson hospital for some time. Connecticut authorities attempted to effect his return but Land was imprisoned in New Jersey.

In September 1917, Land was arrested in this city for theft and broke jail before he could be brought to trial. Recaptured, he was sentenced to from four to thirteen years in Wethersfield. December 28, 1919, with several other prisoners, he escaped. Land secured a hack raw and using chewing gum to deaden the noise, cut his way out and then released a few others from cells. With two others he was captured in Meriden the following day. For this Land was given a prison sentence of from eight to ten years.

Early on the morning of September 3, 1925, Land and "Lefty" McDonnell, one of the Captain Madden slayers, escaped by boring holes through the tops of their steel cells, fleeing through a ventilator shaft and dropping to the ground by means of an improvised rope ladder.

EDUCATION AND PATRIOTISM FEATURE LEGION PROGRAMME

A letter received by R. O. Fletcher post No. 4, American Legion, and by every Legion post in the state, from O. L. Bodenhamer, national commander, requests that immediate arrangements be made with school authorities for a program in which education and patriotism will be combined in studies this fall. The posts are expected to adopt resolutions approving the program in order that new commanders this fall will be properly authorized to continue the programme to a successful conclusion.

"Education is vital to successful citizenship," the national commander's letter reads. "The Legion believes in good citizenship. We should, therefore be interested in education. Through education we can instill a true sense of patriotism. The program suggested teaches patriotism, as well as the necessity of education."

Tribute is paid to the Legionnaires of this state for the successful work done this year, and the national commander thanks the post officials for their splendid co-operation. "Now I come to you with one additional programme, which I consider most important and which must be started now, even though it is at the close of your administration," the letter reads.

"Get your school authorities to carry on a course of study in every class in every school on flag etiquette or flag education.

"Make arrangements to give American Legion school award medals to school pupils.

"Get school authorities to give a course to every one of the advanced classes in the study of the constitution during National Constitution Week, (Sept. 14-20, which includes the anniversary of the signing of the constitution).

"Get school authorities to engage in a Legion educational programme during National American Educational Week, (Nov. 10-16, which includes Armistice Day)."

The national commander, at national headquarters in Indianapolis, stated that the Legion's sole desire is to help in the school programme. More than 1,000,000 parents in the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary have children who are now, or soon will be, of school age.

"Because of this, and because of our interest in the success of future citizenship we should take an active part in the development of universal education, and in the building up of patriotism," he said.

The letter announces that the coming August issue of "The Huddle," the official monthly bulletin of the National Americanism Commission of the Legion, will give detailed explanation of the different phases of the programme. Advance proofs of "The Huddle" outline a different subject for each week in the course of study of the flag. The school award medal contains five qualifications for the pupils to attain—honor, courage, scholarship, leadership and service. During the National Constitution Week, the benefits and rights of the individual citizen provided by the constitution of the United States, will be emphasized. During National Education Week, each day will be devoted to a different subject, the schools of the past, the schools of today, the schools of the future, and how they have helped the community, and the individual.

In the city court Tuesday morning, William G. Denker of this city was presented on a charge of non-support and his case was continued by Judge Arthur Libby for six months. Denker was arrested Monday evening by Sergeant Matthew Delaney.

BEAN BEETLE APPEARS AND SPREADS FARTHER

The Mexican bean beetle, whose original home was in the desert-like lands of the southwest, has not only survived its first New England winter, but has spread farther in Connecticut.

Entomologists discovered the pest last summer in this state, but they weren't sure it could endure snow in this latitude. Recently the beetle was observed feeding in vegetable gardens of Orange, Watertown, New Canaan, Granby, South Norwalk, and other towns, some of which were not infested last summer. Specimens were identified by the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station.

Dr. W. E. Britton, state and station entomologist, warns vegetable growers to look for the beetle and kill the insect before it can inflict damage. In a severe infestation the bean crop may be ruined. Adult beetles begin to emerge from the ground in mid-June and by late July, eggs have hatched and the larvae as well as full-grown specimens are eating bean leaves.

"To kill the beetle, dust with magnesium arsenate or calcium arsenate," Dr. Britton said Tuesday. "Or either of these materials may be used as a spray. One pound of magnesium arsenate in 50 gallons of water is an effective spray. If the bean pods are to be eaten, either of these treatments is dangerous. In this case, it is advisable to spray with a pyrethrum soap preparation.

"Applications should always be made from the underside of the leaves. That is where the pest feeds and spraying from the top will not reach him."

Grown beetles eat in ragged areas. The larvae skeletonize the leaves and run narrow parallel channels, nearly straight, on the under side in small, definite areas. Lines in these may run in different directions in relation to other skeletonized patches, so that the injury presents a characteristic appearance which can easily be identified. The pest prefers the common garden or field bean and the lima and rarely attacks other plants.

Mexican bean beetles are one-fourth of an inch long, longer than broad and have the smooth, hard, hemispherical shell of the lady beetles, family Coccinellidae, to which is belongs. It is pale brown or buff and each wing cover bears eight black spots. Larvae are one-third of an inch long, orange in color and covered with long, branched spines.

F. C. NOYES AMONG SKYSCRAPER FINANCIERS

In a special article on the subject of "skyscraper financiers" appearing in the August issue of "Fortune," Charles F. Noyes, prominent real estate man of New York city and son of Charles D. Noyes of this city, is included among the skyscraper financiers of the country. Mr. Noyes is a native of Norwich.

The special article, appearing with a photo of Mr. Noyes, says:

"The life of Mr. Charles F. Noyes is worth exactly $2,400,000. If any one had told him so when he was running the candy concession on the Block Island boat in 1892 he would have probably gone into the sound without a whimper. But the United Cigar Stores, which pay the premium, must know. They ought to. They paid just that for a part interest in his real estate business and insured him to protect themselves.

"Mr. Noyes' office day contrasts curiously with that of Mr. Robert Dowling. Four and a half hours before Mr. Dowling appears at his office, Mr. Noyes is at his desk. He works sixteen hours a day. He will dictate for four hours straight to four stenographers, one an hour, and talk on the telephone for five. He attributes his health (and the insurance policy) to his habits of sleep. When he goes abroad in the summer, as he usually does, he sails on a slow steamer and sleeps 12 or 14 hours a day until he is slept up. Sometimes it takes six weeks. Sometimes it takes six days. When he finds himself waking at 6:30 a. m. he comes home. He takes passage on the fastest steamer he can find."

SEN. BINGHAM LEAVING WASHINGTON FOR SALEM

Senator Frederic Walcott has gone west to study fish and game preservation, and Senator Hiram Bingham will leave Washington soon for his summer home in Salem.

Senator Walcott will spend several weeks touring the west with his congressional preservation committee, studying forests, animal, fish and bird life. The exact date of his return to the east is not yet known.

Senator Bingham will take a brief rest in Connecticut before leaving for Samoa with his commission in September. During his vacation in the state he will confer with various leaders and with applicants seeking appointment as customs collector at Bridgeport.

The position at Bridgeport has been vacant for several weeks, but the treasury department advised Senator Bingham there was no need for hurry in appointing a successor to the late Harvey Bissell, and the senator decided to delay the appointment until he would have had the opportunity to make a personal study of the applicants.

Senator Bingham expects to recommend some Connecticut man for appointment to the customs collection job soon.

NORWICH MAN'S AUTOMOBILE RECOVERED AT SOMERVILLE

A Dodge sedan, owned by David Blum of No. 319 West Main street, stolen several days ago while he was visiting at Revere Beach, Mass., was reported Tuesday morning to have been recovered at Somerville, Mass. The Somerville authorities found the machine deserted behind an old barn in that city. Chief George Linton was notified Tuesday morning of the recovery of the car and had word sent to Mr. Blum who immediately left this city for Somerville to get the machine. The car was not damaged.

OVER 300 ATTENDED LYME ART OPENING

The formal opening of the 29th exhibition by the Lyme Art association, met with unusual success in attendance. More than 300 visited the gallery to see a notable collection of 258 pictures and sketches, varied in theme and treatment by well known American artists.

The exhibition was something of an outdoor affair, too. Dotting the lawn were tea tables, decorated with colorful old fashioned flowers under gayly striped umbrellas. Tea and punch were served by the younger set of the summer colony.

Mrs. William O. Goodman, assisted by other ladies of Old Lyme, was hostess for the afternoon.

The suit is a right of way dispute over which Mrs. Zimmerman alleged that Disco had erected garages.

BRITISH DIRIGIBLE R-100 DUE AT MONTREAL TONIGHT

At 6.25 P. M., E. S. T., Yesterday the R-100 Was 78 Miles East of Belle Isles, Approximately 800 Miles From Its Destination—Messages From the Airship Indicate That It Is Plowing Along Its Way Without Any Untoward Incident.

R-100 PASSED OVER BELLE ISLE LAST NIGHT

ST. HUBERT, Que., July 30.—(AP)—With the Atlantic ocean the most dangerous part of its more than 3,000-mile trip behind it, the British airship R-100 tonight passed over Belle Isle, off the mainland of Labrador at 6:39 o'clock (EST).

Belle Isle is 2,278 miles from Cardington, England, where the airship started on Monday evening. From Belle Isle to St. Hubert is 948 miles and the giant craft should arrive at her destination tomorrow afternoon, as favorable conditions along the Gulf of St. Lawrence should permit an increase of speed.

Undaunted by the winds which have wrecked many attempted airplane crossings of the North Atlantic, the largest airship in existence has sailed smoothly along, varying little from the Great Circle course which is her shortest route.

The commander's messages, received at long intervals by government authorities here, have been of the briefest nature. A statement of the position, expressed in longitude and latitude, the time and a brief note such as "uneventful" or "all well" have been all the advices sent.

OTTAWA, Ontario, July 30—(AP)—The department of marine here at 6:25 p. m., e. s. t., received a wireless report that the British Dirigible R-100 was then 78 miles east of Belle.

Belle Isle is a tiny island off the northern tip of Newfoundland, and approximately 800 miles from the R-100's destination.

AIRPORT PREPARING FOR ARRIVAL OF R-100

MONTREAL, Que., July 30—(AP)—With the greatest airship the skies have ever known bearing down on Canada on its first long flight from England, St. Hubert's Airport outside this city teemed tonight with preparations for its reception.

Out beyond the great mast where the R-100 will swing tomorrow night, long rows of tents were raised to house the 600 soldiers and police who will handle the huge crowds expected to gather from all over the province.

In the hangar itself provisions were made to take care of the 44 men who are sailing the ocean air in Britain's latest bid for aerial supremacy.

Throughout the day the wireless station at St. Hubert's was in intermittent touch with the mighty dirigible, which is vaster far than either the Los Angeles of the United States navy or the Graf Zeppelin of Germany.

From ships at sea and from the R-100 itself it was learned that the airship was sailing smoothly over the aerial highways of the Atlantic and from the late afternoon reports—the R-100 was then off Belle Isle straight. It could be estimated with fair accuracy that the time of arrival here would be late tomorrow, probably between four and six o'clock.

So far as could be told from messages from the airship there were no mishaps such as endangered the success of the first ocean voyage of the Graf Zeppelin, when wind tore the fabric from one of the rear fins and exposed the great bag to the fury of the elements.

Messages from the R-100 were marked by such expressions as "All okay," "uneventful trip," and the like, indicating that the ship was plowing along its way like any surface steamer.

The R-100's course lay along Belle Isle straight between Labrador and Newfoundland, and down the St. Lawrence to the airport outside Montreal, so that for several hundred miles her lights skimming across the darkened skies should be visible to those willing to forego sleep.

$100,000 DAMAGE SUIT RESULT OF MIXED BABIES

CHICAGO, July 30.—(AP)—The baby imbroglio over who's who in the Watkins-Bamberger families was the basis for a $100,000 damage suit filed today against the Englewood hospital by Mrs. Margaret Watkins, mother of one of the infants she alleged were exchanged at the time the two mothers left the hospital.

Mrs. Watkins charged that the hospital forced her to accept a child marked with the name of another mother, and has deprived her "of the joy of loving, rearing and educating a child of her own flesh and blood."

After returning home, the Watkinses found the name Bamberger on the adhesive tape on the back of the baby they thought was theirs, and the Charles Bambergers found Watkins' name on the back of the infant they had taken home. The Bambergers, however, have said they were satisfied they had their own child.

Meanwhile, William R. Watkins, one of the fathers, denied he had been illegally divorced from his first wife, Mrs. Ann Van Stan Watkins of Philadelphia, and denied his present marriage was illegal. The present Mrs. Watkins said she knew "all about" her husband's first marriage and was not concerned about the first wife's charge, that she never had been legally notified of a divorce. "That doesn't interest me," she said. "All I want is my own baby."

TO STIFFEN BOYCOTT OF BRITISH GOODS IN INDIA

BOMBAY, July 30—(AP)—With plans for stiffening the boycott against British goods and intensifying the civil disobedience campaign believed to be its principal agenda, the working committee of the All-India congress opened its sessions today.

Only ten of the committee members were present, 21 being in prison on various charges preferred by the government. The sessions, held behind closed doors, were expected to continue three and possibly four days. Vallabhai Patel presided.

Members on the committee said the peace plans of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and M. Jayakar probably would not be considered.

The left wing faction, which has the predominating influence, favors vigorously stiffening the activities of congress throughout the country. Members of that group asserted that there is not the slightest chance for any slackening of the struggle in the near future.

SLAYER OF LINGLE IDENTIFIED IN COURT

CHICAGO, July 30.—(AP)— The policeman who pursued a fleeing gunman from the Randolph street pedestrian subway where Jake Lingle was assassinated on June 9 identified the fugitive in court today.

Pointing to Frank Foster, said to be a Capone gangster, Policeman Anthony Ruthy asserted positively: "That's the man!" The police had asserted that the man whom Officer Ruthy tried to catch was the slayer.

His testimony was an unpleasant shock to Foster's defending counsel, who had called the traffic officer as their final witness in an effort to free the gangster from the county jail, where he has been held 10 days since extradition from Los Angeles.

UNIDENTIFIED CHINESE WAS SLAIN IN BOSTON

BOSTON, July 30—(AP)—Tong warfare broke out in Boston's Chinatown tonight with the Chinese reverting to their old means of killing, the hatchet. An unidentified Chinese was found slain in dark and narrow Oliver place. He had been both shot and maimed by a hatchet.

FORMER JUDGE VAUSE SENTENCED TO PRISON

NEW YORK, July 30 -(AP)—W. Bernard Vause, who as a county judge in Brooklyn was noted for the severity of his sentences and who once recommended the whipping post for criminals, was sentenced today to six years in federal prison.

Judge Vause was found guilty, with Harry Cruso and Samuel Schuchman of using the mails to defraud in the conduct of the defunct Columbia Finance corporation. Three others pleaded guilty and four were acquitted.

Federal Judge Coxe today sentenced former Judge Vause to five years each on twelve counts of fraud and one year on a conspiracy count, the fraud sentences to run concurrently.

Schuchman, pictured with Vause by the government as the brains of the Columbia corporation, was sentenced to two to six years on six fraud counts and two years on the conspiracy charge. He will serve a term of about five years.

Solomon Cruso, who, with Abraham Rayman and Joseph P. Barmak, pleaded guilty before trial and testified for the government, was sentenced to two years on thirteen counts. Barmak and Rayman were sentenced to a year and a day on thirteen counts.

Harry Cruso, who was found guilty on the conspiracy charge, escaped a prison term but was placed on probation for two years.

Columbia Finance, which carried on the functions of a bank although without state charter, failed for $400,000 last December, only $600 in assets remaining. Most of its investors were east side residents.

NEW YORK UNION PRINTERS VOTING ON FIVE DAY WEEK

NEW YORK, July 30.—(AP)— Members of the Typographical union, employed in New York newspapers and job printing plants, balloted today on a proposal to inaugurate a five-day week as a means of creating employment of 2,000 idle members of their craft. The result of the vote will be announced tomorrow.

Proponents of the measure contended that with one sixth of the membership dependent on union benefits, it would be more advantageous for those employed to give up one day a week than to maintain the unemployed by increased assessments.

PANAMA CITY ROCKED BY TWO EARTHQUAKES

PANAMA CITY, Panama, July 30.—(AP)—Two earthquake shocks rocked Panama City and the Canal Zone about 2 o'clock this afternoon as workers were returning from stores and offices after luncheon.

R. Z. Kirkpatrick, chief of the bureau of surveys of the Panama Canal said the exact epicenter would be unknown until tomorrow. The quake was recorded on the seismograph in the administration building for half an hour.

Two shocks, first a light one and then a strong one, rocked buildings here but no damage was recorded.

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS BY LIGHTNING IN DRUG STORE

BLUFFTON, Ga., July 30.—(AP) — Lightning flashed in a drug store during a thunderstorm here and Dr. B. T. Johnson, standing beside a telephone, fell to the floor and lay still. Friends gathered around him. He was merely stunned and they soon revived him.

He regained his feet, but his walk was peculiar.

"Paralyzed!" suggested one of the onlookers in a whisper. Then Dr. Johnson himself discovered why he walked that way. The lightning had knocked off both heels of his shoes.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

BUCHAREST, July 30.—(AP) —King Carol was reported to have expressed extreme dissatisfaction with the inactivity of the government in suppressing anti-semitic disorders.

SHANGHAI, July 30. (Wednesday) —(AP)—The British North China Daily News today says all foreign missions at Changsha, Hunan province capital, were destroyed by communists who overran the city yesterday.

KIRKWALL, Orkley Islands, July 30.—(AP)— Wolfram Hirth and Oscar Weller, German fliers attempting a flight from Germany to the United States via Iceland and Greenland, spent today anxiously waiting for weather good enough for the trip to Iceland.

COPENHAGEN, July 30. — (AP) — Premier Jiauning told the Associated Press today that he would in the near future visit the Faroe Islands, where demonstrators yesterday tore down the Danish flag and hoisted a large faroe banner. He added, however, that he had no objection to the islanders' displaying their own banner in conjunction with the Danish flag.

NEW YORK GARBAGE SCOW SEIZED WITH CARGO OF RUM

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP)—A city owned garbage scow, valued at $100,000, was confiscated by customs authorities today, after it had been seized with a $90,000 liquor cargo aboard at a pier on the lower East Side.

Branded as a common rum runner, the scow was towed off to the government barge offices. The collector of the port notified city officials that unless they prove they were ignorant of its contraband cargo the scow will be sold at auction, as any other criminal craft.

The scow, together with its liquor and 22 men, seven of them employes of the city street cleaning department, was captured just before dawn today by a customs patrol boat. Attracted by an unusual amount of activity along the Battery water front the patrol boat put in and surprised nearly 100 men engaged in unloading the liquor from the scow.

There were a few shots, knives flashed and fists flew as the customs officers charged. Those on the pier disappeared in the semi-darkness, some leaped into the river. The others were subdued, two trucks were seized and a list of suburban residents and night club owners was found aboard the scow.

The barge is believed to have made contact with a rum row schooner while out on a garbage dumping trip near the 12 mile limit. The seven city employes captured in the raid have been suspended from duty.

BIDS FOR BUILDINGS AT FAIRFIELD STATE HOSPITAL

HARTFORD, July 30— (AP) —C. Abedessa and Brothers, Inc., of New Haven, with a bid of $870,000, were the low bidders for the general contract of the service buildings of the new Fairfield State hospital at Newtown, when the bids were opened in the state capitol by the trustees of the institution this afternoon. Bids on five other contracts in connection with the erection of the new state hospital were opened, but the contract will not be awarded before next Wednesday, when the trustees will meet to act upon the bids. On the basis of the low bids, it would appear that the service buildings will cost approximately $1,214,000, believed to be well within the sum available for the purpose.

Low bidders on the other contracts were: Plumbing, M. J Daly and Sons, Waterbury, $81,267; heating, Libby and Blinn, Inc., Hartford, $153,770; electrical, the Billings Electric company, New Britain, $63,752; engines and generators, Ames Engineering company, N. L. C. Engineering and Equipment company Boston, agents, $42,984; refrigeration, the York Ice Machine company, Boston, $37,250.

PRESIDENT AND MRS. HOOVER ATTEND BASEBALL GAME

WASHINGTON, July 30—(AP)—President and Mrs. Hoover went to the baseball game today, ate peanuts, and rooted for the home team.

It was the second time this year they had seen the Washington Senators beaten, but they stayed until the last man was out and applauded each threatening rally as the Senators fought to overcome a Philadelphia lead.

The chief executive was dressed in white flannel trousers and blue coat. Mrs. Hoover wore a brown woven straw hat and figured chiffon dress. They were accompanied by a large party of guests and all made a circus-day of the occasion.

Mrs. Hoover who had led the applause from the presidential party throughout the game was one of the first to rise in the seventh inning and she and the chief executive stood with the other thousands until play was resumed.

SUIT FOR INJUNCTION AGAINST $350,000 PAYMENT

WASHINGTON, July 30—(AP)—Suit for injunction was filed in District of Columbia supreme court today to prevent the payment of the $350,000 to Charles J. Harrah that was awarded him recently by a board created to arbitrate his claims against the Cuban government.

The suit was brought by Edgar W. McCormick, who asked $35,000 for his services in connection with presenting the claim to the arbitration board. McCormick claimed to be the only American engineer qualified to practice in Cuba.

The suit sought to enjoin Secretaries Stimson and Mellon from paying the money awarded.

McCormick contended he spent six months in preparing engineering data regarding the twelve miles of railroad involved in Harrah's claim. He asked that a receiver be named to take over Harrah's voucher and deduct the sum he sought for his services.

WOULD ASSIST MEXICAN ACTORS AT HOLLYWOOD

MEXICO CITY, July 30—(AP)—Secretary of Communications Almazan today recommended to President Ortiz Rubio that government assistance be given to Mexican actors in Hollywood's motion picture colony, to preserve Mexico's "hegemony" in Spanish talkies.

The minister expressed the opinion that the talkies were proving of immense value as a means of propaganda and that, while Mexican actors apparently dominated the Spanish speaking movie colony, there was great competition between them and Spanish actors to hold their positions.

Americans In China Warned Of Danger

Advised Against Remaining In Districts Infested B[illegible] Bandits.

WASHINGTON, July 30—[illegible] creased activity of bandits a[illegible] munists in the provinces of [illegible]n, Hunan, Honan and Kiangsi, [illegible]day caused the American legation at Peiping to act for the second time this month to protect American citizens.

Richard P. Butrick at Hankow, circularized 419 Americans on July 11, warning them of the inadvisability of remaining in remote provinces because of the extreme danger. The legation at Peiping today urged consular officials to warn Americans again of the necessity of withdrawing from remote spots to places where they could be adequately protected.

Meantime it became known that the navy at present does not contemplate increasing its Asiatic force of 6,000 sailors and 2,400 marines in China.

Secretary Adams today endorsed the decision of officers that the present force was sufficient to handle the situation. Other officers, however, said that should the communists threaten more thickly populated regions an increase in the forces could be expected.

The navy now has its 6,000 men on ships in the Yangtze and south China patrols and other vessels in the Asiatic fleet, based on the Philippine Islands. The largest ship on duty is the obsolete cruiser Pittsburgh, which carries 969 men. It now is at Tsingtao.

In addition, the navy has 19 destroyers, 12 submarines, five tenders, three aircraft tenders, a tanker and several mine sweepers in the Asiatic in addition to its gunboats. It operates 24 airplanes in this region, while the marine corps has four planes at its base in Guam.

There are 1,200 marines in Shanghai, 500 at Peiping and 650 at Guam. The latter could be convoyed to China on short notice.

Butrick reported to the state department from Hankow tonight that all Americans were safely evacuated from Changsha by navy vessels except William Lingle, of Salisbury, North Carolina, and Allen Cameron, of Lawrence, Kansas, who refused to leave. Father Braiman, an Italian priest, was captured by communists and is the only foreigner known to be in their hands.

The consul estimated there was $365,000 of American owned real estate in Changsha and $1,550,000 of goods. The property includes that of the Standard Oil Company of New York, Liggett and Meyers, Singer Sewing Machine company, L. E. Gale, Yale in China, the Presbyterian church and the Seventh Day Adventists.

TO WAR AGAINST LARGER VIOLATORS OF DRY LAW

WASHINGTON, July 30— (AP) —Maintenance of "steady pressure" against the larger violators of the dry laws was announced today by Prohibition Director mo: W. W. Woodcock as a guiding policy of the reorganized enforcement unit.

lb NDI xETAOIN ETAONI NNN

"I will not have our agencies following the course of least resistance and wasting their times upon pitiful, picayunish, non-commercial cases," he said. "I think the prohibition laws can be successfully enforced against commercial operations. I propose to make that our objective and not to dissipate our energies in other fields.

"I shall insist that a steady pressure be maintained against these commercial violations. I disapprove sensational methods."

Woodcock's statement was issued after a day spent in conference with the twelve administrators, recently appointed to take charge in the field, and a group of special agents responsible directly to national headquarters for investigation work.

STREET SWEEPER FIGURED IN CAPTURE OF ROBBERS

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP)—The chance to be a hero comes seldom to a street sweeper.

His golden moment caught Max Levine with nothing but his brush and a refuse pan, when two robbers careened through a Brooklyn street in a motor car the other day, making their getaway from the scene of a holdup.

But Max used his homely weapons with effect. He flung the pan through the windshield of the car and caused the driver to swerve into a vegetable stand, enabling the capture of both felons.

Max was rewarded today. The head of the department of sanitation eulogized him publicly as Max stood at dutiful attention in his big chief's office.

And when the eulogy was over, Max inclined his head a bit and asked, humbly:

"How about getting me a little raise?"

GEHLBACH LEADING ALL-AMERICAN AIR DERBY

LINCOLN, Neb., July 30—(AP)—Lee Gehlbach of Little Rock, Ark., led the All-American derby on the flight into Lincoln. He arrived about 3:46 p. m. after a trip from Ogden, Utah.

Lowell Bayles of Springfield, Mass., who took off from Cheyenne at 11:13 a. m., landed at the Lincoln airport about 4:46 p. m., after stopping three times, he said, between North Platte, 210 miles west, and this city, the overnight stop.

Motor trouble developing just after he crossed the Nebraska line forced him down, he stated.

The third derbyist to land was Charlie Meyers of Cleveland, who dropped to the municipal field right after Bayles.

COUPLE DIVORCED 32 YEARS AGO TO REMARRY, BOTH OVER 70

LEWISTON, Me., July 30—(AP)—John and Mary Demack, both over 70 years old, who were married 52 years ago today and divorced 20 years later, today celebrated their wedding anniversary by filing intentions of marriage with the city clerk.

They were reunite a few weeks ago when Demack found his former wife ill in a Lynn, Mass., hospital.

The aged couple decided that the cause of their divorce some 30 years ago was "trifling" as they saw it now and determined to renew their marriage vows and spend their last years together.

Startling Drop In The Prices Of Wheat

[illegible]ped to a Figure Not Equalled Since 1914—Overproduction the Cause.

CHICAGO, July 30—(AP)—Recessions from wartime prices were probably all outdistanced today by one of America's greatest commodities, wheat. The basis for "the staff of life" dropped to a figure not equalled for the world's premier grain since 1914 and not often quoted in antebellum years. Prices were down 2 to 3 cents for the day.

July wheat struck a bottom of 83 3-8 cents a bushel in Chicago, 76 cents in Kansas City, 87 1-2 in Winnipeg and was only a couple cents above a dollar a bushel in Liverpool. The September option was not much higher. Even December delivery wheat was round 10 cents less than a dollar a bushel on all American exchanges.

Corn lost ground also, 1 1-8 to 2 cents a bushel, but the July option of the coarser grain closed around 2 cents a bushel higher than wheat for the same month, as contrasted to the usual 30 cents or so higher price than the finer grain usually maintains over maize.

There was almost no rally at the close of the market, July corn finishing around 85 1-2 while July wheat closed at 83 1-2.

All reports indicated that there was a plethora of wheat in the world. Large quantities of last year's crop are still awaiting sale to ultimate consumers and a golden stream of new cereal is pouring into crowded elevators. No one needs it, apparently. Farmers in many places are reported feeding wheat to livestock in place of the more expensive corn.

July oats finished the day from 1 to 1 7-8 cents down.

Rye quotations followed the other grains, September delivery closing down about 3 cents at 52 1-2.

WORST DROUGHT SINCE WEATHER RECORDS BEGAN

WASHINGTON, July 30—(AP)—The searing drought which for weeks and months has baked large areas between the Rockey Mountains and the Appalachians was listed today as the worst the country has experienced since state wide weather records began.

J. B. Kincer, meteorologist of the department of agriculture, described it as unparalleled in the records which reach back 40 or 50 years.

Farmers who have watched their crops wither under almost unprecedented temperature records accompanying moisture deficiencies, particularly corn, pastures and fall truck crops, received no encouragement. The forecast division of the weather bureau said no relief was in sight for several days more at least.

"Every additional day without rain," Kincer said, "notwithstanding cooler weather, necessarily will further reduce crop prospects."

Winter wheat harvest, however, is nearing completion without appreciable damage. Considerable deterioration to the late spring wheat was reported but harvesting of the early crop is well advanced.

Cotton has suffered in some sections.

Corn has been particularly hard hit in some sections, the abnormally high temperatures and lack of moisture has prevented the pollenization essential to production.

The bureau said the "larger part" of the crop in Missouri was reported ruined to such an extent that it can not be used even for silage. "Serious and irreparable injury" was reported to the crop in most of Ohio: "decided deterioration" in Indiana; losses "already serious" in Illinois with further deterioration; Iowa, "hot and dry," much upland corn in Oklahoma "burned beyond recovery"; much of the Nebraska crop is "still fair" but damage has been heavy.

PREPARING FOR CABINET OF GOVERNMENT IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Ont., July 30—(AP)—Premier-elect R. D. Bennett, today prepared to take the reins of the Canadian government from the liberal ministry of MacKenzie King, and carry out the campaign he made to deal with unemployment "immediately after July 28."

Several prospective ministers in Premier Bennett's conservative cabinet are not members of the parliament or were defeated in the last election and he is anxious to announce their selection so that those not already members can stand for election.

It appeared probable today that September 2, would be set as bye-election day with results polled seven days later and an extra session of parliament called into session September 11 to deal with the unemployment problem.

BEER TRUCK DRIVER MADE MISTAKE SMILING AT COP

CORNWALL, N. Y., July 30—(AP)—It's all right for a truck driver to smile at a policeman, although they seldom do—but when one actually grins, and then breaks into a loud guffaw,—there's some sort of skulduggery in the wind.

Such was the reasoning of State Trooper W. R. Dalton today, when Charles Tetezoe, the truck driver wearing the aforesaid grin, passed him on the highway. Tetezoe was halted and the trooper discovered Tetezoe's truck was loaded with barreled beer.

And that's not all. Three other trucks following closely in Tetezoe's wake also were stopped and found loaded with similar cargo. Now the four trucks, the grinning driver and his three companions are in custody of federal prohibition officers at Kingston.

SHAMROCK V. IN HARBOR AT HORTA, THE AZORES

HORTA, Island of Fayal, Azores, July 30.—(AP)—The Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's pride upon which he pins his hope of capturing the America's cup this September, was safe and sound in Horta harbor tonight after having been out of contact with her convoy for five days.

The Shamrock was proceeding in company with her escort, the steam yacht Erin five days ago when mist and rain swallowed her from view. The trim craft carries no wireless and all attempts to regain touch with her were fruitless

EARLY HEARING ON MOONEY'S APPLICATION FOR PARDON

Gov. C. C. Young of California Has Ordered the Members of the State Advisory Pardon Board to Hold Themselves In Readiness—MacDonald Adheres to His Statement of False Testimony—Gov. Young Is to Personally Examine MacDonald In Connection With Mooney's Application For Pardon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—(AP) — Governor C. C. Young today notified Lieutenant Governor H. L. Carnahan, chairman of the state advisory pardon board to hold himself and other members in readiness for an early hearing on Thomas J. Mooney's application for a pardon. Most of the members were attending the MacDonald hearing in the Mooney-Billings case here.

MACDONALD HAD NEITHER SEEN NOR HEARD EXPLOSION

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30. —(AP)— John MacDonald, aging Baltimore waiter today placed on the California supreme court responsibility of deciding which of his many stories in the famous Mooney-Billings bombing case is true.

The recanting witness who came from Baltimore for the announced purpose of easing his conscience of previous testimony he now brands untruthful, climaxed his appearance before the court by admitting he had told of being within 100 feet of the bombing and had neither seen nor heard it.

The bombing was that of the 1916 Preparedness day parade here which killed ten persons and injured 40.

As cross examination was concluded MacDonald admitted his identification of Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings at their trials did not jibe with the facts. He was on the verge of collapse when excused by supreme court justices who questioned him in connection with an application of Billings for a pardon recommendation.

As court recessed, Chief Justice Waste announced Governor C. C. Young would personally examine MacDonald either Saturday or Monday in connection with Mooney's pardon application. The governor said he would be guided in the Mooney case by the supreme court recommendation regarding Billings. He cannot act in the Billings case without a supreme court recommendation because of a prior conviction of Billings.

Although excused, MacDonald was expected to be recalled after the testimony of Police Captain Charles Goff, whom MacDonald has accused of "goading" him to identify the prisoners falsely.

MacDonald, under examination by Charles Fickert, district attorney during the bombing trials, testified the prosecutor promised him a "big slice" of the $17,500 reward if he testified as directed. The waiter has accused Fickert of "framing" Mooney and Billings.

During the examination the witness frequently contradicted his questioner. The contradictions included testimony as to when the Baltimore man first met the prosecutor.

Fickert declared MacDonald met him for the first time the day the grand jury convened.

"It was before that," said MacDonald firmly.

"As a matter of fact were you ever in my office before your grand jury appearance?" asked Fickert.

"Yes sir," answered the witness "eight or ten times. You remember that."

"When did you first hear about the big slice of the $17,500 reward?" Fickert asked.

"In your office." MacDonald replied.

Questioning then turned to the "power" MacDonald said Fickert exercised over him. Judge Preston asked MacDonald if he still felt he was in Fickert's clutches.

"I am," the witness answered. "I am in a daze right now."

Duncan Matheson, acting captain of police at the time of the bombing, in answer to questions from William H. Langdon, associate justice, told the court he had "grave doubts" as to the guilt of Mooney and Billings.

"I thought them guilty at the time," said Matheson. "I have since changed my mind."

The witness told of receiving a letter from MacDonald in which the writer asked if a reward had been posted for the bombers. Matheson said he told MacDonald no rewards had been offered but if there were any he would be taken care of.

The hearing will be continued tomorrow.

WAGE CUTTING NO REMEDY FOR BUSINESS DEPRESSION

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP)—The contention that wage reductions are poor weapons with which to combat depression, and the counter-proposition that the best way to restore prosperity is to maintain wage scales, have been upheld in expressions from a dozen leaders of American industry to Roy Dickinson, associate editor of Printers' Ink.

When Dickinson noted recently that a manufacturer had directed a general wage reduction because of sluggish business condition he telegraphed to 25 business leaders, picked at random.

He suggested that a better index to the business outlook than pig-iron prices, or car loadings was to be found in the attitude of large employers toward wage reductions. He asked the business leaders for their opinion on wage cuts. Here are some of the replies, made public by Dickinson today:

George F. Johnson, shoe manufacturer, Endicott, N. Y.: "Wage cutting or reducing income of labor is not a remedy for business depression. It is a direct and contributing cause."

J. A. Farrell, president, United States Steel corporation: "Quoting from my remarks at the May meeting of the American and Steel Institute: 'I heard a steel man say the other day that wages should come down. I said 'Oh no wages are not coming down in the steel industry; make your mind up to that. If you are going out to sell your goods and eliminate your profit and expect to get it out of the men in the mills you are greatly mistaken.'"

"Ten years ago," Dickinson writes summing up the replies in Printers' Ink, "when I was a member of President Harding's unemployment conference run by Herbert Hoover, I wrote a minority report against wage cuts. I could get only one of the 50 members to sign it—the late Samuel Gompers. Then it was almost an axiom that wage cuts would bring back normal times.

"Today a new point of view prevails. Maintaining purchasing power at the source is the most important job in the country today, for wages buy more shoes and automobiles than dividends."

TWO EARTHQUAKES IN CANAL ZONE YESTERDAY

PANAMA CITY, Panama, July 30—(AP)—Two earthquakes visited the Canal Zone this afternoon, causing consternation in both terminals of the canal but inflicting, so far as reported late tonight, only trifling damage.

Buildings were shaken and the people fled into the streets.

Official reports said the disturbance centered about 50 miles southeast of Balboa, probably between Aguadulce and Penomone, in the interior of the Panama republic. Communication with these two cities tonight had not been established.

The disturbance started with first a slight and then a stronger temblor. Both lasted only about 20 seconds, although the seismograph at Balboa Heights, indicated that there had been activity for approximately six minutes in that immediate section.

NEW BRITAIN MAN STRUCK BY TRAIN IN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, July 30—(AP)—Stepping directly into the path of a northbound train which he did not hear, because he was watching a train going in the opposite direction, Jesse Smith, 29, of New Britain, was struck in the head and fatally injured at the Sigourney street crossing shortly before 8 o'clock tonight. Smith died upon arrival at St. Francis' hospital, where he was taken in the ambulance by Policeman Henry T. Griffin.

TWO STILLS AND 20,000 GALLONS OF MASH SEIZED IN CHESHIRE

CHESHIRE, Conn., July 30—(AP)—Federal agents today raided a large distillery in a barn on the old Peters' farm, two and a half miles from the Cheshire-Hamden town line. Two stills and 20,000 gallons of mash were confiscated and two men, Antonio Caruso, of Cheshire, and John Marriano, of Waterbury, were arrested.

A 700-gallon still in the barn, the agents said, was in operation when they paid their unannounced visit and the other one, of 350 gallon capacity, was still hot. Full distillery equipment, including a 500 gallon mixer, four 5,000-gallon vats and an assortment of huge iron kettles, the agents said, were found in the place. About 100 gallons of what the agents thought to be partly distilled liquor, also was seized.

The raid was made by Hartford and New Haven federal agents under the leadership of Chief Agent Edwin Raffile, of New Haven. The place, they said, had been under surveillance for several weeks.

GORE WILL BE IN RUN-OFF OF OKLAHOMA PRIMARY

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 30—(AP)—Thomas P. Gore, a blind ex-senator, tonight seemed assured of a place in the democratic primary runoff for nomination for United States senator from Oklahoma.

Charles J. Wrightsman, wealthy Tulsa, Okla., oil operator, was expected to be Gore's runoff opponent, Aug. 12. Three former Oklahoma governors, one of whom was ousted from office, ran behind Gore and Wrightsman in tabulation of yesterday's returns.

Gore, with 44,002 votes, had a lead of 1,169 over Wrightsman when 2,913 of the state's 3,338 precincts had been reported. Of the ex-governors, Henry S. Johnston, the ousted one, was running third with 33,007; Lee Cruce fourth with 25,060 and J. B. A. Robertson, avowed wet, fifth with 3,907. J. C. Walton, a fourth ex-governor, also ousted from office, will be in the general election in November as an independent candidate.

Senator W. B. Pine, republican incumbent, had a lead that apparently relieved him of the necessity of entering the run-off.

BOSTON LODGE OF ELKS IS DECLARED BANKRUPT

BOSTON, July 30 —(AP)—The Boston lodge of Elks, whose charter has been revoked by the national organization for liquor law violation, is bankrupt, John F. Malley, former grand exalted ruler admitted today in the equity session of Suffolk county court.

Malley was appearing as counsel for the local lodge before Judge Lummus in connection with the petition of the First National bank for the appointment of receivers to take over the Elks' hotel property because it is in arrears in its payments.

He told the court that the lodge probably would have gone into bankruptcy were not the officers and members deeply concerned about their second mortgage bondholders and other creditors.

Malley said the lodge had no business in the hotel field and said that venture had been a failure. The lodge is one of the largest in the country and its new home, erected several years ago in the downtown theatrical section of the city, combines a good sized hotel property with the lodge rooms and a group of ground floor retail stores.

Its charter was suspended several months ago after the federal court here had padlocked part of two floors in consequence of a raid in which several employes of a well equipped liquor dispensary on the premises were arrested.

RURAL ROADS DISCUSSED AT JUNIOR COURSE MEETING

WILLIMANTIC, July 30—The need of improved rural roads in Connecticut as stressed in in movement of the state rural roads improvement association was discussed by Deputy U. S. M[illegible] A. P. Marsh of New Britain [illegible] gathering of 360 junior short course students at Connecticut Agricultural college tonight. Mr. Marsh is chairman of the Hartford county committee of the association and in presenting his subject he chose for a topic, "How to Improve the Community In Which You Live." The plan of country road improvement is comprehensive of all so-called rural roads whether located in small communities or within the limits of large cities and towns. It is hoped that the work of the association and its auxiliaries in each town will serve to crystalize the demand for better rural roads with a view of securing a legislative appropriation for their improvement. The movement to "Get Connecticut Out of the Mud" is entirely apart from the creditable stage highway system in which Connecticut ranks as a leader, it was pointed out by the deputy marshal.

King and Chairman Eugene J. Lewis of the police committee were treated to an unexpected but practical demonstration of the dangerous possibilities when a car operated by George Gaudreau of Scotland swung through the square and crashed into a sedan driven by Mrs. Frank W. A residence owned by the Central Vermont Railway near the station at Eagleville, and occupied by John Rada and family, was struck by lightning and considerably damaged during the electrical storm Tuesday evening. The bolt struck near the chimney and tore the plaster from two upper rooms and then ripped its way through partitions to the kitchen. Two legs of the kitchen stove were broken off, almost capsizing the stove. Members of the family felt the shock but were not injured. They were forced to spend the night with neighbors. Mr. Rada is a section foreman for the railway.

Another house at Eagleville, owned by the Eagleville Cotton company and occupied by the families of Mrs. Lillian Bradley and Goodwin Jacobs was also struck during the storm. The Bradley tenement sustained the damage, the bolt ripping off several clapboards and plastering of one bedroom. The flooring of the basement of the structure, which is used for church services, was also damaged.

Two large trees on the Mansfield Four Corners—Warrenville road—were struck during the storm and some 20 lines of the Southern New England Telephone company, servicing 95 stations, were temporarily put out of commission. There was no damage locally.

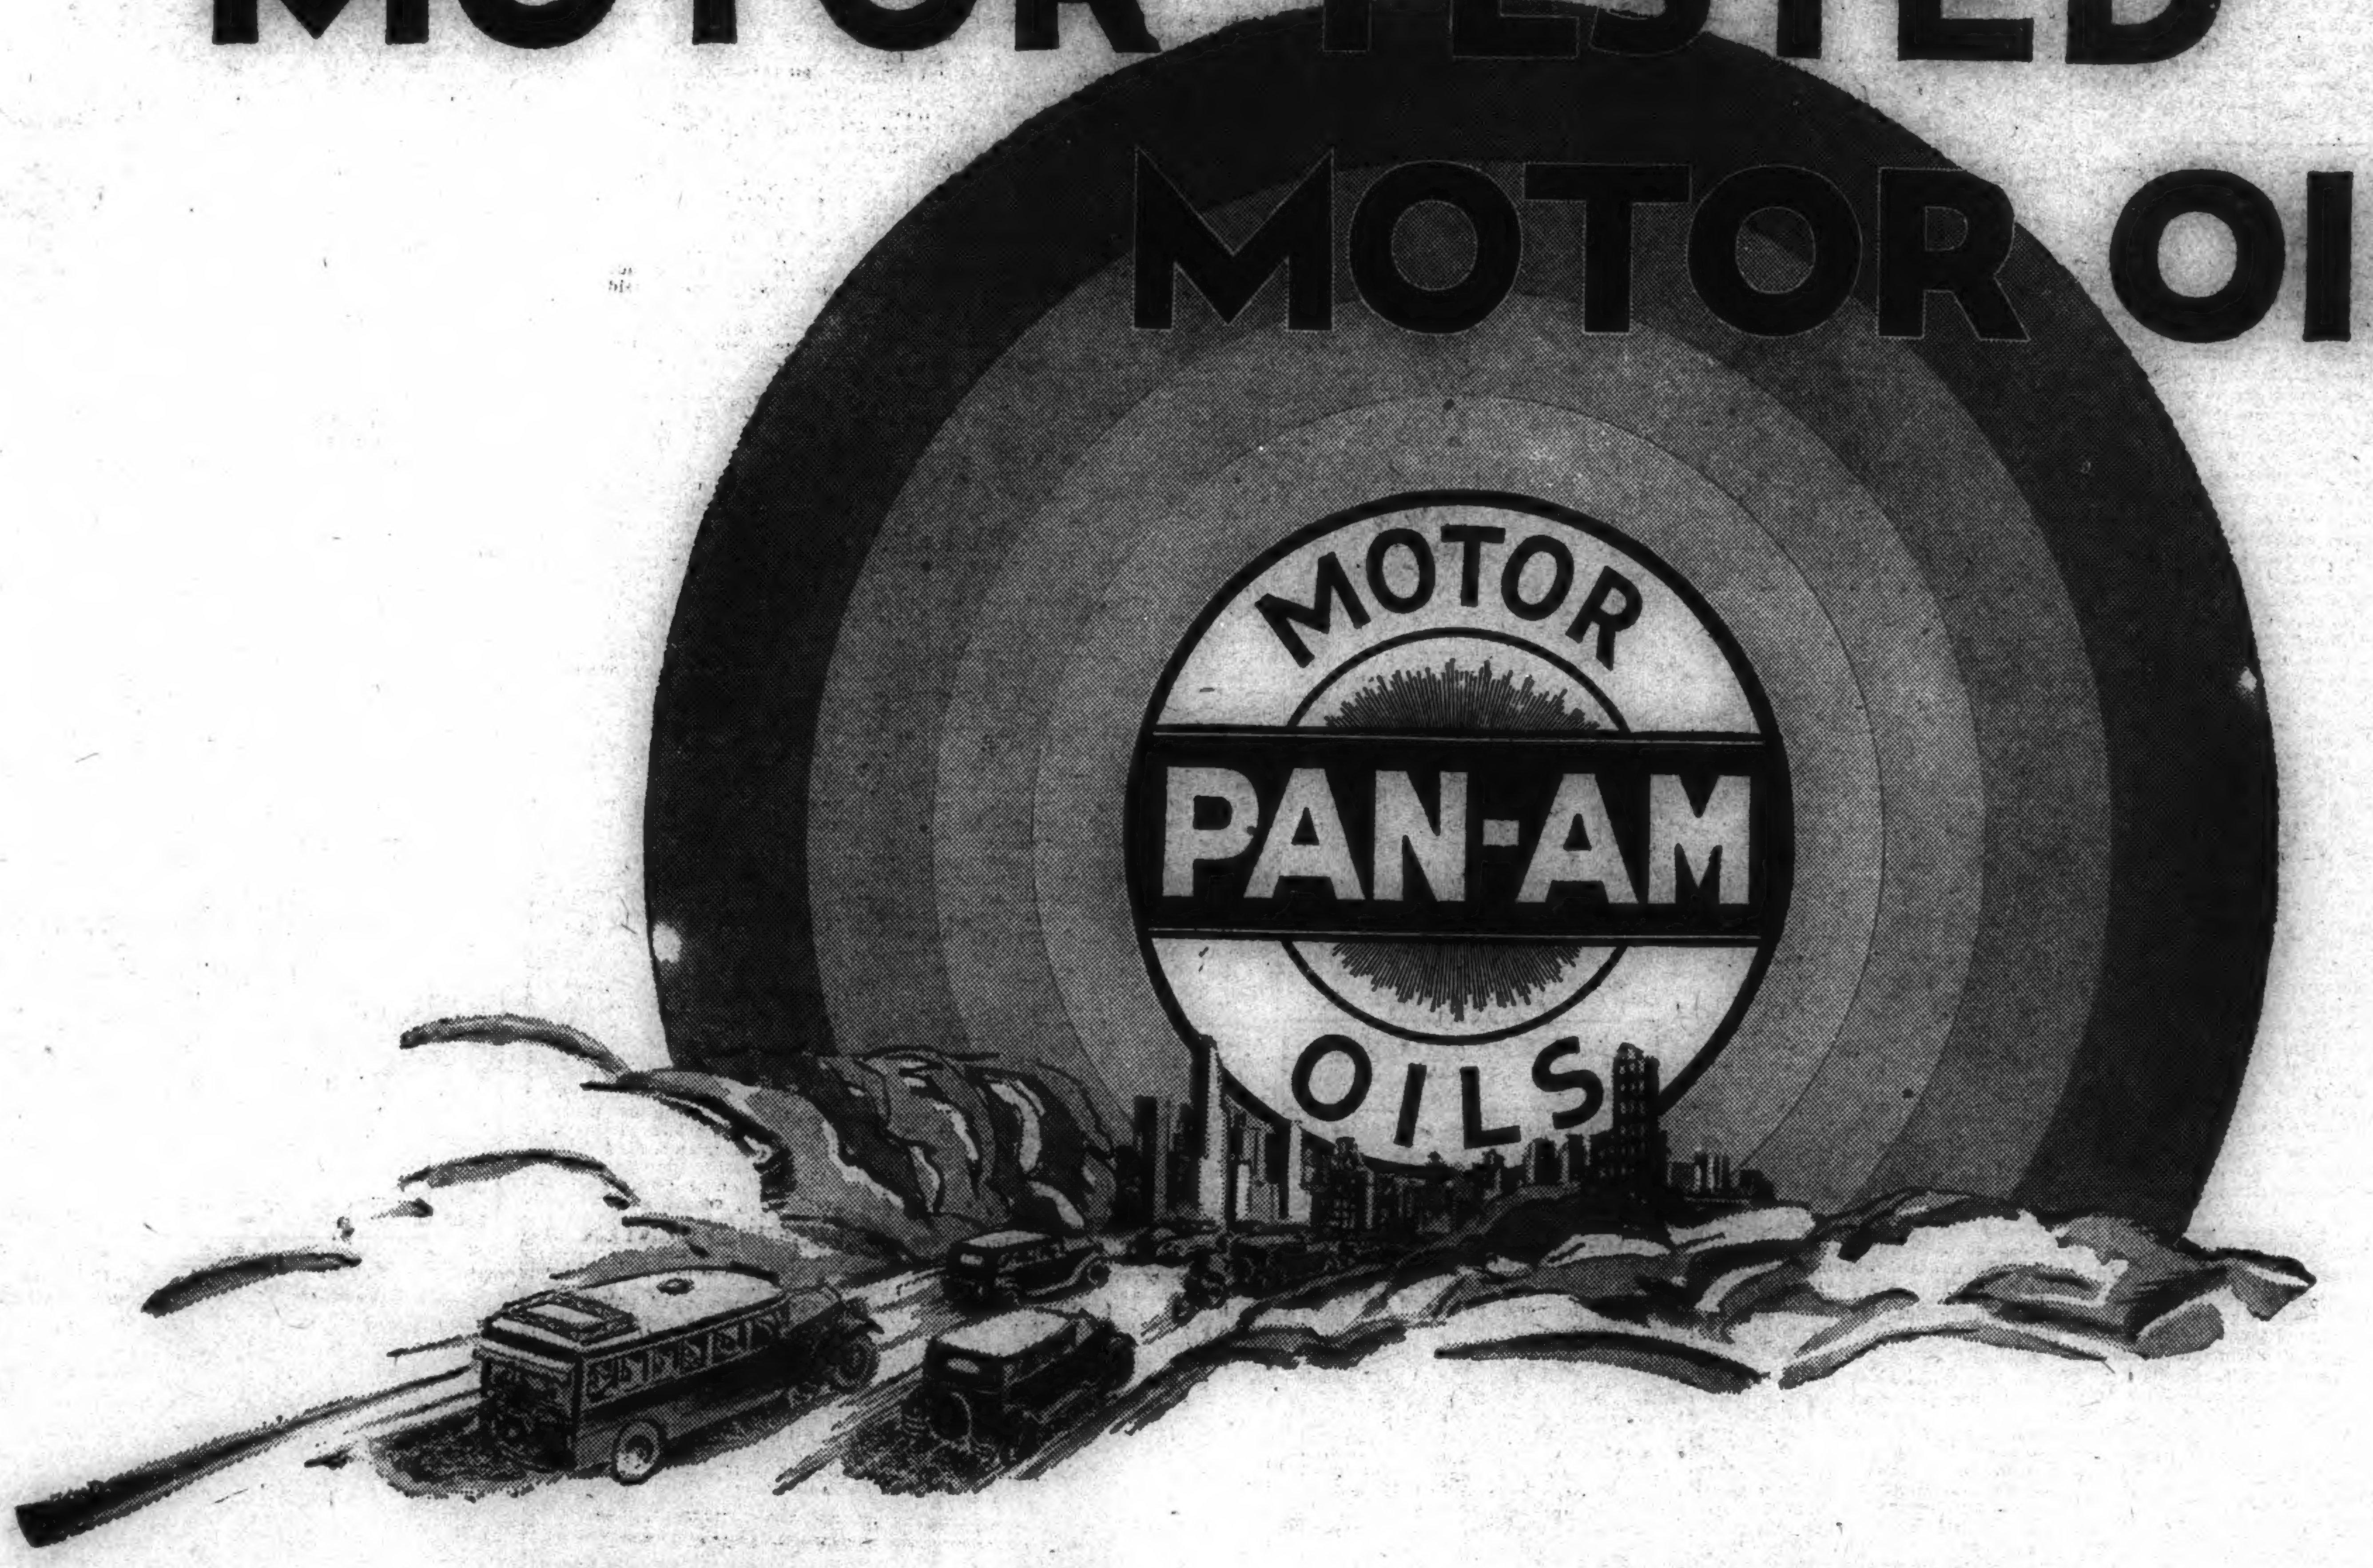
and now PAN-AM brings you "MOTOR TESTED" MOTOR OILS



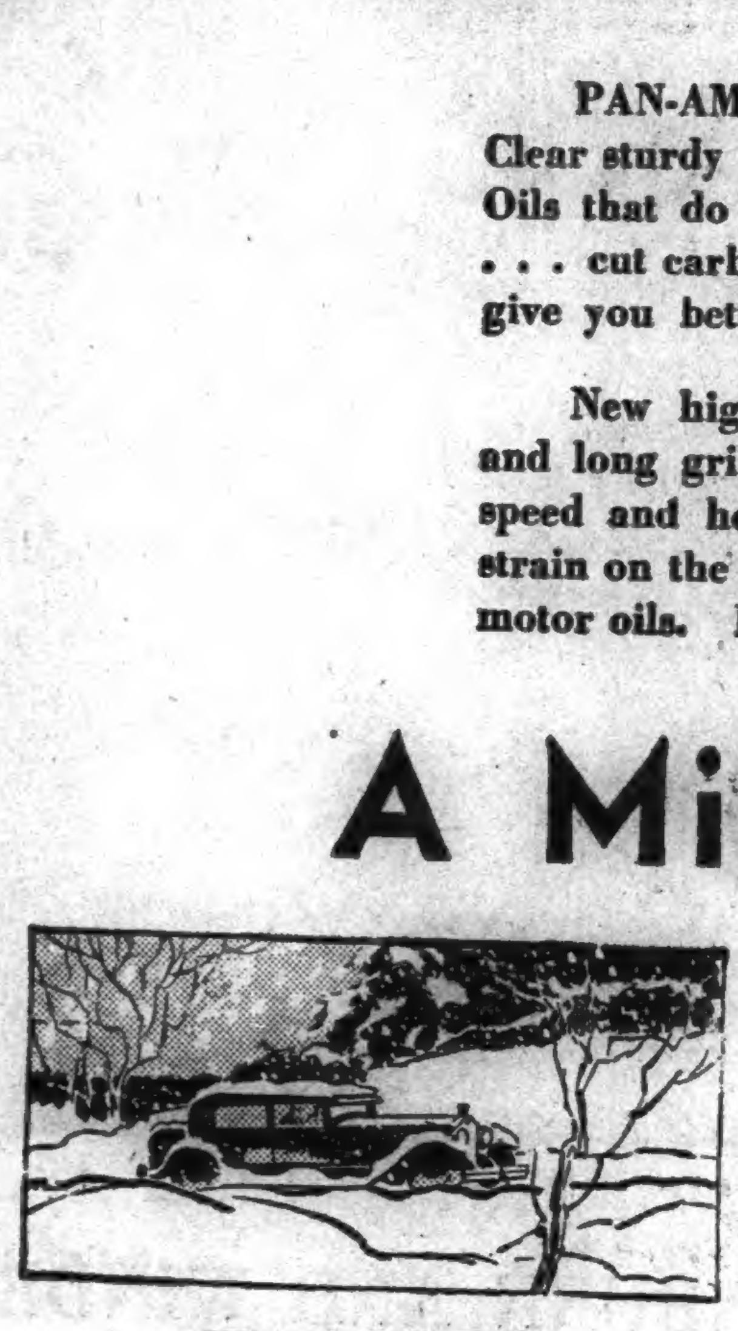
PAN-AM brings you new longer-life motor oils. Clear sturdy oils that flow freely at zero temperatures. Oils that do not break down under high motor heats . . . cut carbon in half . . . cut repair bills . . . and give you better performance at no increase in cost.

New high compression motors, faster highways, and long grinding tours all put the burden of greater speed and heat on the motor oils of today. More strain on the bearings, hotter engines . . . and hotter motor oils. It takes a "tougher" oil to stand up.

All of PAN-AM's resources combine to bring you this new motor oil, refined once, twice and then the third time . . . to remove wax-like and non-lubricating substances that make ordinary oils thin out at engine heat and stiffen up when it's cold. Only triple refining could produce an oil that cuts carbon in half, refuses to break down and gives you more mileage per quart.

Drive today to a PAN-AM Station. The PAN-AM man knows the proper "prescription" grade, tested for your motor. Get modern PAN-AM lubrication.

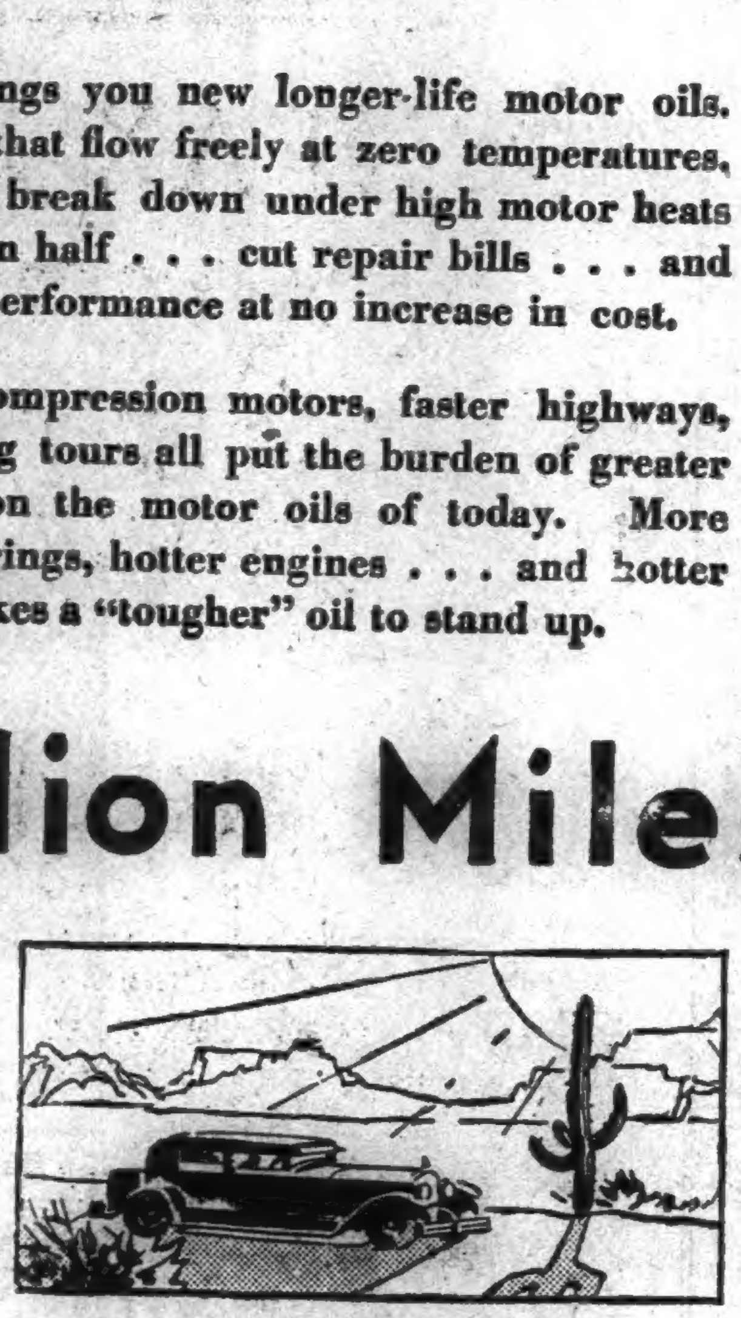
A Million Miles of Road Tests



Through Cold

Down to zero and below. PAN-AM gave instant lubrication.

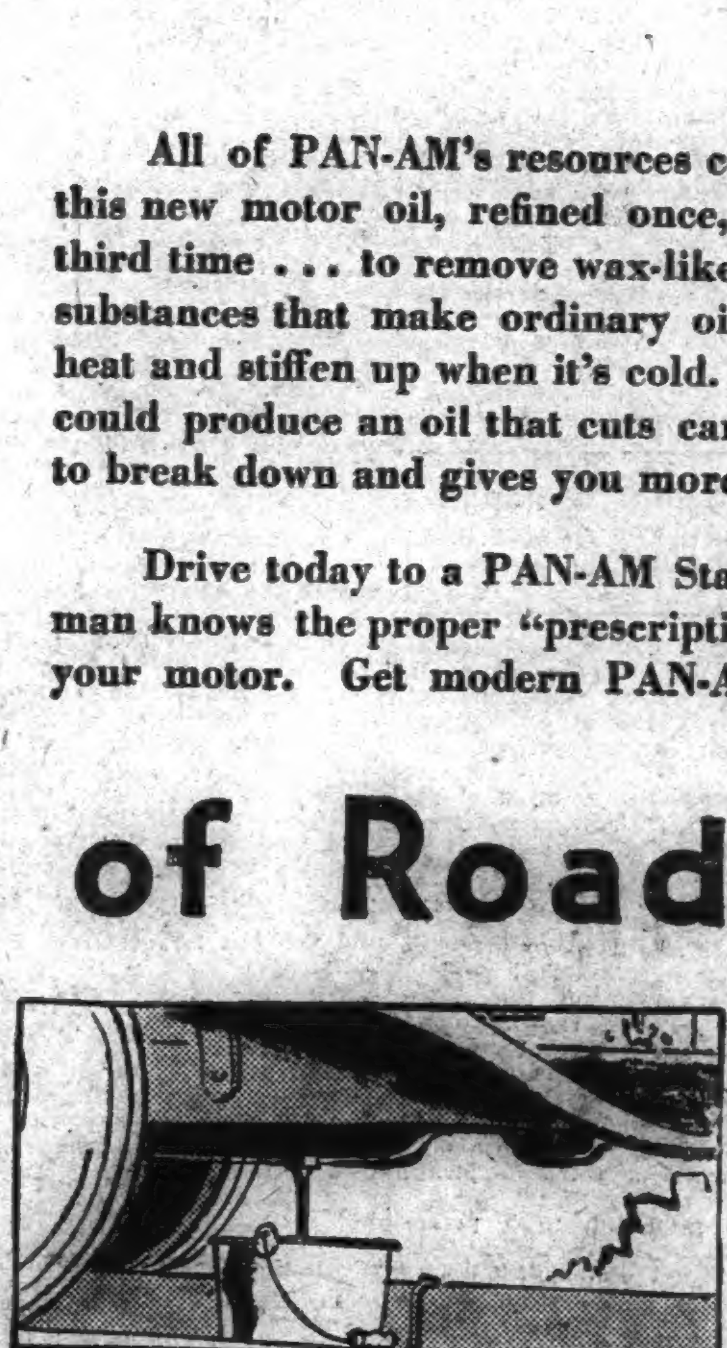
Many motor oils thicken at freezing temperatures. PAN-AM'S triple-refining process removes wax-like particles. No matter how cold, PAN-AM motor oil answers, "Ready!"



Through Heat

Test cars driven over scorching roads.

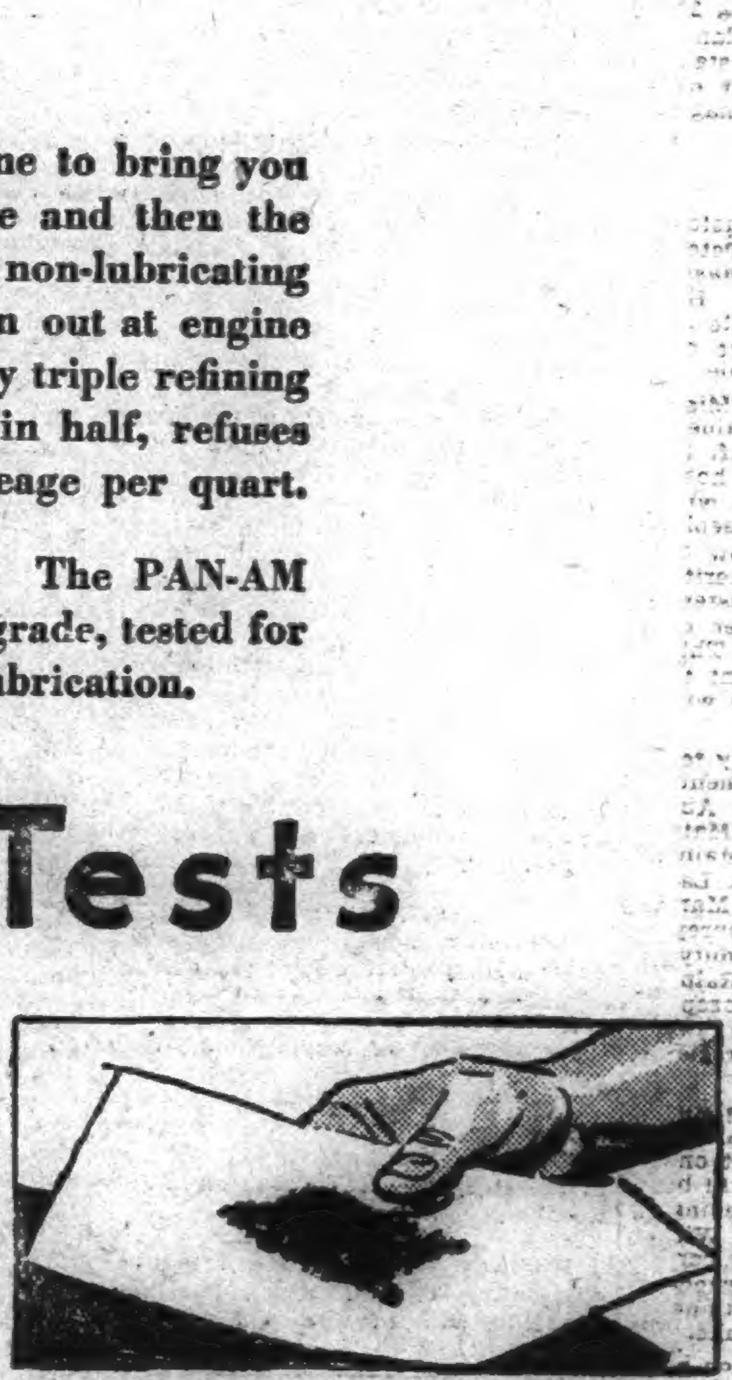
Down in the motor . . . greater heat. Up go the revolutions per minute. Up goes the temperature. What a motor oil to stand such heat! PAN-AM "stands up under fire" at temperatures far above ordinary motor-heat.



Stands Up

The long grind is over . . . long past the life of ordinary motor oil. Rigid examination showed that PAN-AM kept its full body and color.

Pan-Am motor-tested motor oil stands up like a soldier still full of fight . . . and ready "to keep going".



Less Carbon

PAN-AM oils proved, in the motors, that they deposit 50% less carbon, by actual weight, than other high-class motor oils.

PAN-AM means cleaner motors. Less grinding of valves. Smaller repair bills. Longer life to your motor.

HIGHER LETTER POSTAGE

Little speeches here and there by Postmaster General Brown and some of his assistants have borne the intimation that it may be necessary to recommend to congress an increase in first-class postal rates. To add half a cent an ounce to the rate for first-class mail would not, of course, entail a great increase in the outlay of the average individual for postage, but to the individual sender of a letter the chief objection of 2 1-2 cent postage would be his inability to buy just one stamp, because of the absence of any half-cent piece in our coinage. It would be necessary to buy at least two stamps if only one were needed and to spend a nickel with the post office when only 2 1-2 cents' worth of its wares were wanted at the moment. To business interests which use the mails extensively a 25 per cent raise in letter postage would be a considerable item and would have to be figured in as an increase in the cost of doing business.

Two-cent postage for letters has prevailed for so long it is certain that if the rate were raised as Postmaster General Brown advocates, the people would find it difficult to adjust themselves to it and there would be much criticism of the change. The average citizen, and especially the average business men, will desire to ask the post office heads certain pertinent questions. Has a body of outside efficiency experts been asked to survey all the services in the department and then to recommend means of doing away with the annual deficit? Would an alert and progressive private corporation manage the postal service as it is and long has been managed by beaurocrats and politicians? What about the abuses of the franking privilege?

Before the public acquiesces in 2 1-2 or 3 cent letter postage, these and similar questions will have to be answered in some detail.

Moreover, it might be considered doubtful if the proposed advance might not so much discourage the use of the mails by business that the postal department would lose instead of gain in revenue. If congress has any regard for public opinion, it will boost letter postage only as a last resort in its efforts to wipe out postal deficits.

THE BURDEN OF PROOF

Some of the developments in the investigation by Representative Fish's congressional committee of communist propaganda and similar insidious activities in this country are a trifle bewildering. The charge is made that Amtorg, the Russian trading corporation in this country, has abused its privileges, carrying on secret political propaganda and diverting part of its income to subversive activities. This is a charge that seems to require immediate and searching investigation. Amtorg itself now demands such an inquiry, pointing out that its credit with American banks and business houses is impaired by accusations and insinuations of treachery and double dealing.

Documents which go far to prove the charges against Amtorg are said to be in possession of the New York police department. But these documents are said by Bogdanov, the head of the agency, to be clumsy forgeries. In this he is supported by Representative La Guardia who charges that these documents were prepared and printed in New York without the knowledge of the Amtorg corporation. The congressional committee has asked Bogdanov to prove that the documents are not genuine, to which his reply has been that as the defendant in the case he is entitled to the presumption of innocence until he is proven guilty and that the burden of proof lies upon the committee. He puts these documents in the same class with the sensational Orloff papers framed to injure Senator Borah and the more skillfully conceived Zinovieff letters forged to deceive a British government.

No time should be lost in settling this issue. It is more important than anything the committee has thus far undertaken. The threat of Amtorg to transfer its custom to some other market is not particularly impressive. It buys here what it needs at prices not obtainable elsewhere. But an appeal to fair dealing and common sense cannot be disregarded.

NEW OCEANS OF OIL

Not a justification of waste, not touching the need for oil conservation, it is nevertheless a fact that "exhaustion of the world's petroleum" remains far enough in the future to defy logical attempts to fix the date of the direful hour.

For example, current oil news gives report of a 50,000 barrel-a-day well struck in the Baku oil fields, Russia, in oil sand, 2,500 feet down. The former depths of oil wells there ranged from 1,000 to 1,400 feet. In California big wells are being brought in at 8,000 and 9,000 feet, with 7,000 feet nearer the average than the former 4,000 or 5,000 feet. Successful drillers are going nearly as deep in Texas and Oklahoma. At Santa Fe Springs, one of the old oil fields in southern California, no less than six strata of oil sands have been found. As a rule the deeper sands are most productive.

In some areas the geologists are not optimistic about deeper drilling. For one thing, the deeper the wells the more expensive they become. Some deep wells in the United States stand their companies in $500,000. It will take a substantial time, with a production of 2,000 barrels a day, to make them pay. Yet the experience to date, shows not only that from time to time on the broad question of oil supply discoveries of new oil fields are to be expected, but that also deeper drilling will revive the production of more oil fields.

Getting back to conservation and considering the immediate prospects of our home public, one point is that too much stress can be laid on foreign oil news. When this country must depend to any considerable extent on importations, it means a higher price level here.

A GAME SPORTSMAN

All the world has recognized that Sir Thomas Lipton is a game sportsman. To be beaten is only a challenge for him to try again and his fifth Shamrock is now on the way across the Atlantic for his fifth attempt to lift the America's cup.

The English challenger is complying with the rule that it must cross under its own power, which, it can be easily seen, is an advantage to the defender of the cup, for it imposes the necessity that the Shamrock must be built sturdy enough to withstand heavy weather in the open sea, and must be designed to accept a change in rig to make the passage.

Meantime, several American yachts are contending for the honor of meeting the challenger. The best boat will be chosen after trials which will demonstrate its superiority over the others in speed under the sailing conditions that are likely to prevail at the time of the races off Newport. Sir Thomas is without opportunity of testing several yachts, but stakes all on the boat he sends across. The sporting Irishman and his immediate circle are confident that the latest Shamrock has the qualities essential for lifting the trophy which he has tried so long to carry back with him.

Should Sir Thomas succeed in lifting the cup, the Americans would have to face the handicaps imposed on a challenger. The America was a cruising craft; she was not built as a racing machine, which is what the successive defenders have been in the last thirty years and their usefulness in other lines has been very limited. They have been definitely racing boats with no intention that they should have the qualities to make them cruising yachts. While we would like to keep the cup, and believe that we will, we could not complain greatly if fortune favored the persistence that comes back after continued defeat to try again.

CONQUERING THE AIR

An adventurer from across the seas is once more winging its way across the Atlantic with a good prospect that it will reach the landing field at Montreal today. This time it is the new British airship, R-100, constructed for use in the London-Egypt-India trade, which is making this experimental trip westward across the Atlantic. The trip is under government auspices and the immense dirigible, larger than the Graf Zeppelin, is traveling without any passengers as such. In that way it offers no direct challenge to the accomplishments of the great German air liner, but a comparison betwen the two ships, their speed, airworthiness and general performance is inescapable. As the R-100 has undertaken the northern course, generally recognized as the most difficult in the trans-Atlantic passage, she will be called upon to exhibit her full powers.

It is more than ten years since a British airship crossed the Atlantic. The crossing of the R-34 at that time was within a few months of the armistice and she navigated the air course from Scotland to Mineola, Long Island. There is no question but that vast progress has been made in the past decade in dirigible construction. The most interested observers of the present crossing will be found in Freidrichshafen, where Dr. Eckener and his associates, watching the performance of the British ship with jealous and critical interest, will be the first to applaud a successful termination of the flight. The future of the airship holds much in store for all people as an agent of commerce and a messenger of goodwill.

MISS NING GU

"Ah, Miss Ning Gu, I wonder if you realize how I sometimes envy your placid, uneventful life!" exclaimed Marcella, to the small lady on the blue plate that adorned the cabinet of the kitchenette apartment. The plate was the last of a set that a seafaring ancestor had brought in a sailing vessel around Cape Horn from the orient. Once upon a time Marcella, reading a newspaper that "Ning Gu" translated into English meant "Silvery Waves," had immediately christened the almond-eyed beauty who was reposing in a cockleshell boat bobbing about on a miniature ocean "Miss Ning Gu." And it was to this dainty female that she was in the habit of confiding her griefs and joys, hopes and fears.

"You will be sorry to learn that there was trouble at the shop today," she continued. "Do stop simpering at that young mandarin for five minutes and give me your undivided attention; this is a serious matter! As I have often informed you I have charge of eighteen girls. If you think that an easy task, well, just try it! Remember the lovely evening gown that came in that last lot from New York? My dear, it has disappeared! I don't blame you for staring, but it's true! Mme. Chic, waiting on a customer this morning, called for it, and though I searched and searched, and questioned the girls, it was nowhere to be found!

'Why, of course, I'm responsible! Certain folks have been heard to declare that I have a 'snap.' As I said before, let 'em try it! Yes, some one must have taken the gown; it couldn't have walked off by itself. Is there any one I suspect? Without mentioning names, there is! No, I haven't hinted this to a living soul and don't intend to! What roused my suspicions? When I questioned each girl separately this one, though stoutly denying knowledge of the affair, had an expression in her eyes that belied the words! There, now it's out! I don't believe I care for supper tonight. I'm so weary I'm going right to bed!"

"Yes, it has been another trying day!" cried Marcella, the next evening to Miss Ning Gu. "You ask if anything has been discovered? No. I gave orders they were not to discuss the affair! If any one had anything to say, that one was to inform me privately; several came, but it was merely gossip they brought.

"The one I was waiting for, however, failed to appear. She was pale this morning and looked worried. Was slow about leaving tonight; seemed to hang back purposely; stayed until after the others were gone; still not a word! Though I did observe tears in her eyes while she was putting on her hat! Now Miss Ning Gu, having lived so many, many years, you must, during such a long life, have passed through a great deal of experience. What would you suggest? Nothing! Doubtless you are right and I'll take your advice! But dear me, don't you ever get tired bobbing around in that tiny boat? And that handsome young mandarin waiting on the opposite shore — doesn't he ever grow impatient? Oh! impatience is undignified, is it? Well, I'll try following your example!

"Yes, Miss Ning Gu, I'm late! But I'm so excited I can't wait to take off my wraps before telling you the news! She confessed today! No, not to me, to Mme. Chic! Of course, she was discharged and must pay for the gown; madam considered this letting her off easy! When she was leaving I managed to see her alone a moment and asked her to meet me at 5.30 at a coffee shop near by. Said she would, but I was worried all afternoon for fear she wouldn't!

'However, she was waiting there when I arrived! Seated at a table in a quiet corner, she told me everything. 'He' had invited her to a 'swell party,' and she hadn't a decent dress and no money to buy one with and did so want to go and have a good time! Said she had always loved pretty clothes, but her folks were poor and she was brought up by a stepmother who was awfully severe and wouldn't allow her to have nice things like other girls.

"No, she didn't intend keeping the dress; merely borrowed it for the party; was going to slip it back in place next day and then no one would be the wiser! But she accidentally upset a dish of ice cream and was obliged to take it to the cleaners! And that very morning Mme. Chic called for it!

"So, Miss Ning Gu, we are going to lend her the money to pay for the dress and we are going to have her come here and stay until she gets straightened around again!" — Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 31—Senator George W. Norris must have heaved a sigh of relief when the Nebraska courts amputated the other George W. Norris from the August primary ballots.

What the appearance on the republican tickets of two candidates for the same office of the same name and party might have done to the chances of the veteran to come back again, nobody can say.

The wise ones say it frequently has been a practice in municipal politics to dig up an opponent of the same name and party when it was much desired to beat out a certain man.

It causes so much confusion among voters that even if the man was sure of a majority straight away, he has been beaten by dividing his vote with a namesake while a third aspirant walks in.

The nearest approach to a precedent for the situation in which Senator Norris found himself before that court ruling comes from Maryland.

There is a congressional district in that state represented for more than 30 years by the two Sydney Mudds, father and son. Both are dead now.

The political balance in the district always has been very delicate. If anything, it has a democratic slant, although the two Mudds were republicans.

And on one occasion during the life of the senior Mudd, his democratic opponents doped out a scheme to beat him. They ran a democratic Mudd against him.

Their given names were not the same, true, but the ballots had been trimmed of party designation somewhat that year and it looked dubious for Sydney, senior.

Then his henchmen got a bright idea of their own. They looked at that name, "Sydney," with its two y's. Observing them closely, they saw that the two y's taken together looked like an old-fashioned double ox-yoke.

In those days half the Negro farmers of the Maryland backlands used oxen in plowing and hauling.

There were night schools for Negroes in the rural districts around that election time. So Mudd's friends saw to it that his first name was much displayed on blackboards with the two y's accentuated.

And the slogan which was passed about, and which brought Sydney senior back to the house for another hitch was:

"Vote fo' de ox-yoke."

YOUR HEALTH

Fear

By Abraham Myerson, M. D., Boston, Massachusetts.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute, Washington, D. C.)

A very marked change has taken place in opinion about the value of fear in education and conduct. There was a time when it was given a very honorable place as a constructive factor, then there came a definite revulsion against this opinion and fear became greatly discredited, especially in the education of the child. I have no hesitation in saying that there is a useful, constructive side to fear, without which, human discipline and subjection should be impossible, and there is a pathological fear which works definitely to injure both the physical and mental health of the individual as well as contributing tremendously to unhappiness. On the constructive side, the fear of pain, and the fear of public opinion, fear of punishment in its widest significance, is of immense importance in bringing about foresight and watchful planning; it is back of thrift, life insurance, agriculture, medicine, a large part of religion, and the orderly conduct of humanity, disciplines unruly passions and over-egotistic reactions.

To be afraid under certain circumstances is entirely normal. To inflict fear, although it is sometimes cruel, is often a way of avoiding worse disasters.

Pathological fear arises as a factor in mental ill health in the form of useless worry, attacks of devastating anxiety and very commonly in the condition know as hypochondriasism, in which individuals fall into a state of fear concerning their health, which is both pathetic and ludicrous. The hypochondriac, watching himself over-closely finds in every twinge an omen of a most serious disease; heart disease, tuberculosis, cancer, ulcer are brought to his mind by every change from the normal sensations of the body. In many instances this change from the normal sensations is brought about by his own attention to himself, since the body is a hard-working machine, full of squeaks, groans, and slight abnormal reactions, which have no significance except as inciting fear in the too zealous introvert.

A regular annual visit to the family physician will often allay the fears of the patient and enable him to pursue his daily routine in a rational way.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Jim Crow Receives Visitors

The sulky are in state of mind
Temptation dearly loves to find.
—Old Mother Nature.

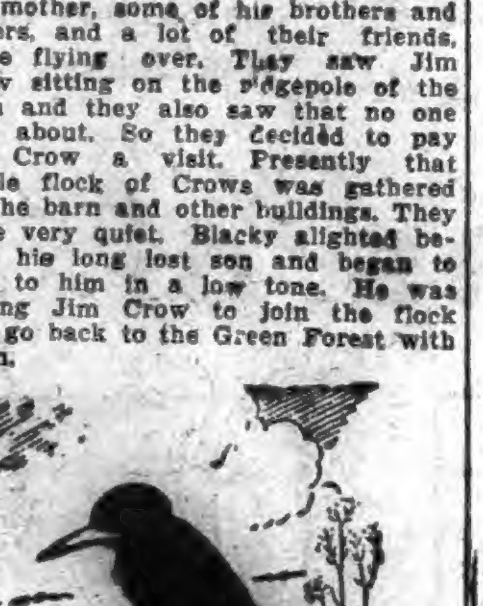
Jim Crow was in disgrace. His master having found the stolen clothespins had to admit Jim Crow's guilt. Therefore, Jim Crow had to be punished. So for two whole days he was shut up in a pen in the barn.

"I surely don't suppose," said Farmer Brown's Boy, "that Jim understands he is being punished, but just the same I am going to punish him. He is probably wondering what it is all about. One thing is certain, and that is that he will have to be shut up on washdays. It won't do to have him pulling the clothespins and dropping the washing on the ground again."

When after a couple of days Jim Crow was once more given his liberty, he was very much out of sorts. He scolded Farmer Brown's Boy roundly. Farmer Brown's Boy chuckled. "I wish I could understand what he is saying," said he. "I presume he is telling me just what he thinks about me."

Having given his master a thorough scolding, Jim Crow went off by himself and sulked. Farmer Brown's Boy went down to the cornfield to join his father at work there. Jim Crow didn't go along as usual. His master tried to coax him down, but Jim refused. He just sulked. He flew up on the ridgepole of the barn and continued to sulk.

It was while he was up there that Blacky the Crow, his father, and also his mother, some of his brothers and sisters, and a lot of their friends, came flying over. They saw Jim Crow sitting on the ridgepole of the barn and they also saw that no one was about. So they decided to pay Jim Crow a visit. Presently that whole flock of Crows was gathered on the barn and other buildings. They were very quiet. Blacky alighted beside his long lost son and began to talk to him in a low tone. He was urging Jim Crow to join the flock and go back to the Green Forest with them.



He flew up on the ridge pole of the barn and continued to sulk

Jim Crow's mother flew to the other side of him and she also began to talk. The other Crows looked on and said nothing. Jim Crow said nothing. But Blacky and Mrs. Blacky said enough for all the rest. At first Jim Crow was a little frightened. You see, he didn't know that Blacky and Mrs. Blacky were his father and mother. It had been so long since he fell from the nest and was found by Farmer Brown's Boy, and he had been so young at the time, that he just didn't remember his parents. Of course, he didn't remember his brothers and sisters and he never had known any of the other crows. So he was rather afraid of all these black strangers.

Probably if he hadn't been feeling sulky and out of sorts, he wouldn't have listened to what they had to say. But he couldn't forget how he had been shut up for two days. No, sir, he just couldn't forget that. If he should go with these folks of his own kind, he never again would be shut up. Presently, some of the other Crows began to urge him to join the flock. It sounded as if it would be very wonderful to go off with these black companions of his own kind and be free to do as he pleased. It didn't occur to him that he was free and had been free right along.

Finally, at a signal, all the Crows took to their wings and began circling above Jim Crow, all calling to him to come with them. Then they headed for the Green Forest. It was more than Jim Crow could resist. "Caw, Caw, Caw!" he cried. The flock turned and came back. Jim Crow spread his wings. Two minutes later he was on his way to the Green Forest.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Street Scenes In Pernambuco

"Our flight from Washington to Buenos Aires, on an aerial survey of seaplane paths, was interrupted here at Pernambuco," writes Frederick Simpich, in charge of the National Geographic society's survey party. 'In the night a bark rammed our big flying boat, while it swung at anchor, and tore off part of one wing. But, while waiting for another Nybra airplane to pick us up, we have seen this busy Brazilian city of Pernambuco, or Recife, as it also is called.

"'That is because we burn alcohol and kerosene mixed, instead of gasoline,' says our guide. 'The law maker us put in the kerosene, so chauffeurs won't drink the fuel tanks dry.'

"This is a Dutchlike city. Prinz Moritz van Nassau came here in 1637, when the Dutch ruled, along with many artists, scientists, writers, naturalists and architects, to build an idealized Holland icty in South America. Few original Dutch edifices remain; but there is soothing in the canals, deep-shaded streets and many bridges that reminds one of Holland, or near-by, old-fashioned Bremen.

"There is a newspaper here 105 years old, 'The Diario de Pernambuco.' Its editor, Dr. Mario Melo, was with the South American journalists invited to the United States in 1926 by President Coolidge. He comes of an ancient and distinguished family in Portugal. 'Our population about quadrupled in 30 years. It's now over 400-000; yet we have no immigration,' he said as he showed me through crowded streets.

"'See these men coming,' he said. 'They are Pernambuco piano movers. A grand piano, balanced on the heads of six men of equal height, moved swiftly. The porters marched heads erect, stiff-necked, hands at sides, keeping in perfect step. Any wabbling would have meant disaster. Before them marched their leader, clearing a path through the crowds, and giving orders. They turned a corner squarely, like an infantry company. All they do is move pianos.

"Pernambuco is the Virginia of the United States of Brazil. Here South America saw the first legislative assembly. Here was a pioneer society for abolition of slavery; they show you the site of the folks' tribunal, where Joaquim Nabuco made his celebrated oration against slavery. In the museum is a vast canvas, depicting the fights between Portugese and Dutch, for possession of Recife; a fine old map, drawn by the Dutch 300 years ago, showing Recife then; leg and arm chains, and a whip for slaves; ornate palanquins of dead and gone bishops and governors; a beautiful bronze cannon dated 1629, embossed with a fine three-masted Dutch ship, from the days of Henry Hudson; square gold coins, minted here by the Dutch about the time the Pilgrims were getting set up in New England; an old Dutch fort, still in military use after three centuries—where the amiable Brazilian captain served us coffee; many reminders of Portugese discovery and settlement.

"But we stick to the streets, for our time is short. Here comes a string of burros dragging 20-foot palm-fronds, to thatch a hut of the poor. 'Mucambo', such a hut is called—a word brought straight here from black Africa. And then a street car—Americans built the line—with a trailer full of fresh meat; that's the way meat is delivered to butcher shops here.

"Near the coast rae many artificial lakes, or ponds, tied to the sea with a ditch in which is a little wicker gate, or trap. At high tide, small fish come in and get caught. Thus confined they are raised for food, just as we see pigs and chickens fattened in pens. 'Viveiros', these fish pens are called. In them fish play about, waiting to be fed.

"Crowds of women in a bookstore buy American fashion magazines and those that show how to build and furnish modest homes. Few can read English; yet the pictures interest them and you note American influence on dress and house furnishings. 'Movies, too, influence dress and diversions here. But football and horse-racing predominate.

"On Rua Bom Jesus, a waterfront street, you see sailors from seven seas, and Pernambuco's contribution to a 'wife in every port.' A man bears a sloth on a pole—a big, fat hairy thing, with a small silly face, its eyes, nose and mouth all squeezed together: it has three long horny toes on each foot. 'How much?' you ask. '20 milreis.' Cheap enough, you first think; then again, would a live sloth not be dear at any price? You photograph its idiotic countenance, give the man two milreis, and move on. Here is an old man with white, curly hair and the beard of a prophet. He is a broken Portugese actor. He is selling his own photograph and telling of past stage triumphs when he 'played 200 nights in Paris.' Sailors, amused, give him a ragged five-milreis note and pass into the 'English Ship Chandlers' Cafe' where red-necked mates and white-clad skippers sip ale, their long mustaches, like bicycle handlebars, dripping with cool froth. Bird peddlers hang about the open door, and a vegetarian Hindu comes vainly trying to sell his book; what English sailor man would quit soup, fish and roast beef for a lifetime diet of squash and string beans?

"At the near-by school for merchant seamen uniformed cadets drill, led by a good band of music. Just in front of the bandmaster marches a big white ram, the cadets' mascot. A flock of geese appears, and start marching sedately ahead of the ram, in step. Enraged, the ram charges and butts a gander into the gutter. The band can't play, from laughter, and the cadets whoop with joy. 'Fall in,' sternly yells a commandant, or Brazilian words to that effect, and the precise drill resumes, the ram again in the lead.

"Heavy surf breaks over a coral reef, topped by a man-made sea wall. For Recife is a geographic composite of island, peninsula, river, lagoon and bit of continent. And it sticks out nearest to Europe of all big Brazilian cities, so that ships from there call here first. Long lines of ships discharge, about 150 a month. You see heavy machinery from America — pumps, forges, motors, busses, plows, gas engines—but railway locomotives come from England. Along the waterfront, like the bund in Shanghai, rise the banks, consulates, and concrete-steel head offices of merchant traders, insurance brokers, and sugar planters.

"Inland runs the Great Western Railway of Brazil. Many of its cars are marked 'Usine Catende,' which is South America's largest sugar concern. Sugar, cotton, manioc and maize are chief crops in the huge, rich state of Pernambuco.

"The Graf Zeppelin moored here. We set out to see its mooring mast and the gas plant, radio and landing field it uses. Birds called 'Teteu,' from their odd cry, were catching minnows in near-by drainage ditches. 'They're always hungry,' said my guide. 'Natives say they never sleep; or that if they do, that they walk and eat in their sleep, for they fish by night and day.'

"We come back along the Riverside Drive of Recife, the famous seashore highway known as Boa Viagem, a bathing beach on one side, on the other sumptuous redstone mansions of sugar planters and other rich Brazilians. Then back to the waterfront, where a sign says 'Man Spricht Deutch' and German sailors are singing and drinking beer. This is a Romeo-and-Juliet town. Every evening you see the swain, arguing to his lady love ambushed behind the lattice. Sometimes she will consent to open the lattice a few inches, so he may look at her."

12TH RED ARROW AUCTION DREW CAPACITY CROWD AT PALACE THEATRE

The 12th Red Arrow auction was held at the Palace theatre Wednesday evening amidst great enthusiasm. The theatre doors were opened at 6 p. m. and it took about 15 minutes to fill every one of the 1350 seats in the theatre, and also the improvised seats in the balcony, also a large number of people standing. R. B. Hamilton, manager of the theatre, estimtaed the audience to be over 1700 persons.

Max Hanover, treasurer of the Red Arrow club, welcomed the audience in the name of the Red Arrow merchants and thanked the gathering for the interest displayed in the Red Arrow game. Mr. Hanover said that by the interest manifested by the Red Arrow patrons in the last few days by depositing more than 5000 closed bids in the auction blocks of the Red Arrow stores, it was evident that the Red Arrow merchants had gained a great number of new friends. The speaker, in making the announcement for the next auction said: "Like everything in life all events which have a beginning must eventually have an ending, and likewise the Red Arrow game has reached its culmination in the auction to be held late in August." He also said that the final auction will be an open auction with all entitled to bid openly. Mr. Hanover volunteered the information that in a neighboring city which conducted the Red Arrow game, at the final auction the audience pooled their money by rows, each row bidding against each other, and that some articles, brought as high as $30,000 in Red Arrow money. He therefore predicted that the next auction will be one of the most exciting events seen in the city in a long time.

Abraham Silverberg, of the Silberman Furniture Co., was the auctioneer and very ably conducted the selling of the articles. The stage arrangement was under the supervision of George S. Powers, who is entitled to much credit for the thorough manner in which the stage force was organized thereby greatly expediting the auction.

The audience was good natured and enjoyed the fun from beginning to end, sitting through to 11:15 when the auction finished, and they were ever ready to applaud and encourage the auctioneer in his arduous task.

The sorting of the 5,000 bids to ascertain the highest bidders was in charge of the Red Arrow secretary, Miss Agnes White, and the assistant secretary, Miss Helen Barry of the Reid and Hughes Co. staff, who put about 24 hours' work in order that no error would be made.

URUGUAY WINS WORLD'S SOCCER TITLE AGAIN

MONTEVIDO, Uruguay, July 30—(AP)—Uruguay today won world supremacy in soccer football for the third time, defeating Argentina, 4 to 2, in the final of the international tournament here after trailing, 1 to 2, at the end of the first half.

The Uruguayans, winners of the Olympic titles in 1924 and 1928, again proved their right to championship recognition by emerging victorious in this newly established competition in which 13 teams representing countries of Europe, and North, South and Central America, have been competing since July 13.

A crowd of 70,000 excited spectators, mainly Uruguayans and Argentinians, saw the home team come from behind in an irresistible second period attack that scored three goals and turned defeat into victory. Argentina, conqueror of the United States entry last week, was powerless to stem the tide.

ARBITRATION BOARD DECLARES THERMOS-IDEALS GAME A TIE

Two decisions, one of which is not as clear as it miht be, were made by the governors of the City league last night at a special meeting, called for the purpose of disposin of Bil Hastedt's protest of the outcome of the Thermos-Ideal game, which was played Tuesday evening and which the Ideals won, 5 to 4.

The first decision is that the game shall go in the league record as a 4 to 4 tie. The reason for this verdict is that Umpire Frank Morin allowed the Ideals two runs, instead of one, to score in the first inning through a misinterpretation of the league ground rules. In the opening inning Decelles and Liberty scored when Joe Hamil, Thermos catcher, let the ball get away from him after Jimmy Murphy, the Ideal batter, swung at a third strike and missed.

In deciding that the Ideals were entitled to but one run on the play the play the governors quote the following ground rule: "Wild pitch or passed ball one base. Must make it. If ball is interfered with base is given."

The other edict, which is meant to refer to the demonstration which brought the game to a halt at the end of the sixth is as follows: "The governing board has decided that another demonstration will be taken immediately in hand by the board."

Nothing, however, has been said by the governing board as to how they will handle a demonstration or who shall be punished or reprimanded for any so called demonstrations.

July 30, 1930.

Mr. Alfred G. Bliven,
Pres. City League.

Dear Sir: Protest on game played on Tuesday evening, July 29, between Ideals and Thermos for the following reasons:

1. This protest is made in behalf of the City league and law and order against rowdyism. We claim that the seventh inning of last night's game should have been played after the umpire called "play ball," also after seeing Mr. Earle Brigham, Mr. Gleason and the umpire, all claim that we were going to play we went back and sat down while the Ideals continued the argument causing spectators to come on the field which Officer Riley cleared twice, and they still failed to play ball. The umpire claimed that he was under instructions and was not allowed to use his own judgment. He, therefore, called the game and told us to protest it.

2. That Umpire Hank Morin in the first inning of the game misinterpreted the rules in allowing two men to score on an overthrown ball at home, while the rules specifically state on an overthrown ball at home, first or third, the played is allowed one base only. Therefore the man from second base could not have scored and at the end of the sixth inning, with this run not allowed the score would have been 4 to 4.

In view of these two protests and in all fairness to the spectators and for the good of the City league we believe that this game should be played over. However, we shall abide by your decision and as above stated that unless some action is taken, you will get a few repetitions for the remainder of the season as the days are growing shorter and we will have to leave this to the judgment of the umpire or the officer in charge when a game is to be called and not to the players or managers of the teams.

Very truly yours.
THE AMERICAN THERMOS BASEBALL CLUB.
WM. R. HASTEDT,
Manager.

Bernard to Enter Protest Too.

Tony Bernard, manager of the Ideals, when informed of the decision of the arbitration board in calling the game a tie, simply smiled and asked "How come?" Tony will enter a counter protest claiming that the Thermos were given a run on a misinterpretation of the rules. He bases his protest on the fact that in the second when the Thermos scored their three runs Hart hit to right field and was given three bases when he was entitled to only two. The ball went to right field and bounded off the manual training building and before the Ideals right fielder could recover it three runs had crossed the plate. According to the committee's ruling, "Two bases on a ball against manual training building. Hitter must make bases." If the committee abides by its own rules then the man that was on first base when Hart hit to right field should have been held at third and Hart at second and the next man fanned for the third out leaving the Thermos with only two runs for that inning.

Again Mr. Bernard says he fails to see how the committee can deprive him of a run anyway. In the first inning Smith the first up struck out. Decelles then singled. Liberty followed with another single, Decelles going to third and Liberty went to second. Murphy then struck at three balls and on his third strike Hamil let the ball get away from him and it rolled toward the backstop. Decelles scored and Liberty followed him across the plate before Hamil could toss to Nickerson who had covered the plate. The protest of Mr. Hastedt is that only one man should have been allowed to score and Mr. Bernard admits he is right in that. But had Liberty been put back to third he would have eventually scored anyway. Smith drew a base on balls and this would have filled the bases as Murphy was safe on his strike out. Gley then forced Smith at second. On this play Liberty would have positively scored. Then Rainey came through with a single that scored Murphy and Gley. The third out was made by Lemieux, Normandin to Hart.

So according to Mr. Bernard's claim, and the official score book bears out his contention, the Ideals are certainly entitled to four runs in that first inning regardless of any ruling of the committee.

Mr. Bernard talked with several members of the committee regarding the decision and was given very little satisfaction. In fact, Mr. Bernard says that James Sheridan, a member of the committee, went so far as to tell him that if he sent in a protest he (Mr. Sheridan) would tear it up. It seems that Mr. Bernard is justified in thinking he is not getting a fair deal if that is the way a member of the committee feels.

DISSINGER'S HITTING HELPS PLAINFIELD DOWN STERLING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STERLING, July 30—Plainfield defeated Sterling here tonight in a tight Eastern Connecticut Twilight league battle, 2 to 1. Plainfield scored one in the second on Dissinger's single, his steal of both second and third and a wild peg by Shippee, trying to catch Dissinger stealing. Plainfield tallied again in the third when, with two out, Ouellett was safe on Brown's misplay and Beausoleil was hit by a pitched ball. Ouellette then counted on Dissinger's single.

Allard pitched nice ball for Plainfield, allowing Sterling but three hits. This is the first league game that he has pitched. Whitford, Sterling hurler, also pitched in fine form.

Wauregan plays Moosup at Moosup Thursday evening.

FITZSIMMONS PROVES TOO MUCH FOR THE BRAVES

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP)—The combined pitching and batting of Fred Fitzsimmons was too much for the Boston Braves and the Giants defeated Boston, 5 to 2.

Fitzsimmons allowed the Braves eight scattered hits, hit a home run with one on base, a double and a single and drove in three runs. Eddie Marshall was the second Giant star, making four hits in as many times at bat and turning in some neat fielding.

Bob Smith kept pace with Fitzsimmons until the eighth inning when the Giant pitcher's homer put the finish on a three run rally that settled the game. Smith struck out seven Giants, fanning Hogan three times in a row.

DUWELLS WIN EASILY FROM Y. M. C. A. JUNIORS

The Duwells again last night in the Junior Twilight league added another shut-out victory for Stepanik, Duwell they easily defeated the Y. M. C. A. team, 9 to 0. This makes the second shut-out victory for Stepanick, Duwell pitcher, who last week won a pitchers' duel from the Elks when the Duwells won by 1 to 0. The Duwells last evening were too much for the Y team.

Stepanick had six strike-outs to his credit while Russillo secured four. In the initial inning, on two hits and two walks, the Duwells secured three runs and sent Lyons, the first Y pitcher to the showers. Lyons had lots of speed but no control. Only three hits were garnered off Stepanik. Only two Y players reached third and it was only once that the Y threatened really to do some scoring, that being in the fourth inning. The bases were loaded when Russillo flied out to the third baseman after two were out.

DeBarros, besides playing a nice game around the initial sack for the Duwells, secured three hits out of four trips to the plate. Two of them were doubles, one coming with the bases loaded.

NEW LONDON BOY KAYOED BY WALKER IN THIRD

NEWARK, N. J., July 30—(AP)—Mickey Walker, middleweight champion of the world, knocked out Willie Oster, New England champion, in the third round of their scheduled 10 round bout at Dreamland Park tonight. The referee stopped the fight after Oster hit the floor for the third time.

Walker, weighing 163, looked trim and full of fight.

Oster came in eight pounds over the class limit.

Mickey got down to serious work toward the end of the second round, landing a smashing right to the heart that marked the beginning of the end. He used only his left in the third session, smashing the New England boy to the floor three times with jabs in the chin.

On the first trip, Oster got up without a count, the next time he took four, and the third time, eight. When he fell again, the referee waved Walker to his corner and picked up Oster without the formality of a count.

Lake St. Defeats Falls

In a playground game the Lake Street team swamped the Falls team by the score of 10-4. Hastings, Lake Street pitcher, was the outstanding player of the game. He struck out 16 men and hammered out three hits. Gallivan at first played a great game. Droug was the shining light for the Falls' team—getting 3 hits. Zabrowski hit a homer for the Falls.

Listen, you bad, bad baseball fans, don't let your enthusiasm run away with you again or you will be properly spanked.

Who says so? Why haven't you read that "The governing board of the City league has decided that another demonstration will be taken immediately in hand by the board."

You figure it out, I can't. And not only is the board going to take the demonstration in hand but Mr. Hastedt has come out with a protest "in behalf of the city league and law and order against rowdyism." There, that tells you what you are, you're a burch of rowdies.

Now if you don't conduct yourselves like little gentlemen and women somebody is going to be chastised, and chastised severely. How? Don't ask me. But I can tell you how you can avoid this severe punishment which is in store for you.

Now when you go to the games be sure and bring your handkerchiefs, a napkin or even a good sized piece of white paper will do if you have no handkerchief.

Now when somebody makes a hit or your team goes into the lead don't stand up and shout "Atta boy, or go it you sun of a gun," but just say mildly in a ladylike voice, "Hip, Hip, Hooray" and wave your handkerchiefs. A kind of Chautauque salute, you know.

And when Hank Morin misses a strike or a close decision don't yell, "Morin, you big bum, you're blind." Instead just walk down off the stand and go over and pat Hank on the back and say, "My dear Mr. Morin, I fear you are troubled with astigmatism."

And if Hank is a gentleman, and I've no reason to believe he's not, he'll say, "My good man, no doubt you are right, I shall certainly see my optometrist tomorrow." Yes, he will. If he does I'm a cock-eyed dodo bird for Hank couldn't say "optometrist."

And don't, when you think the game is over, make the mistake of running out on the field or the committee is likely to mistake it for a demonstration and take it in hand immediately. Just march out slowly with one hand on the shoulder of the one in front of you, like they do in well regulated government boarding houses. The committee then can make no mistake that it is a demonstration.

To show your enthusiasm, if you are real daring, you might get some ticker tape, if there were any tickers in Norwich, and throw it on the players. But be very careful you don't make the mistake of wrapping the ticker tape about a rock or a soda-pop bottle. That isn't good etiquette.

Well, here's hoping you conduct yourselves like gentlemen tonight so that Mr. Hastedt and the committee cannot accuse you of rowdyism.

WHITEHILL SAVES DAY FOR TIGERS BY HIS PITCHING

CLEVELAND, O., July 30—(AP)—Earl Whitehill saved a ball game for the Detroit Tigers today by some brilliant relief pitching, Cleveland losing the third game of the series, 6 to 5. The Indians had won the first two games.

Whitehill took Hoyt's place in the seventh after Cleveland had scored three runs, and fanned pinch hitter Jablonowski for the third out. In the eighth after Porter doubled, he struck out Morgan and Hodapp, the Indians' heavy artillery. Detroit was outhit 14 to 9 but made most of its blows count for runs.

HARTFORD TWILIGHT TEAM PLAYS HERE SUNDAY

The Hartford Twilight leaguers, a team composed of the pick of the Twilight league of the capitol city, under the leadership of "Mickey" McKernan, will be the attraction at Martin field next Sunday afternoon.

Mickey has banded together a mighty fine bunch of ball players, all of them well known to the fans in this vicinity and are considered to be the "class" of the twilight loop.

The Capitol city team is made up of such men as "Art" Boisseau of Dartmouth college; Alexander, "Abe" Silverman, of William and Mary; Wallett, Mikan, St. John, Riley, and a few other top-notchers, who feel confident that they can take a fall out of the Velvet makers.

Bowen Sets Another Record

OSLO, July 30.—(AP)—Pete Bowen, Pittsburgh star, won two events in the track and field meet, here today, taking the 100-meter in 10 1-10 seconds and setting a new record of 48 seconds for the 400-meter. The old meet record for the distance was 49 1-5 seconds.

ARMOUR WINS CANADIAN OPEN GOLF TITLE IN PLAYOFF WITH DIEGEL

ANCASTER, Ont., July 30.—(AP)—Tommy Armour, great Scotch stylist, today won the open golf championship of Canada, by defeating Leo Diegel, unorthodox American pro, 138 strokes to 141 in a 36-hole play-off for the title.

In the championship proper at 72 holes last week the two pros tied with scores of 277, Armour turning in a sensational 64 on his last round to 67 for Diegel.

The scoring today was higher, Armour playing the two rounds in 69 each, a stroke under par for each 18, while Diegel, after keeping pace with his friend in the morning, slumped to 72, two over par, in the afternoon.

Diegel faltered at the 11th hole of the afternoon round, the 29th hole of the day, when he took seven, three over par, while Armour holed out in the conventional four. The three strokes gained here marked Armour's margin of victory.

This hole proved the Nemesis of Johnny Farrell Saturday and today it cost Diegel the title he had won four times. Leo hooked his drive into bushes, took two strokes to go ten yards coming out, was short with his approach and finally on the green in five, took two putts. Armour, in the meantime, drove straight and true, sent his second on the green, and holed out in two putts for his par.

The battle was fast and furious throughout the morning and the first nine holes of the afternoon rounds. There never was more than a stroke between the contestants until Diegel uncorked his fatal work.

Diegel scored two birdies and went one over par on one hole going out in the morning and played every hole coming home in par for a score of 69. Armour had one birdie on the first nine and one hole over par but he picked up a birdie coming home to leave matters all even at luncheon. The first nine in the afternoon was played in 33 strokes, two under par, and the 28th, too, failed to give an advantage when a pair of fours were scored. And then came the turn in the tide, resulting in the eventual swamping of the long hitting Diegel.

Armour, who won the title in 1927 and has twice been runner-up, outplayed Diegel, on the whole. Long putts threatened to drop constantly throughout the morning round, approach putts from 20 to 25 feet stopping inches from the cup, seven times in the first 18 holes. Diegel, the champion in 1924, 1925, 1928 and 1929, on the other hand, was wild from the tee and through the green and had to make some great recoveries to keep pace with the black haired Scot.

The play was in and out, good and bad. The fifth hole of the afternoon round was played brilliantly by both Armour and Diegel, a pair of birdie threes rewarding them.

Diegel won the championship last year with a great 274 and Armour was the runner-up, two strokes behind.

BROWNS GET REVENGE BY BEATING CHICAGO TWICE

CHICAGO, July 30—(AP)—The St Louis Browns today got revenge for two beatings administered by the White Sox in St. Louis, winning both games of a doubleheader, 3 to 2, and 6 to 1. The first game going 10 innings.

The Browns did not get an earned run in the first game, seven errors by the Sox infield accounting for the hostile runs. The winning run in the opener was scored when Ryan dropped Jolley's throw which would have retired the side. In the second contest the Browns pounded Cecil Pat Caraway for 13 hits, while George Blaeholder held the Sox to eight widely scattered safeties. Ted Gullic hit a homer into the upper deck of the left field stand.

CUMMINGS' HOMER WINS FOR ROYALS

Hal Cummings, Royal third baseman, broke up a ragged and wretched ball game at the campus last night when he drove a home run over the centerfield fence with two away in the seventh and final inning of the game between the Royals and Smoke Shop. The circuit smash gave the Panekmen a 7 to 6 win in a contest which neither team really deserved to win.

For six full innings both clubs pulled the Alphonse and Gaston act, first one side presenting the other with runs only to have the other reciprocate a moment later. In the course of play 9 official errors were made in addition to nearly as many other slips which cannot be credited on the league records. The winners were the worst offenders, making five slips against the Smokers four.

The final and deciding smash of Cummings was about the only redeeming feature of the entire evening. He not only decided the affair in favor of his own club but probably saved the spectators the trouble of watching another cruel inning. Not only did the players on both sides drop the ball, but on several occasions they heaved it everywhere but out of the lot entirely.

Magnan burdened the Smoke Shop pitching duties for the entire seven innings while Tommy Simcox and Eddie Nevins split the Royal work. Simmy started for the Royals but had to give way to the Greeneville merchant in the fourth because of a sore arm. Up to the time that he was relieved, the "old master" had given three hits but the Smokers led by a 4 to 0 score. Nevins allowed three more hits in the remaining four innings while Magnan was touched for 9 in the course of the evening.

In addition to his home run, Cummings hit a double in the fourth and played errorless ball afield, handling his four chances without a slip. Fitzgerald was the best Smoker hitter with a pair of singles. The score:

Tonight's Game

If the atmosphere can be cleared of the flock of protests, counter-protests and what not, that have cropped up during the past 24 hours, the baseball fans of the city this evening should witness one of the most important games on the City league schedule. The Thermos Bottlers, present leaders of the loop, and the Polish Citizens, runners-up, are billed to come together in what is regarded by both as their "crucial" game.

As a result of the decision last night by the league board of governors, the Thermos still holds a two-game lead in the title chase and it is up to the Cits to stop them if any one will or can.

There is little doubt but that the Citizens rank next to the leaders in hitting power and that if their machine functions as it should they stand an even break of stopping the Bottlers.

On the occasion of their most recent meeting the Thermos outfit triumphed over the Polish boys, but the latter insist that times have changed. They are positive that Bill Hastedt's gang will be beaten so decisively tonight that there will be no grounds for any protests or arguments, such as arose from the outcome of the Ideal affair Tuesday night.

On the other hand the Bottlers are confident that if given an even break they can beat the Citizens, Ideals, or any club in the circuit. One thing is certain, however, weather permitting, the largest crowd ever to witness a twilight game will be on hand.

Nothing definite was given out last night as to who the starting pitchers will be this evening but in all probability Nickerson will again work for the Bottlers and Johnny Greene for the Cits.

GRIFFITHS KNOCKS OUT HEENEY IN THE NINTH

Heeney, nearing the end of a career that reached its height 2 years ago in an unsuccessful duel with Gene Tunney for the heavyweight title, fought gallantly to stave off the rush of the husky youngster and did fairly well until the ninth. A right to the chin that almost drove Griffiths through the ropes in the first round gave Heeney an edge in that session and a fierce rally gave old Tom the eighth round.

In the ninth, however, Griffiths caught Heeney near the ropes in a bitter exchange and rapped a right to the left side of the veterans face that cut his eyelid. Another right smash puffed the flesh about the eye, another cut it deeper, and in a few seconds Tom's face was covered with blood and he reeled helplessly around the ring. The bell rang before Griffiths could floor his man.

Heeney was steered to his corner and his seconds worked frantically to mend the damage. In their excitement they appeared to have splashed some of the blood-stopping solution in the eye and Tom couldn't see when he answered the bell for the tenth.

The referee quickly stepped in and awarded the match to Griffiths on a technical knockout before Tuffy could strike a blow.

Weights—Griffiths 187, Heeney 205 1-2.

A crowd of 8,000 saw the show. In the first four round preliminary Jack Webb, Orlando, Fla., heavyweight, knocked out Roby Boutot, of New York, in the fourth round after flooring him twice. Webb weighed 187 1-2, Boutot 224.

Chester Matan, U. S. Navy heavyweight, won the decision over Frank De Angelo, New York, in four rounds. Matan weighed 195, De Angelo 184.

YANKS POUND OUT TWO VICTORIES OVER RED SOX

BOSTON, July 30—(AP)—The New York Yankees slugged their way to a pair of victories over the Red Sox today, but it took them ten innings of the first game to get started. Lou Gehrig's home run drive over the left field fence in the tenth inning, his 32nd circuit wallop of the year, broke up a pitching duel in the first game and led to an 8 to 2 victory for the Yanks. George Pipgras pitched a good game in the second contest and New York won by a 10 to 1 count.

Herb Pennock and Milton Gaston staged a fine battle in the opener until Gehrig's homer ruined it. Two were on base when Lou made his clout and the Yanks followed with more hits, including a homer by Rice to score six runs. Pipgras held the Red Sox to eight scattered hits in the second game and fanned seven to score his first vistory of the Yankees' current road tour.

ROBINS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM LOWLY PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, July 30—(AP)—The Brooklyn Robins took advantage of the idleness of the Chicago Cubs today to increase their lead in the National league race to 2 1-2 games by twice defeating the Phillies in a doubleheader. The scores were 9 to 5 and 8 to 4.

In each game the Robins took the lead early and coasted along to victory. Watson Clark, Robin southpaw ace, finished the first game for Ray Moss when he showed signs of weakening near the end, then pitched the entire second contest. The Robins piled up a total of 31 blows in the two games, including homers by Hendrick and Wright in the second. The Phillies made nine blows in each game. The double defeat ran the Philadelphia string of defeats to eleven straight.

NEW PASTORS TO PREACH HERE DURING AUGUST

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 30—Pastors of two Westerly churches will enjoy their annual vacations during the month of August, when their pulpits will be occupied by a supply pastor.

At the Broad Street Christian church Rev. Arnt L. Schoning, pastor, on Sunday, August 3rd Rev. John G. Dutton, of Agawam, Mass., a former pastor of this church for many years, retiring about three years ago, will be the speaker. Rev. Dutton has supplied churches in Springfield, Mass., and is scribe for Hampden Congregational Ministers club.

At Christ Episcopal church, Rev. G. Edgar Tobin, rector, beginning next Sunday, Rev. Harry G. Walker of Daytona Beach, Fla., will act as rector, and for the four Sundays following. Some of Rev. Tobin's vacation will be passed at his summer home at Shelter Harbor.

On Wednesday, under direction of Selectman Arthur F. Babcock of Pawcatuck, finishing touches were made to the laying of the last carload of Kentucky kyrock with especial attention given to the approach to the Pawcatuck river bridge on the highway crossing from Connecticut into Rhode Island. The north sidewalk bridge-crossing across the Coggswell street intersection with West Broad street has been raised so that there is no step-down for pedestrians as they leave the bridge sidewalk. On Coggswell street the coating of kyrock has been continued as far as the granite paving blocks were set, and in the driveway of the Pawcatuck river bridge the gasoline roller was used to smooth over the kyrock which was used to cover the rails of the old Groton-Stonington division of the Shore Line electric railroad. The wooden poles yet remain to be taken from the street where the set-back curbing has been relaid. When all is completed Selectman John Fribance will, in the absence of a convenient rain storm, have hydrant water turned onto the road surface to discover the low spots before the selectmen give their full approval to the work.

On Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Wilcox park the Westerly band, under the leadership of Director Charles O. Gavitt, will present its fifth concert of the summer series in a program of marches, popular and classic music as follows:

POETRY

A Mont Blanc Incident

Near an Alpine height they found him.
Kneeling, dead, with outstretched hand;
Winter's icy fetters bound him
As he sought the highest land.

Just beyond the frozen fingers
Stood a rock he'd tried to reach;
Though he fail'd—yet memory lingers
On the lessons this should teach.

"Higher yet," had been his longing—
Higher levels to attain,
Daring dreams his mind were thronging
When death chilled his restless brain.

Down the mountain side they bore him,
Through the twilight-lingering day;
Tenderly the choir sang o'er him
In the old church quaint and gray.

In God's acre dwells the glory
Of our hopes in Christ, which bide.
On his tomb is carved this story:
"He was climbing when he died."
—Harry Pringle Ford in the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Roadside Flowers

We are the roadside flowers,
Straying from garden grounds;
Lovers of idle hours,
Breakers of ordered bounds.

If only the earth will feed us,
If only the wind be kind,
We blossom for those who need us,
The stragglers left behind.

And lo, the Lord of the Garden,
He makes His Sun to rise,
And His rain to fall like pardon
On our dusty paradise.

On us He has laid the duty—
The task of the wandering breed—
To better the world with beauty,
Wherever the way may lead.

Who shall inquire of the season,
Or question the wind where it blows;
We blossom and ask no reason,
The Lord of the Garden knows.
—Bliss Carman.

GOOD OIL is much cheaper than a new motor

Oil is life assurance for an automobile motor. You couldn't drive a mile without it.

Almost any oil will reduce friction within a motor, the thing that makes it wear out. But it takes the best oil you can buy to minimize friction, to give you all the service that is built into your motor.

Pay a fair price for a good oil—go out of your way a little, if necessary, to get it—and you will be well repaid in reduced depreciation, fewer repair bills and better satisfaction with your car.

Penn-Drake is a safe guide to dependable oil. It is made from pure Pennsylvania Crude, refined by an exclusive, 15-second process that means extra life, extra lubrication value, extra mileage. Penn-Drake dealers display the sign of the first oil well.

DANIELSON

DANIELSON BOND ISSUE SOLD TO BOSTON FIRM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 30—It was announced today that the borough of Danielson has sold its issue of $50,000 of 4 1-2 per cent funding and sidewalk bonds to Eldridge and company of Boston, they being the highest bidders. The borough will receive a premium of $355 upon the issue of bonds. If the original plan of issuing 25-year bonds had been carried through, a much larger premium would have been received, as a longer term bond would have brought a higher price, and because of the necessity of issuing each fourth bond in $500 denomination, the issue was not popular with bond dealers and with the bond purchasing public.

The issue will save the borough approximately $4,000 over what would have been paid in interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, which it is stated local banks would have furnished $50,000 for, although at present a large part of the borough's indebtedness is carrying 6 per cent interest.

While a larger premium would have been realized from a 25-year term bond, as pointed out above, it is regarded as unquestionably wise to put the borough where it must pay off the issue in 15 years, because by doing that the borough will save 10 years' interest at 4 1-2 per cent, which would amount to $22,500.

With the exception of one district, the Killingly town school committee has completed contracts for transportation of children of the town of Killingly, for the school year 1930-31. Contracts have been awarded as follows:

Tucker district to East Killingly, three trips per day, to Maynard W. Hill, at $6.00 per day.

Horse Hill district to Danielson, two trips per day, to Albert Trahan, at $2.00 per 7-passenger car, or $1.50 for 5-passenger car, per day.

Ballouville to Dayville, two trips per day, to John Welsh, at $1.50 per day.

East Killingly to Killingly High school, Danielson, two trips per day, to Albert Trahan, at $2.00 per 7-passenger car per day.

Green Hollow district to Danielson, two trips per day, to Fred Espinosa, at $5.75 per day.

Mashentuck district to Killingly High school, two trips per day, to John Flood, at $2.75 per day.

South Killingly and Little Rest to Killingly High school, two trips per day, to Albert Trahan, at $2.00 per 7-passenger car per day.

It was given out today that because several small children residents in the Sparks district have recently come of an age requiring attendance at school, it will be necessary to provide transportation from that district to East Killingly during the coming school year. In accordance with its custom when new transportation routes are to be opened or when older routes which have not been in operation are re-opened, the school committee will shortly advertise for bids for the Sparks district-East Killingly route, which has been closed for the past three years.

In addition to the foregoing information given out for the town school committee it may be noted that the conracts already awarded for the coming school year were made without advertising for bids. There can be little criticism of the rates, which are admittedly low. The controversy has been over the point that all who wished to bid should have had the opportunity to do so, for there was keen competition among public service car operators for the work.

It was indicated as probable this morning that some of the local veterans of the 102nd infantry, men who served in it when overseas during the World war, will be down about the railroad station at 10:40 next Saturday morning to see if they recognize any of their war-time buddies. It is known that a very considerable number of men who were with the regiment in France still serve with it, the majority of them as non-commissioned officers. As the special train is to pick up a baggage car here the stop will be of several minutes' duration, so there may be a chance for a word or two between the veterans of the 102nd now living here and their friends who were "over there."

Bronzed, bright-eyed and happy, the Danielson boys who have been at Camp Woodstock at Black pond returned to their homes here today, the end of the boys' camping up there for this year.

Friday morning the girls' camp will open, and there will be 90 of them there from various places in Windham, Hartford and Tolland counties. The Danielson group will include the Misses Marjorie Mellor, Ruth Lyon, Ruth Thompson, Barbara Tillinghast, Elise Franklin, Jacquelyn Gardner, Ruth King, Elsie Myers, Beatrice Pluse and Beatrice Myers.

The directress this year will be Miss Iris Brown of Carolina, R. I. Mrs Lind of Willimantic will be camp nurse. The councilors are Miss Mary Aaron of Talcottville, Miss Irene Generous of Plainfield, Miss Laura Norris of Hazardville, Miss Clementine Bachelor of Talcottville, Miss Elizabeth Parmelee of Providence, Miss Gladys Vansant of Ardmore, Pa., Miss Corinne Wilson of Putnam, Miss Elizabeth Dunbar of Danielson, Miss Catherine Smith of Willimantic, Miss Eleanor Young of Putnam and Miss Yu of China.

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. George J. Heneault and family are leaving for a motor trip to Montreal and thence to the Laurentian mountains. They will be away two weeks.

He became seriously ill upon arriving at Chelsea and was rushed to the hospital.

PUTNAM

HUMAN FLY CLIMBS PUTNAM INN WITHOUT TROUBLE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 30.—A large crowd of people gathered at the square in front of the Putnam inn last night to witness the climbing of the inn by Johnny Woods, the human fly. Mr. Woods started up the inn by going up a pillar to the balcony over the entrance and by using the windows and window sills he was able to reach the top. The cornice at the top of the inn extended so far out that it was impossible for him to go over it without aid of a rope which was lowered to him from the roof. After Mr. Wood had reached the roof, he performed a number of stunts on the edge. The climbing and the stunts were done while Mr. Wood was blindfolded. Mr. Wood was said to be the only man to climb the Woolworth building in New York city. He climbed the 57-story building in two hours and forty-five minutes.

At a session of the city court Judge Geissler found Charles Gagne of Putnam guilty of driving under the influence of liquor and fined him $100 and costs. Gagne was arrested last night by Officer William Durand. He was unable to pay the fine so he was ordered by the court to sell his car for whatever he could get for it and to turn it in to the court and pay the rest of the fine at the rate of $5 a week until it is paid.

This afternoon a session of court was held in Judge Geissler's law office with Archibald MacDonald presiding. Niles Foster of Binghamton, N. Y. was accused of driving a motor vehicle which was 53 ft., 7in. long and the law sets a maximum at 40 ft. The arrest was made this morning by Sergeant Gardner of the Danielson barracks who was going through town and noticed he length of the truck and trailer and with the help of Officer Harry Walker he measured it and found it to be too long and the driver was arrested. As this was the first trip of the driver into Connecticut with this truck and as he is allowed sixty feet in New York he was only fined $5 and costs of $9.90. The highway office has sent a permit to the driver and he will be allowed to continue on his delivery trip tomorrow morning. This is the longest truck and trailer which has ever been seen in Putnam. The truck was delivering furniture to the Montgomery Ward store in this city and was to go to Manchester, New London, New Haven and Stamford. The truck was on its maiden journey and is owned by the Koehler Furniture company.

Charles Bove and Frank Bologna are the only residents who are known to have relatives in the section of Italy that was ruined by the earthquake last week and to date the only person not yet heard from is one of Mr. Bologna's sister.

The William May farm, which is situated in the Gary district and owned by C. V. B. Cushman of Pomfret, has been sold to Henry Safford of South Woodstock. When Mr. Cushman bought this farm it was rumored that it would be used as an airport as this is one of the natural airports in this vicinity. Mr. Safford, the purchaser of the farm, is a truck farmer and is thought that it will be used for this purpose.

Walter Chaffee of School street has been promoted to assistant track supervisor in the New London district. Mr. Chaffee has been employed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad for the last ten years and this is the fourth promotion which he has received in this time. About ten years ago he went to work for the railroad as time-keeper and after about three years he was promoted to assistant foreman of the section gang. About five years after this he was appointed foreman of the gang and about two weeks ago, when a vacancy occurred in the New London office, he was appointed to assist Mr. Armstrong. Mr. Chaffee has been a resident of Putnam all of his life and is married and has one child. He plans to remove his family to New London in the near future.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Frank Sargent

Mrs. Emma T. Sargent, who died last Monday in Worcester, was well known in this city and was loved by every one she knew. She was the wife of the late Rev. Frank Sargent who was pastor of the Congregational church in this city for 20 years. Mrs. Sargent was taken ill last Friday with a heart attack and because of her age was unable to rally and died about 6 o'clock Monday night. Mrs. Sargent was born November 18, 1847, in Dunstable, Mass., the daughter of Deacon and Mrs. S. S. Taylor. She was educated in the schools of that town and later attended a seminary in Pepperill, Mass. She married Rev. Frank Sargent in 1869 and then moved to Brookline, N. H., where Rev. Mr. Sargent was pastor of the church there for 17 years. They came to Putnam in 1890 where Rev. Mr. Sargent was engaged as pastor of the Second Congregational church. Following her husband's death in 1918 she moved to Worcester and later to Nashua, N. H. Mrs. Sargent is survived by three children and one grandchild.

Harry Thayer of King street left today to enroll in the school at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson which is a school for training applicants for West Point. Mr. Thayer will take the competitive examinations at Hartford next October and if he is successful in these and other examinations he will enter the military academy next June. Mr. Thayer has a brother, Allen, who has already gone through the academy and is stationed at Fort Ethan Allen.

The officials and drivers of the Short Line Transportation company of the Springfield route were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Kimball, owners of Arnold's sea grill last night. Before the dinner the members of the party enjoyed swimming at Webster lake and then motored to Putnam. A full course clam and lobster dinner was served to the party.

JEWETT CITY

NORWICH DOG-STEALER BUNGLES AT HIS WORK

One day recently a Norwich man driving through the East Main street extension, just outside the borough limits saw a dog in the road which he picked up and carried away. The next day in the Bulletin there appeared an advertisement stating that a dog had been found. Mrs. Wheeler, the owner of the dog, a handsome Pomeranian, called the advertiser, stating that he had her dog. The Norwich man, according to the local dog warden's satement, had let other parties have the animal, and he didn't propose to give him up. W. R. Palmer, local officer went to Norwich and told his story at the city police station. A member of the police force, in company with the Jewett City state official, visited the man who took the dog from Griswold.

Following the refusal of the man to tell where the animal had been placed, the officials offered a bit of legal advice in the premises, which caused a change of opinion, especially so when the man was threatened with arrest. Mr. Palmer and the owner went to the house indicated on the River road. The dog's antics of joy at sight of his mistress, proved sufficient guarantee of ownership. The Griswold tag number on the dog's collar was also identical with the certificate of registration issued by the local town clerk.

John Curran Remembered

Older resident of the borough remember John Curran, whose obituary was in Wednesday's Bulletin. Forty-five years ago the Curran family lived in Jewett City. He was the slasher tender in the Ashland mill at the time when Harry Alsop was boss weaver. Mr. Curran was a member of Sedgwick post No. 1, G. A. R., of Norwich, and always marched in the Memorial day parades.

Sunday next, the Shyms and the H. N. S. will meet for a game on the Fisk field. It will be a contest of the fast ones.

Lester Hazler of Groton, Conn, was the guest Tuesday of Servile Maynard. They attended the ball game at Boston Wednesday. Both boys are taking the electrical course at Putnam Trade school.

Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, in Germany, sends handsome souvenir cards to her friends in Jewett City. Mrs. Buckingham and her sister, Mrs. Champion Mathewson, who are touring Europe are well, and enjoying the trip immensely.

The first signs of fall are noted in the posted notices of the registrars of voters, announcing the date for registration and for voters "to be made".

A Real Cement Bridge

The attractive appearance of the new bridge is noticeable since the moulds have been removed from the cement side guards. When the job is completed the whole steel structure will be encased in cement.

The locally famous Black Hawks, were defeated by the Junior Giants of Mechanic street, at the Fisk field Wednesday. Rourke, Larrabee and Prince starred with the stick. Larrabee, pitching for the Giants, struck out 12 Hawks.

The winners' line-up included: Gilman, cf; Prince, 1b; Russi, ss; Larrabee, p; Rourke, 3b; Marinella, c; Le Favre, lf; Kowalski, 2b; Smoky, rf.

CITY GIRL'S ATTIRE IS UNSEEMLY AND INDECENT

People on Main street, in the peaceful law abiding community were horrified, not to say actually shocked, at noon Wednesday, when a young woman in "shorts" meandered up the busy thoroughfare. It wasn't the shorts so much as it was the unconfined sweater ensemble. Back to nature had nothing on that outfit. One man threw a fit, some hustled up to other corners so as to be there when the show went by again, while one, believing that water should be forthcoming without delay, rushed for the fire alarm. Some sighed for the Norwich cops to call a halt to such distracting demonstrations, with the fact remaining that had one of the Rose City's finest been here, he would now be shy at least one eye. Even the borough dogs barked and humped it for places of safety.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Massi, and Gerard Massi were in Woonsocket Saturday. Their children, Louis, Jr., and Theresa, who had spent a week with their cousin, Emile Pierel, returned home with them.

The Clerks will play the Holy Name society at Ashland park this (Thursday) evening. The battery for the Clerks will be Stanley Derda and Roland Guillette.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Warner Brothers Company, Bridgeport.

Corsets have always been an article of fashion more particularly than an article of hygiene, and have been worn from earliest times.

The Warner Brothers Company of Bridgeport was founded by two physicians: Dr. I. DeVer Warner and Dr. Lucien C. Warner, who invented a corset that was considered more healthful than the corsets in use at that time. Within ten years, however, a change in fashion caused them to modify the garments they were making and the succeeding cycles of fashion have been followed or closely anticipated by the products of this company.

Its trademarks are: Redfern, which distinguishes garments of the finest quality; and Warner's, under which more popular priced corsets and brassieres are made under the firm's other trademarks of "Corselette" and "Wrap-Around."

The company was founded in 1874, erected its first building in Bridgeport in 1876, and its present buildings cover more than two city blocks.

Sales are made directly to the retailers in every city and town in the United States, and in 42 foreign countries.

The present officers are: DeVer H. Warner and Lucien T. Warner, sons of the founders; John Field, DeVer C. Warner, Bradford G. Warner, sons and son-in-law of DeVer H. Warner.

E. F. Creekmore of Forth Smith, Ark., is vice president and general manager of the $30,000,000 American Cooperative association.

LIQUIDATION AND SHORT SELLING SENT PRICES DOWN IN STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP)—The bear flags were flying over the stock market today.

Accompanying a break in July wheat to the lowest levels since 1914 and in cotton to new lows for the season, share prices wilted under a withering renewal of liquidation and short selling. The closing index on 90 issues revealed a net loss of 4.6 points, but declines of six to 17 points ruled in the more volatile listings.

Selling was heaviest in the late trading when feeble attempts at a rally were quickly submerged under a fresh wave of the liquidation, and closing prices were the lowest.

The movement emphasized widespread disappointment over the market's resistance to efforts at breaking above the high of the recovery. Three times the bull crowd has endeavored to get stocks beyond that top, attained on July 18, and on each occasion it has received definite notice that the demonstrations were not being attended by sufficient public following to make possible a pronounced advance.

It seemed this forenoon as though the moment for another gain might have arrived. The steel corporation's confident statement on the better prospects for that industry, coupled with an improvement in car loadings during the past week and reductions in crude oil output and gasoline stocks, were encouraging pieces of news. But the market, after opening irregularly higher, soon turned downward.

The appearance of the weekly steel reviews seemed to stimulate bearish activities. Iron Age, reporting that ingot production was unchanged for the fourth successive week said it was possible that the Ford Motor company's shutdown might be extended for another week from August 4.

Iron Age's pig iron composite price was reported at $16.96 a gross ton, the lowest since late in 1915 and a decline of 13 cents in the past week.

The larger declines in stocks were reminiscent of the June break. American Machine and Foundry (old) broke 17 points net. Allied Chemical lost 14, advance Rumely preferred and Worthington Pump, 9, People's Gas and U. S. Industrial Alcohol, 8, Columbian Carbon, 7, A. M. Byers and Eastman Kodak, 8, and DuPont, American Telephone and Westinghouse, 5 or more.

There were declines of 4 to nearly 5 in American Water Works, Western Union, American Tobacco, Atlantic Coast Line, Air Reduction and R. H. Macy, and of 3 to nearly 4 in American Can, International Harvester, United Aircraft, North American, American and Foreign Power, Standard Gas and Electric, General Electric, Southern Railway and Warner Brothers Pictures, the last two making new lows. U. S. Steel, after touching 169 on the opening rally, broke to 164 and closed a shade above that figure for a loss of 3 3-8. General Motors, in which the bulls had been active, lost more than 2.

Money rates remained steady, although there was a firmer undertone as the banks made ready for the month end demands. Five millions in gold was taken for shipment to France and $1,000,000 was withdrawn for Canada, but there was a $3,100,000 importation from Venezuela.

Foreign exchanges, particularly the European currencies, eased, thereby removing some of the threat of further immediate gold losses here.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP)—Quoted values of curb market shares crumbled rapidly today, in sympathy with renewed liquidation in other speculative markets.

It was not until the last hour of trading that the market fully reflected the weakness on the stock exchange and in the wheat market. The more active stocks generally closed 1 to 4 points lower. Sales aggregated 540,500 shares, the largest turnover in more than a week.

The utilities were most heavily sold. American Gas and Electric retained much of its recent advance, reacting 4 points. Electric Bond and Share was an active feature, closing at 82, off 3. Issues losing a point or two included American Super Power, American Light and Traction, Insull Utility Investment, and United Light A.

A firm spot was International Super Power, an investment trust specializing in utility shares, which rose 4 points to 37 and closed at 36, in response to the semi-annual statement calculating liquidating value as of July 26 at $46.10 a share. Goldman Sachs Trading, however, failed to respond to its semi-annual statement placing liquidating value above $30 a share, and closed at 18 3-8, off 1 1-8. United Founders closed off 5-8.

The industrials were less heavily sold, although such recent strong spots as the Dresser shares lost more than 2 each, and Technicolor, Crocker Wheeler, Mapes Consolidated, and Atlas Plywood, were among shares recording similar losses. Aluminum company lost yesterday's 4 point rise.

Cities Service lost a point in active trading, and Humble and Gulf declined more than 2.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP)—The unsettlement which depressed other security markets extended to bonds today. The result was an irregular movement downward affecting all sections of the list.

Despite the reactionary trend, the day was not without its constructive features. While stock privilege and speculative issues were depressed in sympathy with shares, seasoned domestic investment bonds held their ground. Trading was moderately active, total sales approximating $8,500,000.

Features were largely confined to the foreign list where sharp contrasts developed. Gains and losses were about evenly divided. French governments and municipals were strong and the Republic 7s, Lyons 6s, Bordeaux 6s, reached new 1930 highs, accompanied by British 5 1-2s.

New issues fared poorly, the new Austrian 7s breaking to 92 1-4, after holding fairly steady since the recent offering at 95. The German 5 1-2s sagged. Sales of the Austrian loan were the largest of the day, approaching $1,000,000. Changes in South American bonds also were of a divergent nature. Columbia 6s, Columbia Bank 7s, Argentine 6s, and Brazil railway 7s, made good gains, but Brazil 6 1-2s, and Bolivian 7s, reacted one point each.

Against the downward trend, high grade railroad and utility issues found progress slow, and the few gains which were registered were small. New York Central 6s rose 1-2 point to a new high. Missouri Pacific issues were in demand. Atchison 4s, Canadian National Railways, and Canadian Pacific, and Pennsylvania Mortgage issues held firm.

Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul bonds turned sharply downward, the 5s of 1975 reaching a new low on a 1 3-8 point decline, and the adjustment 5s, a convertible issue, sagging 1-2 point. Other convertible rails worked lower, Atchison 4 1-2s losing 1 point. Wide breaks occurred in international railways of Central America 5s, which dropped 17 1-2 points, and New Orleans, Texas and Mexico 4 1-2s off 3. Chicago and Alton 3 1-2s, had another spectacular rise, gaining 4 points to reach a new high for the year.

Among utilities, American Debenture 5s, of 1953 was depressed one point, and the convertible 4 1-2 lost 4 1-2 points. International Telephone 5s were firm. The convertible issue lost fractionally. Firmness was shown by Montana Power 5s, Laclede Gas Light 5 1-2s, and several other issues.

Treasury issues were dull and steady.

As the first public financing undertaken by the newly organized Ohio Edison company, subsidiary of the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, offering will be made tomorrow of $18,834,500, five per cent first and consolidated gold mortgage bonds.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 30—(AP)—Grain prices collapsed today to a standard seldom equalled even in times antedating the World war. Wheat fell below any point reached since July, 1914, when Europe's unprecedented huge military needs and relative scarcity elsewhere sent breadstuff values skyward. In violent contrast, today's trans-Atlantic demand for wheat from North America was at various stages the slackest in a long while, and harvest reports from places northward toward Canada pointed to millions of bushels soon to be added to big stocks on hand.

Wheat closed heavy at virtually the bottom most level reached, 2 1-4a3c a bushel under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-2a1 7-8c off. Oats as well as wheat established a new low price record for the season, finishing 1 1-4a1 3-4c down. Provisions, however, scored gains, latest quotations being 2c a 20c net higher.

Offerings of provisions were scarce, a circumstance related to upturns in the value of hogs.

CONNECTICUT FAIR DATES ARE LISTED

Connecticut's total number of fairs is remaining constant, according to the hand book of fairs and dates now being distributed by the state department of agriculture. The hand book lists the officers and dates of 31 fairs to be held in Connecticut from Aug. 27 to Oct. 15 inclusive. Last year 30 fairs held exhibitions and although three of the smaller fairs are dropping out this year, additional ones are taking their places.

DEATH VALLEY TURNED INTO FLOWER GARDEN

Death Valley, normally parched and almost lifeless, which a queer quirk of the weather made into a beautiful flower garden for a brief period during the early summer has a sombre fame because of its name. Its heat, and the fact that it is the lowest bit of dry land in the United States. The bottom of the valley, which lies in eastern California, is 276 feet below sea level; and in summer the temperature rises to 130 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade. A bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society describes this subcellar of the western world.

"Death Valley resulted from a terrestrial 'sinking spell' tens of thousands of years ago," says a bulletin, "just as dozens of other valleys in the Great Basin area did, and just as did the world's most famous below sea level area, the Dead Sea region of Palestine. At the time the valley was formed a long, narrow block of earth, not more than a dozen miles wide in this particular locality, broke from its rocky moorings and settled downward, leaving sheer cliffs on each side.

"Since that distant day of Death Valley's genesis, two important developments have been under way: rains and winds have been cutting the bounding cliffs into rugged, sloping mountainsides; and have been transporting the material to the valley floor. Slowly Death Valley is committing suicide; gradually the floor is being built up, and in some time—after the passage of some thousands of years—no part of it will remain below sea level.

"In normal years only a few inches of rain fall on the valley floor. But during May of this year there were daily showers for more than half a month. Under this stimulus seeds that must have lain dormant for years sprouted, and large patches of the less salty areas of the valley became carpeted with wild flowers and grasses.

"More rain falls on the mountains bounding the valley, the Armagosa range to the northeast and the Panamint range to the southwest. It is the precipitation on these ranges—the eroded remains of the cliffs that at first towered over the valley—that is gradually filling the great sink with debris. From the valley floor one sees the mouths of numerous canyons and before each spreads a fan-shaped deposit of sand, salt and stones brought down by freshets. The water that pours out of these canyons after rains in the mountains, is usually quickly drunk up by the dry sands; or, if it accumulates in the lowest depressions of the valley, it rapidly evaporates in the hot, dry desert air, leaving a deposit of salt.

"Approximately 500 square miles below sea level in Death Valley. In width the depression varies between five and twelve miles. From end to end, it extends northwest and southeast for 125 miles. It lies approximately parallel to the long, diagonal surveyed line that forms the greater part of the boundary between Nevada and California. It is a few miles southwest of the boundary, not far from its mid point, and thus lies wholly within California.

"The valley usually presents a desolate appearance. The lowest areas are salt flats. Most of the relatively higher portions of the floor have an abundance of salt grains, too, mixed with the sand. Here and there old saline crusts are broken into hard jagged pieces. In places the sand and salt drift into dunes. The area is not wholly devoid of life. An occasional stunted mesquite bush manages to exist in the shifting sand. In the autumn and winter and early spring a few horned 'toads' and other lizards scamper about; but these animals are wise enough to migrate to more hospitable regions before summer sets in.

"From the steep sides of Death Valley a few small, scattered springs of good water trickle. These have been carefully marked. Other springs are so impregnated with minerals that their waters are unfit for use. One sizeable spring gushes into the valley. With the aid of its waters small tracts of alfalfa and a number of trees are growing. Near this touch of civilization are important borax mines that have been worked for years.

"Death Valley gained its doleful title in 1849 when a party of overland travelers bound for California perished in its wastes. Board-marked graves and an occasional human skeleton show that the valley has taken its further toll of life; but with a railway near the southeastern end, wagon and automobile tracks throughout the depression, marked springs, an irrigated 'ranch,' and mines, Death Valley has necessarily lost some of its sombre reputation. Lately a hotel has been built in the foothills and now even tourists visit the once dreaded Death Valley"

HESSIAN FLY AGAIN HITS IOWA'S WINTER WHEAT CROP

AMES, Iowa—(AP)—Winter wheat in Iowa has been seriously damaged by the Hessian fly for the first time in five years.

Dr. Carl J. Drake, state entomologist, says the pest has been creeping back for two years and that farmers must fight it again to prevent damage.

Carelessness because of the fly's absence has contributed to the present situation, Dr. Drake believes. Farmers have been using combines, which require that wheat stand until it is much riper than when cut with a binder, and the grain that shatters has sprouted and produced an early growth favorable to the insect.

COAST FARMERS TO SEEK SOUTH AMERICAN MARKETS

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—(AP)—A cure for agricultural marketing ailments will be sought here at a Pan-American trade conference in August by representatives of South American and western farm interests.

They will gather to determine if Latin-American countries can supply a market for the west's surplus crops, and to ascertain if South America wishes to reach toward the west coast of North America as a market for its products.

Argentina suggested a meeting in California, with the result that more than 400 delegates from the southern continent will meet those from 10 western states.

Exhibits of South American products will be displayed at the state fair and western states exposition after the conference ends August 30.

EXPORTS TO RUSSIA SHOW BIG INCREASE OVER 1929

NEW YORK—(AP)—United States exports to soviet Russia from January to June were almost triple the figure for the same period in 1929, while exports to all other nations except Mexico decreased.

Department of commerce figures show Russia bought $64,424,521 worth of American goods between January 1 and June 1, compared with $28,217,477 in the corresponding period last year.

For the first five months of 1930 American exports to the entire world fell from $2,229,300,968, the 1929 figure, to $1,730,634,290.

To Settle Disputes

Untangling the scores of disputes involving division of the waters of the Rio Grande and Colorado rivers, will be the problem of L. M. Lawson, El Paso, Tex., engineer, who is to be named head of the international water commission.

Pride Impels the Finest Quality

IN 1646 the shoemakers of Boston, provoked by "much bad work produced by their craft," petitioned "Ye Governor of Ye Bay Colonie" that "all boots might be alike made well." So began America's pride in Craftsmanship.

Pride in the production of the finest Quality still lives. It is the spirit upon which in 1874 at Manchester, New Hampshire, Roger G. Sullivan founded 7-20-4—now the largest strictly hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos have been traditional with 7-20-4 since its beginning. It is the same spirit today, after fifty-six years of public confidence—which refuses to lower its standard of manufacture at the sacrifice of the finest Cigar Quality.

We cordially invite you to visit our factory

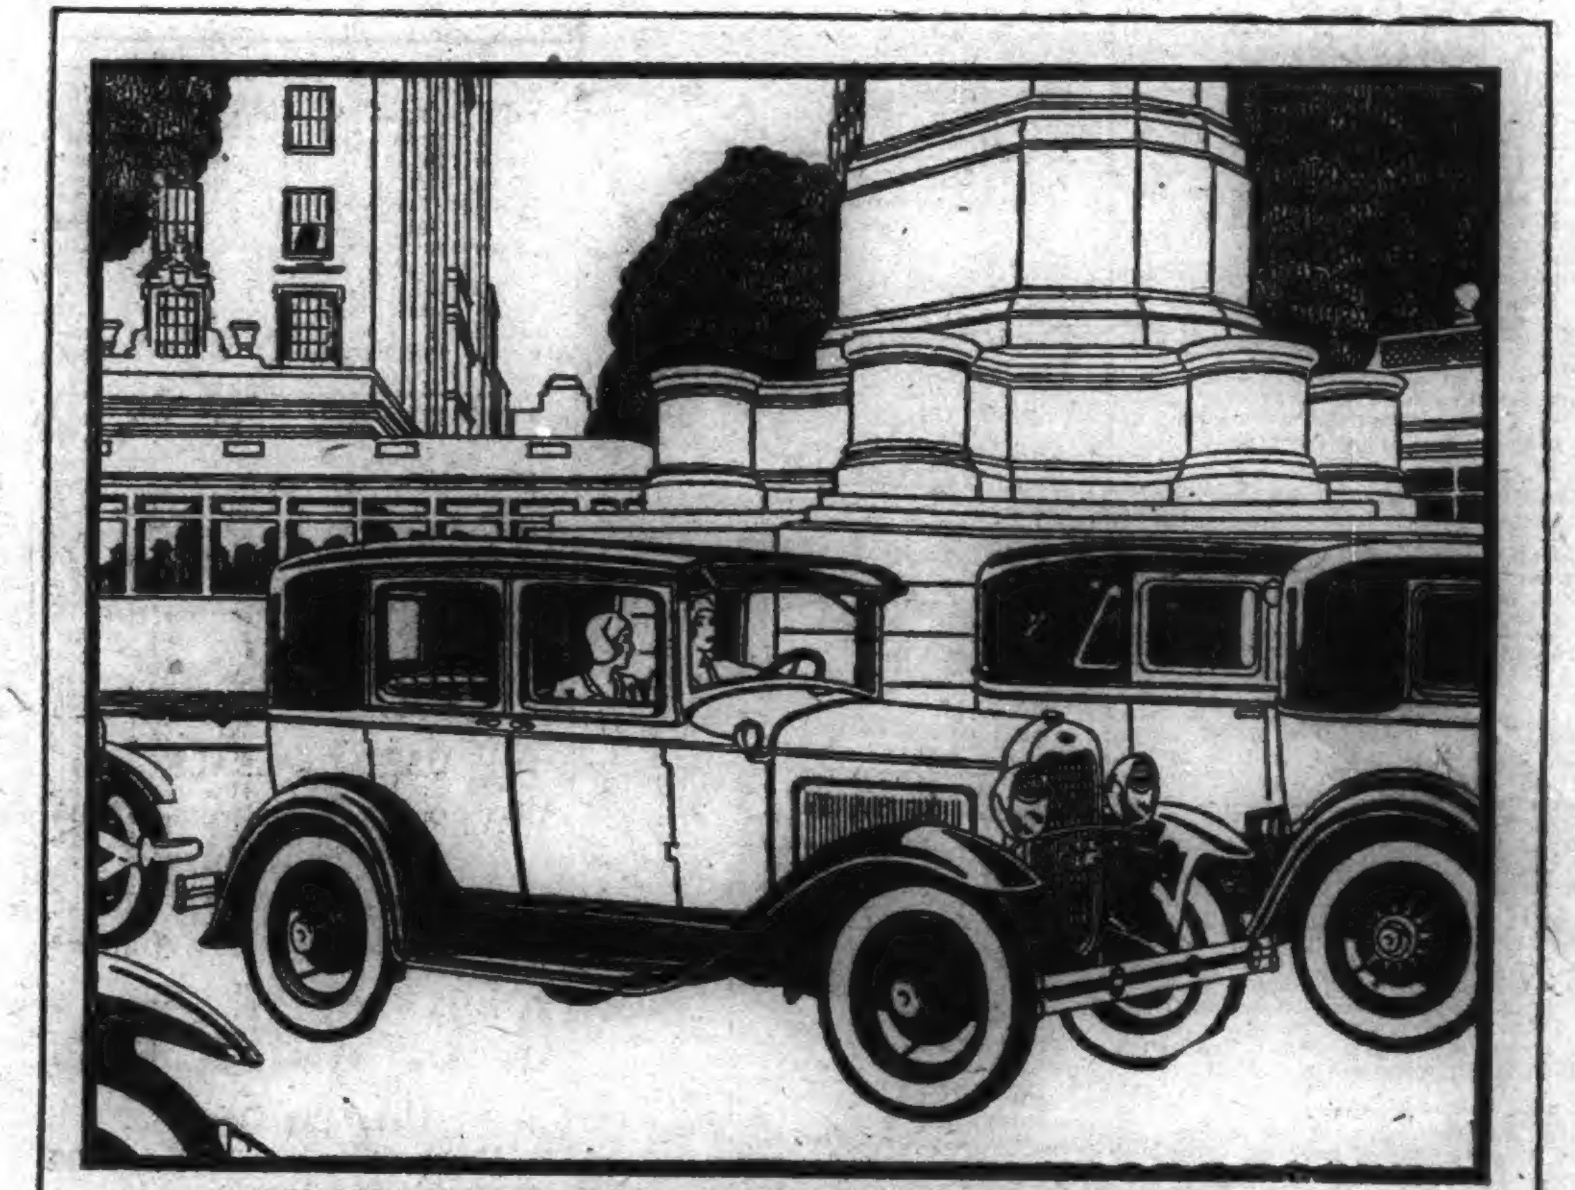
Meeting the Needs of Millions of People



The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical university, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before. Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. Many men had shut their minds to the possibility of change. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated in this operation. Finally the way was found and old methods gave place to new.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankcases reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand, it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car. All of these things are done in the interest and the service of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one.

BIG SWITCH ENGINE AT NEW LONDON LEAVES RAILS DELAYING N.Y. BOAT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 30—Traffic on the New Haven railroad was interrupted tonight, but other than the handling of freight in the local yard, the interruption was not serious. The delay was the result of one of the largest switch engines on the road's entire system being derailed during the height of travel and it was five hours later before the locomotive was gotten back on the iron, new rails laid and roadbed repaired.

The engine was switching two dining cars scheduled to be attached to the train that leaves here for New York at 5:34 and on the train that departs for Boston at 5:49. As the big engine was hauling the diners from the west end of the yard to the east end of the station, the wheels of the tender split a switch point and left the tracks. Before the locomotive could be stopped the mammoth engine also left the rails and traveled about a hundred feet before it came to a standstill. Tracks were ripped up and others twisted and ties and roadbed plowed up the entire distance. When the engine came to a stop it was tilted greatly and all but overturned. A wrecking train from Midway was brought to New London and the work of placing the locomotive back on the rails was started, but progress was slow because of the absence of perfect tracks and roadbed beneath the engine. The east-bound train carried a dining car, but the train departing for New York did not.

Because of the accident all freight for the New York boat was held up and it was after 10 o'clock before work on unloading about 60 cars of miscellaneous content was started. As a result steamer New Hampshire was delayed in departing.

WOMAN FINDS AIREDALE WITH BODY FILLED WITH SHOT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 30—Mrs. Victor Fargh, 197 Shaw street, tonight made complaint to the police that someone had attempted to kill her airedale and it is the second time within a few months that the animal's life has been sought, presumably by a neighbor. The dog is allowed to roam and nothing was thought of it when the dog did not return home last night. This morning Mrs. Fargh discovered the dog in the yard, his body filled with gunshot. Where the animal received its wounds is not known; but it is not believed that the shooting was done far from the Fargh residence.

Rev. Frederick C. Allen, of South Manchester, is with his family at Groton Long Point, having arrived there this week. Mrs. Allen and children have been at the Point several weeks.

Mrs. Emanuel Silva and infant daughter, of Mystic; Joseph Malek, Jewett City; Donald Maxson, Hewlett, N. Y.; and B. Elizabeth Holloway, Peacedale, R. I., patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Erecting New Street Signs

New street signs, something that the city has needed sorely for a long time, are being erected on poles at street corners throughout the city. The signs are painted blue and white and besides designating the street, bear the numbers of buildings in the vicinity of the location of the sign.

BATHOUSE ENTERED, THOS. SHERWIN LOSES $15

Thomas Sherwin, Union street, was robbed by a bathhouse thief this afternoon, although he did not report his loss at police headquarters. Sherwin made his almost daily visit to Ocean beach and spent about two hours in swimming. While he was in the water a thief forced entrance to his bathhouse and stole his money, about $15.

Stanley April, New Bedford, Mass., youth, who was arrested here as a runaway last Monday night, is still in custody, but he is not locked up for when the boy's mother failed to come here and take charge of the runaway, he was given into the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield. Yesterday the mother of the youth was advised of her son's arrest and said that she would come to New London and take the boy back home today. This she failed to do, so the boy was taken to the city's detention building on Bank street. What disposition of the youth's case will be made remains to be seen.

School Board Nominations

Cecil Caulkins has been nominated for the office of board of school visitors. Today his nominating petition, attached to which were 61 signatures was received for record at the office of the city clerk and it is understood that Mr. Caulkins will accept the nomination. It is also understood that James Murray and Ralph Wetmore, recently nominated, will accept.

The Waterbury police are seeking the arrest of William B. Bender, who represents himself to be an insurance agent. Bender obtained a diamond ring this week by an fraudulent act. The police throughout the state have been requested to be on the lookout for the crook. Bender went to a Waterbury jewelry store and claimed to have come from New London. He requested to be shown diamond rings and when he selected one of them, Bender tendered payment by check. When the check was deposited in a bank it developed that it was worthless. Bender is not known in New London.

Mrs. Benjamin Milford, of Waterford; Mrs. Herbert Blankenship and infant daughter, 20, Tilley street; Miss Leila Guerin, Waterford; Mrs. Frank Perry and infant daughter, 36 Winthrop street, and Mrs. Hilton Clark, 530 Thames street, Groton, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

C. V. TRAIN DISPATCHER MYRON G. PATTEE DIES

Myron G. Pattee, about 72, died this morning at his residence, 74 Williams street following an illness of several years. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Garboth, New York and a sister, Mrs. William Height, Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Pattee, who was born at Burlington, Vt., was employed in New London nearly 20 years as chief train dispatcher by the Central Vermont railroad. The body will be forwarded to Mr. Pattee's former home in Milton, Vt., for burial.

TAXI MAN'S ICE SUPPLY CONSIDERED SUSPICIOUS

Charles Parmalee, public service driver and residing in Groton, but operating his cab in this city, was arrested last night when his residence was raided by state police. The taxi man was charged with conducting a disorderly house and violation of the state motor vehicle law in failing to notify the state motor vehicle department of his change of address. Parmalee recently moved from Waterford to Groton, but did not supply that information to the motor vehicle department.

Although a resident of Groton but a short time, the state police became suspicious that the taxi driver was selling liquor at his home. When he was observed last night carrying ice to the house a raiding squad headed by Sergeant George Webber searched the house, but only a few drinks of whiskey and a half dozen bottles of beer found. In the house and intoxicated were Edward Leary and Bernard Tobin, both fishermen and they were arrested. Leary and Tobin were locked up and will be given a hearing in the Groton town court Monday next. Parmalee furnished a surety on his bond of $500 and he too will be in court Monday. Parmalee said that the fishermen were his guests and that the whiskey and beer had been purchased by the men and then brought to the Parmalee home.

Thief After Money

Mrs. James McFarland, 54 Cutler street, reported to the police this morning that her home had been entered during the night, but nothing of value was stolen. Entrance to the house was gained by means of an open cellar door, which permitted the thief to ascend the stairs and go to the apartment on the first floor. The thief instituted a search for money, but was not successful in finding it.

BRUCE AND EMPLOYE ARE FINED IN CITY COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 30—Patrick Sullivan, employed by Leonard Bruce, 519 Bank street, was in the police court this morning charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, keeping with intent to sell and illegal possession. Bruce was arraigned on a charge of breach of the peace in attacking and severely beating Alexander Slodden, an employe of the Hotel Mohican. Both men pleaded guilty. Judge Daniel M. Cronin fined Sullivan $200 and costs on each count and Bruce was fined $25 and costs.

Sullivan was arrested yesterday when state and local police raided the residence of Bruce, which has long been reputed to be a distributing place for liquor. Over 100 quarts of whiskey and gin were seized.

The police had long sought to obtain evidence against Bruce, but until yesterday were unsuccessful. During yesterday forenoon, Catherine Powers, who formerly conducted a speakeasy on Linden street and who recently moved to Groton, was shadowed by a state police officer in Groton, for she was suspected of selling booze. The woman, accompanied by a fisherman, was followed to the plant of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries and when Mrs. Powers was observed to pass a bottle of whiskey to a fisherman she was arrested as was the purchaser, the latter being taken into custody as a witness against the woman. When interrogated at the state police barracks Mrs. Powers declared that she received her supply of liquor at Bruce's establishment. A warrant for a search of Bruce's home was ordered and officers who conducted the search found Sullivan in charge of the building. He was arrested and the liquor confiscated.

Bruce blamed Slodden for his arrest for, it is understood, the latter went to the Bank street house and sought to obtain liquor, but was refused it because he did not have money to make the purchase and already owed Bruce for liquor. The liquor dispenser is of the belief that Slodden caused his arrest by tipping off the police and with that idea in mind, Bruce went to the hotel and finding Slodden in the lobby, administered a severe beating to the hotel employe as was evidenced by his facial condition when he was in court today as a witness against Bruce.

JAIL FOR ARTHUR PERRY FOR ABOUT FOUR MONTHS

Arthur Perry, 33 Hamilton street, was in the police court today charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law, in driving while his license is under suspension. Perry pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs. He could not pay so was committed to jail where he will remain approximately four months unless some of his friends go to his rescue and pay the penalty imposed by Judge Daniel M. Cronin. Perry was driving his automobile on Mohegan avenue yesterday and was detected doing so by Motorcycle Officers Clarence Martin and George Cockell, who arrested the chauffeur. Perry has been arrested on numerous occasions and for various offenses, but until today has always escaped serving a jail sentence.

Watered the Alcohol

Mrs. Sophie Apanaschik, 19 Winthrop street, corner of Harrison street, when in the police court today on two counts of violation of the prohibition law, pleaded guilty and was fined $200 and costs on each count. She paid. Mrs. Apanaschik is the proprietress of a lunch room and has long been suspected of violating the liquor law. Yesterday the police received positive information that the woman was dispensing strong drinks at her place of business. Sergeant John Courney and three officers went to the restaurant and a search resulted in a dozen quarts of alcohol being seized. In serving the alcohol, Mrs. Apanaschik diluted it with water.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 30—Edwin R. Spaulding, Mystic, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in passing a standing trolley car, which was discharging or receiving passengers. The complaint, however, was nolled. Spaulding was arrested last night by Patrolman George Goldberg upon complaint of B. F. Sullivan, a conductor in the employ of the Connecticut company.

Samuel Wenger of New Haven, was charged with violation of the city and state motor vehicle laws, parking his car away from the curb and driving without a license. He was arrested yesterday by Traffic Officer Joseph Sullivan and today his case was continued until Aug. 9.

The other cases tried were for intoxication and there were six offenders. Two of the men were given suspension of judgment. Two others were fined $10 and costs and a fifth was sentenced to 30 days in jail; he is a dishwasher and has been on a protracted spree. The sixth offender, also arrested many times, was sentenced to 30 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

Sleek, smooth-tongued and dangerous: That was William Foster. Foster, the most sensational criminal lawyer in New York. Foster the man who alway won his cases, who dragged men from the shadow of the electric chair time and again. Foster, the man who dressed like a prince, but would never marry. Foster, the hero of the powerful drama, "For the Defense," which opens for a three-days' run at the Palace, beginning today.

William Powell the man who made such a sensational name for himself as Philo Vance in the S. S. Van Dine murder cases, is cast in the role of Foster. Playing along with him is the slim vamp, Kay Francis and a large cast of stars. He is in love with her, but he doesn't want to marry her. She a talented actress, is in love with him, but does want to marry him. He is so successful as a criminal lawyer that the police have begun to have their suspicions of him. Time and again he wins his cases, and men, apparently doomed for the death house, are drawn back to safety by his trained, sure hand, and flawless courtroom procedure.

Come and see him charm the juries. Come and see murderers with fear in their eyes, fighting for their lives. The plot fairly boils with drama, as this handsome aristocrat of the screen fights one case after another.

Italy's Earthquake Area.

"Italy's recent earthquake was confined in its most destructive effects to the mountainous region known as the Apennines of Naples," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Just north of Naples the mountain range that extends down the middle of the Italian peninsula loses its form of a definite ridge and breaks down into rather distinct mountain groups joined by cross ranges and elevated saddles. This area of elevated masses and deep defiles where towns and villages perch on hilltops and cling to mountain slopes, has borne the brunt of the earth tremors. Farther to the east the tableland of Apulia has been shaken too, but not so disastrously.

"Naples, situated where this broken section of the Apennines slopes down to the Tyrrhenian sea, and close to where Vesuvius has belched out cubic miles of lava, has been shaken severely as it has been many times before. The city is largely built of gray lava from Vesuvius and in its old part consists of low houses along dark, narrow streets and alleys. It is Italy's most populous community in one of the world's most beautiful settings.

"Venosa, an inland town of 9,000 population which suffered damage, was the birthplace in 64 B. C. of Horace, best loved of Roman poets. There is buried Robert Guiscard, great Norman soldier-duke in the Church of St. Trinita, built by him in 1059.

"Melfi, another town in which the toll of life was large, lies near Venosa and under the pyramidal peaks of Monte Volture which marks the southern extent of the Apennines of Naples. In Melfi Robert Guiscard set up his capital until he capturedSalerno on the coast and made that town his headquarters. Melfi was practically wiped out of existence by an earthquake in 1851.

"Foggia, farthest east of the towns to feel the marked force of the recent quake, lies near the Adriatic side of the peninsula. It is the capital of the great Apulian tableland that was once a huge sheep pasture, maintaining millions of the animals. The town is large (61,000) and with its low white houses, has a somewhat oriental aspect. It was largely destroyed by an earthquake in 1731. The Apulian tableland that surrounds it has been called Italy's most dreary and barren area.

"Near-by is Lucera where Emperor Frederick II planted his famous Saracen mercenaries, 60,000 strong, in the first years of the thirteenth century. Frederick lived among these Moslems, dressed as 'the sultan of Lucera,' maintained a harem guarded by eunuchs, and used his Mohammedan forces in his struggles against the Christain soldiers of the Papacy.

"Benevento, where property was damaged and lives lost, is a thriving town, capital of the region between Foggia and Naples. It is finely situated on a mountain high above the Appian Way and its two rivers. There stands one of the most imposing of the triumphal arches outside Rome, erected to Trajan. It is one of the oldest of Italian towns and stood out against the Romans successfully until 276 B. C.

"Potenza, base of operations for some of the relief expeditions, was itself stricken by the recent tremors. It lies on a low saddle which cuts the Aepennines and roughly marks the southwestern limit of destruction. This town of 14,000 inhabitants was almost completely razed by the earthquakes of 1857 which devastated the region of the Apennines of Naples."

$13,500 REWARD FOR CAPTURE OF SLAYER OF BUCKLEY

DETROIT, July 30—(AP)—The theory that Radio Announcer Jerry Buckley was slain because of his promise to expose law violators in the suburb of Hamtramck formed the basis of a new police investigation tonight.

Ever since early last Wednesday morning when three gunmen fired 11 bullets into Buckley's body as he sat in the lobby of the Lasalle hotel, his friends have maintained that he was killed because of his avowed enmity for the underworld. The police have inclined toward the theory that he was slain because of some obscure dealings with the same characters whom he publicly denounced.

Meanwhile the reward for the capture and conviction of Buckley's slayers reached $13,500. Those offering the reward include the City of Detroit, an afternoon newspaper, Wayne county and a private citizen.

RECONSTRUCTING SECTIONS DEMOLISHED BY EARTHQUAKE

ROME, July 30—(AP)—New cities today began to show their modern outlines among the ruins of last week's stricken earthquake area.

Supported by government and other funds running into the millions, thousands of workers today began digging the trenches in which will rest the foundations of a reconstructed, and, it is planned, virtually shock-proof group of Apennine towns, in most cases removed from the perilous mountain peaks and crater rims upon which they formerly sat.

Melfi, Canosa, Villanova, Accadia, Montecalvo, Ariano, Lacedonia, Aquilonia and many other centers saw the beginning of the ambitious program by which the government will attempt to insure, so far as possible, the lives of these Italian subjects who cling to their beloved vineclod hills in which lurks the menace of destruction.

Bowles Voted Out

In the first election of its kind ever held in a large city of the United States, Charles Bowles has been recalled as mayor of Detroit. His stormy administration was repudiated by a margin of 30,000 votes in the heaviest ballot ever cast in a special election in Detroit.

GREENEVILLE

BEES TRY TO DISLODGE GREENEVILLE TREE-SITTER

Daniel Brennan, Greeneville's tree-sitter, up until 6 o'clock Wednesday evening had been up in the tree for the past 148 hours. During Wednesday many people paid the young lad a visit. Asked by one of the visitors what he did when it rains, the young boy produced a large piece of canvas and demonstrated how he covered himself up. One of the young lads who was present disturbed a nest of bees which resulted in the ambitious young fellow receiving three beautiful stings, two on the arms and one on the forehead. His chums make their appearance almost every hour to encourage the lad to continue his tree-sitting for a record. A large ten quart pail hangs from one of the limbs of the tree and his chums see to it that the food pail is kept full of sandwiches and good things to eat. His brothers see to it that he receives other substantial food. So Master Brennan is not neglected in any way, shape or manner. Even some of his boy friends peddle his milk route and do his chores on the farm.

Alec Arico of Roosevelt avenue is the newest member of the Greeneville section to join the salesmen of a Hartford company. The other two are George Zurche of Second street, and Larry Hamilton. Gardner Lake Camper Is Believed Drowned

Frank J. Burnat, 18, of Flushing, L. I., vacating at Camp Mohican, Gardner lake, is believed to have lost his life by drowning late Wednesday afternoon during the fourth annual regatta for boys camping at the lake.

At the completion of the hand paddling race for crews of six boys the crew of Burnet's boat, which finished second jumped into the water for a swim. One of them shouted to Burnat, "Can you touch bottom?" and he replied "Yes." The youth has not been seen since and it is believed he was drowned.

The camp director, Harry Nostrand, who reported the matter to Capt. Thomas P. Murphy at local police headquarters early this (Thursday) morning, advances the opinion that Burnat probably swam to shore and is lost in the woods surrounding the lake. He furnished the police with the following description of the boy: Weight 96 pounds, height 5 feet 4 inches, has fair complexion, sun burned, is of slim build and was wearing a blue bathing suit at the time of his disappearance.

The matter has been referred to the state police at Groton barracks, who will conduct a search for the boy.

When it was first noticed that Burnat had not returned to camp a searching party was formed and the countryside about the lake was scoured by use of search lights.

RENEW FIGHT OVER THE PALMER ESTATE

Non-suited for failure to prosecute in superior court last spring, Mrs. Audrey A. Palmer, Stamford, Tuesday renewed her attempts in the superior court for Fairfield county at Bridgeport, to recover from her sisters-in-law, the Misses Virginia and Theodora Palmer, of New London, a $386,924.87 share of the estate left by her husband, Charles T Palmer, former wealthy manufacturer of New London.

Mrs. Palmer claims that her husband promised to bequeath her his entire estate upon his death which occurred in 1922.

Palmer, his widow claims, left no will, and half of his estate, administered under Connecticut law, went to his mother, Mrs. Louisa T. Palmer, of New London. The younger Mrs Palmer called on her mother-in-law and told her about the agreement and the latter is said to have agreed to leave her her share of Palmer's estate, upon her death if she would not bring suit to enforce the agreement.

The elder Mrs. Palmer died in 1925, leaving her entire estate to her two daughters, Virginia and Theodora.

That share of Palmer's estate which the plaintiff claims rightfully belongs to her includes an automobile, 15 paintings in the Palmer home in New London, stocks, bonds and cash.

Mrs. Palmer asks for a court order to the effect that her sisters-in-law hold that portion of their brother's estate willed to them by their mother in trust for her; an accounting of the income, and damages of $250,000 from each defendant.

Similar actions brought by Mrs. Palmer four years ago, were non-suited in superior court last May, when the plaintiff failed to prosecute the actions.

The appearances were Attorney E. W. Higgins of Norwich and Attorney George C. Morgan of New London, counsel for the claimant, and James E. Wheeler of New London for the Southern New England Telephone company.

No claims for compensation have been made by members of the Ely or Wood families.

The finding and award of the commissioner is as follows: Upon due and regular notice the above matter was assigned for a hearing at the office of the undersigned in Norwich on Nov. 24, 1929, but on account of the illness of counsel for the claimant said hearing was continued to April 3, 1930, at which time it was fully heard and the following facts were found.

A contract of employment existed between the above named decedent and respondent employer on Nov. 9, 1929, and had so existed for some time prior thereto.

Both parties had accepted the provisions of Part B of the workmen's compensation act as amended and the employer had proven solvency and been granted a certificate to enable said company to carry its own liability under said act.

The average weekly wages of the decedent, computed in accordance with the terms of the act were $27.21.

From the evidence I find that the decedent, Louis Benvenuto was employed by the Southern New England Telephone company in what was called its "traveling construction gang" and that his home was in New London, but at the time in question he was working for the said company in the vicinity of Putnam.

On the said Nov. 9, 1929, said decedent with Louis Ely and Fred Wood, also members of the same gang, had finished their work about 11 a. m., left the company's truck at the garage where it was stored and went to their rooming place, washed up, had lunch, and started for their home in New London in an automobile which was driven by Wood and registered in the name of his sister, a resident of Waterford.

In the vicinity of Plainfield enroute to New London, Wood, who was driving the automobile, tried to pass another motor vehicle going in the same direction and in order to avoid striking an oncoming vehicle he swung his automobile to the left, leaving the road and striking a large rock, and as a result of the collision the three occupants of said car were killed, namely, Ely, Wood and Benvenuto.

The said employee, Benvenuto, left surviving him his wife with whom he was living at the time of said fatal injury and whom he was supporting regularly, and it is found that she is the sole and total dependent.

The hearing was assigned upon motion of the claimant who contends that the decedent's death arose out of and in the course of his employment and as his dependent that she is entitled to compensation and while the dependency is admitted by the respondent company it denies that the injury arose out of and in the course of his employment.

The facts in the case were all practically agreed upon by both parties, the point at issue being in regard to the transportation of the man and whether the death of Benvenuto resulted under conditions and circumstances which would entitle his widow compensation under the Connecticut Workmen's act.

From the evidence I find that the working practices relating to this special gang at the time of his injury were about 48 hours constituted a week's work and the employees had the privilege of so arranging these 48 hours during the five days of the week as to have Saturday afternoon off duty, that their hours of work started from the time they left the garage or stock room and terminated upon the return to said stock room or garage at the close of day.

I further find that the employees were called upon to accept temporary assignments away from their headquarters and homes whenever the conditions of the work demanded and the company transported the men at the start of the job and at the completion of the job and on their own time and at their own expense. In other words when the men left their homes in New London and vicinity and went to Putnam and vicinity to do the work which was being performed at the time of the accident, the telephone company transported them to Putnam and when the work was completed the company would bring them back to New London on the company's time and at the company's expense.

I further find that during the period of such temporary assignments away from headquarters and the men's homes, board and lodging was furnished the men at the company's expense, the same being arranged for and paid for by the company through its foreman. I further find that this was in addition to the regular wages paid the men, so that they would receive the same net wages away from home when working for the company that they were paid when working near headquarters and living at their own homes. In this connection Exhibit C offered by the respondent employer reads as follows:

"Transportation at Weekends."

78. "Employees having assignments away from their headquarters will be allowed transportation expenses to and from their home stations week-ends, provided they return to their jobs prior to starting time on Monday morning and that board and lodging expense ceases during their absence."

79. "Such transportation will usually be by means of railroad, trolley, bus or company automobiles, as determined by the immediate supervisor. When employees desire to make arrangements for the use of employee owned automobiles and obtain approval of their supervisors, a transportation equivalent will be allowed each employee, provided it will otherwise be necessary to utilize some form of transportation other than company automobiles."

80. "Similar arrangements may be made for the use of employee owned automobiles to and from the job at the start and completion, provided that transportation by company automobiles is available."

81. "A separate voucher Form 849 'Special Transportation Expense Voucher' must be made out by each employee for each trip and approved by the immediate supervisor, who will include it in his regular disbursement report."

This Exhibit C is taken from the company's Plant Bulletin No. 2, Section V, as of March 1, 1925, "Working Conditions," and Exhibit D also introduced by the respondents showed where the decedent, Louis Benvenuto, on Nov. 2, 1929, had received $2.96 covering his transportation by "personal auto" from Putnam to New London and return for the week-end previous to his death, this Exhibit D being on the Form 849 mentioned in "81" above as "Transportation at Week-ends."

I find from the evidence that it was a part of the contract of employment that the employer in this case should pay the transportation charge of such employee as desired to go home week-ends and that the employer acquiesced in and knew of the means used by this employee to go back and forth, and I further find that it did advance the interests of the employer to furnish transportation to its employees on week-ends as it tended to keep the morale of the employees on a higher plane and make them more satisfied with their employment.

Furthermore, there was no evidence of wilful or serious misconduct or intoxication or sky-larking in this case.

I find at times when occasion arose and emergency existed that employees of this company were called upon at any time within the 24 hours of the day, the nature of their work being such that their hours of employment were not limited to any definite schedule such as exists in the majority of lines of employment.

I find that the employer and decedent had entered into a contract that transportation charges each week-end would be paid by the employer to the employee on the basis of the most available mode of transportation between the places of work and his home, and I find further that it has been the practice of all the employees to use private automobiles for their week-end transportation and that this was known to and acquiesced in by the employer as evidenced by Exhibit D.

I further find that the foreman of that particular gang would also have been a passenger in this particular automobile on this occasion if he had not been invited to ride to New London with another employee in his automobile on the day of the fatal accident.

I find that the decedent was on the direct route from his place of employment to his home at the time in question, and in a place where he had a right to be, and where under the circumstances it was reasonable for him to be and while he was reasonably fulfilling the duties of his employment, within the meaning of our compensation law.

I find that the present case varies from that of Crainie vs. Torrance, 98, Conn., 353, where the employer was obliged to pay transportation because of a rule of a certain union and analogous cases. I find also that the case of DeRosa vs. Levering and Carrigues Co. heard at the May term of the supreme court and recently decided by that court is not in point, as in that case the employer did not know the mode of transportation, and the decedent was not using such conveyance with the knowledge and approval of the employer.

From the law as laid down by the courts, it is my opinion that it makes no difference whether the transportation is daily or weekly as long as there is a contract entered into between employer and employee for the transportation of men back and forth on week-ends; for instance in the case of Swanson vs. Latham and Crane, et al, it was a matter of transportation to and from work daily, but in this case it is a fact that transportation was not only furnished by the employer at the very start of work away from headquarters and at the completion of the same, but also transportation daily to and from the storeroom or garage near Putnam, which constituted temporary headquarters, and also transportation for the week-end, when the employees went to their own homes.

I find that no later printed rules or practices were made subsequently to those decided in Paragraph 13 of this finding, but as conditions changed modifications were made and submitted to the employees orally by a superior officer or foreman, but the evidence clearly shows that the company's printed rules or practices as they were termed were being strictly complied with by both the employer and decedent at the time of said accident.

Carefully prepared briefs were submitted by counsel and they have been very thoroughly considered.

Memorandum of Decision.

A memorandum and decision is attached hereto and made a part of this finding and award.

I find that the claimant has sustained the burden of proof of injury arising out of and in the course of decedent's employment, and that she is entitled to the provision of the act as relates to fatal accidents and hereafter and awarded.

Whereupon it is hereby awarded, adjudged and decreed that the respondent company forthwith pay to the proper party on presentation of voucher the sum of $200 toward the funeral expenses, also any reasonable medical bill that may be presented for any services rendered at the time of the fatal accident, also compensation at the rate of $13.60 1-2 per week from Nov 10, 1929, for a period not to exceed 312 weeks provided by the act, accrued payments on date of this award to be made forthwith in a lump sum to the claimant's attorney, George C. Morgan, Esq., of New London and weekly hereafter directly to the claimant at whatsoever address she may from time to time furnish, this award being subject to modification in case of the marriage of the claimant within the 312 week period; she being found the sole dependent of the deceased, payments under this award terminating automatically in case of her marriage.

Although it is a general rule that employees injured upon the highway, when going to and from their place of employment, can not recover compensation for such injuries, there are, however, many exceptions to this rule. In the case of Amy L. Whitney vs. Hazard Lead Works, et al, 105, Conn., 512, lays down four specific exceptions to this general rule, and I believe this Benvenuto case comes within the second and fourth exceptions as stated therein and possibly it comes within the third exception, as these telephone employees were subject to emergency calls, although very infrequent.

Transportation of all these men was a part of their contract of employment and under Rule 2 in the Whitney case and the law laid down in the case of Swanson vs. Latham before referred to I am of the opinion that the injury and death of Benvenuto arose out of and in the course of his employment.

The sum paid by the employer to the employee was not paid because of any rule of a union, but it was paid as a part of the contract of employment. The decedent's wages were to net him the same sum when he was working away from his home town as he received when working there, consequently, the parties entered into an agreement that board and lodging would be paid during the week by the employer, and his transportation expense at each week-end would also be paid by the employer, said sum to be determined by the foreman. This was for the mutual benefit of both parties and as already stated in the finding the motor transportation used was known to and acquiesced in by his employer.

The facts, after the finding of the commissioner in the DeRosa vs. Levering and Garrigues Co. case was corrected, which case was decided this month by our supreme court, vary so materially from the facts in the present case that it is my opinion that my finding and award in this case is not contrary to the decision of our court in the DeRosa case.

CONTINUE WORK ON THAMES RIVER DREDGING

The deepening of the Thames river channel between Fort Point and this city has been resumed by the Morris and Cummings Dredging Co. of New York, under government contract signed this spring, providing for the removal of approximately 382,000 cubic yards of mud and stones from the channel bottom at 25.7 cents per cubic yard.

The company's tug Berwick came up the river Wednesday morning with two mud scows in tow, after dumping in the deep water of Long Island sound mud dredged from the river.

The Morris and Cummings company worked on the dredging of the river last summer, but operations were suspended before the work was completed. The work covered by the contract of last year was finished as far north as Fort Point, and partially completed between Fort Point and Rolling Mill wharf. From the wharf to Norwich harbor no work was done.

The estimate of the amount of bottom still to be removed is based on the original government surveys of November, 1923, and July, 1925.

Under the terms of the original contract, the work to be done under the specifications consists of dredging the river channel to a depth of 18 feet below mean low water between Allyns Point and Norwich. The width to be made is 200 feet, except at the lower and upper turns at Long Beach, where the maximum widths are 250 and 320 feet, respectively, and in the basin opposite the Norwich wharves, where the width varies from 200 to 720 feet.

After the work had been suddenly stopped some months ago, the chamber of commerce, through its Thames river deepening committee of which C. M. Gallup is chairman, conducted an investigation into the matter. The government later awarded the contract for the completion of the job to the New York concern.

BINGHAM AT SUMMER HOME AT SALEM

For the purpose of obtaining a complete rest after the long and arduous senate session, and before leaving for Samoa as chairman of the special congressional committee appointed to study conditions there, United States Senator Hiram Bingham has opened his summer home at Salem and will spend August there.

Tuesday, Senator Bingham and Congressman Carroll L. Beedy of Maine, drove to New Haven and conferred with Albert F. Judd of Honolulu who has been appointed as advisor to the Samoan commission. The discussion was concerning plans for the forthcoming trip.

Congressman Beedy was recently appointed by President Hoover as a member of the Samoan commission to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Congressman Edgar R. Kiess of Pennsylvania. Congressman Beedy and Mrs. Beedy have been visiting with Dr. Daniel Sullivan for the past several days and with the arrival of Senator Bingham at Salem, the Maine legislator took advantage of the opportunity offered for the conference with Mr. Judd. Mrs. Beedy is the former Dorothy Lathrop, daughter of Mrs. Sullivan, wife of the surgeon.

The Connecticut business of all societies decreased slightly from $82,123,106 on December 31, 1928, to $82,068,138 on December 31, 1929. During the same period, however, the number of certificates in force increased from 90,337 to 90,770. The fifty societies paid Connecticut claims in 1929 amounting to $1,549,784.27, compared with $1,450,130.20 in 1928.
